It will be readily seen that the repeated sacrifices represented in the mass would have the general effect of nullifying and minimizing the value of the great sacrifice at Calvary represented in the Passover and its memorial supper. How could those who had come to look especially to the mass for the cancellation of their sins be expected to look with as deep concern and as high an appreciation as otherwise, back to the antitypical Passover? While, therefore, the celebration of Good Friday has continued, the celebration of the memorial supper preceding it fell into disuse long ago.

Protestants have repudiated the dogma of the mass as wholly unscriptural, and as a result they have returned to a celebration of the Lord's Supper. Meantime, however, accustomed to the frequency of the mass, they have considered it merely a matter of expediency how often the Lord's Supper should be celebrated; hence we find some celebrating it every four months, some every three months, some every month, and some every Sunday. This general laxity and failure to reach a common ground of conformity is due to two things: (1) Because Christian people generally have overlooked the fact that our Lord's death was as the antitypical Passover Lamb, and that its celebration is the antitypical Passover Supper; (2) because they have misunderstood our Lord's words, "As oft as you do this," to mean, do this as often as you please; whereas the words really signify as often as you, my disciples (all of whom are Jews and accustomed to keeping the Passover) keep this Passover Supper, keep it in remembrance of me not in remembrance of the literal lamb and the typical deliverance from typical Egypt and its bondage through the passing over of the typical first-born.

Those who celebrate the Lord's Supper weekly consider that they have scriptural precedent for so doing because in the Bible we read that the early church met together on the first day of the week and on such occasions had the "breaking of bread." It is a great mistake, however, to confound such breaking of bread with the Memorial Supper, for the former was merely an ordinary meal. There is absolutely nothing whatever in the record to indicate otherwise; the wine, the fruit of the vine, is not mentioned in connection with it, and it is never said to represent the broken body of our Lord. It was a cheerful social custom in the early church to celebrate our Lord's resurrection on the first day of the week, and this common social custom helped to unite the bonds of brotherhood and fellowship. In many places the Lord's people follow this custom still. The Bible-House congregation at Allegheny has such a breaking of bread every Lord's Day between the afternoon and the evening services as a convenience for those living at a distance, especially as a desirable opportunity for extending fellowship amongst the Lord's people.

THE DATE OF THE MEMORIAL SUPPER

As we all know, the Jews used the moon more than we do in the reckonings of their time. Each new moon represented the beginning of a new month. Their new moon which closely followed the spring equinox was reckoned the beginning of the ecclesiastical year, and beginning the fifteenth day of that month the Feast of Passover, lasting a week, was celebrated. That week of seven days represents the joy, the peace, the blessing, which results from the passing over, and typified the complete joy, peace and blessing which every true Christian experiences through a realization of the passing over of his sins through the merit of Christ's redemptive sacrifice. All true Christians therefore in their hearts have a celebration of this feast of Passover continually the completeness of the matter being represented in the seven days, seven being a symbol of completeness. Not seeing the matter from the same standpoint, the Jew thought less of the killing of the Passover lamb and the eating of that supper than he did of the week following it; but our Lord emphasized the importance of the killing of the Passover lamb when He announced Himself as its antitype and when He invited us to celebrate His death on its anniversary until, at His second coming, our entrance into the kingdom would signify the complete fulfillment of all blessings.

It would be a great blessing, doubtless, to many Christians if they could see this subject in its true light, and lay more weight upon the value of the death of Christ, and join more heartily in its celebration on its anniversary, instead of at various other times and seasons, irregularly and without special significance. However, there have sprung up all over the civilized world little groups of the Lord's people who are taking heed to this subject, and whose delight it is to celebrate the Master's death according to his request—"as often as ye do this" annually—"do it in remembrance of me." We believe that such a celebration brings special blessing to both heart and head. The nearer we come to the divine requirements the greater is the measure of our blessing the more closely are we drawn to our Master and Head, and to each other as members of His body. The date of this celebration this year will fall on March 28 after 6 p. m. because at that hour begins the fourteenth day of the month Nisan, according to the Jewish reckoning. We urge upon all of the Lord's people everywhere to gather as may best suit their convenience in little groups or families to do this in remembrance of our Lord's great sacrifice. The fact that it is the anniversary makes the matter more impressive.

LORD IS IT I

We recall the circumstances of the first memorial, the blessing of the bread and of the cup, the fruit of the vine, of our Lord's exhortation that these represented His broken body and shed blood and that those who are His followers should participate not only feeding upon Him but being broken with Him, not only partaking of the merit of His blood, His sacrifice, but also in laying down their lives in His service, in co-operating with Him in every and any manner. How precious these thoughts are to those who are rightly in tune with the Lord. Following this they may think of the course of Judas who though highly favored, loved filthy lucre to the extent that he was willing to sell his Master but who was bold enough even while his treachery was being exposed to ask the Lord, "Is it I?" The very thought that any who had companied with the Lord could thus deny Him and betray Him to His enemies causes a proper loathing of such conduct, and should properly fill us with caution if not with fear lest in any sense of the word we should for the sake of honor or wealth or any other matter sell the Truth or any of its servants, the members of the body of Christ.

Let our minds then follow the Redeemer to Gethsemane's Garden, and behold Him with strong cryings and tears praying to Him who was able to save Him out of death expressive of the Master's fear of death lest in some particular He might have failed to follow out the Father's plan and therefore be thought unworthy of a resurrection. We notice how our Lord was comforted by the Father through the angel with the assurance that He had faithfully kept his consecration vow and that He would surely have a resurrection as foretold. We behold how calm He was thereafter, when before the high priest and Pilate, and Herod and Pilate again, as lamb before her shearers is dumb so He opened not His mouth in self defense. We see Him faithful, courageous to the very last, and we have His assurance that He could have asked of the Father and had had more than twelve legions of angels for His protection; but instead of petitioning for aid to escape His sacrifice, His petition was for aid to endure it faithfully. What a lesson for all who are His footstep followers!

On the other hand we remember that even amongst His loyal disciples the most courageous forsook the Lord and fled, and that one of them even in his timidity denied his Master! What an occasion is this for examining our own hearts as respects the degree of our faith and courage and willingness to suffer with Him who redeemed us! What an opportunity is thus afforded for us to buttress the mind with resolutions that we will not deny our Master under any circumstances and conditions that we will confess Him not only with our lips but also by our conduct. Next we are shocked with the thought that it was the Lord's professed people, the Jews, who crucified the Prince of Life! Not only so, but that it was the leaders of their religious thought, the chief priests, scribes and Pharisees and doctors of the law rather than the common people. We hearken to the Master's words saying: Marvel not if the world hate you, for ye know that it hated Me before it hated you: and when we see that He meant the religious world in His own case, we see also that He meant the religious world in our case.

DRINK YE OF THE SAME CUP

The lesson to us, then, will be that we shall not be surprised if the opposition to the Truth and the persecutions of the light bearers in the footsteps of Jesus should come from the most prominent exponents of Christianity. This, however, should neither cause us to hate our opponents nor those who persecuted our Lord to the death: rather we are to remember the words of the apostle respecting this matter: "I wot that in ignorance ye did it, as did also your rulers." Ah, yea! ignorance, blindness of heart and mind, are at the bottom of all the sufferings of Christ head and body. And the Father permits it to be so now, until the members of the body of Christ shall have filled up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ. With the completion of the membership of the body, the very elect, and the completion of their testing as to faithfulness unto death, will come the conclusion of this Gospel age, the resurrection change of the church to be with and like her Lord. Then, as our Master declared, those who now partake of His broken body and are broken with Him in the service of the truth, those who now participate in His cup of suffering and self-denial, will by and by with Him drink the new wine of joy in the kingdom beyond the veil.

With that glorious morning will begin the great work of the world's release from the bonds of sin and death the great work of uplifting, or as the apostle calls that great epoch, "The times of restitution of all things spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began.” Acts 3:19-21. The thought before the minds of those who participate in this memorial should be the apostle’s words, “If we suffer with Him we shall also reign with Him”; “If we be dead with Him we shall also live with Him,” “for the trials of the present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory that shall be revealed in us.” (Rom. 8:17, 18:6-8). With these thoughts respecting the passing over of our sins of the First-born through the merit of the precious blood we may indeed keep the feast of the passover with joy notwithstanding trials and difficulties. So doing, continuing faithful as His followers, very soon we shall have the great privilege of leading forth the Lord’s hosts all who ultimately shall hear and know and obey the great King out of the dominion of sin and death, out of Egypt into Canaan. Yes, dear brethren, in the language of the apostle, “Christ, our Passover, is slain, therefore let us keep the feast.”

“CAST THEM INTO A FURNACE OF FIRE”

Pastor Russell preached today to a large audience in McAuley’s theater from the text, “So shall it be in the end of this world (age). The Son of man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of His kingdom all things that cause stumbling and them that do iniquity, and shall cast them into a furnace of fire; there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth.” (Matt. 18:40-42.) The speaker said: To those who fail to note that these words are part of a parable, to those who think of these words as a literal description of the future punishment of the wicked, and who, out of their imagination, supported by other passages of scripture which they do not comprehend, believe that the furnace and the fire and the burning will endure forever and ever, the thought is not only terrorizing, but repulsive to every reasonable conception of justice as well as of mercy. It is safe to say that no sane mind and no good heart would be inclined to take these words as a literal description of the Heavenly Father’s arrangements for His creatures, were it not that from childhood they have been mistaught after this manner. Alas! how seriously the Heavenly Father’s character has been maligned by his children! Alas! what aspersions have been cast not only upon his character but upon the book through which He reveals Himself to His people.

We hope, by the grace of God, to make clear to you all that our Lord’s words which constitute our text are reasonable, just, and loving, when rightly understood, and that they do not refer to an eternity of torture, as they indeed make no mention of torture or eternity. One point should be noticed in advance, and that is that those who hold the theory of eternal torment usually claim that the poor victims pass into it immediately at death; to such we give at least a measure of comfort in calling attention to the fact that none will be cast into this furnace at death, but, as the record reads, "In the end of this age." We hope to show that the fiery furnace then to be established will much resemble the fiery trials which now test and approve and refine the Lord's truly consecrated saints; that it refers to an experience in the earth a period of world-wide anarchy, a dreadful suffering, described by the prophet as "a time of trouble such as was not since there was a nation." Dan. 12:1.

THE PARABLE OF WHEAT AND TARES

In order that we may have the entire context before our minds let us examine the whole parable (vs. 24-30,36-43). Our Lord calls it a parable of the kingdom of heaven not a representation of the kingdom in power and great glory, not a representation of the millennial kingdom; but a representation of the kingdom in its development showing how the kingdom class would be gathered out of the world of mankind and prepared for the glorification promised at the end of this age. Our Lord intimates that the truth would be the power of God by which this would be developed. He himself sowed the good seed the gospel or message of the kingdom which falling into good and honest ground, brought forth some thirty-fold, some sixty-fold and some a hundred-fold, as shown in the preceding parable, some of the good seed, however, being choked with thorns, and for various reasons not bringing forth results.

Our Lord after sowing the seed left the field and went to a far country, even heaven itself, leaving his servants in charge. The apostles were the earliest servants, and while they lived they carefully guarded the interests of the wheat field, so that the enemy found no opportunity for bringing in false doctrines and thereby producing a spurious crop, whose influence would tend to choke and check the development of the wheat. By and by, however, when the apostles fell asleep, in death, Satan the great enemy, found his opportunity and sowed the wheat-field liberally with tare-seed. The false doctrines planted produced a wonderful crop of tares, over-shadowing the wheat and choking its development.

This is a picture of Christendom as we see it today; the truths of the divine word are represented in the true wheat class, who recognize the terms and conditions of fellowship with the Lord and of prospective inheritance in the kingdom to be faith and obedience faith in the precious blood of Christ, the redemption obedience to Him who speaketh from heaven, to the extent of a full surrender of their wills, time, talent, all, to the Lord and His service. These are the true wheat and the Lord knoweth them that are His in whatever corner of the field they may be, for by this time, contrary to the Master's word and example, the wheat-field has been divided by various creedal fences.

WHO ARE THE TARES

"The enemy came and sowed tares". In the night time, the "dark ages," our great adversary, Satan, planted the seeds of error which have developed so wonderfully, so alarmingly. We are not to understand this to mean that the adversary publicly inculcated immoralities, idolatries, etc., nor are we to expect that the tares will be immoral, vicious, murderers, thieves, gamblers, etc. If they were the danger to the wheat would probably be far less, for the outward immoralities and misconduct of such would but cause a wider separation between themselves and the wheat class there would be nothing whatever in common. No! The fallacies inculcated by the great adversary had a form of godliness but were without its power. He established a rival class in the wheat-field, imitations of the true wheat, and the deception has become so great that the world in general, looking at the wheat-field, admires the tares and considers the occasional stalk of wheat which they see as abnormal, fanatical, visionary and deluded. In other words, the tares pass for the best of wheat amongst those who know no better, and the true wheat are discredited.

The adversary's method for discouraging, discountenancing, choking and dwarfing the wheat was a clever one, worthy of such a past master in deception as we know the great adversary to be. Did the adversary teach that there was no God? Not so; he taught that there were three gods in one beyond anything that the Lord or the apostles ever taught. Did he seek to belittle Christ in claiming that he was a mere man like other men? Not so; on the contrary, his teachings affected to more abundantly glorify the Savior, asserting that He was more than he claimed to be, more than the Son of God that He was the Father himself. Did these seeds of error contain a suggestion to the effect that no worship should be rendered to the Savior and to the Heavenly Father? No, indeed! Going beyond anything that Jesus and the apostles had taught, he established would-be systems of worship, altars, incense, genuflections, not only to the Father and to Jesus, but also to the virgin, the apostles and various saints.

The seeds of error, moreover, inculcated the thought that the simplicity of worship in upper rooms, by the riverside, etc., as practiced by Jesus and the apostles, was quite inadequate that great temples should be built, and the structural effect should be such as would appeal to the children of this world and bring them into a form of godliness without its power, without a regeneration of the Holy Spirit and an adoption into the family of God. Did it succeed? As we look all about us and note the records of the various denominations of Christendom respecting the numbers of their adherents, counting them by hundreds of millions, we are constrained to say, yes, the great adversary's method was a very successful one. The false conceptions of Christianity which he planned have sprung up and brought forth tares by the millions, so that the flock of the Lord's true wheat are scarcely to be recognized in any quarter of the field, and where recognized, they are for Christ's sake, for the truths sake, because they are loyal to the teachings of the divine word counted as were the early members of the church—"fools," "the filth and offscourings of the earth." 1 Cor. 4:10-14.

LET BOTH GROW TOGETHER

For the purpose of showing how prosperous would be the tare development, the servants are represented as inquiring of the Master of the wheat-field whether or not they should pull up the tares. The Answer--was that such a procedure would never do, as it would mean the uprooting of the wheat also so greatly do the tares prevail in numbers, influence and strength. The command was that the separation was not to be made until the harvest. So it has been for centuries; the true and the false have grown side by side, and the general name of Christian has been applied to all in every quarter of the wheat field. Wheat and tares bear so close a resemblance to each other in outward appearance that a person not acquainted with the distinctions would be unable to discern the one from the other, and even those familiar with the distinctions would need to look closely. So it is today with nominal Christians everywhere throughout the world the prominent in official positions, in the pulpits as well as in the chief seats of the synagogues, are sent forth and regarded as being examples of the true wheat. Yea, more, we doubt not that many of them, begotten of these errors, truly suppose that they are the genuine thing, that they are the real children of the kingdom, the real wheat class.

A distinguishing difference between the wheat and the tare is found in the seed produced. The one is valuable, nutritive, the other is comparatively worthless. So those who are taught of God know the real distinction between a true saint of God and a nominal Christian, the former trusting in the precious blood of Christ, and fully consecrated in his thoughts, words and doings to do the Master's will, is seeking to bring forth fruitage of meekness, patience, long suffering, brotherly kindness, love, in his own heart and in his conduct toward others. The latter has merely a form of politeness, a genteel drawing nigh to God with his lips while his heart is far from Him, and continually manifests the spirit of pride and worldly ambition, selfishness, and frequently the grosser qualities of anger, malice, envy, hatred, strife works of the flesh and of the devil.

IN THE TIME OF HARVEST SEPARATE

Those who have the impression that the present conditions are designed of the Lord to continue indefinitely, should note carefully that this parable indicates that a harvest time is at hand with the end of this age that then the Lord would make a complete separation between the true wheat and the imitation. The parable tells that at the appropriate time the Lord of the wheat field will send forth His servants to accomplish the separating work. Although these in some instances are spoken of as “angels” in the parable, it does not follow that the entire work will be accomplished by invisible spirit beings. Doubtless they will have to do with the harvest work of separating wheat from tares, but doubtless also the Lord in this, as in other matters, will make use of human instrumentalities for the accomplishment of this separation.

To our understanding we are now living in this harvest time, and this separating work is taking place. Truth is the sickle not only truth respecting spiritual things, which the scriptures represent as “meat in due season” that will be supplied to the faithful of the Lord’s people in this time of trial, but it consists also of other sickles of truth in the hands of other reapers than the saints, for be it remembered that the Lord permits the “wrath of man to praise him,” and that any overplus that would work injury to His plan would be restrained. As we look all about us we see the higher critics with their sickles gathering multitudes of the intelligent people; we see the evolutionary theory as a sickle gathering many of the bright minds; we see Christian Scientists with their sickles gathering multitudes; we see spiritism in its various forms gathering many, and we see the sickle of Present Truth gathering the ripe wheat, and it alone.

What will the harvest be? Ah! evidently, as prophetically described, the proportion that will fall under the sickles of error will be as a thousand to one that will be gathered by the sickle of Truth. And we are to remember that the reapers of the tares will gather in the great mass of nominal Christians, especially its shining lights, for the Lord specifically informs us that not many great, not many wise, not many rich, not many learned according to the course of this world will be found in the “little flock,” which He will gather and acknowledge as His own in the kingdom. 1 Cor. 1:25-28; James 2:5; Luke 12:32.

GATHER TOGETHER MY SAINTS

Speaking through the prophet respecting this harvest time, the Lord says, “Gather together my saints unto me those who have made a covenant with me by sacrifice.” (Psa. 50:5.) “They shall be mine, saith the Lord, in that day when I come to make up my jewels.” (Mal. 3:17.) Several points here are worthy of notice. This gathering with the sickle of Truth is not to be into new denominations or sects or parties, but reversely is to be a gathering out of sects, parties and denominations unto the Lord, “unto me” to a recognition of the fact that the true church of Christ are to be members of His body, under Him as the head, and that they have no right or authority longer to be identified with the former bodies or denominational systems which for centuries have posed as bodies of Christ, whereas there is but one body of Christ under the one head.

Another point to be noticed is that all these to be gathered have made with the Lord a covenant of sacrifice. This differentiates them entirely from the average nominal Christian, who draws nigh with his lips but having no heart knowledge of the Lord nor heart fellowship with Him. Such have entered into no covenant relationship with the Lord through Christ, and have not pledged themselves to become living sacrifices in His service. Such will not be of the jewels which throughout the gospel age He has been selecting and polishing, fitting and preparing for the kingdom glories and honors.

The work of gathering to the Lord in the field is the one we have just described; then follows the gathering of the wheat into the barn, the garner, which represents the first resurrection change from earthly to heavenly conditions. When this change shall have been accomplished in all of the true wheat class, the jewel class, speedily “then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father” to bless the world, to bring in the reign of righteousness, peace on earth, good will amongst men. Matt. 13:43; Luke 2:14.

GATHERING THE TARE BUNDLES

There is no intimation of any bundling of the wheat but the bundling spirit has long been manifest amongst the tare class. A disposition which the apostle terms the carnal mind has long influenced them to say, “I am of Paul, I am of Apollos, I am of Peter, I am of Luther, I am of Calvin, I am of Wesley,” etc., etc., etc. Naturally, therefore, in the harvest time the gathering of these, the masses of Christendom, will be in bundles. The bundling spirit is more manifest today than ever in the great federation arrangements which the scriptures foreshow will be quite successful, not only in bringing about a confederation amongst Christians, but in effectually throttling all liberty of thought on religious questions that none might buy or sell without the “mark of the beast” or the number of his name that only such as would come within the lines of the federation and its consorts will be permitted any liberty in respect to selling in the marts of truth and Christian knowledge.

But the same scriptures show that this triumph of tare organizations will be but a brief one, that suddenly the great system, Babylon, will be cast as a millstone into the sea of anarchy and confusion, desolation and trouble, financial, political and religious. The figure in the parable we are considering is reversed Babylon, after all the ripe wheat shall have been separated, will as tare bundles go into a furnace of fire, of tribulation such as the world has never before witnessed. The French revolution, with its awful scenes, is set forth in the scriptures as a figure or limited illustration of the trouble which may be expected to engulf nominal Christendom as soon as the wheat class shall all have been gathered out in this harvest time.

In another parable our Lord, under the figure of wheat and chaff, represented the Jewish nation and the harvest which took place in the end of the Jewish age, and the separation there of all the true wheat and the chaff of that age, the latter being cast into the furnace of fire. As we look back at the fire which burned as a furnace, consuming the Jewish polity, we have a limited picture of what may be expected throughout Christendom now in the harvest, the end of this age. The trouble which fell upon the Jewish people after the work of their harvest had been completed, after all the true Israelites indeed had been brought in contact with the gospel message, lasted for several years with more or less intensity of burning or trouble, culminating in the year 69 A. D. in an awful experience which could not symbolically be better represented than by fire. History tells us of the famine, the pestilence, the anarchy which prevailed in Palestine, and especially in its capital city, Jerusalem, and that in the latter upwards of two million lives were sacrificed, the city and the temple having been utterly destroyed. This being an illustration of what is to come upon great Babylon, nominal Christendom, explains very well why the Lord has used such a terrible picture as a fiery furnace to symbolize it.

THE PARABLE OF THE NET

In the same chapter (vs. 47-52) the same general lesson is taught under another figure or parable. There the kingdom influence, the nominal church, is represented as a great dragnet cast into the sea and dragged for the shore. The representation is that this net has been catching all kinds of fish during the past eighteen centuries and more, and that it is not to be kept forever swimming in the sea, but is finally to be brought to shore, that the ones desired should be found and the others rejected. The bringing of the net to the shore corresponds to the commencement of the harvest time, and the examination and sorting of the good fish into baskets corresponds to the gathering of the wheat into the barn, and the casting away of the unsuitable fish corresponds to the burning of the tares.

This parable concludes with a statement very similar to the words of our text, "So shall it be in the end of the age; the angels shall come forth and sever the wicked from amongst the just and shall cast them into a furnace of fire. There shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth.” Again we note that the statement has a particular time of fulfillment, that it does not refer to anything that has been in progress through out the age, but to certain conditions that will prevail in the end of the age, in the harvest of the age. Again we note that there is no intimation of the furnace and the weeping and gnashing of teeth being perpetual, everlasting. All thoughts of this kind have come from other sources than the word. Destruction is the end of the wicked according to the divine law, as we read, “All the wicked will God destroy;” “He shall be punished with everlasting destruction;” “The wages of sin is death.” Psa. 145:20; 2 Thess. 1:19; Rom. 6:23

NO SALVATION FOR THE TARES

Are we to suppose that the tares in this furnace of fire, in this furnace of affliction to which they all go, will be refined or otherwise benefited by those experiences? We answer; No, not as tares. As tares they will be utterly consumed; for a tare is an imitation Christian, a deceiver, a false or spurious Christian. As such they should be destroyed, God will no longer permit any to masquerade as saints of God who know not and love not the truth, and whose godliness is only form. All such misrepresentation and ignorance must cease and be no more.

In the parable the field, the ground, is the world of mankind; the wheat are some who rise up out of the world, separate from the world, and rise above the ground, although still having rooting in and drawing physical nourishment from the ground for earthly conditions. The true wheat profess to be the Lord’s people living in the world, with their rooting in it, but really and actually not of the world, separate from it, risen above it.

The “tares” are really well-meaning worldly people. “Of the earth earthy,” they have never been begotten of the holy spirit to a newness of life, to a separateness from the world, and hence their rising up out of the world in imitation of wheat is a deception and a falsity unrecognized and unauthorized by the Lord. The fiery furnace of trouble, following the gathering of the wheat into the garner, will utterly destroy these as tares by reducing them to their original condition as part of the earth, as part of the world of mankind. As such they will be prepared then for the great blessings that are to come through the glorified church to all the families of the earth the millennial blessings and glorious opportunities for coming into harmony with God and righteousness and truth and experiencing full restitution to all that was lost in Adam. It will then be for them to decide either for or against righteousness. To decide in favor of righteousness will signify an acceptance of the Lord and the laws and regulations and blessings of the kingdom for their uplift; to decide against the Lord and righteousness will mean a resistance of the favorable conditions of the kingdom and ultimately to be utterly destroyed in the second death. Acts 3:19-23.

THE LESSON WE SHOULD LEARN

Aside from getting rid of the confusion of the “dark ages,” and therefore getting clearer views of our heavenly Father and His gracious plans for our salvation, there are lessons for us, dear friends, whether we belong to the wheat class or to the tare class. One lesson is that many tares highly esteemed amongst men are an abomination in the sight of the Lord, and another lesson is that some of the wheat counted foolish and as the offscouring of the earth are esteemed by the Lord as his jewels, and we are more and more to know one another, not according to the flesh, but according to the Spirit from the Divine standpoint.

Although it is not in the power of wheat to change to tares nor of tares to change to wheat, nor of one kind of fish to change to another kind of fish, it is in the power of a nominal Christian to become a true one. If any of you have been living a sham Christian life, not founded upon the recognition of yourself as a sinner and the recognition of Jesus as your Redeemer, who gave his life as your ransom price, you should begin now and through the exercise of faith repent, reform, and accept of the great salvation so freely provided as a robe to cover your blemishes and imperfections. Go on then to make your covenant with the Lord by sacrifice, consecrating time, talents, influence and all that is dear and precious to you of an earthly kind, gladly, counting all things as loss and dross as compared with the excellency of the relationship to the Lord by faith now, and hoping by and by for the change of the first resurrection and for a participation in the great work of the kingdom which soon is to bless the world.

There is a lesson also for those who are of the true wheat class. Such are to take heed lest they should be overcharged with the cares of this life and the deceitfulness of riches, etc., and become unfruitful, and thus be little better than tares. If we are fruit-bearing Christians of thirty-fold, let us strive by the grace of God to bring forth sixty-fold or one hundred-fold of good fruits and good graces and good services, that will have the Divine approval and bring us eventually the Master’s words, “Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord.”

RISEN WITH CHRIST

Pastor C. T. Russell preached twice here today. One discourse was his cure for infidelity—“To Hell and Back. Who are There. Hope for the Recovery of many of them by a Judgment resurrection.” We report the evening discourse from the text, “If ye then be risen with Christ seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God. Set you affections on things above, not on things of the earth. For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God.” Col. 3:3

In our published discourse of last Sunday (for I know many of you follow these discourses in the public prints) we considered the general fact of our Lord’s resurrection that it was well attested, not only by the testimony of the apostles and the harmony between their testimony but by the typical and prophetic teachings. Today we look at the matter from another standpoint, and note that the doctrine of the resurrection of Jesus, and the hope of believers in a risen Savior who would come again in due time for their deliverance, became a fundamental in the Christian faith. It entered into all the philosophy of the plan of salvation. For instance, in our text the Apostle points out that the true followers of Christ reckonedly die to earthly aims, hopes and ambitions, sinful pleasures, etc., and reckonedly arise from a dead condition to newness of life as New Creatures in Christ Jesus, “risen with him to walk in newness of life.” To these “old things have passed away, all things have become new.” All of their interests, hopes and aims are indissolubly linked with the resurrection of Jesus and his exaltation to the heavenly Kingdom, spiritual condition and their hope, their aim, their endeavor is to live in the world as not of the world, as dead to the world and its interests and affairs, and alive toward God and the spiritual interests and heavenly promises through Jesus Christ.

Not that the Apostles taught that this reckoned death and reckoned resurrection are sufficient. On the contrary their teaching was that this reckoned state must be maintained until the actual state is reached. For instance, the follower of Christ who makes a full consecration of his life unto death not only reckons himself dead unto the world and to sin and reckons himself alive toward God as though risen from the dead, but he must maintain this condition until actual death shall finish and complete the reckoned state; and his hope is that the resurrection of the new mind in the present life is but the precursor, the preparation, for the actual resurrection of the dead at the second coming of the Redeemer. Hence it was that the Apostles were continually exhorting the Church to stand steadfast, waiting for the grace, the favor, that shall be brought unto you at the revelation of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ at his second coming. (1 Pet. 1:13.) Again, he says that we should hope unto the end, unto the completion, until that which is perfect shall have come, until the actual glory, honor and immortality shall have taken the place of the reckoned conditions, “changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye.”

Under the guidance of the holy Spirit the Apostle introduced the Church to a new view of baptism, different from that which had been promulgated amongst the Jews by John the Baptist. The latter signified merely the washing away of the filth of the flesh, and symbolized thereby a return so far as possible to righteous living, in harmony with Moses; but the new and different thought in baptism, introduced after Pentecost and especially applicable to all Gentiles who accepted Christ, was that it was a symbol of the death and burial of their human will into the will of Christ, that in the water, symbolically, they were immersed into death dead to the world, dead to sin, dead to self, dead to earthly ambition, and from the water they were raised up to walk in newness of life, not after the flesh but after the spirit, seeking those things which are above, where Christ sitteth at the right hand of God. Thus the Apostle declares that believers are buried with him (Christ) in baptism, wherein ye are also risen with him through faith in the operation of God, who raised him from the dead. And you, being dead in your sins, in the uncircumcision of your flesh, hath he quickened (made alive, resurrected) together with him, having forgiven you all your trespasses. —Col. 2:12-13.

The Apostle again in his letter to the Romans (6:3-5) similarly defines the meaning of baptism, explaining that believers are immersed, buried into Christ; that in a sense each one so buried loses his own individuality and self-control and becomes merged into the body of Christ as a member thereof; that the method by which he is thus inducted into the body of Christ, with its privileges and favors, is through his voluntary baptism into death, his consecration of his heart, his will, his all to the Lord, to be dead so far as earthly interests and affairs are concerned.

The Apostle proceeds to explain that the object of this reckoned dying and reckoned burial into Christ is that we may be reckoned as members of his body and reckonedly live a new life thenceforth as though we had risen from the dead, glorifying our Father in heaven. He assures us that those who are faithful to the significations of this baptism into death will be the Lord's likeness actually by and by in the resurrection, the First Resurrection, of which it is written, "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the First Resurrection; on such the Second Death hath no power, but they shall be kings and priests unto God and shall reign with him a thousand years." Rev. 20:6.

CHANGED FROM GLORY TO GLORY

In however different forms the Apostle presents the hopes of the Church as respects the transformation from sin-and-death conditions, to holiness and life conditions, he always maintains the same general thought namely, that we became reckonedly dead to the earthly interests, service, hopes and aims, and simultaneously became more and more alive toward God and the holy things, until this changing process begun in the present life and maintained until death shall be finished in the actual resurrection of the Church described by the Apostle (1 Cor.

15:42-44)—" So also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption: It is sown in dishonor; it is raised in glory: It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body." This changing process the apostles tell us, is accomplished by the spirit of the Lord.

The moment of full consecration to death the moment of baptism into his death is for such the moment of begetting to newness of life; the moment of quickening and anointing with the holy Spirit is the moment of resurrection from the former dead condition to walk in newness of life. Then in proportion as the holy Spirit dwells in the Lord's people and abounds in them in that same proportion will the change progress from glory to glory in the image of their Lord. This is not a fleshly image the flesh is reckoned dead; it is a heart likeness or image that is begotten and that is developed at the expense of the will of the flesh, but, mortifying it, he walks after the Spirit. He follows the example and spirit of the Lord's Word diligently, that he may attain unto the glorious perfection to which he has been invited, and which will be granted to the faithful early in the Millennial morning, in the actual resurrection.

ALIVE TOWARD GOD

The world is reckoned as dead because of sin and its sentence of death, but the Christian is reckoned as alive toward God through Jesus Christ through faith in his finished sacrifice that faith being tested by their acceptance of the divine invitation to become living sacrifices with Christ and reckonedly New Creatures in him. We have already pointed out that this is not a renewing of the flesh but of the spirit, the mind, the will, and that henceforth the world knoweth us not, as it knew him not.

The world, judging according to the flesh, may see some who are not the Lord's people that have inherited proportionately less of evil effects of the fall, and, contrasting these with some of the more fallen ones who have accepted Christ, they may fancy that some of the world are superior to some who are of the Church. But the Lord looketh not on the outward appearance merely, but chiefly at the heart the will, the intention. Those who have consecrated their all to the Lord and who are doing their best in warring a good warfare against the weaknesses of their flesh have the divine approval, while those who have not thus made a consecration to the Lord and become dead to sin have not the divine approval, even though they have inherited less depraved bodies. Herein behold the grandeur of the divine arrangement, whereby the weakest and most depraved is put upon equal footing of opportunity for the attainment of the Kingdom with those who are more favored according to the flesh. As the Apostle explains, where sin abounds there grace so much more abounds; the Lord's provision for each through Jesus is according to the necessity of each, and his acceptance of us in him is according to our sincerity and whole heartedness.

QUICKEN YOUR MORTAL BODIES

As we have already seen, our mortal bodies are to die indeed they are reckoned dead at the moment of consecration, and continue to be so reckoned until they actually die. And there is no hope of the resurrection of the mortal bodies of the Church. On the contrary, as already pointed out, the Lord's faithful followers have the promise of a "better resurrection" a resurrection to spirit conditions, far superior to any earthly conditions. As the Apostle declares, there is an animal body and there is a spiritual body. We have an animal or fleshly body at the present time which is reckoned dead; and if faithful in keeping it dead, "keeping our bodies under," we will receive our glorious spiritual, immortal bodies in our resurrection change, when our Master at his coming shall say, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord. Thou hast been faithful over a few things faithful to the covenant of self-sacrifice: I will make thee ruler over many things." Matt. 25:2.

However, the Apostle points out to us that we are not to be satisfied with merely reckoning our bodies dead to sin and our hearts and minds alive toward God, but he points out to us that in proportion as we receive of the holy Spirit in proportion as it enters into our hearts and lives with transforming power we will be enabled not only to will aright but more and more do aright. We will not only cease to walk after the flesh and in our minds or intentions walk up to the spirit, but the new mind will have such power, such influence over the mortal body, as to be able to use it more and more in the service of the Lord, in the service of righteousness. Mark the Apostle's words along these lines. He declares "If the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus dwell in you, he that raised up Christ Jesus from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you." Rom. 8:11.

The Apostle is not here talking about the actual resurrection, which we have seen will not be an awakening of the mortal body but a creating of a new body, the spiritual body promised to the faithful. The Apostle's thought is that our mortal bodies, consecrated to death, may be so energized, so controlled, by the holy Spirit, the holy mind, the holy disposition of the Lord in us, that in the present life we may be more and more servants of God and of righteousness, bringing forth fruitage of godliness to the praise of him who hath called us out of darkness into his marvelous light.

It will be observed that we have confined our review of this resurrection to the Church that we have said nothing about the world's resurrection, which belongs to the next age, and is called in the Scriptures the judgment resurrection. (John 5:29.) It will contain in its time wonderful possibilities for the human family. But now in this present time the Lord's special message is to the few, the little flock, the peculiar people, who, coming to a knowledge of the Truth and of his grace, and seeing the situation the mental, moral and physical depravity and death which sin has wrought and seeing the redemption which God proposes through Jesus, gladly accept the opportunity of casting in their lot with him in the warfare against sin and all unrighteousness, willingly laying down their lives in the service of truth and righteousness and the Lord's cause as against the cause of sin and Satan and death.

The resurrection of this class to the glories and perfections of the heavenly state are reckonedly begun in this present time, because it is necessary for the divine approval that we should not only make good resolutions and consecration, but that those resolutions, etc., should be tried and tested by what the Apostle terms "fiery trials" that thus the character likeness of the Savior, Jesus, may be developed in us by those trials and difficulties, and through his assistance, by his Word and Spirit, that we shall attain to his character likeness, and thus in the Father's sight be counted worthy of a share in his nature and glory and Kingdom by and by. The Apostle declares, "The world knoweth us not, even as it knew him not." (1 John 3:1.)

ATHEISM ON THE INCREASE

The world in general is growing more and more atheistic and pantheistic. Increasing numbers of the intelligent as well as of the ignorant are reaching the position of doubt respecting a personal Creator, and accepting an evolution theory to the effect that Nature is God, and has brought forth man and everything that we see by evolutionary processes, wholly aside from any individual, intelligent director or Creator. I notice in the public prints a statement bearing upon this question. A series of questions respecting God, his personality or impersonality, were propounded to a class in Columbia College, N. Y. The class numbered forty-five, and of these only sixteen professed faith in a divine, personal Creator, the remaining twenty-nine averring themselves atheists. With the Scriptural declaration that only the fool says in his heart there is no God, how can we think of the present time as wiser or an improvement upon the past?

Those of the world who do recognize a personal God take various views of the situation. The standard usually recognized by the world is that of justice that there will be no mercy shown, that every man will receive of rewards or punishments according to his just deserts, good or bad. Rejecting the thought of an eternity of torture, the view generally entertained is that more nearly corresponding with the purgatory of Romanists. But these same people do not recognize the divine standard of justice, namely, perfection; hence they fail to see the doctrine of the Scriptures, that without redemption by the death of Jesus, without his paying the penalty of original sin for mankind, there would be no hope of a future life. Their false basis of reasoning is that they will be punished in the future for those transgressions of the divine standard which were committed willfully and for none others.

Nor is the thought so different from what the Scriptures teach, namely, that our Lord's atonement sacrifice constitutes the full offset before Justice of all the sins of the whole world, to the extent that the same have been through ignorance or superstition or through inherited weaknesses or moral blemishes, and that for all willful transgressions, all sowing to the flesh, there will be a reaping of corresponding disadvantage in the glorious Millennial age, when the willing through the great uplifting work shall be rescued from sin-and-death conditions up, up, up, to the full perfection of earthly life represented in Father Adam's perfection in the image and likeness of God the disobedient, unwilling to make progress under the favorable opportunities of that time, being cut off in the Second Death destroyed.

ONLY VOLUNTEERS ON TRIAL

Although Christian people very generally recognize the fact that God's mercy at the present time is extended to those of the called ones who respond voluntarily, yet the majority do not seem to grasp the force of this truth. Whoever will look about him at the present time must see that the Gospel is preached, but that no penalty is now enforced against those who reject the message merely a blessing is extended to those who accept, and that blessing even is so veiled, so obscure, that the majority of the world do not appreciate it. They perceive, as the Scriptures declare, that "many are the afflictions of the righteous," that the Lord's people are tested by fiery trials, and that the unconsecrated seemingly have fewer trials and difficulties.

This the world does not comprehend. It seems rather to imply that the Lord thinks less of the believers than of the unbelievers, less of the consecrated than of the unconsecrated. Only those who are taught in the school of Christ can appreciate, through other teachings of the Scriptures, that these trials which are upon the Lord's people are manifestations of the divine favor indications that the tried ones are under inspection and being chastened, polished, fitted and prepared for a place in the divine arrangement for the future, because they have made their consecration to the Lord, because they have heard of the divine grace and responded thereto. Therefore these afflictions which they by faith esteem to be right, shall, they are assured, work out for them a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. But this they can understand not by looking at the things that are seen, the temporal things but by looking with the eye of faith at the things that are not seen, eternal things, the heavenly Kingdom. 2 Cor. 4:18.

“Even hereunto were ye called,” says the Apostle called, he again explains, with the heavenly calling, a high calling, to be heirs with Jesus Christ their Lord, if so be they suffer with him that they may also be glorified together. It is this filling up of the afflictions of Christ, the participation with him in his sufferings, in sacrifices of earthly interests, that constitute these peculiar, separate and distinct from the world in general no matter how morally and benevolently disposed the latter may be.

The mistake of Christian people in general has been in supposing that only this called out class is to be saved, in supposing that only these who now are dead with Christ and alive with him to walk in newness of life that only these will have part or lot in the great divine plan of human salvation, and that all the remainder will be eternally lost go into eternal torment say the majority, go into the Second Death say the minority. But the divine plan stands out glorious beyond all human conception in that it sets forth that the elect of this Gospel age are merely counted in with Jesus as members of the great Redeemer under one figure, and that they with him, in the glory of the Millennial Kingdom, will carry out the original purpose of God the blessing of all the families of the earth the uplifting of Adam and all of his posterity from the tomb and from all the degradation of sin-and-death conditions, if they will.

How glorious is the plan of God beyond all of our hopes and all our fears, and how glorious is the privilege now accorded to us who have heard the message of God’s grace speaking peace through Jesus, and who after accepting the message of peace have received the invitation to be baptized into his death, to suffer with him that later on we may reign with him in his Kingdom, to be dead with him that, later on, we may live with him in the glorious immortality of the divine nature on the spirit plane, to be dead to the world and self and earthly ambitions and sin, and to walk now in newness of life, as resurrected New Creatures in Christ, and to be inheritors with him in a share of his resurrection, the First Resurrection, the Chief Resurrection, the resurrection of the blessed and holy to glory, honor and immortality, the divine nature. Brethren, so many of us as can see this glorious plan have a blessing and privilege which is hidden, evidently of divine intention, from the eyes of many others. “He that hath this hope in him purifieth himself even as he is pure” walking in newness of life. 1 John 3:3.

“CHANGED FROM GLORY TO GLORY”

Pastor C. T. Russell was with the home congregation yesterday and spoke at Carnegie Hall, the Bible House Chapel, generally used, by the home congregation being too small. The audience gave close attention while the speaker addressed them on the subject of “Changed from Glory to Glory,” from the text, “Hence we all with unveiled face behold as in a glass the glory of the Lord and are changed (transformed into the same image) from glory to glory as by the Spirit of the Lord.” (2 Cor. 2:18.) He said:—

The intimation of our text is that whoever sees the glory of the Lord will be influenced thereby. The Apostle is not speaking of natural sight but of seeing with the eyes of the understanding. Whoever sees the Lord’s true character necessarily will be sure to find it a test which will either work in him a blessing through a desire to copy the Lord or reversely work in him a hatred of righteousness. This the Apostle intimates in other Scriptures also, assuring us that the Gospel is either a savor of life unto life or of death unto death. We are glad to believe not only from our own experiences but also from the words of the scripture that to the majority of our race the message which the Lord has sent will ultimately prove to be a savor of life unto life unto eternal life. The fact that only a small fragment of mankind now appreciate God’s character and correspondingly love righteousness and hate iniquity should not be considered a proof that the great mass of mankind will find the message of God’s love and favor ultimately a savor of death unto death eternally. Rather it is an evidence that the majority now do not see the Lord in his true character that the eyes of the majority of mankind are now closed or as the Apostle in this text represents the matter, their eyes are veiled. Some things respecting God they do see through the veil of ignorance and superstition and sin which covers their hearts, their minds. But the view of the Almighty obtained through such a veil is of necessity a very unsatisfactory one and far from happifying and encouraging to the beholder. The Apostle had just been discussing the fact that the Jews as a people rejected Christ and the Gospel of grace. He tells us that it was because there was a veil over their hearts which hindered their seeing the glory and beauty of the divine justice and love which centered in the Redeemer and his work of sacrifice on our behalf.—“a ransom for all to be testified in due time.” “And all to be testified in due time.”

ONLY THE BEHOLDERS ARE CHANGED

Thus the Apostle declares that it is “we of unveiled face” we from whose hearts the veil of superstition and misconception has been either totally or partially removed we in that proportion may behold the glory of the Lord not directly but as in a glass, as in a mirror.

In proportion as we get rid of the veil of ignorance, in that same proportion do we obtain the spirit of liberty, the spirit of Christ, and ability to see things in their true, proper light. This is the Apostle’s argument in the context where he says, “Where the spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty.” Any liberty which ignores the Lord and his spirit is an injurious one likely to lead its possessor afar off into the worship and service of the microbe god, but he whose eyes of understanding are opened to the Divine revelation, he who receives the spirit of the Lord receives therein the true spirit of liberty and is of the class described as having the opportunity for being changed from glory to glory into the same image, into the likeness of the God of glory, the God of wisdom, justice, love and power. It is based upon this declaration that where the spirit of the Lord is there is liberty, that the Apostle uses the words of our text, saying, “Hence we all with unveiled face, beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed (transformed) into the same image.”

THE TRANSFORMATION A GRADUAL WORK

The Apostle James (1:25) most clearly sets forth that we must not only look into this law of liberty, the law of God, and see therein the divine character and its perfection and see also our own imperfections, but we must continue to use these means of grace if we would have the transforming work progress in our hearts. The same thought is given in our text, namely, that this transformation is a gradual one from glory to glory an increasing glorious likeness to the glorious God. The same thought is set forth by the Apostle in his letter to the Romans when he declares that we are changed by the renewing of our minds that we might be able to prove the good, acceptable and perfect will of God. The transforming work must have its beginning, must have an onward progression and must have a culmination change or development. When we knew nothing, when the eyes of our understanding were thoroughly blinded we saw none of God’s glory; as the blindness passed away, as the veil of ignorance and superstition gradually dissolved, we could see more and more the glorious character of him who called us from darkness to light. But so long as the veil in any measure continues, that long and to that degree we will be lacking of the full heart transformation, hence the necessity that all of the Lord’s people would grow in divine grace by growing in the knowledge and the love of God. It is in accord with this that the Apostle writes, “For this cause I bow my knees unto the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ that he would grant you, according to the riches of his glory, to be strengthened with might by his spirit in the inner man; that Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth and length and depth and height, and to know the love of God which passeth knowledge." Eph. 3:14-19

OUR CHANGE, ITS BEGINNING AND END

Our text intimates that this work of change is accomplished by the Spirit of the Lord--the transforming work of change in the heart, character, life, is accomplished by the Holy Spirit. Hence only those begotten of the Holy Spirit—"born again" (begotten again) have this eyesight now and are experiencing this change of heart, of character, life, from glory to glory. Simply to believe that Jesus is the world's Redeemer and a great teacher sent of God is not sufficient. Our belief to be of value must lead to the renouncement of sin more than this it must lead to a full heart-consecration to the Lord and his service else we cannot have the begetting of the Holy Spirit, cannot let our eyes sufficiently opened even to discern the glories of the Divine character. It is the spirit-begotten ones that the apostle is addressing in our text, "We." As the Apostle says, "Let us go on to perfection." Let us behold in the glass of the Divine Word the Divine law of liberty, let us continue to look therein, to copy the Divine character and thus day by day, little by little, the transforming work will progress, the change of heart, of will, will become more and more complete and the glory of the Lord's character will be more and more our own and thus we shall be even in the present life more and more like our Lord. This is also the Apostle's suggestion in his letter to Romans when he intimates that God has called us with the heavenly calling to joint-heirship with Christ and that this joint-heirship is dependant upon our becoming copies of his dear Son." (Rom. 8:17,29) It is important therefore that we know definitely of the beginning of the new mind that we be able to recognize definitely that we have given our hearts, our all to the Lord.

It is important that we should progress and proper that we should look continually for evidences of the increase of the Lord's character likeness in our hearts, and then in view of the Lord's promises to this effect it will be ours to hope for the glorious change of the first resurrection which shall complete the work of grace begun in the begetting of the Spirit. In that glorious First Resurrection we hope for actual likeness to our Dear Redeemer then, as the Apostle John declares we shall see our Redeemer as he is, every vestige of the veil and imperfections and blemishes of the present time shall have passed away, "We shall be like him for we shall see him as he is and share his glory." 1 John 3:2

NOT A GLORY OF THE FLESH

It is frequently a cause of discouragement to the Lord's people that they did not clearly enough discern that the changing process which is to eventuate in their glory is not a changing of the flesh but of the spirit, the mind, the will. We would not by any means give the inference that where the mind, the will, is soundly converted to the Lord, it would have no effect upon the flesh, no control over the flesh; quite to the contrary we believe that the changed mind has a strong influence over the flesh in that it even gives light and dignity and glory to the earthly features that every man enlightened and illuminated by the truth will not only know of this illumination in his own mind and appreciate its transforming influence in his own heart and will but that to some extent this illumination of the Lord's spirit will shine out through his mortal body, in his words, in his life and conduct, yea, in the very expression of his countenance. However what we here wish to emphasize is that the Lord looketh upon the heart and not upon the outward appearance the Lord will judge of our change not as men would judge, by the outward appearance, but by the inward conditions of loyalty to him and desire to say, to think, to feel in accord with the Spirit of the Lord, in accord with the glorious likeness which we see with increasing clearness reflected in the Divine Word. The world will judge us by the outward appearance merely, the Lord will judge us by the inward merely. But we and all of the household of faith are justified in expecting that there will be evidences of the change of heart manifested in the outward conduct of the flesh.

The Apostle intimates all this not only in our text but elsewhere, for instance, he declares, "If the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ Jesus from the dead shall quicken also your mortal bodies by his spirit that dwelleth in you." Rom. 8:11. How plain the statement! The Lord is dealing with the New Creature but as the New Creature grows in strength by the glorious transformation of character from glory to glory, it will desire to control the mortal body and it will be a growing and increasing power so to do so that even the mortal body which once was alive to sin but is now reckoned dead to sin will be drafted into the service of the New Creature, drafted into the service of righteousness in harmony with the New Mind and its degree of glorious likeness to the Lord.

BLINDNESS TO THE DIVINE GLORY BANEFUL

We have followed our text and our experiences and observations fully concur with the Divine testimony. Let us now look upon the opposite page; let us see what are the injurious effects of heart blindness as respects the Divine character the glory of God. The Apostle points out that originally man was created not in the blind condition of mind but with the illumination. He answers the question of how it comes that this being true the great mass of mankind are now in such total blindness, explaining to us that it was because they did not wish to retain a knowledge of God in their hearts, therefore God gave them over allowed them to take their own course as a result of which they developed a reprobate mind. "When they knew God they glorified him not as God and were unthankful, and became vain in their reasonings and their foolish heart was darkened. Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools and changed the glory of the incorruptible God for the likeness of an image of corruptible man. Wherefore God gave them also up to uncleanness through the lusts of their own hearts to dishonor their own bodies between themselves. Because they exchanged the truth of God for a lie." Read at your leisure the Apostle's explanation of how the heathen would have reached its low plane of degradation as he sets forth the same in the first chapter of his epistle to the Romans from the nineteenth verse to the end.

Our own ancestors were heathen and the measure of civilization which we enjoy we owe to the light of the knowledge of God which reflected into Europe from Palestine. Nevertheless so greatly has the truth of God been intermixed with heathen philosophies, ignorance and superstition that as we have already shown only the spirit-begotten ones are able to see the glory of God with any measure of clearness and appreciation. Let us thank God that while we see that the world is still in sin and death we see also the Divine character of love for mankind as set forth in the Divine word which assures us that all the families of the earth are destined to have a blessing from the Lord through him who loved us and bought us with his precious blood and that the blessing which now is granted through a regeneration and begetting of the Holy Spirit to the Church is merely a prelude, a fore-taste of a much more general blessing that is yet to come to every creature bringing with it an opportunity for the opening of all the blind eyes of understanding and the opening of all the deaf ears, that all may hear and see and appreciate the glory of God, the love of God, the wisdom of God, the justice of God, the power of God. True when this shall be accomplished we cannot even then hope that it will mean that all will come into full accord with the Almighty but our hearts are satisfied with the assurance that he who created the world loves the world to the extent that he has redeemed them through the precious blood of Christ and that the Redeemer in harmony with the Divine plan is yet to grant to every man an opportunity for full and complete restoration to all that was lost through Adam and that even those who will finally refuse Divine favor will not be eternally tormented but as the Scriptures declare, "They shall be utterly destroyed from amongst the people." Acts 3:23.

Pursuing the Apostle's thought in the text we remember the statement of the Lord through the Prophet Isaiah that he will destroy the face covering that is cast over all peoples the veil that is spread over all nations. (Isa. 25:7.) In this prophecy the Lord is referring to the Millennial Kingdom which he has elsewhere symbolically spoken of as a "mountain." He tells us that this mountain or kingdom shall be established in the earth and that a power proceeding from it shall destroy the veil, the covering that is upon all peoples and that he will prepare in this mountain for all people a feast of fat things, a feast on wines on the lees, of fat things full of marrow pleasures, joys, blessings, favors of God beyond anything that they would not know how to understand or appreciate. Even we whose eyes of understanding are opening wider and more widely day by day are astonished as we get further glimpses of the great plan of God to see what grand blessings the coming Kingdom of Christ is to bring to the entire 'groaning creation' not only to those who will be alive when that glorious epoch will be ushered in but in accordance with the Scriptures a blessing to all nations, to all peoples, which will include those who have already perished in death. The blessing will largely be a blessing of knowledge both of the eyes and ears, the taking away of the blindness, the veil and the ushering in of the glorious sunlight of that Millennial day which shall chase away all the superstitions and errors and evils of this present time. What wonder that the prophets all spoke of that glorious Millennial Kingdom in rapturous words of wonder, that the apostles all referred to it with expressions of longing and desire as the time when the whole groaning creation shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption and that so many of them as will may attain to the liberty that is proper for the sons of God. (Rom. 8:21.) Can we wonder that our Lord Jesus himself taught us to look forward to this Millennial Kingdom, this great Mountain of God and to pray, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven?" Our context establishes the fact that the coming blessings are to be not only for those living at that time but also for those who are in their graves. Mark the statement "He will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord will wipe away tears from all faces and the reproach of his people shall he take away from the earth." Isa. 25:8. Note also the Lord's statement through the Prophet Hosea (13:14) "He shall ransom them from the power of the grave, he will redeem them from death. O grave (sheol) I will be thy destruction." It is this passage which the Apostle Paul quotes in his great discourse on the resurrection. (1 Cor. 15:55.) Pointing down to the second coming of Christ and the time when the church shall be glorified with him he declares that then will be brought to pass the saying that is written Hosea's statement that death will be swallowed up in victory. It will require the entire Millennial age to swallow up death in victory, to rescue mankind from present sin and death conditions and to grant to all that will the opportunity to come into full accord with God and to obtain the gift of God, eternal life. At the end of the Millennial age the Prophet's words will be fulfilled, "O death where is thy sting? O grace (hades) where is thy victory".

"HE THAT HATH THIS HOPE"

The Apostles continually incited the church to look forward to the glorious events that would transpire at the second coming of Christ: (1) The glorification of the church with her Lord in the First Resurrection; (2) then the great work of the Church in glory, the work for mankind, the blessing of all the families of the earth by the taking away of the veil of sin and ignorance and superstition that is now upon the world. In connection with the statement of our text the Apostle assures us that the veil which is now over the minds of the Jews will be taken away in the Lord's due time after Spiritual Israel shall have been selected and glorified and when the Millennial Kingdom shall be established. And what will be true of Israel in the flesh other Scriptures show us will be true of all the families of the earth. But as the blessing of the natural things come to the Jew first and afterwards to the Gentiles, so the blessings of the Millennial age, the blessings of restitution to earthly inheritance and all that was lost, Paradise and human nature in perfection will come to the Jew first and afterwards to all the families of the earth.

What wonder that the Apostle declares that these glorious hopes before our minds would legitimately lead to purification. "He that hath this hope in him purifieth himself even as he is pure." And this statement of purification of heart and mind and so far as possible of the flesh, the earthly vessel, is but another statement of the glorious change from glory to glory which all of the consecrated ones are experiencing. It is appropriate that each one of us should ask himself the question, Have I received this begetting of the Spirit of the truth? Is its sanctifying power felt in my heart and life? Am I being changed from glory to glory day by day? Am I looking into the perfect law of divine liberty that I may have this glorious change effected and completed, or am I being bound by the world or the flesh or the Adversary or by some unscriptural religious sentiments or teachings so that I am hindered from making the progress that I should from glory to glory?

It is well dear friends, that we note the fact that this increase of glory in our hearts, in our new minds will affect all the affairs of life giving even to the commonest affairs an importance and a glorious light which they would not otherwise have. The new heart, the new mind as it beholds divine justice in his true light and appreciates the same and desires to be just toward others and realizes that the Golden Rule is a measure of justice and seeks to use it in all of life's affairs, doing unto others as they would they should do to him. More than this in proportion as we see the wisdom of God we desire the same wisdom that cometh from above which is first pure, then peaceable, easy of entreatment, full of mercy and good fruits. Additionally it recognizes the power of God; that the power which created us and which has now begotten us again to a new mind, to new hopes, is able to accomplish all the good promises of the Word and to give us the glorious resurrection in the likeness of our Lord and more to give us the Kingdom glories, blessings, opportunities and privileges and to use us with the Lord to bring back from the tomb and from sin and death conditions in general, all the families of the earth. This transformed mind with its increasing glories gives us fresh views of our duties and relationships of life toward God and toward our fellows and especially does it give us an appreciation of Divine love. As we note the love of God not only to the good but also toward the forward and the unthankful, it helps us to understand why he commands that we shall not only love him and love the brother-hood and love those who have his spirit and love those who are righteous, but that we should also have a sympathetic love to the world of mankind, a love that would delight to do them good and uplift them; and additionally that we should have love even to that measure and degree that would love our enemies sympathetically and desire to do them good and in no sense of the word to do them evil. Let the good work go on and let us strive daily, dear brethren, to be changed from glory to glory and by and by the Lord will perfect in the resurrection that which his grace, truth and spirit have now begun in our mortal bodies, our transformed minds.

THERE ARE THREE WAYS

Pastor C. T. Russell, of Allegheny, Pa., preached twice here today in the Opera House to large and intelligent audiences. We report his evening discourse on The Three Ways. He took for his text the words of Matt. 7:13,14, together with those of Isa. 35:8. He said:

These two texts tell us of three ways in which men may travel the "Broad Road," the "Narrow Way," and the "Highway." He will consider them in the order named. Our first parents in their perfection were surely not upon any of these roads; they were at the goal of harmony with God and full perfection of being in God's image and likeness and favor. The Scriptures explain that by disobedience they fell from their exalted condition into sin, that thus they came under divine displeasure and condemnation called the "curse," and were started upon "the broad road which leadeth to destruction."

It should be noted that this is not the broad road that leadeth to eternal torment, as so many erroneously suppose. The Scriptures are quite explicit in telling us that the penalty upon father Adam and his entire family was "Dying thou shalt die," and our Lord in our text speaks of the broad road upon which they thus launched as leading to destruction. No reasonable interpretation can twist and turn this plain English word destruction into meaning the very reverse to make it mean preservation, with the additionally impossible thought of a preservation in fire, torture, etc.

THE BROAD ROAD SLIPPERY

When our first parents started on the downward way to destruction their less impaired physical and mental powers permitted greater self-restraint, and hence we read that father Adam was 930 years in reaching the end of that road reaching death destruction. But as century after century rolled by, his children inherited more and more of imperfection, mental, moral and physical; the broad road to destruction became more slippery, so to speak, until today we find the average of human life 35 years, and in civilized lands the mental powers have become so impaired that on an average one out of every three hundred needs to be incarcerated in an insane asylum, and about the same proportionate number, morally impaired, needs to be imprisoned. Physically the entire race is full of aches and pains, and dying at the rate of 90,000 a day.

GOD TO THE RESCUE

The Prophet tells that when there was no eye to pity and no arm to deliver our race from this awful predicament of the broad road into which they came by disobedience, then God pitied and his arm brought salvation. (Isa. 59:16.) For 4,128 years God waited to take even the first step in the relief promised to the Prophet, and then he sent forth his Son in the likeness of sinful flesh to redeem the world, to redeem Adam and all of his race from the broad road and from the destruction to which it leads, and into which millions had already gone. The Scriptures very particularly tell us what Christ did for us: "Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures." (1 Cor. 15:3.) Thus, the Apostle explains, God could be just and yet the justifier of him that believeth on Jesus." (Rom. 3:26.)

Our Lord was just in thrusting our first parents out of their Eden home, out on this broad road to destruction. He has been just for all those centuries in permitting the race to go to destruction, and he is just in permitting the redeemer to pay man's penalty, that thus eventually the broad road might be discontinued, and those who had gone into destruction as well as those on the way to it might be rescued therefrom. The foundation laid by Jesus' death is so broad and so strong as to be the guarantee that Adam and all of his race will be recovered from the broad way and from the destruction at its end. In a word, the death of Jesus guarantees the ultimate release of the entire human family from the sentence of destruction. Hence it is that the Scriptures assure us that there shall be an awakening from this death, this destruction that there shall be a resurrection from the dead both of the just and the unjust. In other words, had it not been for the redemptive work accomplished by our Redeemer at Calvary, Adam and his entire race would have been without any hope of recovery from death. But God had compassion upon our race, and has a plan in connection therewith which ultimately shall display most gloriously not only his justice in our condemnation and his love in our redemption, but also his wisdom and his power in connection therewith.

Meantime, as a result of our Redeemer's death, to all those who believe (and to none others) destruction is turned into a sleep. Thus the believers in God's promises in times past spoke of their dead, whether good or bad, not as destroyed but as passing into a sleep. Abraham, Isaac and Jacob slept with their fathers, though their fathers were heathen men and not heirs with them of God's promises. Be it noted also that at the time Jesus uttered these words he had not yet completed his atonement sacrifice, and hence he made no reference to the change from the destruction into which the race was going to a sleep condition, from which in the resurrection morning he would awaken all and bring them forth.

THE NARROW WAY TO LIFE

Instead of at once stopping the progress of the race on the broad road, instead of at once beginning the work of mental and moral and physical refreshing and restitution (Acts 3:19-21) our Lord in harmony with the Father's arrangement has permitted the world in general to continue on this down ward course for nearly 2,000 years longer. But meantime he has not been idle; he has been calling out to the earth's teeming millions, to his apostles, and to all who become his followers, telling all who are burdened and heavy laden and desiring life that there is now open a narrow way by which all who will obey the voice may separate themselves from the mass of the race and, following in the footsteps of Jesus in the narrow way, may ultimately reach with him the glory, honor and immortality of the Divine nature. The voice which calls, however, specifies the narrowness of the way, the difficulties of the journey, its roughness to the feet, its thorns and thistles and steepness; and as a consequence, even of those who have the ear to hear comparatively few care to seek the path still future or are willing to endure hardness as good soldiers of the Lord Jesus and to follow on in his footsteps.

We need not wonder that these footstep followers of Jesus are a little flock, nor should we suppose that God is disappointed in this matter. On the contrary, thus it is written: "Not many wise, not many great, not many learned, not many noble, but chiefly the mean things, the poor of this world, rich in faith, to be heirs of the Kingdom.” (1 Cor. 1:25-28;) (Jas. 2:5.) Again, our Lord’s words, “I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hidden these things from the wise and prudent and hast revealed them unto babes. Even so, Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight” (Matt. 11:25,26) and again his words, “Fear not, little flock, it is your Father’s good pleasure to give you the Kingdom.” (Luke 12:32.) We see then this little flock, which the Lord is now calling out from the world of mankind, and saving with the special salvation, and under special terms and conditions of a narrow way and difficult path, are to constitute a kingdom class; and many Scriptures assure us that this kingdom class with their Lord Jesus is to be the Divine agency through which, the moment the broad road shall have been abolished, Adam and his race shall be rescued from the destruction of death into which they went through sin and from which they were redeemed by the precious blood of Christ. Whoever sees, then, the divine plan outlined in the Scriptures has a sufficient explanation of why the trials and testings of the church of this present time, the little flock, should be crucial why they should be required to demonstrate their loyalty in a special manner.

THE HIGHWAY OF HOLINESS

The highway of holiness mentioned by the Prophet is very different in many respects from either the broad road leading down to destruction or the narrow way of the present time leading upward to glory, honor and immortality. A preferred translation of the Prophet’s words are these: “And a raised way shall be there, even a high road, and the high road of holiness shall it be called. There shall not pass over it one who is unclean.” (Isa. 35:8.) The word “there” in our text associates it with the context, which is admittedly a description of the Millennial age, when the wilderness and solitary place shall be glad and the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose. The context tells us “No lion shall be there nor any ravenous beast shall go up thereon, it shall not be found there; but the redeemed shall walk there, the ransomed of the Lord shall return.” Again we read, “The wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein.” All these descriptions indicate that the highway of the future, of the Millennial age, will in very many particulars be distinctly different from the narrow way of this Gospel age. The narrow way with the difficult gate is the very opposite thought of the broad, public high road.

We are glad for our share in the narrow way and for its prospects of glory with the Lord; but we would rejoice with the world of mankind also that, after the little flock now willing to walk in this narrow way shall be gathered to the heavenly fold, to the Kingdom glories with their Lord, the remainder of mankind shall neither be thrust into eternal torment nor into everlasting death, destruction, but that through God's mercy and love, the next step in the great Divine plan of the ages will be their rescue.

“THY KINGDOM COME”

Ah, but, some will say, if God will not save sinners in their sins, and if sinners either hear not or hear indistinctly the invitation to the narrow way, or if hearing they refuse the narrow way of self-sacrifice, what hope can there be for them? What could God do for the world other than he is now doing for the Church? Can he coerce the wills of mankind? Would it please God to establish a paradise peopled with those whose hearts, whose wills, were in opposition to him but coerced into submission? We answer, No! Our Lord declares that the Father seeketh such to worship him as worship him in spirit and in truth from the heart. We Answer--further that, while under present conditions God is offering opportunities for the narrow way of self-sacrifice only, he proposes the establishment of new conditions when the narrow way is ended and when the time shall come to open the highway of holiness and destroy the broad road. The new conditions are referred to throughout the Scriptures, both in the Old and in the New Testaments, and always as a promise, as a glorious hope for the world, Jew and Gentile. Thus an intimation of the coming highway and its opportunities of rescue was mentioned to father Abraham when Jehovah declared to him, “In thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed.” This implied not only a blessing of Abraham's seed, and its high exaltation to power and authority and royalty so as to be able to bless the world, but it implied that eventually blessing would reach the world through it. As we have previously seen, the narrow way of this Gospel age is for the selection of the seed of Abraham, as the Apostle declares, that through these selected ones all the families of the earth shall receive a blessing from the Almighty.

So then we see that the Kingdom of God's dear Son, declared through the prophets, declared by our Lord in his parables and by the apostles, is still future; that its establishment has waited for the selection and preparation of the Kingdom class the Bride class; that the heavenly King and his glorified Bride may in due time, after the marriage supper of the Lamb, take and exercise the great authority secured over the world, secured by the precious blood of Christ. Now then we see from this standpoint how much will depend upon the character of that Kingdom and the degree of power and authority which it will exercise amongst men.

AN AUTOCRATIC RULE

Had we the time to enter into the subject in detail and to show from the various prophecies the character of this coming Kingdom, it would be manifest to all that it will not be a Republic, even though we agree that a Republic is the highest form of human government, the best suited to the happiness and welfare of the intelligent. The Kingdom of God's dear Son will be an absolute monarchy; mankind will not be asked to vote for Jesus as King or President of the world—" He shall take unto himself his great power and reign;" and again, "He must reign until he shall have put all enemies under his feet" brought all into subjection to his righteous rule. Rev. 11:17; 1 Cor. 15:25.

The reign of Christ, it is Scripturally declared, will last a thousand years, and during that reign he will undo all the dire results of the reign of sin and death for the preceding 6,000 years. Ignorance and superstition will flee away under the sunlight of the truth, when the Sun of Righteousness shall then arise with healing in its beams, flooding the whole world of mankind with the light of the knowledge of the glory of God. O, how differently men will view their Creator when once they get this light! How differently those who are in the narrow way now view him in advance of the world, in proportion as they have the eyes of their understanding opened that they may see by faith the glories of the Divine character through the telescope of the Divine Word. We are assured also that in the glorious time the Lord will judge the world in righteousness that is to say, he will grant rewards and punishments to each individual of the race according to their willful deeds, good or bad. All favoritism will be in the past, in the sense that the blessing of the Lord will be open to the world in general, "every creature." Abraham's natural seed, circumcised Jews, long accustomed to reverence the Lord, will by reason of this very fact have the earliest favors in that time, since they will be able more quickly than others to conform to the laws of the Kingdom when the Lord shall lay justice to the line and decision to the plummet.

We are not to understand from this that Divine justice will cease to burn against all unrighteousness, against all sin, but we are to understand that Jesus, the Head and the Church, his body, as the great Mediator, Prophet, Priest and King of that time, will be granted full control of the human family, so that on account of the redeeming blood shed for all none shall suffer for the weaknesses of heredity, but merely for his own willful, intelligent conduct. Even then his punishment will be, as Scripturally declared, in the nature of stripes for his correction, to help him out of the weaknesses of his depravity and assist him into the highway of holiness, which he may enter by a full submission of his will to the Divine law. True, the Scriptures speak of incorrigibles of some who now, after starting in the narrow way, turn to wallowing in the mire of sin, willfully, deliberately, and, resisting God's grace, die the Second Death. They show also that in the coming age whosoever will not hear and heed and obey the great Prophet (the Christ, Head and Body) shall be ultimately destroyed from amongst the people.

NO UNCLEAN THEREON

The Prophet declares that no unclean shall pass over it. Before any could get upon this highway of holiness he must renounce sin—"uncleanness." Jesus the great high priest has full atonement made so far as justice is concerned for every one of these, and therefore as soon as sin is renounced and the will is turned to righteousness and obedience to the Divine will, their uncleanness from the Divine standpoint of their Judge and Lord will be gone, though their weaknesses and imperfections in the flesh may still continue with them a considerable time while they journey along the highway of holiness and become gradually stronger mentally, morally and physically, attaining thus step by step on an upward way to that grand climax of human perfection represented originally in father Adam, who was the image and likeness of God in the flesh. It will be noticed that this highway is not a downward one but an upward one; none can roll to perfection against his will. It will require the effort of the will to attain to obedience and to the eternal life promised at the end of the way. In this respect the highway of the future is very different from the broad road of the present time, which is a downward one, on which mankind go often despite their struggles to the contrary. In this respect the highway of the future more nearly resembles the narrow way of the present time in that it is an upward one, but the stumbling-stones of the narrow way will not be there, as the Lord has indicated saying, through the Prophet: "Go through, go through the gates; prepare ye the way of the people, cast up, cast up the highway; gather out the stones; lift up a standard for the people." Isa. 62:10.

From this standpoint seeing that the opening of the world's highway and the turning of the course of mankind from the downward way into that highway will begin at the second coming of Christ, when the Church, the little flock, the Kingdom class, shall have been selected and prepared and glorified we can see the force of the Apostle's expression, indicating that mankind is unconsciously waiting for the second coming of Christ to receive these great blessings which will rescue them from their present groaning and dying. Hearken!—"The whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now" "waiting for the manifestation of the sons of God." No wonder that this great reign of the Prince of Peace, the King of Righteousness, the heavenly Judge, for the blessing and uplifting of the world, has so prominent a place in the divine revelation. We may say that it is the real object and work of the Savior the present selection of the Church to the higher than human nature, to the divine nature, being a slight matter, though to us a most important and precious privilege and blessing.

“A TIME OF TROUBLE”

It will not surprise any thoughtful mind to find that the Scriptures most distinctly set forth that the time for the establishment of the Lord's Kingdom and its interposition in the affairs of mankind to effect this great change from the reign of sin and death to the reign of righteousness, into life everlasting, will imply a serious overturning of many of the affairs and institutions of this present time.

Through the Prophet the Lord declared, “Behold I create New Heavens and a New Earth, and the former shall not be remembered nor come into mind. Be ye glad and rejoice forever in that which I create.” (Isa. 65:17-25.) The context shows that the Millennial Kingdom conditions are here referred to and not those of the present time. The Revelator mentions the Millennial Kingdom under the same figure, saying, “And I saw a new heaven and a new earth, for the previous heaven and the previous earth were passed away.” Rev. 21:1.

There has always been a conflict between sin and righteousness between the prince of this world or age and the prince or ruler of the world or age to come. The prince of this world shall be bound by the prince of glory when the latter shall take to himself his great power and begin his reign. And this will mean not merely the restraint of Satan himself, but of all evil agencies and powers of which he is representative. The Lord intimates that the strong man of present institutions will not quietly submit; that it will signify a great struggle as between the prince of darkness and the prince of life, and that during this struggle the strong man of present institutions will be bound effectively, restrained that he shall deceive the people no more. (Rev. 20:3.) The institutions of this present time, while not wholly evil, are largely evil in the sense that pride and selfishness are the ruling and predominating principles in them. These, as they relate to Churchianity and the present social structure, may be expected to join in opposition to their own overthrow, but this will only make their fall the harder; and the Scriptures prophesy, and all who are the Lord's people may well believe, that great Babylon will go down suddenly as a great millstone into the sea of anarchy.

We are not teaching anarchy, we are not advocating it. Quite to the contrary, we advocate the very reverse, submission to the great King and incidentally to the powers that be, believing that peace and order are clearly portrayed in the divine Word which will result. But when we see clearly portrayed in the divine Word that present institutions in their fall will but prepare the world of mankind for the great transition for the establishment of the Lord's reign of righteousness, for the opening of the great highway of holiness and for the complete barricading of the downward path to destruction except for the willfully and intelligently and persistently contumacious, our hearts rejoice, because in all this we see the silver lining to the great cloud of trouble which is just before the world. The Master's words to us at the present juncture are, "When ye see these things come to pass, then lift up your heads and rejoice, knowing that your deliverance draweth nigh" the deliverance of the Church and their glorification in preparing for the blessing of mankind when the brief period of trouble shall have awakened the world and directed their attention to "him that speaketh from heaven." Here come in the words of the Lord through the Prophet David; after portraying the time of trouble, the message to the world is, "Be still, and know that I am God: I will be exalted amongst the people, I will be exalted in the earth." Psa. 46:10.

Pittsburgh Gazette, Oct. 21, 1906

BEHOLD, I COME AS A THIEF

Pastor Russell delivered two discourses here today, the one his celebrated anti-infidel sermon entitled, "To Hell and Back." His evening discourse was from the text, "The Kingdom of heaven cometh not with observation; neither shall they say, Lo, Here! or, Lo, there! for behold it is in the midst of you." Luke 17:21.

Many of you I know keep track of our discourses through the public press. I remind such that our published discourse of last Sunday was on the second coming of Christ in power and great glory. This evening we direct your attention to Scriptures which, in our judgment, clearly indicate that the power and great glory of Christ as a glorified church will be hidden from the world except as they shall gradually get the eyes of their understanding opened to appreciate the affairs of the new dispensation. This is a new thought to many. It is not surprising that our first thought should be of an earthly glory and public display in connection with the inauguration of the heavenly Kingdom. All our experiences in connection with the coronation of earthly monarchies and the establishing of earthly dominions have been along this line from the dawn of earliest history. Moreover, many Scriptures bearing upon the inauguration of the Kingdom might be understood to refer to an outward glory, unless we took into consideration other Scriptures which unmistakably indicate that the glory of the Lord which will be revealed to the world, and which all flesh shall see together, will be a glory which will be comprehended not by their natural eyes so much as by the eyes of their understanding, just as now the Lord's people are exhorted to look unto Jesus, to behold his glorious character, to recognize him as the one altogether lovely, as the Light of the world, as the glorified Son of God as the King of glory, as the Prince of the kings of the earth, the Lord of Lords. Although as Christians we recognize our Lord in all these aspects, the physical sight has nothing whatever to do with the matter; it is a revelation purely to our mental vision. To us who believe, he is precious, the one altogether lovely, although we have seen him not except with our hearts.

We wish now to show from the Scriptures that the revelation of the glorified Christ to the world will be, similarly, to the eyes of their understanding and not to their natural sight. True, the glorious changes in the world's condition, the new order of things, the new reign of righteousness and love and peace, etc., will be very different from present conditions and will be visible to the natural eye; but the spiritual forces by which these changes will be introduced to the world and maintained namely, the glorified Christ Head and body will be invisible, not seen by men, just as Satan, who is now according to the Scriptures the prince or ruler of this age, is not visible to men, though his evil works are everywhere manifest and his servants are everywhere in evidence, for as the god of this world he now worketh in the hearts of the children of disobedience, who certainly are much more numerous than the children of light, the children of God. (Eph. 2:2.) Similarly, our glorified Lord and his glorified Church, his Bride, reigning in power and great glory, will be personally invisible to men, but the grand results of their rule of righteousness will be everywhere manifest and the knowledge of the glory of God shall fill the earth. It will be by their knowledge that the world will see the glory of the Lord, and not by any shining visible to their natural eyes.

Our text when rightly understood is very conclusive testimony on this subject. But it is generally misunderstood, and we must therefore first show the inconsistency of the usual interpretation. It is generally explained to mean that God's Kingdom comes in the hearts of his people, and hence that we are not to expect any setting up of God's Kingdom in the sense of a world dominion or authority. We are told that when we pray, "Thy Kingdom come," we should understand it to mean the conversion of hearts to the Lord that thus the reign of Christ begins in the hearts of the converted, and that when this reign of Christ has become universal when all the world shall have come to this condition where Christ is reigning in their hearts then our Lord's prayer will be fulfilled, God's Kingdom will have fully come on earth as in heaven. We heartily sympathize with the good thought of the dear friends who hold this view, which we consider to be very erroneous, unscriptural and contrary to facts. As we look into our hearts, and as we judge of others about us after the Master's standard when he says, "By their fruits ye shall know them. Men do not gather figs of thistles nor grapes from thorn bushes" (Matt. 7:16), we cannot believe that God's Kingdom has very fully come into very many hearts. And as we see that this is the condition of things in Christendom, we ask ourselves—"How is it in heathendom?" and the Answer--is that it is very much worse there; very few indeed have hearts in which Christ is the King. More than this, we find that, according to statistics, the number of heathen who have absolutely no knowledge of the Lord is double today what it was a century ago. From this standpoint we see that any hope of a Millennium coming from such an establishment of the Kingdom of God in the hearts of his people is utterly impossible.

We are ready to grant that those who become fully the Lord's by a complete and thorough consecration have indeed what might be termed a reign of Christ in their hearts. Christ is King to them whatever he may be to the world they are his subjects to do his will. But, dear friends, this does not cover the Scriptural proposition on the subject. It is not the Lord's proposition that his Church shall become his subjects. On the contrary, the promise to the Church was that they should sit with him in his throne, that they should "reign with him,"—"To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne,"—"If we suffer with him we shall also reign with him," (Rev. 3:21; 20:6; Rom. 8:17.) So, then, for you and me to acknowledge Christ as the King of our hearts and that we are his subjects is still not at all the grand hope set before us in the Gospel. We must look for something much more than this.

FULL OF CORRUPTION

Glancing at our text and context we find that our Lord did not address these words to his disciples and hence not to us. He addressed the Pharisees those who did not believe him, whose hearts, he said, were not right, in whose hearts he was not acknowledged to be King. Of this same class of people he previously said that they were whited walls, and sepulchers full of all manner of corruption. Now could he mean that the Kingdom of God was within those hearts full of corruption? Surely not. Surely therefore that is not the proper interpretation of the Lord's words not what he meant this statement to teach us. Let us note the full context: Jesus and his followers were despised by the wise and great and learned of the day, but the common people heard him gladly. His principal topic was the Kingdom of God, with the intimation that he was to be the King and that his followers were to be associated with him in his throne and dominion and power and glory. To the learned scribes and proud Pharisees and Doctors of the Law such expectations were merely deceptions. They said, this man Jesus can never have a Kingdom, these his disciples are being deluded, and the people in general are hearing his words and falling into this delusion. We will prick the bubble we will demand of him when and where and how his Kingdom that he talks about will be established. As he begins to reason the matter out and to show us what are his hopes for raising an army, or how he expects to take over the rule of Israel and ultimately of the whole world, then his followers will see the fallacy, the weakness of the position, and thus we will destroy his influence with them they will see that there is no hope in his direction.

It was in harmony with this line of reasoning that, seeking to entrap him, they asked—" When will the Kingdom of God appear?" Our Lord's Answer--to this question headed off all the other questions along the line which they intended to ask him. His reply in our text, and in substance might be paraphrased thus: "You ask me when my Kingdom will appear. I Answer--you that it will never appear in the sense in which you are expecting it. I tell you that the Kingdom of God, in its power and great glory, is not to be introduced with outward display, outward show. I tell you, further, that when it is established in the world men will not be able to point to this locality or that locality and say, There is the Kingdom of God, they will neither point to Italy or Palestine or any other part of the world saying, Lo, here is the Kingdom! Lo, there is the Kingdom! because the Kingdom of God does not come in such a manner. It will be a heavenly power, a spiritual power, invisible to the natural eyes of men. They must come to know about this heavenly Kingdom and its power by its effects, and not by what they may see of the Kingdom itself they will not even see the rulers. They will see Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and the prophets as its representatives amongst men, through whom the mandates of the Kingdom will be expressed, and who will act as agents of the Kingdom in establishing law and order and in uplifting and instructing the people. But the Kingdom itself will be invisible; it cometh not with observation; you cannot see it, will never see it. When, under its power and guidance and direction, the whole earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord, mankind will indeed become each and all alike Abraham and the prophets, full representatives of the Kingdom, fully in harmony with its arrangements and principles, fully the exponents of that Kingdom until finally, when all who will shall thus under the reign of that Kingdom have been brought into heart unity with the Lord those who would not come into that condition being cut off in the Second Death then God's will shall be done on earth as it is done in heaven."

BEHOLD I COME AS A THIEF

In harmony with our Lord's presentation of the manner of the coming of the Kingdom without outward show is his declaration, "Behold, I come as a thief" stealthily, unawares. Again, heed his declaration through the Apostle that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night, and when the world shall be saying "Peace and safety," then cometh destruction the trouble at the end of this Gospel age shall be upon them unawares; but the Apostle, speaking of the church, and referring to the information they will have through the eyes of their understanding and not with their natural sight merely, says, "But ye, brethren, are not left in darkness that that day should overtake you as a thief" although it will come as a thief upon the whole world, and without any outward manifestation that the world could discern. (1 Thess. 5:2-4.)

True, at the first advent the apostles inquired of our Lord concerning when shall these things be, and he answered, "It is not for you to know the times and seasons which the Father hath put in his own power." (Acts 1:7.) More than this, he declared that of that day and hour knoweth no man, no not the angels of heaven, neither the Son, but my Father only." (Mark 13:35.)

This, then, should not be understood to mean that the Son of man would never know, that the angels would never know nor that the Lord's faithful people would never know. To the contrary we have the assurance that in due time they will know, that they will not be left in darkness with the world, and that these things will be revealed to them not to their natural eyes, but to the eyes of their understanding, as our Lord expressed it in his great prophecy of Matthew 24, "When ye see these things (certain things foretold in the Scriptures which would be outwardly manifested) then know (draw the inference, understand that other things will be in course of fulfillment which are not, visible to the natural sight) that your deliverance draweth nigh."

THE SECRET HARVEST WORK

Some of our Lord's parables clearly teach that in the end of this age a work will be in progress of which the world will be totally unconscious. For instance, in the parable of wheat and tares we are told that in the time of harvest the Lord will send his messengers and gather the tares into bundles and the wheat into the garner. And this work will be done while the world is totally unconscious of it, the world indeed, will see matters progress, but they will not understand what they signify. Only those who are enlightened by the Word and Spirit of the Lord will comprehend the true situation.

In harmony with this our Lord declared that in the end of this age, in this harvest time, it would be as it was in the days of Noah in certain particulars, namely, that the world in general would be ignorant of what was progressing right in their midst. As in the days of Noah they were eating, drinking, building, (things right enough, proper enough in themselves, but things which implied that they did not realize the true situation, did not realize that the harvest work was in progress,) so shall it be also in the days of the Son of man at the second presence of Christ.

The world will be eating and drinking, planting and building, and know not, realize not his presence and the work which he is doing amongst men the binding of the tares and the gathering of the wheat into the garner.

RECKONING WITH SERVANTS FIRST

Two of our Lord's parables the parable of the talents and the parable of the pounds call attention to the responsibility of the Lord's consecrated people throughout this Gospel age. These consecrated ones have in their hands certain talents and gifts of the Lord consecrated to his service, which they should be using with diligence, thereby seeking to glorify his name and to forward his cause. In these parables he tells us that at the second coming he will come first to these and reckon with them before he deals at all with the world. This is entirely in accord with the general testimony, to the effect that the Kingdom class of this Gospel age are to be made rulers and judges and priests of the world in the next age the Millennial age. It would be necessary therefore that the work of this Gospel age should be brought to a consummation first before the general work of ruling and judging, chastising and uplifting the world of mankind should take place. Since the Church is represented as being in the world at the second coming of Christ, and he comes again to receive us unto himself and reward the faithful, it follows that his inspection of his followers, his Church, the approval of the faithful and the casting into outer darkness of those who are unfaithful will take place while the affairs of the world run on just as usual, and the world will know nothing about the matter. Hence most evidently the Lord will be present in the world as a thief, secretly, invisible, unknown to the world, making selection amongst those who are nominally his and taking away by a "change" the faithful "overcomers." We remember the statement of these parables that the faithful were told to enter into the joys of their Lord, thus clearly intimating that the Lord's followers have not been thus judged at death and have not all along been entering into the joys of their Lord, but that this judgment will take place, be fulfilled, in the end of this age, at the second coming of Christ. Moreover, the statement is that the rewards given will be that one may have rule over two cities, another over five cities, another over ten cities.

Surely no such ruling and reigning has been set up in the past nor is it set up at present. It is a work that belongs to the Millennial age, and this gathering of all the faithful of the age and their entering into the joys of their Lord, entering into the Kingdom privileges by the change of the First Resurrection and by the work of the Kingdom as joint-heirs with Christ, is all in full accord with the whole testimony of the Word of God. Yet, evidently, all this matter will be without any outward show or manifestation to the world in general. They will know not. As in the days of Noah they were ignorant of what was coming, so in the days of the Son of man they will not realize the facts of the case until the church class shall have been gathered and the great time of trouble, anarchy, confusion, by which the present institutions of the world will be overthrown, and by which the world of mankind will be prepared for the reign of the Kingdom, will be upon the world.

ERRORS OF PRE-MILLENNIALISTS

It will be generally admitted that amongst those who oppose the thought of the Millennial Kingdom are some of the brightest minds of the Church. We believe that these have been turned aside from the proper scriptural view of the Millennial Kingdom by reason of the erroneous views presented by so-called pre-Millennarians. There is a small and distinctive class of people throughout Christendom, and generally good people, too, who hold fast to the Scriptural teaching of the second coming of Christ, but who have failed to notice that the Kingdom cometh not with outward show. These represent Christ and his apostles and all the saints in glory in the Millennium as men in the flesh, living under earthly conditions, with an earthly throne, court, ambassadors, forms, ceremonies, etc., etc. These presentations have repelled some equally sincere minds, who declare with propriety that they cannot think of the heavenly Kingdom which the Lord has promised as being so gross, so earthly that they cannot think of the Lord reigning on earth as a man however glorious he might appear. We quite coincide with that thought, as we remember that the Scriptures declare that our Lord is no longer a man, no longer in the flesh. He took the flesh indeed, but took it for a purpose not to keep it to all eternity, but that he might present himself as the man Christ Jesus, a ransom for all. He made that presentation, he gave all that he had, he gave up his human nature entirely, he has never taken it back. To take it back would be to take back the ransom. God forbid that this should ever be! Furthermore, for the Lord to take back the human nature would mean to take back the human limitations, which are certainly lower than those of the angels, as the Scriptures declare for we read that man was made a little lower than the angels. (Psa. 8:5.) On the contrary, our Father raised the Lord up from the dead not by giving him back the sacrificed human nature, but by giving him the divine nature, with its glory, honor and immortality. And thus, as the Apostle declares, "Though we have known Christ after the flesh, yet now henceforth know we him no more." (2 Cor. 5:16.) We now know him as the glorified Lord, whom we cannot hope even to see until we are changed and made like him, spirit beings. And this is his promise to us not that he will come again to be a man, but that we shall be changed and be like him, and the Apostle explains why this change is necessary, saying, "Flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God." (1 Cor. 15:50.)

True, our Lord will also retain in his glorified condition the many names which are applied to him in the Scriptures. We still speak of him as the Son of David, although, now highly exalted, we recognize him as David's Lord and David as his son. In harmony with the Scriptures he declares that, "Instead of fathers, they shall be children to Messiah, whom he will make princes in the earth." Amongst these precious names which will continue to be his was one which he so frequently applied to himself, namely, "The Son of man," or, more literally, "The Son of the man." By this he identified himself with the man Adam, and pointed out that he was the one through whom father Adam and all of his race and all of his inheritance were redeemed and are to be restored. We are glad that this name continues to be one appropriate to our Lord, as it continually calls to our mind what great things he has done for our race in harmony with the divine arrangement. This title, Son of man, will always, we understand, be his, and will appropriately show who bought Father Adam's inheritance and rights. The whole world must recognize this fact, and to all eternity, we believe, he will be honored as the great Redeemer of our race. To think of our Lord as now a man in heaven is very inconsistent with all the declarations of the Word. Man is not adapted to heaven he was God's creation intended for the earth. Spirit beings are adapted to heavenly conditions. Our Lord was a spirit being before he became a man, and as the taking of our nature meant his leaving of flesh-and-blood conditions, because "flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God." If the Bride could not be flesh and blood, neither could the heavenly Bridegroom be flesh and blood; and since all spirit beings are invisible to men, it follows that Christ is invisible now, and if present in the world would not more be seen by the natural eyesight than would be the angels, of whom we are told that they are messengers, spirits, sent to minister to those who will be heirs of salvation. (Heb. 1:14.) We see the angels not, yet we believe there are such messengers, angels. Similarly we can grasp the thought of our Lord at his second coming being present in the world and doing a work and yet being invisible; and similarly we can grasp the thought that ultimately, with his glorified Church, he will be present in the world as the King of Glory, and his Kingdom of righteousness will soon cause the earth to shine with the knowledge of the glory of God, and to be resplendent with the works of faith and obedience and God-likeness. Thus gradually, as the Sun of Righteousness shall arise, the world will be filled with the light and knowledge and blessing of that time, and the glory of the Lord shall thus be revealed to all flesh, and all flesh shall see it together with the eyes of their understanding, as now believers see it with the eye of faith. Our Lord declared of the world, "Yet a little while and the world seeth me no more, and that was a true statement; but it was also true as he said to his followers, "But ye shall see me." We shall see him because, begotten again by the Spirit to a new nature, we in our resurrection shall be changed from earthly nature to heavenly or spiritual nature. Then we shall see him as he is, because we shall be like him spirit beings.

"EVERY EYE SHALL SEE HIM"

"Every eye shall see him, and they also that pierced him." (Rev. 1:7.) The eyes that will see the glorious Lord will not be the natural eyes, because the Scriptures assure us that "no man hath seen God at any time, that he dwells in a light which no man can approach thereto." (1 Tim. 6:16.) In other words, natural human beings cannot see spirit beings. Whenever spiritual beings would manifest themselves to men they have assumed bodies of flesh for the purpose; but seeing such bodies of flesh would not be seeing spirit beings. We understand that no such arrangement is made for the Millennial age that the ancient worthies, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, the prophets, etc., as perfect men, will be perfect exponents and representatives of the Lord of glory amongst men. When they see these they see the Lord Jesus representatively; as the disciples saw the Father in Jesus, as our Lord said to his disciples, "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." (John 14:9.) As it was impossible for them to have a better representation of the Father than that manifested in the Son. So in the Millennial age it will be impossible for men to have a better representation of the glorified Christ than will be granted them in the perfect Abraham, and others, his representatives amongst men. But, says one, is it not promised that this same Jesus will come? Yes, we answer, and although changed in nature he is the same Jesus, the same love, the same interest that he had when with us is still his. And so we, when we are changed from human to spirit conditions, will be the same persons but under new conditions. But does it not say that he shall come in like manner as he went away? Yes, we answer, and he will. As we have just been showing, he will come quietly, unostentatiously, unknown to the world, just exactly as he went away; no blowing of trumpets, no general commotion throughout the world when the Master went only his followers, his closest disciples, his little flock, will know of his presence until later on his glorious power will be revealed in flaming fire, in the fiery judgments that will be put into operation throughout the world as against all unrighteousness for all unrighteousness in sin, and all sin is to be destroyed, consumed, and all the willing and obedient are to be lifted from its power, and those who refuse to be uplifted will be destroyed from amongst the people in the Second Death.

So, then, dear friends, let us more and more seek to take the Scriptural standpoint of expectance, and to look for Jesus with the eyes of our understanding and not with our natural sight. In proportion as we learn to do this our blessing will be increased, and by and by when changed we shall see him as he is, for we shall be like him.

THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST

Pastor C. T. Russell of Allegheny, Pa., preached twice here today. His afternoon topic was his celebrated cure for infidelity, "To Hell and Back." The morning topic was the "Second Coming of Christ," from the text, "When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory." (Matt. 25:31.) We quote as follows:

The entire race of Adam has gone down into the great prison house of death as a penalty for sin, but that in God's due time, in mercy, he has sent forth his Son, who, 1800 years ago, presented himself as a sacrifice for man's sins, on account of which that original sin which overwhelmed the race in death will be completely cancelled, and the Redeemer will become the deliverer to call forth all that are in their graves. We saw that in the interim between Jesus' death at Calvary and the time for blessing the world in general through the millennial kingdom, for which we are taught to pray, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven," a special work was being done God was electing or selecting from amongst the condemned race a "little flock," peculiarly zealous and obedient, who through faith and obedience, under divine guidance, have been developing the character likeness of Christ, to the intent that these may constitute a special class to be exalted with their Redeemer in his kingdom. These have the promise that suffering with him now, through faithfulness to righteousness, will mean for them exaltation to joint-heirship with him in his great kingdom shortly to be established for the blessing of the world the millennial kingdom.

We invite your attention at this time to the fact that the scriptures consistently throughout, hold up before us as the kingdom of Christ the hope of the world for its uplift and blessing and show us that it is not to be established by the conversion of the world by the preaching of the gospel, but is to be established by the second coming of Christ, not as a man, not as a sacrificer again, but clothed with power to overthrow sin and Satan and to grant the needed help to every son and daughter of Adam to rise out of present sin and death conditions. This is the great social uplift which the world begins to realize is necessary, but which it is unable to accomplish for itself. The preaching of the gospel was not designed to convert the world, but merely to call out of the world a comparatively small number who would have the hearing ear, the attitude of faith and obedience, of readiness to receive the Lord's instruction and to follow him at the cost of self-sacrifice. Totally different agencies will be necessary for the conversion of the world as God has purposed it and outlined it in the Bible. More than eighteen centuries have passed and there are today only a comparatively few real followers of the Lamb who have taken up their cross to follow him. The remainder, as we have already seen, the majority of whom never even heard of the Savior, are none of them in eternal torment, but all of them in the great prison house of death. They must wait there until the elect number of the church has been called and chosen and tested and proven faithful and glorified with the Lord their head. Then the kingdom will come in power and great glory, and then the blessing of all the families of the earth will ensue. This is the story of the Bible from Genesis to Revelation, and no other book presents such a hope, and no other writings covering centuries show the same consistency and unity and oneness. To those who see the matter from the scriptural standpoint this becomes one of the surest evidences that the Bible is indeed Divinely inspired, written by holy men of old, who spoke and wrote as they were moved by the Holy Spirit and not according to their own vain imaginings. Let us delve into the matter more fully.

THE HIDDEN MYSTERY

Throughout the old testament the prophecies of the coming glory of Messiah and the blessedness of his reign commingle with other prophecies which refer to him as the Lamb before her shearers dumb, with transgressors in his death, bruised for our iniquities. The two thoughts are distinctly there, but purposely so misarranged that the Jews could not clearly understand them. They might have expected the glory first, and by some calamity the sufferings afterward. The visions of the prophets were not intended by the Lord to be understood until the time of their fulfillment. The Apostle Peter tells us that even the angels did not understand them. He says, "Of which salvation the prophets have inquired and searched diligently, who prophesied of the grace that should come unto you; searching what or what manner of time the spirit of Christ did signify, when it testified beforehand of the sufferings of Christ and the glory which should follow. Unto whom it was revealed that not unto themselves but unto us they did minister the things which are now reported unto you by them that have preached the gospel unto you, with the Holy Spirit sent down from heaven; which things the angels desire to look into." 1 Pet. 1:10-12

If it was not for the angels to know in advance neither was it for the Jewish people to know in advance, and of course the heathen nations had no conception whatever of such matters. The test came upon the Jewish nation, therefore, with all the greater subtlety, only the Israelites indeed being in that humble attitude of heart that was ready for instruction on the subject, and to learn that their expectations of immediate glory were to be disappointed; that first the Son of man must suffer many things and be crucified, that he might thus attest his faithfulness to the Father's will in the redemption of the purchased possession, and thus demonstrate to mankind his love, and ultimately enter into the glories of his kingdom, which shall yet bless every creature in the same proportion as he was injured by the fall through the first Adam.

Another feature of the Divine plan which was not understood prior to our Lord's first advent is what the apostle calls the "hidden mystery," which is "Christ in you the hope of glory." It had not been surmised in olden times that the Messiah was to be composed of many members, of which Jesus would be the head, the Lord. The long interim between our Lord's sufferings at Calvary and his entering upon the glories of his kingdom at the dawning of the Millennial age is by the apostles marked out as the period in which the faithful, the "very elect," will walk in the footsteps of Jesus, suffering for the brethren's sake and for their loyalty as members of the body to him as their head. Thus the whole gospel age has been the time for the calling, the testing and the perfecting of the church, which is the body of Christ its preparation to enter into the glorious joys of the Lord. And the second coming of Christ is appropriately deferred until all the members of the church, his body, his Bride, have had their necessary lessons in discipline and obedience and been accepted and approved by him.

I WILL COME AGAIN AND RECEIVE YOU

As our Lord at his first advent broke to the little company of his disciples the information respecting his death and his departure to heaven and the necessity for these things, he did it gradually for, like all Jews, their minds and hearts had grasped the glories of the coming kingdom to such an extent that they had overlooked the testimony respecting the sufferings of Christ, which must precede. Hence our Lord assured them that he would come again and receive them unto himself, that they might be sharers of his glory, saying, "If I go away I will come again and receive you unto myself; that where I am there ye may be also." (John 14:3.) "It is expedient for you that I go away; for if I go not away, the comforter will not come unto you." (John 16:7.) When he talked to them they were not yet spirit begotten. For this begetting they must wait until Pentecost, and hence our Lord could not explain to them as he would have done had they been spirit begotten he must of necessity speak to them as natural men, without going into details, which without the begetting of the spirit would have been foolish to them. The further details he left for a further revelation, assuring them that when the Holy Spirit, the Comforter, would come, he would through the

Comforter bring all things to their remembrance which he had previously stated, intimating that they would then be able to understand the deeper things of the Divine plan. As he said again, "I have many things to tell you, but ye cannot bear them now." John 16:12

Notwithstanding all that our Lord told the disciples respecting his death, and his resurrection on the third day, their minds were so fixed upon the usual Jewish sentiments on the subject of the Messiah's glory that they could not receive the matter. Only a few days before our Lord's crucifixion, Peter, the spokesman of the twelve, had remonstrated with Jesus saying, "Far be it from thee, Lord; these things shall not happen unto you." (Matt. 16:22.) No wonder then that after his resurrection it was necessary for our Lord to be with the disciples for a while to set them straight in the matter, appearing for this purpose in various forms, as did the angels in times preceding, creating bodies of flesh and bones with clothing for the various occasions, thus to indicate two things first, that he was alive from the dead; and, second, that he was changed and no longer a human or flesh being, but now a spirit being, with all the powers of spirit beings.

When talking to Peter and his companion on the way to Emmaus, our Lord said, "O slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken." They believed part of what the prophets had spoken, but they had neglected other parts which they should take heed to and apply. Our Lord continued, "Ought not Christ to have suffered these things and to have entered into his glory? And beginning at Moses and all the prophets he expounded unto them in all the scriptures the things concerning himself." (Luke 24:25-27.) The essence or spirit of those expositions of the prophecies have come down to us through the apostles, and it is our privilege through the guidance of the spirit to have the deepest and clearest possible views of the same.

MOSES WROTE OF ME

Going back to the writings of Moses, we find that he clearly delineated the sufferings of Christ as well as the glories that were to follow. Thus he taught the first advent of Christ as the great sin-offering, and the second coming of Christ as the glorious prophet, priest and king through whom the blessings should be bestowed. We see this in the typical sacrifices of the typical day of atonement; the priest first offered the bullock, which represented himself and constituted the great foundation sacrifice for sins; and secondly he offered the goat, which represented the church associated with him because accepted by him as members of his body. The antitype of that atonement day was this entire gospel age, in which we have the sufferings of Christ completed first, the sufferings of our dear Redeemer; secondly, the sufferings of the church, his body, made holy and acceptable through his merit.

With the close of the atonement day in the type the high priest, having made the atonement, came forth to the people clothed in all the glorious garments of his priesthood, representative of the exceeding great and precious promises of God fulfilled in him, and representative of the power and great glory and honor conferred upon Jesus and indirectly upon the church his body. As the high priest then lifted up his hands and blessed the people who were prone in the dust, so here in the antitype, in the near future, at the conclusion of this day of atonement, when the great high priest, Jesus, and the church, the members of his body, his bride class, shall be clothed upon with the glory, honor and immortality of the divine nature and heavenly powers, there will be a manifestation of the Messiah as the prophet, priest and king in the blessing of the multitudes of earth who are now groveling in the dust, in mental, moral and physical decrepitude and ignominy. As in the type, after the blessing of the people they arose and gave a shout, so in the antitype, when the blessing of the Lord shall have reached all the people during the Millennial age, the result will be the uplifting of the world, and great shouting of praise to him who loved us and bought us with his own precious blood and to the Father of all, the great author of the plan of salvation.

ENOCH PROPHESED, SAYING:

“Behold, the Lord cometh with myriads of his holy ones.” (Jude 14.) We have no original record of Enoch’s prophecy; we merely have the apostle’s quotation of it; but this is quite sufficient. It demonstrates to us the unity of God’s book, the oneness of the message which God gave through his various prophets in so long a time. For be it remembered that from Enoch’s time to the time when the apostle quoted his words approvingly a period of over two thousand years had elapsed, during which this same message had been reiterated in types, in symbols and in plain statements. How evidently the one spirit of God inspired and directed all these as his mouthpieces. What an internal evidence is here respecting the inspiration of the Bible. And it is in this, as in other matters, unique, separate and distinct from all other religious books. The writers of the Bible did not copy in any manner or degree from the heathen. No heathen books would present a Messiah who would first suffer and redeem the people and then, after having selected from amongst the redeemed ones a little flock to be his special joint-heirs, would come again and complete his work by blessing all the families of the earth. The Bible alone tells this wonderful story with consistency and persistency from beginning to end.

This was the theme of all the apostles. They continually exhorted the church, saying, "Be patient, brethren, the coming of the Lord draweth nigh," "Avenge not yourselves" leave all your trials and difficulties and the rewards of your enemies in the hands of the Lord. You are his, your interests are his, the whole work is his; allow him in his own time and way to accomplish the Divine will. You cannot thwart it if you would, but endeavoring to do so would hinder you from enjoying the peace of God, which he intends you may enjoy even under trials and difficulties of this present time.

IN POWER AND GREAT GLORY

Although the scriptures have much to say respecting the second coming of the Lord, the errors which crept into the nominal church during the dark ages have so vitiated these blessed declarations in the minds of the Lord's people, so diluted them, so rendered them meaningless, that a comparatively small number realized that all the hopes of the church as well as all the hopes of the world according to the scriptures waited for and are based upon the second coming of him who redeemed us with his precious blood.

Of the comparatively few who have learned how important a place the second advent of our Lord has in the Divine revelation, the majority apparently have been sidetracked by a total misconception of the manner of the second advent. They have taken too low, too early, too fleshly a view of the matter. They are expecting Messiah to come again in the flesh to sit upon an earthly throne, and that his church will likewise be associated in the earthly glory, and that the whole world will look to an earthly Jerusalem as its capital, in much the same way as we look to Washington City as the capital of this nation, or as the French look to Paris as their capital city and seat of government. This wrong view of the second coming of our Lord, this misconception of the power and great glory, putting it upon an earthly plane, is responsible in great measure for the repulsion against the doctrine of the second coming of the Lord in the minds of a good many spiritually minded people. These reason correctly that such expectations are contrary to the general tenor of the scriptures, which inquire, "Having begun in the spirit, are ye now made perfect in the flesh?" Gal. 3:3

On the contrary, we know that the apostle's testimony is that since his resurrection our Lord is "that spirit" (2 Cor. 3:17), and that when he comes again in power and great glory it will not be in the flesh but in spiritual glory and power, resembling that which the apostle himself caught a glimpse of when on the way to Damascus, and under the influence of which he was smitten to the ground a brightness above the sun at noonday. The apostle assures the church that before the kingdom conditions and glories could be entered upon, we must all be “changed,” changed from human to spirit conditions, from human or earthly nature to the perfection of spirit nature—” to be partakers of the Divine nature,” as the Apostle Peter points out. (2 Pet. 1:4.) That this is what the apostle really meant is evident from his subsequent statement that we must all be changed, because “flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of heaven.” 1 Cor. 15:50,51

WE SHALL BE LIKE HIM

The Apostle Paul adds his testimony contradicting the thought that in the kingdom the Lord will be as he was in the flesh, and that his church will be as they are now in the flesh, “It doth not yet appear what we shall be.” (John 3:2). From this it is evident that we shall be different from what we are now, and evident also that our Lord will be very different from what he was. He took the flesh for the suffering of death and not to keep it eternally. The taking of it was a mere expedient necessary for our redemption. The apostle declares that having accomplished the work which the Father gave him to do, our Lord was highly exalted, far above angels, principalities and powers, and every name that is named. He is now, therefore, the Lord of glory, the express image of the Father’s person, a spirit being of the very highest order, of the Divine nature.

In harmony with this is the Apostle John’s further statement that although it doth not yet appear what we shall be, we do know that when he shall appear we shall be like him. His change took place in the resurrection, for he was “put to death in the flesh and quickened in spirit.” (1 Pet. 3:18.) Our change, as his church, his body, will take place, so far as those who sleep in Jesus are concerned, in the moment of their resurrection, for they, as the apostle declares, shall be raised incorruptible sown in weakness, raised in power; sown in dishonor, raised in glory; sown an animal body, raised a spiritual body. Putting all these things together, then, we see that the change of the living and the resurrection of the dead members of the body of Christ will bring all the church of the Lord to the same glorious spirit condition that he has had since he was raised from the dead by the glory of the Father. We shall be like him and although we do not know what that condition is, although it is beyond our comprehension, we are satisfied, for we shall be like him.

The second advent, then, means first of all that in the due time, at the end of this age, our glorious Redeemer will return to earth to take charge of its affairs and interests, not again assuming an earthly body, a fleshly body, for he does not come to die but to reign. He therefore comes a spirit being, invisible to mankind as angels are invisible, and the power and glory that he will have will not be an outward shining brightness, but such a power and glory as he illustrated at his first advent in the miracle which he performed, as we read, "These things Jesus did and manifested forth his glory." (John 2:11.) The glory of the Lord will not consist in a bright and shining personal appearance but in the glorious work which, invisible to the world, he will perform in the exercise of the power of God, in the restraining of sin, in the blessing and enlightenment of the world, in the arrangement of the various processes by which the weaknesses and imperfections of the fall will pass from the world and all the willing and obedient be uplifted mentally, morally and physically from the degradation and sin of the present time to perfection and God-likeness. The entire Millennial age is devoted to this work of putting down sin and every evil thing opposed to righteousness, and the uplifting of the willing and obedient of the race. "The restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began." Acts 3:19,21

REVEALED IN FLAMING FIRE

Flaming fire is a figure of speech of the same order as when the apostle says to the church, "Think it not strange concerning the fiery trial that shall try you." (1 Pet. 4:12.) Our fiery trials are not literal fires, nor should we understand the flaming fire in which our Lord will be revealed to be a literal flaming fire. To those who have the time and inclination to study into the nature of this flaming fire we have much more to say than would be possible at this time. Such have or may have, at comparatively little cost, a full explanation of this subject in one of our Bible studies, entitled, "The Day of Vengeance," sold at cost price by the Watch Tower Bible & Tract Society, or supplied free to those unable to purchase. Briefly let us say that flaming fire in which Emmanuel will make known to the world his second advent and the establishment of his kingdom is nothing short of the great time of trouble in which all the institutions of this present evil world will go down and give place to the age to come, the Millennial age, the Millennial kingdom.

Another statement respecting the manifestation of the Lord's glory at that time is that he comes to be glorified in his holy ones, and to be admired in all them that will believe during that Millennial day. (2 Thess. 1:10.) The invisible kingdom, composed of Christ and the elect church, invisible to men but all powerful for the suppression and punishment of evil doing and for the blessing and rewarding of well doing, will very speedily manifest who are the holy ones who love righteousness and hate iniquity. And the rewarding and blessing of these will be illustrations to the remainder of the world of how they also may learn righteousness, and that, failing to respond to this great Teacher, they shall be destroyed from amongst the people in the second death. Acts 3:23.

“HE MUST REIGN”

Pastor C. T. Russell addressed the Bible House congregation and the public at Carnegie Music Hall in this city this afternoon. A large congregation gave closest attention to his theme, which was from the text, “He must reign till he hath put all enemies under his feet.” (1 Cor. 15:25.) He said:

Everyone who has studied his Bible to any purpose has noticed that throughout the New Testament the teachings of our Lord and of his apostles imply the establishment of a reign or dominion of righteousness in the world which shall completely overthrow sin and all who are willfully and intelligently its upholders and sympathizers. Our Lord spoke of this as His kingdom and also as the Father’s kingdom; the apostles similarly mention it as the kingdom of God’s dear Son, the kingdom of glory, the heavenly kingdom. Thus our Lord Jesus in various of his parables refers to the selection of His church, His elect, to be joint heirs with Him in His kingdom, and tells us that when the Son of Man shall come in the glory of His kingdom, and all His holy angels with Him, then shall He sit upon the throne of His glory to judge, discipline, correct in righteousness all the families of the earth. (Matt. 25:31.) When in the prayer He taught us to petition the Father, “Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as in heaven,” it was not a derogation of His teaching that He himself was to be king of earth, who would subdue all things unto himself.

The relationship between the two thoughts that it is the Father’s kingdom and that it is the kingdom of God’s dear Son is easily seen when we remember that the Father’s kingdom or dominion of earth was renounced when father Adam became disobedient and was sentenced to death; it will not be re-established until the close of the Millennial age. Nevertheless by the Father’s arrangement our Lord Jesus has intervened, not only for the payment of father Adam’s penalty to justice, but additionally to take possession of Adam’s estate, as his successor, to bring order out of its confusion to remove the sin, to uplift the sinners, to establish peace, order, righteousness in the earth, to instruct and discipline and develop in character so many of Adam’s race as may be willing, to destroy the unwilling in the second death and thus, at the close of his reign of a thousand years, to deliver up the kingdom to God, even the Father, that He, the Father, may be all in all the one great head, center, ruler over all creation.

THE FIRST FRUITS AND THE GENERAL HARVEST

Our text and context express these matters in no uncertain terms, pointing out that as all who were in Adam died so all who will come into Christ the Redeemer shall live not merely for a few short hours or days or years but live in the full, perfect, complete sense of the word everlastingly. But the apostle assures us that there is to be order in this work and the saved will be of different orders. His words are, "every man in his own order." We ask what are the orders? and the scriptures Answer--that there is a first or chief resurrection, which belongs to the very elect, the church of this gospel age, "the bride," the Lamb's wife." That resurrection is to glory, honor, immortality, joint-heirship with the Redeemer in his kingdom, and association with him in his great work during the thousand years in uplifting whomsoever will of all the families of the earth. The second rank or order of those who will be saved by the Redeemer will be those who will have part in the subsequent or inferior resurrection. This does not signify, however, a resurrection to any mean or contemptible condition but to perfect life and glory on a lower plane the human plane as distinguished from the spiritual. The reward of the elect bride class will be the Divine nature (2 Pet. 1:4) while the provision for the world in general is restitution to the perfection of human nature to all that was lost in Adam, redeemed by Jesus, plus experience and knowledge. Matt. 18:11; Acts 3:19-21.

Mark how the apostle clearly sets this matter forth. After telling us that as all in Adam die all who will come into Christ shall be made alive, fully released from death and imperfection, and then telling us that this will be to every man in his own order, he announces the orders just as we have delineated saying, "Christ the first-fruits; afterward they that are Christ's at his coming." (1 Cor. 15:23) Christ the first-fruits includes the church, for as the apostle explains "God gave Christ to be the head over the church which is his body," and as he again remarks, "We are members in particular of the body of Christ." (Eph. 1:23; 1 Cor. 12:27). Similarly we read again, respecting the church that "we should be a kind of first-fruits unto God of his creatures." (Jas. 1:18.) Only the first-fruits of God's creatures are dealt with during this gospel age, and it is the harvest of these first-fruits that occurs at the second coming of Christ.

Then come the Lord's dealings with mankind in general--the granting to all mankind of an opportunity of coming into relationship with the great Life-Giver. This will include not only those who will be alive at the second coming of Jesus, but all the remainder of the race, as our Lord declares, "All that are in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of Man and shall come forth," not only the church to the life resurrection, but the world also to a resurrection by judgments by discipline, by chastisement, by instruction, by rewards and punishments. We have every reason to presume that when all the blind eyes shall be opened and all the deaf ears unstopped, when Satan shall be bound that he will deceive the world no longer, when the darkness of superstition and error shall be past, being driven away by the rising of the Sun of Righteousness with healing in his beams then millions of the world of mankind will be glad to respond to the opportunity afforded them of restoration to perfection, mental, moral and physical, at the hands of the great Redeemer, who will then be King of Glory. The context speaks of those saved in this order or class as “afterwards they that are Christ’s at his coming” more literally, those who become his during his presence. The Greek word rendered coming in our common version is parousia, and properly signifies presence.

The Lord’s first coming or first presence was but for a few years, in which he accomplished the sacrifice of himself as the redemption price for the sins of the whole world. But his second coming, his second presence, we are assured, will be for a thousand years his Millennial reign. And those who will become his during that time of presence, during that Millennial reign, will all be made alive, and be rescued not only from sin but also from all the wages and penalties of sin, from all the imperfections that sin has wrought in them. They shall be made alive fully, completely, perfectly, in all the glory of the image and likeness of God which Adam originally possessed, and lost through disobedience; and for such the Lord has arranged that the whole earth shall gradually become the paradise of God. Here then we see the Divine arrangement, that the church is a kind of first-fruits of God of his creatures, and is developed during this gospel age; and that the general harvest, the general salvation from sin-and-death conditions for mankind in general, will not be fully attained until the close of Christ’s Millennial reign.

“THEN COMETH THE END”

Whoever will follow the apostle’s words carefully will see that his double classifications of the saved ones, namely, the first fruits and “afterwards they that are Christ’s at His presence,” carries the matter down to the close of the Millennial age, for in the next sentence the apostle says, “Then will be the end (the end of Messiah’s work as Redeemer and Mediator), when He shall deliver up the kingdom to God, even the Father; when he shall have put down all rule (opposition) and all authority and power.” The very essence of the apostle’s argument is that our Lord at His second coming will use force, power, in suppressing sin and in liberating the sinner from the thralldom, the slavery, of sin and death, which he represents as tyrants now reigning over the race of Adam. The thousand years will be quite sufficient time in which to accomplish all this wonderful work of putting down everything opposed to righteousness and the best interests of those whom the Lord redeemed, and in giving them all a full opportunity for reconciliation to the Father through the merits of His precious blood. This leads up to our text, “For He must reign until He hath put all enemies under His feet.” It is by His exercise of dominion, authority and power that He will overthrow everything opposed to the best interests of Adam and his race.

The scriptures assure us that our Lord at His resurrection was granted all power in heaven and in earth; but they equally assure us that the Father’s time for permitting the exercise of this power had not yet come that it has not yet come. If to any this statement seems to need confirmation, it is abundantly substantiated by the history of the past nineteen centuries and by the facts as we see them before us at this very moment. We certainly see that sin and death are reigning today; 90,000 go into the tomb daily while those whom we call alive are under the heavy hand of death, disease, weakness, pain, with their concomitants of mental and moral weakness and depravity. But not only do the scriptures inform us that the present is not the time for Christ’s reign, but additionally they point out the time in the future when “He shall take unto Himself His great power and reign.” (Rev. 11:17). Here we have exactly the same testimony that is given us in our text and context, that the reign of Christ will mean first of all the blessing of all the faithful ones of this gospel age and of previous times, and includes the blessing of all the families of the earth, small and great. It includes also the utter destruction in the Second Death of all who will not come into full accord with that glorious kingdom of righteousness.

“EVERY KNEE SHALL BOW AND EVERY TONGUE CONFESS”

Three times in the scriptures it is repeated that every knee must bow. The thought conveyed by the expression is that every human being must become subject to this great King, who, as the Father’s representative, will have full charge of the affairs of earth, to uplift the willing and obedient and to destroy the incorrigible to bring order out of present confusion and to eventually bring to pass the desire of the Lord’s prayer that God’s will shall be done on earth as it is done in heaven. The expression, “Every tongue shall confess to the glory of God,” gives the thought that the bowing of the knee in accordance with the kingdom requirements will not be a mere passive obedience, but that ultimately all shall confess openly, publicly, the righteousness of the divine arrangement, its beneficence, its full provision for their every need. Whoever will not bow the knee and whatever tongue will not confess to the Lord’s glory will imply a prevalence of will and incorrigibility wholly outside inherited blemishes. Respecting this class the Apostle Peter, speaking of the reign of the antitypical Moses, says: “It shall come to pass that the soul that will not hear (obey) that prophet shall be utterly destroyed from amongst the people.”

In one of His parables our Lord pictures himself as the nobleman who went into a far country to be invested with kingly authority and to return to exercise that authority. The application is obvious; the nobleman is our Lord himself, the far country is heaven, the return of the nobleman invested with kingly authority represents our Lord at His second coming. Let us follow the other details of the parable: the nobleman gave certain talents and pounds, not to the public generally, but to his special servants, representing how our Lord gave special privileges and opportunities to the household of faith, particularly to his consecrated followers his “disciples,” who agreed to take up their cross and follow him. As on the return from the far country, invested with his kingly authority, the nobleman called first his own servants and dealt with them, rewarding those who had properly used their opportunities, talents, and punishing those who had not properly fulfilled their covenant obligations, so Christ at his second coming first deals with his church, rewarding the faithful and punishing with stripes and losses those who have hidden their talent in the earth, in pleasure, selfishly, carelessly.

The reward of the faithful servants we remember, was to have dominion over two cities, five cities, etc. The parable then treats of the king dealing with his new empire or dominion. The supposition of the parable is that the subjects of the king (outside the special servants) would gladly receive the king when his rightful authority to reign was discerned. But the parable tells that after the nobleman departed some of the future subjects had declared themselves to be in opposition to him, saying, “We will not have this man to reign over us.” These persons in the parable represented those of the world who have to any extent heard of Christ and his teachings and who have willfully and deliberately opposed the same by words or deeds of unrighteousness. Some of this class will be living at the time of the second coming of Christ, when he shall arise in power and great glory, fully invested with authority to rule, to reign, and to put all enemies under his feet. And it will be after having dealt with his own servants that the new King, according to the parable, will call for those men who would not have him reign over them, saying, “Bring them hither before me and slay them.”

SLAYING HIS ENEMIES

The picture is a graphic one. With the mind’s eye we see the parable of a king in dignity and authority, and his enemies being brought before him, the pictures of despair, realizing how they have insulted the one who now has the power and their own utter helplessness. We can imagine that many if not all of them would fall before him in supplication for mercy, and with assurances that if their lives were spared they would become his most loyal subjects. We need not follow the picture of the parable farther, nor try to imagine what earthly kings would do under such circumstances; but coming to the fulfillment of the parable in our Lord Jesus we see that just such supplication and bending of the knee is submission to his rightful authority to control them is what our Lord as the great King will desire. And we can well imagine his kindness unto even the worst of his enemies when we remember that it was himself who taught us, saying, "Love your enemies, do good to them that despitefully use you and persecute you." We remember indeed the statement of the prophecy respecting those who pierced our Lord, saying that every eye would recognize him, yea, they also which pierced him (Rev. 1:7). But mark how the prophet tells us he will treat them in return; he declares, "I will pour upon them the spirit of prayer and of supplication; and they shall look upon me whom they have pierced and they shall mourn for him." (Zech. 12:10.) Thus does the Lord tell us how he will be gracious even to those who crucified him. And will he not be gracious to all of his enemies who will renounce their opposition and bow the knee and confess with the tongue? Surely he will; this is the very essence of the scriptural testimony.

True the parable says, "Bring them hither before me and slay them." That is the command which will go out throughout the whole earth in that day, namely, that whosoever shall willfully and intelligently and deliberately oppose the King and his royal authority "shall be destroyed from amongst the people." It will then be for each one to take his stand either as one of the Lord's sheep or as a goat; all of his sheep will be received to his right hand of favor, all of the goats will be rejected from his favor and ultimately receive the same punishment which will be meted out against Satan himself, namely, everlasting punishment the punishment being death, destruction, never ending. There will be no redemption, no resurrection from that destruction. Matt. 25:46.

"THE SWORD OF HIS MOUTH"

When reading in the parable that those who would not have him to reign over them should be brought hither and slain before him, we should not forget the symbolical picture of our Lord and his sword given us by himself in Revelation, the "sword proceeded out of his mouth." His sword is the "sword of the spirit, which is the word of God." (Rev. 19:15-21; Eph. 6:17). We may hope for a terrible slaughter of the Lord's enemies with the sword of truth. We may safely conclude that the majority are in opposition to the Lord and to righteousness through blindness and dissipation through ignorance, superstition and misunderstanding, and as soon as these shall hear the voice of the Son of man, the smiting of his word will, we trust, heal them, recover them, deliver many from all opposition, so that quickly all knees shall bow and all tongues confess to the glory of God.

While thus implying that the number who will be recovered from conditions of sin and alienation and enmity to righteousness and to Christ and hence to the Father will be a large number, we are not forgetting or ignoring those scriptures which clearly indicate that there will be amongst men willful sinners who despise all of the Lord's favors and will remain obdurate and die the second death; but we are wishing to emphasize the other side of the question, which is so frequently overlooked by many, viz., that there is more than one sword of the Lord, and that the sword of his lips, the word of God, the message of the truth, is the one referred to by the angels when they sang on the plains of Bethlehem, "Behold we bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be unto all people." (Luke 2:10). All the true hearted ones who are in alienation to righteousness will be glad to be smitten with the sword of truth, the word of God. They will be glad to be slain as enemies, that they may be revived and made alive as the friends, the children of God.

Let us here remember another highly figurative scriptural statement, that it may throw light upon the way in which some of the enemies of the Lord will be slain at his second advent. Peter was preaching on the day of Pentecost, and charged upon his hearers the crime of having killed the Just One. He said, "Ye have killed the Prince of life with wicked hands, though in ignorance ye did it, as did also your rulers." The effect of this home thrust of the sword of the spirit of truth was that many of the hearers were "cut to the heart" and cried out, "Men and brethren, what must we do?" Then Peter, under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, applied to them the proper balms and salves, the balm of Gilead, the message of peace through Jesus' blood, and they were healed of the wound. Similarly the scriptures again declare that our Lord wounds to heal. (Hosea 6:1). Thus we may expect it will be in the future that the sword of the spirit, the word of God unsheathed against all enemies of righteousness, will be powerful through God to the pulling down of strongholds of error and to the slaying of many who are now enemies slaying them as enemies that they may be revived with the truth, and become the Lord's people who become his during his presence during the Millennial age.

ARROWS IN THE HEART

A prophetic picture of our Lord in glory at this second advent is given us in Psalm 45. There we read of how this one, fairer than all the children of men and blessed of God forever, girds on his sword. We must remember who he is and what is his sword when thinking of the details, the fulfillment of this picture. We are told that he takes his sword with his glory and majesty. "In thy majesty ride on prosperously because of truth and meekness and righteousness." The sword of the Lord, his power, his truth, shall be wielded merely against the enemies of the race and not against the race itself, for has he not bought the race with his own precious blood? and does he not come to deliver the groaning creation from the bonds, the slavery of sin and death? Against all unrighteousness, against ignorance, superstition, error, falsehood, the sword of truth will be wielded and the shackles of mankind will be broken.

Mark another feature of this symbolic picture, "Thine arrows are sharp in the heart of the King's enemies; by them the people fall under thee." Here the word of the Lord is represented as an arrow piercing to the heart those in opposition, convincing them of sin and of righteousness and of retribution. This will be the power which will cause the people to fall in submission before the great King of glory. Because of these arrows of truth in their hearts every knee shall bow and every tongue confess to the glory of God the Father. That this is the right application of the word arrow as a symbol we may easily prove. For instance, we read elsewhere, "The wicked shoot out arrows, even bitter words, that they may destroy the righteous." (Psa. 64:3.) But here the glorious King of righteousness sends forth his arrows, his words, not bitter but pure and true and good; and as arrows they go to the hearts of all those who are in opposition to righteousness to convince, to convict, to slay them.

ALREADY THE KING OF THE SAINTS

Those favored of God with the opening of their eyes of understanding in the present time those who are now the Lord's consecrated people and "taught of God" may even now by the eye of faith anticipate the glories and honors that are to be rendered to the great Redeemer. These see Jesus as the King of glory already, and by faith they render to him the homage of their hearts. They need not be slain by the sword of his mouth nor by the arrows of his sharp reproofs. They on the contrary have the special hearing ear, and have heard the voice of God speaking peace through Jesus Christ. Theirs is a double blessing: not only will they have glory, honor and immortality at the coming of the King, as his Bride and joint-heir in the kingdom and its wonder-ful privileges but already they have ruling in their hearts the peace of God which passeth all understanding. Already they are privileged to enlist as soldiers of the cross and followers of the Lamb. Already they are walking in his footsteps and fighting a good fight, not against humanity but in its favor against the world, the flesh and the devil. It is their privilege to have assistances from the Captain of their salvation who is by and by to be the King of earth, the King of glory to the full extent of their necessity, grace sufficient in every time of need, so that they may come off conquerors, yea, more than conquerors, through him who bought us with his precious blood. Let us abide in his love, abide in his favor and abide in his companionship, loyal, faithful unto death, that we may be counted worthy to share with him in his kingdom and glory according to the good promises of his word.

THE OVERTHROW OF SATAN'S EMPIRE

Pastor Russell, of Allegheny, Pa., preached twice here today to large and intelligent congregations. His afternoon discourse which we report was delivered at the large Grand opera house, which was crowded. He seemed to take the entire Bible as his text. He said:

The scriptures uniformly assert a personal Satan or adversary of God and righteousness, but nowhere do they intimate that he is beyond the power and control of the Almighty nor that his dominion is to be everlasting; but quite to the contrary. It is not the Bible, but human tradition, however, which declares that he, with hordes of subordinate fireproof demons, is continually busied with the tormenting of deceased members of the human family thousands of millions of them in some unknown place "beyond the bounds of time and space." That is human tradition, received not from Jesus and the apostles nor from the Jewish prophets, but from the heathen, of whom the apostle tells us that the gods whom they worship are devils. (1 Cor. 10:20.) And no wonder also that the apostle designates such doctrines as "doctrines of demons" (1 Tim. 4:1) undoubtedly Satan and his associated fallen spirits (those angels which kept not their first estate) but who for disobedience were cast down and are "reserved in chains of darkness" until a coming time of judgment. (Jude 6.)

SATAN'S GLORY, AMBITION AND FALL

The scriptures refer to Satan as having been created an angel of a very high order, a "covering cherub." He is styled Lucifer, the name signifying one who is a bright shining light, a "morning star" amongst other angels. He is referred to as developing an ambitious pride, which finally led to outward rebellion against God.

The time evidently that this pride began to develop was when Satan beheld our first parents in Eden, and perceived that in them God had created a new thing an intelligent pair in his own likeness, possessed with the powers of procreation for the multiplying of their own species. Ambition led Lucifer into disloyalty, he determined to capture if possible the first human pair, and thus to gain control of the entire human race of men which should be born to them. He has succeeded marvelously, and, as the apostle says, "The world lieth in the wicked one."

THE PRINCE OF THIS WORLD

This is one of the names given to Satan by our Lord, and the more we come to know about the affairs of this world the more we can realize the appropriateness of the name. For although unseen by men, and unrecognized by the majority, his power is everywhere manifested. We may reasonably believe, however, that Satan did not expect that the penalty of death would be executed against humanity. He knew, of course, of the death of the lower animals, but evidently assumed that man, created in God's image as are the angels, like them would be free from death. The execution of God's sentence, "Dying thou shalt die," against Adam and his race was quite probably a surprise to Satan, tarnishing his victory. Nevertheless, himself cut off from divine fellowship by his course, Satan continued to deal with humanity, to bring them further under his control; and his policy succeeded in proportion as mankind became more and more weak and degenerated through the fall.

Thus it will be noted that man did indeed, according to the scriptures, fall into the hands of Satan not in some far off unknown place after death, but in the earth prior to his death.

Let none suppose, however, that Satan is the "prince of this world" by any recognition of the Almighty God. Quite to the contrary, everywhere in the scriptures Satan's kingdom is denounced as a rebellious one, and everywhere do they present the thought that in due time Satan and his empire will be overthrown by Messiah.

The scriptures do not intimate that any others of the heavenly hosts deflected from their obedience to God at the same time with Satan; but no doubt the apparent success of his rebellion and the fact that no condign punishment was visited upon him may have emboldened others to taste of disobedience. The apostle clearly tells us of the time and circumstances connected with the fall of the angels from divine favor, since which time they are called in the scriptures demons, the word being improperly translated "devils" in our common version.

Outcasts from God and His favor, these disobedient spirit beings had evidently gone from bad to worse so as to fully merit the title given them of "demons." Their chief pleasure and business would seem to be in connection with humanity seeking always the ultimate degradation of the latter and to their estrangement from the Lord, His Word and His Spirit. Through witches and wizards in the past, and today through "mediums" clair-audient voices deceive humanity by personating their dead friends, and sometimes by personating the holy angels and the Lord himself that they might lead their minds away from truth and righteousness unto sin.

We well remember that in our Lord's day these demons infested many members of the human family, and that our Lord Himself and had His apostles made a speciality of casting out devils. These were addressed as persons and answered as intelligent beings, and those who accept parts of the divine record should hesitate before rejecting these. Those who have made insanity a study, we think, generally agree that it may arise from two causes: (1) From some pressure upon the brain, or some organic disturbance, or, (2) from obsession from the fact that the human being has come under the control of one or more of these evil spirits who run riot with his reasoning faculties. According to the estimates more than one-half of all the insane are suffering from obsession the same malady exactly that our Lord and the apostles cured by casting out the demons.

A MURDERER FROM THE BEGINNING

We are aware that our Lord's words to Peter, "Get thee behind me, Satan," are made the basis for the denial that there is any personal devil or subordinate demons. Our reply is that although any man may become an adversary of God (a Satan), the scriptures everywhere speak of the prime mover in evil as the "devil," the "Satan." Mark how the apostle tells us, "Your adversary, the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about seeking whom he may devour whom resist, steadfast in the faith." (1 Pet. 5:8) Mark how our Lord declared of Satan, "I beheld Satan, as lightning, fall from heaven" doubtless referring to Satan's original deflection. (Luke 10:18) Mark again his words respecting Satan, "He was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth." (John 8:44)

Ah, yes; he was a murderer the murderer of Adam and Eve and their entire family, now estimated at twenty thousand millions. He is the great murderer, the first murderer. He murdered our first parents by deceiving them, and thus inducing them to be disobedient to their Creator, which brought them under the sentence of death. Hence for now 6,000 years the penalty, "Dying thou shalt die," has been inflicted upon Adam and upon the entire human family and associated with that penalty have been various of its concomitants of pain, sorrow, sighing, crying, all included in and swallowed up by the word, dying. This is bad enough, but thank God it is not as bad as Satan would have us believe in order to turn our hearts perpetually from the Lord it is not as bad as the "doctrine of devils" would imply not as bad as eternal torment, which all the creeds of Christendom erroneously teach to be the penalty of original sin. We know well the lie, the misrepresentation by which Satan secured this original power over our race and became their murderer: God had said that disobedience would bring death--Satan had contradicted the Almighty, declaring, "Thou shalt not surely die." (Gen. 3:4)

Upon this murderer's falsehood Satan has built nearly all the various errors which has injured our race. For instance: (1) The erroneous theory that the dead are now either in purgatory or hell, except a handful taken to heaven; (2) by this theory the Bible teaching of a resurrection of the dead is made void and meaningless; (3) by this doctrine the work of Christ is rendered null and valueless, for if it were true that death took all the human family either to heaven or to hell according to their merits, before Christ came, before Christ died, as well as since, then, indeed Christ died in vain, for nothing has been accomplished by his death since it is claimed that the whole procedure continues the same.

WHY EVIL IS PERMITTED

Before examining the scriptural proofs of the overthrow of Satan and the glorious blessings to result to mankind under the reign of Christ, let us briefly glance at God's reason for permitting matters to go as they have gone for the past 6,000 years. Why did He not destroy Satan and the fallen angels long ago? Why was Adam permitted to come under the influence of the great Deceiver? or why were not Adam and Eve as well as Satan destroyed and a new race begun?

These are reasonable questions, and the Bible gives us the key to their solution, showing that all created in the image and likeness of God are designed to have the liberty of the sons of God liberty of conscience, liberty of heart and will, and that God seeks such only to worship Him and to enjoy His blessings eternally as worship Him in spirit and in truth. To create angels and men free moral agents signified their liberty to sin through disobedience to the Divine law if they chose. And in humanity God has given an illustration not only of the exceeding sinfulness of sin and its injurious effects, but also an illustration of the various features of His character justice, wisdom, love and power as these could not have been revealed to angels or to man without the permission of evil without the permission of the exercise of sin-and-death conditions. The apostle tells us that sin and death began to reign in Adam's day, and he explains the cause therefor, saying, "By one man's disobedience, sin entered into the world and death as the result of sin, and thus death passed upon all men because all have sinned." (Rom. 5:12.) Our Lord Jesus contradicts the evolution theory most emphatically in his statement, "The Son of man came to seek and recover that which was lost." Luke 19:10.

RANSOM CONTRADICTS EVOLUTION

Those who will look at the subject from the Bible standpoint will see that its every teaching is in accord with its teaching of Adam's perfection and his fall. The penalizing of Adam's sin with the death penalty presupposes that the original sinner possessed intelligence of a high order, which would properly qualify him for a trial at the bar of God for either life or death eternal, and the death sentence corroborates the declaration of the scriptures that Adam was disobedient in his trial. Thus the phenomena of death and mental, moral and physical impairment are all accounted for by the scriptures through this doctrine of sin and its penalty. Every person and every theory which in any sense or degree either repudiates or ignores this scriptural teaching, that all men are sinners and that their dying condition is the result or penalty of sin, are surely, therefore, in error.

In line with this we find the scriptural doctrine of a ransom that as sin and its penalty started in father Adam's disobedience and was inherited by all of his posterity, so God's provision for the future resurrection of Adam and his race made provision for their redemption. Thus the apostle states the matter, "As by a man (Adam) came death, by a man (Christ) also comes the resurrection of the dead; for as all in Adam die, even so all in Christ shall be made alive"—"every man in his own order." (1 Cor. 15:21-23). If, as the evolutionists tell us, man is "falling upward" wherein was the justice of the divine sentence against him? Why should God speak of him as a sinner, a transgressor? Is it sinful to evolve upward? Surely not! Why should man be spoken of as under the curse or penalty for sin, since self-development is not sin? Why should it be written that justice demands a ransom price before Adam and his race could be released from the death sentence and be granted an opportunity for eternal life? Why did the law given through Moses symbolize sin-offerings and divine propitiation through day of atonement sacrifices, etc., and the high priest's services, if there was no fall, no sin, and no need of a redemption and sin-offering and a reconciliation to God? Why should the new testament continue the same story of the necessity for the death of Jesus as the redemption price, that by his stripes we might be healed, that through the sacrifice of his life the world might be granted a resurrection to life in due time?

Why is the doctrine of the second coming of Christ and the resurrection of the dead put so prominently before us in the Bible if there was no fall into sin and death, no need of a redemption, and no need that at his second coming the sins of the world shall be blotted out, and the world of mankind uplifted out of sin-and-death conditions back to full perfection of human nature and all that was lost in Adam? There can be no Answer--to these questions before an honest mind. The matter is a simple one; we must either reject the Bible doctrine of man's creation in perfection, his fall into sin and its penalty death, his redemption by the precious blood of Jesus and his recovery by and by from sin and death and restoration to full perfection during the Millennial age at the hands of the great Redeemer, or, on the contrary, we must repudiate in toto all the theories of human evolution as being absolutely, unqualifiedly, untrue, “let God be true though it prove man a liar.” Rom. 3:4

RESTITUTION OPPOSED TO EVOLUTION.

The pity is that very few Christian people are aware that restitution is the scriptural teaching respecting the future hope of the world. I am sure that few if any of this audience ever heard a pulpit discourse from our text. In fact experience proves that remarkably few ministers or laymen know that there is such a statement in the scriptures that God through the inspired apostle declares: Times, years, of restitution are just before us to begin at the second coming of our Lord, and, as our context declares, are to be seasons of refreshing, of blessing, of uplifting to the world of mankind. Yea, notice that in our text the apostle declares that all the holy prophets since the world began have foretold these coming times of restitution and blessing. Strange that for so long we have overlooked the real teachings of God’s word, the real hope set before the world. The hope before the church is a heavenly one, the prospect of a change from an earthly nature and conditions and surroundings to the heavenly, to be accomplished in the first or chief resurrection. The blessing promised to the world is not a change to another nature, but a restitution of the present human nature to its original perfection in connection with this earth, its future home or paradise.

Restitution, as all are aware, signifies the restoring or putting back to a previous condition. There is a reason why this scriptural doctrine of restitution, spoken by the apostles and all the holy prophets since the world began, has been overlooked by theologians in general. For the same reason the doctrines of the second coming of Christ and the resurrection of the dead have lost their power in the faith of Christendom. The reason is that false doctrines were added very early to, and engrafted upon, the faith once delivered to the saints. These traditions of the ancients have largely made the word of God of none effect in the minds of the people, have rendered many of the statements of the scriptures unintelligible, and have prepared the masses of Christendom to believe a lie the lie that is now being made so prominent, that death is not death, that there was no fall, that there was no redemption from a fall, and that there will be no restitution.

This false doctrine is based upon the human theory that a man cannot die that the soul cannot die. It is in complete opposition to the scriptural declaration, “The soul that sinneth, it shall die,” the “wages of sin is death,” “God is able to destroy both soul and body.” The theory that man when he dies is not dead but more alive than ever renders meaningless the doctrine of a resurrection from the dead, and also the doctrine of the second coming of Christ for the purpose of resurrecting the dead and granting them blessed opportunities during the times of restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began." This false doctrine that man is alive when he is dead is the basis for all the horrible teachings respecting purgatory, respecting the doctrine of prayers to the saints, supposed to be alive in heaven, when according to the scriptures, they are dead and waiting for the second coming of our Lord and the resurrection of the dead.

Let us go back to the Bible and common sense, let us believe the record which God has given us of Adam’s original creation in his likeness, of his fall into sin, of the share that we all as his race have in his imperfections and unworthiness; and then let us hope in the redemption accomplished through his power now the high calling of salvation to the church, and during the Millennial age the blessing of the world by restoration, restitution processes, which shall bring them back to all that was lost, plus valuable lessons in knowledge which will be to their eternal advantage. Let us see further God’s reasonable provision that any who once really see and understand and appreciate the divine plan if they sin willfully, deliberately, will become subjects of the second death utter destruction, from which there will be no redemption, no recovery by resurrection or otherwise.

RESTITUTION SPOKEN BY THE PROPHETS

Did time permit it would afford us great pleasure to go through the various prophecies and point out wherein all the holy prophets have spoken of the coming times of restitution. Moses the prophet distinctly set forth that in due time God would send a greater one than himself, “A prophet like unto me,” the Messiah, and that through him blessings more abundant would come blessings of relief and uplift and succor, forgiveness of sins and reconciliation to God. Peter quotes this in the words just following our text, and indicates that the fulfillment of it will be in the times of restitution, the times of refreshing and rejuvenation which God has proclaimed through all the prophets. Then, says the apostle, under those favorable conditions, “it shall come to pass that the soul that will not obey that prophet, shall be utterly destroyed from amongst the people.” (Acts 3:23) God Himself prophesied of these coming blessings of restitution, declaring to Abraham, unconditionally, “In thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed.” As the curse was death, the blessing of the Lord will be the reversal of the death and dying, namely, restitution to life.

But doubtless all in this audience would be impressed more by the words of Jesus himself than by all the testimony of all the prophets. Harken, therefore, to the great teacher, the great prophet, telling of restitution. He spake through his subsequent mouthpieces, the apostles, to tell us through our text of the coming restitution times, and to tell us through the Apostle Paul that the whole creation is groaning and travailing in pain together waiting for the manifestation of the sons of God when their groaning and travailing in pain shall cease, and when they by the grace of God, by acceptance of His favors of the kingdom, shall regain the liberty of the sons of God freedom from sin and death restoration to divine favor. Not only so, but in His own dark utterances, with His own lips, He corroborated the testimony of the angels who announced His birth and was declared that it meant “good tidings of great joy, which shall be unto all people.”

Our Lord told that He came to “seek and to save that which was lost;” He told how as the good shepherd He was giving His life for the sheep, and as a result He would lead all of His true sheep, both of the present flock and of another flock yet to be called, to the fold. He told how He came “not to destroy men’s lives but to save them;” He pointed to His second coming as the time when He would reward the servants of this gospel age, the church and that then He would set up his kingdom and give his faithful servants, the church, dominion over the world for its blessing and uplifting. He told how that time of blessing and uplift would not only be for the then living people, but also that all in their graves should hear His voice and should come forth, and that those who would hear in the sense of obey should live ultimately be freed entirely from all the sin-and-death conditions of the present.

RESTITUTION EVEN FOR SODOM

So prone are we to think of God as less merciful and less generous than ourselves instead of more so, that we are inclined to limit the gracious promises of His word and to suppose that they are merely for the saints of this gospel age. On the contrary, while the exceeding great and precious promises are for these saints, there are other promises to the world in general which shall be theirs after the saints shall be glorified with their Lord. Whoever will read carefully and prayerfully and intelligently Rom. 11:25-32 will find distinctly stated the great blessings that are to come to natural Israel at the second coming of Christ; and after the church shall be glorified, that natural Israel “shall obtain mercy through your mercy” through the mercy of glorified spiritual Israel during restitution times.

But notice particularly a nation of the past, admittedly a very sinful nation, and see what our Lord declares to be their future prospects. He testified that all of the Sodomites were destroyed, saying, “Fire came down from heaven and destroyed them all.” But He tells that in the day of judgment, the great Millennial day of His kingdom, when the whole world shall have a judgment or trial of eternal life, the Sodomites will not be forgotten. More than that, it will be "more tolerable" for Sodom and Gomorrah in the day of judgment than for you of Chorazin and Bethsaida, who have had larger opportunities and privileges and have failed to profit thereby. But why should it be more tolerable for the Sodomites than for some others? Were they not wicked sinners? Our Lord testifies that they were sinful men. There is no excuse made for their iniquity, but he also testifies, saying, "If the mighty works that have been done in you had been done in Sodom and Gomorrah they would have repented long ago in sackcloth and ashes." Thus we see why it will be more tolerable for them in the Millennial day than for some who were more highly favored and who therefore sinned against greater light. Matt. 10:15.

Turn now to Ezek. 16:22,48-63. Hear what the Lord has said through this prophet respecting Sodom in the times of restitution in the day of judgment in the Millennial day under the reign of our Lord's kingdom for the blessing and uplifting and trying and testing of the whole world for life or death everlasting. The prophet declares the sin of the Sodomites, and his words agree with our Lord's testimony that the Israelites were more blameworthy; and then he tells that in due time he will restore the Sodomites and restore the Israelites, not for the merit or worthiness of either of them, but because of his own gracious plan and arrangements to give to all under the Millennial reign of Christ the fullest opportunity for knowledge and obedience and return to all that was lost and to life everlasting.

The assurance is that as sin abounded through Adam unto condemnation and death, so through Christ, in due time, eternal life shall come to as many as will receive it under the Lord's conditions. Six thousand years have been permitted for the development of the race to fill the earth, all except our first parents being born in sin, shapen in iniquity. (Psa. 51:5.) As these all were condemned in one man, God's provision is that the death of the man Christ Jesus is a sufficient ransom for the race, and this ransom price having been paid the first work of salvation has been the gathering from the world of the Lord's little flock, the royal priesthood, the household of faith, the Levites. This is as far as the work has yet progressed; soon this election or selection of the little flock will be completed, and they as the bride, the Lamb's wife, will be glorified with their Lord, and as His kingdom associates will with Him be engaged during the Millennial age, a thousand years, in the great work of blessing and uplifting from sin and death conditions every member of the human family who may desire to return to God and be abundantly pardoned.

It is asked why they do not return now. The scriptures Answer-- that the world in general is both blind and deaf to the Lord's message; they are enemies through wicked works, they are deceived by Satan's misrepresentation of the divine character, they know little reason why they should love God or seek to walk in His way; and, besides, they have learned to love the ways of sin and death and must be helped out of their deplorable condition.

For the assistance of mankind the Millennial kingdom is provided, in which Christ and the glorified church shall have and exercise all power autocratic power first, so as to bring every creature and everything to a recognition of the King and His dominion, as it is written, unto Him every knee shall bow and every tongue confess to the glory of God. Those who are rebelliously inclined shall be chastened with stripes, that they may learn the way of the Lord and learn to appreciate righteousness; while those who do obey the divine law of that time will be blessed with restitution.

And as for the remainder as for those who repudiate and reject and refuse under full light and knowledge, the scriptures declare that they shall be destroyed with an everlasting destruction the second death.

SOME OF SATAN'S DECEPTIONS

Satan's influence seems to be limited by the light of truth, the knowledge of the divine plan. Hence those who are his special objects of attack are such as are awake rather than intellectually asleep; especially those who being awake are actively engaged in lifting up the light, the truth, to the people. Looking back we see how Satan especially worked against Christ and the apostles as Jesus said to St. Peter, "Satan hath desire to have you that he might sift you as wheat." (Luke 22:31.) And again our Lord writes, "The devil shall cast some of you into prison," (Rev. 2:10); and we may reasonably understand that he had much to do with the stirring up of the animosity and prejudice of the scribes and Pharisees and doctors of the law against the teachings of Jesus and his followers, resulting in their death. So also it has been throughout this gospel age; Satan has actively opposed the light and the children of the light, and assisted and encouraged and co-operated with the darkness and those under its influences.

SATAN AUTHOR OF SUPERSTITIONS

What we are now noting is that Satan operated to the blinding and deluding of mankind and to the corruption of many of the followers of the Lord always to their injury and to the perversion of truth, and in opposition to the Word of the Lord. His change of tactics in connection with the reformation movement is also worthy of notice. When the Lord's spirit stirred up some of his followers for a defense of His Word, and Satan found it impossible to longer continue the gross darkness, he sided in with the reformers in some measure, not, however, with a view to producing a real reform, but to turn aside the reformation work. Luther, the reformer, was still under some of the delusions of his past education; he still believed that the dead were alive. His rebellion was against corruption in the system rather than against the system itself; he objected that money could not purchase the release of a soul from purgatory, through the saying of mass or otherwise. He still believed that Christ's kingdom had come and was somehow represented in the church; he looked to see how and where Christ's kingdom was in the world, and concluded that those governments which accepted the teachings of the reformation must be God's kingdoms. And thus it came about that while the king of France and king of England and king of Germany and others had erstwhile looked to the pope as the source of their authority, and under his authority claimed to be kingdoms of God, by and by those princes who accepted the reformers looked to them for authorization that the people might still recognize their rulers as of divine appointment.

Thus Protestant England and Protestant Germany continue to stamp upon their coins as before, that their monarchs ruled by the grace of God accepting the grace and their authorization as changed from papacy to the reformers. For instance, when Great Britain was under papal control one of her kings was called to Rome to give an account of violation of some of the pope's rules; and it is a matter of history that for three days he walked barefoot in the snow and slush around the Vatican doing penance, and at the conclusion was permitted to come into the pope's presence upon his knees, in claimed fulfillment of Psalm 2, "Be wise now therefore, O ye kings.... Kiss the Son, lest he be angry and ye perish in the way, when his wrath is kindled but a little." The pope subsequently placed the crown upon the king's head with his feet as indicating how much beneath the pope, how much a vassal was the king.

But after the reformation, it was Henry the Eighth who disregarded the pope's authority and called upon the Protestant bishops of the Church of England to acknowledge his kingship as of divine appointment.

Thus the error was kept alive by the wiles of the adversary, the delusion was held over the minds of the people, and the reformation was measurably turned aside God permitting this the while because his due time for the establishment of His kingdom was not yet. Thus we have it today that all the great governments of Europe, armed to the teeth against one another and between whom wars have waged for centuries, all claim to be kingdoms of God, their coins declaring that their monarchs rule the people as divine representatives. But the whole matter, dear friends, is a delusion of the adversary, the great deceiver. These kingdoms are not the kingdoms referred to by our Lord and the Apostle, and especially mentioned in our Lord's prayer, "Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven.” On the contrary they are, as the scriptures declare, “kingdoms of this world,” and all under the direction and superintendence of the “prince of the power of the air,” the “prince of this world.”

GOD’S WILL ON EARTH AS IN HEAVEN

Christian people in general have gotten this erroneous idea that God’s kingdom is already set up, and hence are not looking for the kingdom of God’s dear Son, the kingdom of glory foretold in the scriptures. In harmony with their erroneous thought, they are seeking to convert the world, failing to realize the utter impossibility of this that there are twice as many heathen as there were a century ago notwithstanding the great missionary efforts put forth. But even if the heathens were all converted to as civilized a condition as prevails throughout Christendom, how far this would be from the glorious condition which the Lord has referred to in his prayer. Surely God’s will is not done on earth as it is in heaven in any place, and hence if the heathen were as good as the best state in the world they would all need converting over again to bring them into proper accord with the Lord.

The ultimate overthrow of Satan was vaguely prophesied at the time of the expulsion of our first parents from Eden, “The seed of the woman shall bruise the head of the serpent.” This message was repeated with growing clearness for 4,000 years, the prophets telling of the glorious blessings that would follow the establishment of Messiah’s kingdom upon the ruins of present institutions, and how then the knowledge and glory of the Lord would fill the whole earth and all the families of the earth would be blessed. Through Daniel prophetic pictures representing the history of the world were given, and Messiah’s kingdom was distinctly shown to be that which would ultimately prevent under the whole heavens, a dominion that should not pass away and that would be given to the holy people, a dominion of righteousness. (Dan. 7:27.)

SATAN’S OVERTHROW AT HAND

Our Lord fully enunciated these same teachings, quoted from these various prophecies, and told of the coming time when by virtue of his death for man’s sins He would establish His kingdom with power and great glory to release the world from the bondage of Satan and sin and death and to grant resurrection to all, the grand and glorious conditions that have been lost through Satan’s murderous work in Eden. The cross of Christ, His death as our redemption price, is the very center of this plan, the calling of the church during this gospel age to be joint heirs with Him in His kingdom is the intermediary feature, and the Kingdom itself to be established at His second coming is to be the grand outcome. It is to be the Sun of Righteousness with healing in its beams that will bless the world, and probably enough the declaration is made that amongst the first things of the new order will be the binding of Satan for a thousand years that he shall deceive the nations no more until the thousand years are finished.

IN A TIME OF TROUBLE

So far from the Lord's Millennial kingdom being produced by the conversion of the world by human agency which we see to be impossible, the scriptures declare that it will be introduced by a great time of trouble, such as was not since there was a nation--no, nor ever shall be. This time of trouble will, according to God's Word, result in the overthrow of all present institutions, which are all more or less blended with pride, ambition and selfishness and sin, inculcated by the prince of this world and the methods which he has favored, which trouble will be an awful experience upon the world, and our Lord suggests that were it not for the elect, there would be no flesh saved the social, political, financial, religious elements would destroy each other in anarchy. It will be short, sharp and decisive, for "a short work will the Lord make upon the earth." (Rom. 9:28)

We believe, dear friends, that this time of trouble and anarchy is very near at hand, but we are interested more in the glorious outcome than in the trouble itself. We can lift up our heads and rejoice at the evidence that the kingdom is very near at hand notwithstanding the trouble by which it will be introduced, knowing that the driving of the plowshare of trouble through the hearts of mankind according to the promise of the Lord's Word will eventuate in a blessing for them, the great blessing, the inauguration of the kingdom which God has provided for the uplift and refreshing and restitution of all who will come into harmony with him. The Lord represents this in some of His parables as the binding of the strong man, Satan, and represents himself at His coming as being the stronger one who will make him captive, and who represents His second coming as being secretly, quietly, as a thief in the night, unknown to the world, not comprehended by any except those whose eyes of understanding have been opened. Let us then who are hoping to be sharers in this kingdom be more and more sanctified by the gracious Word of God, and more and more encouraged as we come to a knowledge of what is the real character of God. O, come and let us worship and bow down, let us call upon the name of our God, for His mercy endureth forever.

BEHOLD I MAKE ALL THINGS NEW

Pastor Russell addressed the Bible House congregation in Carnegie Music Hall today from the text, "He that sat upon the throne said, behold I make all things new. And he said unto me, write; for these words are true and faithful." (Rev. 21:5.) The address follows:

On the threshold of the New Year thousands in all parts of the world are probably taking account of stock in their affairs, mental, physical, moral, financial and religious. Many no doubt are looking back to the beginning of the year, to the resolutions then made, and feeling more or less of disappointments, if not shame, in connection with the results. Indeed it is safe to assume that whoever is thoroughly satisfied with his attainments and victories during the past twelve months has either too high an estimate of his own victories or else at the beginning of the year he did not place the mark, the standard sufficiently high. As we are on the threshold of a New Year it is important for us that we be not discouraged with the past, whatever it may have been; but that as we turn over a new leaf we make fresh resolves respecting fidelity to God and the principles of righteousness of which he is the representative; that we make fresh resolves in respect to our relationship to our fellows, that more and more throughout the year we will strive, not only to be just toward them, but, more than this, to be generous, forgiving, kind, patient, loving. Let us look into the Lord's word for encouragement along these lines, which are recognized to be proper ones.

Our text seems to contain some suggestive thoughts that should be helpful to us all. It implies that in some sense of the word God is proposing on man's behalf a new order, a new dispensation, with fresh help and assistances for the groaning creation, Adam's posterity. Looking about us we find on the pages of history records of the endeavors of noble-minded men and women for the past six thousand years to stem the tide of sin, depravity, imperfection, dying, mental, moral and physical decrepitude, dying, death. Contemplating all these endeavors and combinations, we are obliged to say, in the language of one of old, "We have not wrought any deliverance in the earth." (Isa. 26:18) we have been unsuccessful in saving the world from sin and its imperfections.

We sometimes endeavor to persuade ourselves that the world is growing purer and holier, more full of faith toward God, more full of the fruits and graces of the spirit of God, more free from selfishness, and crime on account of selfishness; but as we scrutinize, carefully and honestly, we must confess that the world is far from the divine standard. And, sure enough, our conclusions are fully corroborated by the prophetic writings of God's word, which directly state that "evil men and leaders astray will wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived" down to the very consummation of this age, down to the time when it shall give place to the new order of things mentioned in our text. (2 Tim. 3:13) We note also the suggestion of our Lord's words addressed to his church, which assure them that in the end of the age the deceptions will be so strong that "if it were possible they would deceive the very elect," and we appreciate the inference of his words, "When the Son of man cometh shall he find faith on the earth." Luke 18:8

OLD THINGS MADE NEW

It should be noticed that our text does not say that God will make all new things, but that he will make old things new he will take hold of the old things and renovate them. Before examining what things are to be renovated we call to mind that the scriptures do, however, speak of a "New Creation" they do tell us that the church, the elect, are "New Creatures in Christ Jesus." Not these, therefore, are referred to in our text. This work of God in respect to the church which he has been calling out of the world since the day of Pentecost is distinctively separate from his work in other directions and in other classes. The church is to be a new creation in the sense that it will be changed to a new nature. By nature the elect were children of wrath even as others of human nature and depravity. By God's grace they were not only redeemed, but through faith were justified. Then as they followed on to know the Lord and hearken to his word they were called to be special disciples, a little flock of the Lord Jesus.

When they accepted this call and made full consecration to the Lord they received a begetting of the holy spirit to a new nature the spiritual nature. Then their instruction and disciplining and testing proceeds, so that at the close of their sacrificial life they might be counted of the Lord as "fit for the kingdom." These in the first, the chief resurrection are to be made like their Lord, "changed in a moment," sharers of his glory and "partakers of the Divine nature." (2 Pet. 1:4) This is the new creation; nothing in the Divine statement respecting the church implies that they are to be renewed or made over again as perfect men. There is indeed a change, because, as the apostle explains, "Flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God," and these have been called to be God's kingdom class, in association with their Redeemer, our Lord Jesus.

Neither must we confound the statement of our text respecting the renewing of old things with the statement of the first verse in the same chapter which says, "I saw a new heaven and a new earth; for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea.” Nothing in this verse implies that it refers to the same thing mentioned by our text; on the contrary, the one is a renewing, the other distinctly states that it is a new creation and that the former passed away.

NEW HEAVENS AND EARTH

While passing, and to keep our minds clear on the subject, let us briefly notice the signification of this symbolical statement respecting the new heaven and new earth. It does not mean that the heaven of God’s residence has become dilapidated and unfit for his service. The figures here used, heaven, earth, sea, are symbols common to the entire scriptures and refer to humanity. The heavens represent the ecclesiastical influences and powers of control, the earth represents organized society, while the restless sea symbolizes the uncivilized and anarchistic masses of mankind.

To our understanding of the scriptures, as already set forth and well known to many of you, the time for this great change of religious, social and political institutions is right at hand the change from the one to the other to be accomplished by the disintegration of the present heavens and earth in the great time of trouble such as was not since there was a nation, as Daniel the prophet tells us. Then, after that awful cataclysm of anarchy and disruption which will utterly overthrow present institutions, the Lord promises that he will establish the new and the better institutions. The present heavens and earth are scripturally represented as being largely under the control or influence of the “prince of this world,” whom the scriptures declare is to be bound or restrained at the close of this dispensation.

The new dispensation is, on the contrary, to be under the control of Messiah, the glorified Christ Jesus and His bride, the elect church, which will then be complete. The heavens, or religious spiritual powers of control will be new in that they will be in the hands of the glorified Christ, who will then, as the scriptures declare, take unto Himself His great power and reign a power possessed ever since His resurrection but not to be exercised until now, the Father’s due time. The new earth will be the new organization, social and political, constructed on the lines of justice and love and under heavenly guidance. No wonder then we have the assurance that the sea class will be no more, for we are assured that this new order of things will be the “desire of all peoples,” and that to the new king of the world every knee shall bow and every tongue confess to the glory of God the Father.

THE RENEWING OF OUR TEXT

Having seen what our text does not mean we are the better prepared to note what is signified by the expression, “Behold I make all things new.” The preceding context pictures the glorified kingdom of the glorified Christ as the New Jerusalem come down from heaven to earth, in harmony with our prayer, “Thy kingdom come.” Elsewhere we are specifically told about this New Jerusalem whose symbolical foundations bear the names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb. There can be no doubt that it signifies the kingdom of Christ and His glorified bride, the kingdom that the Lord promised to His faithful, saying, “To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with Me in My throne, even as I have overcome and am set down with My Father in His throne.” The next chapter explains that from that New Jerusalem, from that new government that will then be established in the world, there will proceed a symbolical river of life, clear as crystal without impurity of any kind and to that water of life, to the truths which will then in their purity be dispensed to all the families of the earth.

The glorious results of the establishment of this heavenly city or dominion amongst men is thus told: “I heard a great voice out of the throne, saying, `Behold, the dwelling place of God is with men; He will dwell with them and they shall be His people, and God Himself shall be with them and be their God. ’” The thought here is most clear and explicit: the scene belongs to the Millennial age after the New Jerusalem, the heavenly government, shall have been established amongst men.

It will represent God amongst men, for God will dwell in the glorified church and all of His powers and gracious characteristics will be manifested in it most thoroughly. But someone will say, Has not God been dwelling with mankind for all the past six thousand years? Why should this represent God’s dwelling place with man as being a matter of the future and not of the present?

We reply, No! God has not dwelt with man in any sense of the word. On the contrary He has reprobated and condemned mankind on account of sin, and the apostle tells us that the whole world as a consequence are aliens, strangers and foreigners from God and His promises. He did indeed favor Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, then all of Jacob’s posterity called the nation of Israel. With these in this nation He made pictures and types of the blessings which He intended ultimately to accomplish for mankind through Messiah. Their covenant of the law represented in an imperfect manner the new covenant of the future with the world, Moses, their mediator representing imperfectly the mediator of the new covenant--the Christ, head and body, Jesus the head, and the church His body, His bride. Their sacrifices represented the better sacrifices now being offered by the mediator himself first and chiefly, and secondly those whom He accepts as members of His body, and who, under His guidance and direction, suffer with Him that they may also be glorified together as members of the world’s mediator in the kingdom.

The blessing of the Lord's presence in the future was foreshadowed in the arrangements made with the typical nation of Israel. (1) In their tabernacle, or moveable representation of the heavenlies, the Lord appeared in the most holy, represented by the shekinah glory within and the pillar of smoke without. When later on, under the Lord's direction, the temple was built at Jerusalem, it represented the perfect established kingdom, Messiah's kingdom, the Millennial kingdom of the new heavens and new earth, and in it also the Lord is represented in the most holy by the shekinah glory. This representing of God's dwelling in the midst of Israel was a foreshadowing of the coming blessing to the world during the Millennial age referred to in our context, when the tabernacle of God will be with men. We have already seen that God will not meet with men in an earthly temple, but, as the apostle explains, He has during this gospel age been preparing a spiritual temple the church. The Apostle Peter assures us that the elect are the living stones in process of preparation for the glorious temple of God of the future. This is the explanation which the scriptures give of the trials and sufferings, the testings and provings which the Lord permits to come upon His ever elect which are to chasten and polish them and make them fit to be members in the spiritual temple of the future, to be the tabernacle of God, the dwelling place of God amongst men God's representatives to the world the meeting place from which God's representatives to the world the meeting place from which God's mercy shall be disseminated and to which the world will approach for the blessings provided.

WIPING AWAY TEARS

We see, then, that God's proposition is that through the glorified Christ (Jesus, the head and His body the church) He will return to mankind and accept the whole world through the merit of Christ, and deal with them for their enlightenment and blessing and uplifting out of sin and sorrow, pain and death mental, moral and physical. This will be the making of all things new. Thus we see God proposes not to make a new race, but to renew Adam and his race, and the channel or agency through which this renewing or restitution work shall be accomplished will be the new creation the "church of the first born" the "Christ."

The work of God through the Christ is beautifully set forth under the figure of "wiping all tears from all faces." This is the same figure the Lord used through the prophet Isaiah (25:8), and all the conditions are in harmony. Through Isaiah the Lord informs us that these blessings will proceed from His mountain or kingdom, which He will establish in the end of this age "under the whole heavens," the mountain of the Lord the kingdom of the Lord Messiah's kingdom. The prophet declares that God will, in or through this mountain or kingdom, destroy the obscuring veil of ignorance and death which now covers all people, and that He will make for all a feast of fat things in this mountain, in this kingdom, whose controlling blessing is to be under the whole heavens. The result is also declared, "He will swallow up death in victory."

Ah, yes! While the race has been under condemnation for 6,000 years, the divine favor and presence withdrawn from it, sin and death have reigned and have swallowed up the human family. But with the return of divine favor at the second advent of Christ, and the establishment of "Thy kingdom come," everything will be reversed, with the result that death will be swallowed up in victory, all people shall be delivered from the power of death the resurrection of the dead shall prevail under the guidance and control of him who declared that all in their graves should hear His voice and should come forth. Not only will they come forth to consciousness, but to an opportunity of being raised up or restored, renewed a resurrection process which will culminate, if they are willing and obedient, in a full and complete raising out of every element of sin and imperfection and death to the full image and likeness of God and all that was lost in Eden.

How grand is the message of God's word then, that when His tabernacle, His glorified temple, shall be established in the earth as the kingdom of God, it will mean victory for mankind over sin and death at the hands of the Lord's anointed, the world's great mediator. Ah! Indeed there is force and meaning in the expression, "God shall wipe away all tears from off all faces." The poetic expression speaks volumes for the blessing and comforting and assuaging of the griefs and sorrows of the world.

MORE SORROW, PAIN OR DEATH

The statement that God will wipe away all tears is explained, signify that there should be no more death. Death has reigned because of the sentence, the curse upon Adam's disobedience; but as the result of the atonement for Adam's sin, the right, the power, the authority of death to reign is broken, and instead the Redeemer becomes the life-giver of the world to revive the dying and awaken the dead.

That there may be no misunderstanding the Lord continues to explain that the wiping away of tears signifies, not only that death will be no more, but that this will include no more sorrow, no more crying, no more pain forever. O, glorious picture! How it shows us the great plan of our God, by which present evil conditions will be utterly eradicated, and by which mankind will be lifted out of all his troubles by the loving hands of his Redeemer who died, the just for the unjust, that He might have this right, this opportunity of bringing the unjust back into harmony and acceptableness with God. Yes, indeed! Jesus was the propitiation (satisfaction) for our sins (the church's sins), and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world. Thank God for such lengths, and breadths, and heights, and depths of His love, which indeed, passes all understanding! As the heavens are higher than the earth, so are God's ways and plans higher than man could have conceived they are marvelous in the eyes of His people.

FORMER THINGS GONE

In explanation of these great changes, which are surely to be introduced and under which God will make all things new under which he will restore mankind from his fallen, degraded condition back to Divine favor and back to the original perfection the explanation of all this is summed up in the few words, "For the former things are passed away." What were these former things? and why and how did they pass away? Man as God originally created him was very good. It was the introduction of sin that caused the difficulty, as the Apostle Paul explains, "By one man's disobedience sin entered into the world and death as a result of sin, and thus death passed upon all men because all are sinners. (Rom. 5:12.) It is for this reason that the whole creation is groaning and travailing in pain together, and this condition obtains because of divine justice and the execution of the divine sentence against sin—"The soul that sinneth it shall die." Awful as the condition under sin, and death as its penalty, has been, it was of God's infliction not of eternal torment, but nevertheless an experiencing on the part of the race of the "exceeding sinfulness of sin" and the full meaning of "dying thou shalt die."

But if these things of God in the sense of being His infliction, how and why can He ever set them aside or abolish them, so that He can subsequently speak to them as the "former things that pass away?" In other words, how could God set aside the curse or sentence of death? The Answer--to this question is the center of the gospel hope, briefly stated in scriptural language: the present evil conditions are all to be set aside because God has had mercy upon our race; not that He manifested His mercy by overthrowing the sentence of His own court against sin, but that He has met the requirements of His own decision, His own verdict has met the death penalty for the race through the death of His son, a "ransom for all" a corresponding price for the world's sin.

"HE THAT HATH THIS HOPE"

While the opening of the new year brings a measure of fresh hope and courage to mankind in general, with usually fresh resolves for a more noble stand for righteousness, nevertheless life is a humdrum affair to the vast majority of our race, and ignoble and sinful excesses are frequently indulged in with a view to breaking this monotony. It is, therefore, desirable that the world, having nothing better, should have business ambitions to very fully absorb their time and energy. But how superior is the position of the Christian, who has in the Lord's word not only the promise of the life which now is, but also of that which is to come. To see the purpose of life, why we are here to see the scriptural incentive to right living that to those now called according to God's purpose to be of the elect church, and by and by to be the glorious new Jerusalem government or kingdom of God to bless and uplift the world of mankind this is our hope, and a blessed hope it is. It gives us new aims, new ambitions, new energy and strengthens every good resolve in a manner nothing else could do. The apostle declares, "He that hath this hope purifieth himself even as he is pure." The trouble with the majority of Christians is that they have not this scriptural hope, but vain hopes and imaginings not real, and built not upon the word of God, but upon the theories, creeds and traditions of the elders handed down from the "dark ages." Let us go to the fountain head, and have God's message of love and mercy from His own word, through His inspired son and His apostles and the prophets.

Even to those who hear Him who are of the world, who have not yet given their hearts to the Lord and not yet become identified with His called ones, there is a message of encouragement in the scriptures in the glorious promise of the coming time in which God will wipe away all tears from off all faces and there shall be no more sighing, no more crying, no more dying. Realizing this in any degree it becomes an encouragement to the extent that their faith can grasp it. It helps such to fight against the allurements of the world, the flesh and the adversary, by assuring them that every good impulse and noble effort now made brings corresponding peace and refreshment of heart in the present time, and helps them to reach the future life with its hopes on a higher plane than if they now yielded to sin and Satan.

EARTHQUAKE PROPHECY

Pastor C. T. Russell of Allegheny, Pa., preached twice here yesterday to large audiences. The afternoon session at Thomas' Orchestra hall was crowded to overflowing to hear about the "Overthrow of Satan's Empire." We report the morning topic, which was from the text, "And there shall be great earthquakes in divers places and famines and pestilences; and fearful sights and great signs shall there be from heaven." (Luke 21:11.) The speaker said:

"The recent prevalence of earthquakes properly enough draws our attention to the scriptures and what they have to say on this subject. Our text is from the Master's own lips a part of His description of the trouble that would come upon the world in the close of this age, preparatory to the inauguration of the Millennial age and its glorious manifestation of righteousness under the King of Kings and Lord of Lords. The Lord was answering a question of His disciples respecting the end of the age and the signs which mark it. In the preceding verses He had told them that they might expect to hear of wars and tumults, but not to be terrified, that such things would come to pass, but it would not be an indication that the end of the age was near. Then, coming down to the events at the close of the age, He uses the words of our text respecting earthquakes, famines and pestilences and fearful sights and signs in heaven. And He follows this by saying that before these terrible signs, earthquakes, etc., of the end of the age, His disciples would suffer persecution in the synagogues and churches, etc., for His sake and for the truth's sake.

“It is far from our thought that an earthquake is of itself a sign of the end of the age. We remember that history tells us of various earthquakes in the past, so that these alone would prove little respecting the time in which we are living. But as many in this audience are aware, we have pointed out in our studies of the scripture, various lines of prophecy which converge upon the present time, clearly marking the period between 1875 and 1915 as the harvest time of this Gospel age, in which the elect are to be gathered into closer harmony with the Lord, separated from churchianity and error, and ultimately to experience the change of resurrection and glorification to the spiritual, heavenly nature, and that shortly thereafter the new dispensation will begin, the Millennial kingdom, in which Christ and His glorified saints will bring order out of confusion, supplanting ignorance, superstition and error with the truth, the knowledge of the Lord substituting the reign of righteousness and life everlasting for the reign of sin and death, which has prevailed for 6,000 years. The hearts of thousands of the Lord's consecrated people, in many lands and of many tongues, have been made glad with this prospect, and been made strong with the scriptural evidences supporting these hopes.

THE LORD'S SECRETS FOR SAINTS

“It is true that our Second Adventist and Seventh Day Adventist friends have also been calling attention to the scriptural predictions of great tribulations upon the world, now near at hand, but our message is still a very different one from theirs and used for a very different purpose. Their message is that the convulsions of nature that are now due are to result in a `wreck of matter and a crash of worlds' in the utter destruction of our race and the reduction of this earth to a mass of cinder. And they use their message as a club to threaten and to drive the wicked to seek the cover and protection of the Lord. Be it noticed how different is our reference to these calamities. We hold with the scriptures that the `earth abideth for ever, ' and that cold and heat, summer and winter, will continue as long as the earth abideth. We hold again with the scriptures that God made not the earth in vain he made it to be inhabited. (Eccl. 1:4; Gen. 8:12; Isa. 45:18.)

“We have already pointed out that the fire of this day of the Lord will be a symbolical one, just as the fiery trials that have tried the church throughout this age have not consisted even in part of literal fire. We have pointed out that fiery troubles coming upon the world will overthrow present institutions, political, social, financial and religious, and engulf the whole world in anarchy, and that this is in the scriptures symbolically called in some places a great flood and in others a consuming fire that will devour the whole earth. We have pointed out that the passing away of present institutions, called the heavens and the earth that now are, will be followed by the establishment of a new heavens and new earth, or the reorganization of society, political, social, etc., along the lines of Divine approval intimated in our Lord’s prayer of the words, ”Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven.”

“We remind you again of two of the proof-texts we have offered on this subject, namely: First, the apostle’s declaration, every man’s work shall be tried so as by fire; if any man’s work abide he shall receive a reward, but only the faith that is built upon the rock, Christ Jesus, and the gold and silver and precious stones will abide the fire of that day, when all the wood, hay and stubble of human tradition, philosophies and sophistries will be consumed. (1 Cor. 3:11-13) Second, the statement of the Lord through Zephaniah, the prophet, addressed to his people, `Wait ye upon Me, saith the Lord, until the day that I rise up to the prey; for My determination is to gather the nations that I may assemble the kingdoms and pour upon them Mine indignation, even all My fierce anger; for all the earth shall be devoured with the fire of My jealousy’. (Zeph. 3:8) That this fire of God’s jealousy is not a literal fire that will consume the earth with its inhabitants to cinders is demonstrated, we hold, by the following verse which declares, `Then will I turn to the people a pure language (message) that they may all call upon the name of the Lord to serve him with one consent. ’ The symbolical fire of anarchy which will overthrow and consume present institutions is thus shown to be the precursor of God’s great blessing for the world, for which we pray, `Thy kingdom come. ’

“Now are we using this prophetic evidence respecting the end of this age as a club to drive the wicked to shelter? On the contrary, we are convinced and point out to others the Lord’s declaration, `None of the wicked shall understand, but the wise shall understand. ’ (Dan. 12:10) We have pointed out also our Lord’s words to the disciples at the first advent which illustrate the general operation of His providences, namely: 'To you (Israelites indeed) it is given to know the mystery of the kingdom of God, but to them that are without (outsiders) these things are spoken in parables and dark sayings, that they may not understand.' (Matt. 13:11-13) We have pointed out again that the scriptures everywhere declare that 'The secret of the Lord is with them that reverence Him, and He will show them His covenant.' (Psa. 25:14) But to the wicked God saith, 'What hast thou to do to take My name into thy mouth, seeing thou hatest instruction and castest My words behind thee.' (Psa. 50:16-17) Our use of these prophetic mysteries we hold is in harmony with the Divine intention and message that the Lord's consecrated people might know of the time in which we are living, and that they might be more and more quickened and energized and separated from the world and its spirit and ripened as wheat, and made meet for the inheritance of the saints in light as wheat prepared for the garner. (Matt. 13:35)

FEARFUL SIGHTS AND GREAT WONDERS

"We will not attempt to prognosticate the character of the frightful signs which belong to the closing of this age, but they are very particularly referred to here by our Lord, and also were foretold through the Prophet Joel, 'I will show wonders in heaven above and signs in the earth beneath, blood and fire and pillars of smoke.' (Joel 2:30; Acts 2:19) The Apostle Paul refers to the same thing in Heb. 12:26-28. He refers to the establishment of the Law Covenant at Mount Sinai and the wonderful manifestations at that time which caused Moses and all the Israelites to fear and quake; and the apostle tells us that those things were typical or figurative of the still more wonderful shakings, signs, etc., to be expected at the closing of this Gospel Age, when the kingdom of God is about to be established and the New Covenant about to go into effect between God and the world at the hands of the great Mediator Jesus and the church His 'bride,' His 'body.'

"The apostles say that the Lord's word on the subject implies the removing of all things that can be shaken, that only the unshakable things will remain, and these unshakable things the apostle refers to as associated with God's kingdom of righteousness. When with the eyes of our understanding open we look about us we see, O, so many things that are evidently not permanent, not right, unsatisfactory to God and to all who love righteousness and when we think of the fact that the shaking will be such as to loose and destroy all these imperfect things of the present time we can imagine better than we can describe the awfulness of that shaking time which in the book of Revelation is described as a mighty earthquake, of which there was not the like at any time before nor the like to be expected at any time in the future. The term earthquake is used to symbolically represent revolution it is in this sense of the word that it is used throughout the book of Revelation. What we are to look for then will be great revolution, the great earthquake, the great shaking of the present institutions, which will overthrow everything that is not of the Lord's establishment and approval.

“Why then should we think of or speak of literal earthquakes? do you ask. Because in the divine order there seems to be a harmony between the literal and the figurative; the literal earthquakes have their part to play, too, in the great program. Not only are they to serve the church as signs corroborating the prophecies respecting the approach of the great day of trouble which closes this age, but they are to serve also another purpose a particular purpose. The scriptures clearly intimate that our physical earth has not yet attained the grand perfection which the Lord designs it should have, to be fit for the blessed ones whose home, as the paradise of God, it shall be throughout all eternity. Be it noticed that the scriptures clearly point out that the ‘little flock’ called during this Gospel Age to be the bride of Christ, are to experience a change of nature from human to spiritual, which will prepare them for heavenly conditions, spiritual conditions, but that for the remainder of mankind God's provision is not the change of nature but a restoration to the perfection of human nature and the development of the earth to that perfect condition which will make it as a whole the antitype of the Garden of Eden the ‘Paradise’ restored. (Rev. 2:7)

THE FLOOD THEN, THE FIRE AND EARTHQUAKE NOW

“We have already called attention to the fact that the flood of waters in Noah's time was caused by the breaking of the last of a series of rings that once surrounded the earth after the manner of the rings of Saturn; and that God, foreknowing the wickedness that would develop amongst mankind and the power that would be exercised amongst man by the giants of that time (Gen. 6:4), had so timed the breaking of this last ring that the flood of waters would serve the purpose of overthrowing that order of things, and making ready for the next step in the Divine program, the present order, which began after the flood upon the coming of Noah and his family out of the ark. Similarly the scriptures teach that God has reserved for its appropriate time in the end of this age certain great physical disturbances necessary to the development of the earth and its preparation for the reign of righteousness and blessing of mankind, so that the troubles incidental to this change will come upon the world of mankind as disastrous floods, sore troubles and co-operate in the bringing of mankind into sore straits and trials of faith and patience, which will result in anarchy and the complete shaking, not only of the physical earth, but also of the social earth and the ecclesiastical or heavenly institutions, that all the unstable things may pass away, that the new order of things may be ushered in on a permanent basis and have the Divine approval and mean ultimately the grandest blessing for our race.

“From this standpoint a certain class only can read the signs of the times intelligently and with confidence, and this class the scriptures call the Lord’s ‘little flock,’ counted of the world as foolish, but counted of the Lord as the wise who are to understand. To these the Lord addresses His words Himself, saying, ‘When ye shall see these things come to pass when we see men’s hearts failing them for fear and for looking after the things that are coming upon the earth then lift up your hearts and rejoice, knowing that your deliverance draweth nigh.’ The Lord’s consecrated people possessed of His spirit, cannot in any sense of the word rejoice at the tribulations coming upon others; their rejoicing can only be in respect to the glorious things which they hope to experience, and which they know to be near by these outward signs. And their rejoicing is not merely on their own behalf, but also on behalf of the whole social world, there is a silver lining, and beyond that the glorious sun of righteousness, which shortly will blaze forth and dispel every cloud and all the shadows of ignorance and superstition, bringing to the world of mankind the rich blessings of Divine favor secured through the precious blood of Christ, the revelation of which has been delayed until now, waiting for the manifestation of the sons of God, which cannot take place until they have been called hence and the faithful ones be glorified with their Lord.

NEW ENGLAND PROFESSOR’S PROPHECY

“From this standpoint the news of the last few months of the earthquake in southern California, another in Valparaiso, yet another in the antarctic circle and now in Jamaica, doing great damage, causing frightful loss of life and great suffering, besides other minor shakings which effected little injury all these things appeal to us as being incidental corroborations of the prophecies that show that we are getting close to the great time of trouble. True, there may be a lull for a time, but we have confidence that our Lord’s prophecy of our text has a meaning, and that the time for its fulfillment must be very close. We are well aware that the natural man and his scientific leaders will consider such association of the facts of our day with the words of eighteen centuries ago as very foolish we are aware that they will say, as the Apostle Peter declared they would, that all things continue as they were from the foundation of the world (2 Pet. 3:4), that such changes have been going on and will continue to go on without any relationship to our Lord’s second presence and the time of trouble with which this age will end. That is their view the reverse is ours.

“We remember that a New England professor, about seven years ago, delivered an opinion which was at the time commented on as in the nature of a prophecy. His opinion was that in about eight years from the time he wrote, a great earthquake would shatter and break to pieces the huge cap of ice which for centuries has covered the south pole, and his prediction was that in the breaking of this ice-cap and the dashing of those mountains of ice into the ocean, great tidal waves would result, and millions of tons of water would be thrown against the coasts of the United States, resulting in terrible damage and loss of life and extending as far north at least as New York city, which he declared would be entirely obliterated. He further predicted that this breaking of the ice-cap of the south pole would so adjust and equalize the weight of the waters of the earth on our globe that the axis of the earth’s rotation would be corrected, so that we would no longer have the unequal divisions of day and night of the present, but that the change of the axis would cause serious tidal waves, earthquakes, etc.

“We know not the basis of the professor’s calculations for aught we know they were the barest guesses; but we do know that while nothing like his guesses are a part of the inspired word, that word does teach that at about this time we are to expect wonderful contortions of nature and some radical changes in the earth’s conditions that the latter may be adapted to the better wants of man during the Millennial age and throughout eternity. It is God’s own declaration that He will make glorious the place of His feet the earth, His footstool. (Isa. 60:13) And evidently great and wonderful changes shall be effected, some of these no doubt gradually, as for instance, we know the gradual change of the temperate zone, its extension further and further toward the north pole. We notice also the increasing moderation nearer to the equator. Those who recognize the power of God can have full confidence that He is able to perform all the glorious promises of His word respecting the paradisiacal conditions of this earth for the use of mankind in the Millennium and subsequently.

THE SYMBOLIC EARTHQUAKE--REVOLUTIONS

“As already intimated, social upheavals are pictured in the word of God under the symbolism of earthquakes, the mountains being carried into the sea, etc., and similarly uprisings of the social elements in anarchy are pictured as tidal waves engulfing the mountains, the governments. This is one of the forceful pictures used, not only in the Psalms but also in Revelations, and in our Lord’s symbolical language referring to the great time of trouble which is near at hand, of which the prophet has declared that it will be a time of trouble such as was not since there was a nation, and of which the Lord declares additionally, ‘No, nor ever shall be the like again.’ (Dan. 12:1; Matt. 24:21)

“Let it not be understood that we are advocating anarchy or revolution of any kind. On the contrary, we are heeding the Master’s voice that all who are His true followers should seek peace and pursue it, and so far as possible live peaceably with all men; that, like Himself, they should not resist evil with evil, force with force, but should rather commit their way unto the Lord and seek to walk in His paths and rely upon Him for the results that would be to their profit and the Lord’s glory. So far from counseling anarchy, we hold and teach that even the meanest and poorest of all the kinds of government known to the world is superior to anarchy, and we counsel in all sympathy and kindness those who are tending toward socialism, and their number is ever increasing, that they are unsuspectingly hatching cockatrice eggs that socialism under present conditions is absolutely impossible, that the rich would not give up their advantage without a struggle to the death, and that thus, as soon as socialism shall have gained the power that it is seeking and that it will gain, will spell anarchy for the world, because those now starting in with socialite hopes, finding those hopes vain, will be so angered, so disappointed that they will be soured, embittered and mad with the deceptions of their theories and the impossibility of carrying them out as they intended along the lines of benevolence, that they will be drawn to the desperate methods of the anarchists.

“Would that all could see with us what the scriptures so clearly indicate, namely, the Divine foreknowledge of past and present and future conditions and the Divine arrangement of them all for the highest welfare of all those who seek righteousness and hearken to the voice of Him that speaketh from heaven. Such the Lord urges to take His yoke upon them and learn of Him, that they accept of trials and difficulties incidental to loyalty to Him at the present time, and that by these attestations they shall be counted worthy of a share in the highest and best of all the gifts of God to be sharers with Jesus in His throne, in His nature and in the power which He will exercise shortly in the blessing of all mankind with `restitution.’ (Acts 3:19-21.)

“We urge, then, that all who are the Lord’s seek more and more to understand His wonderful plan, and to glorify Him with their bodies and spirits which are His, and to wait for His time and His manner of bringing in the blessings of the world which we all see are so much needed by the poor, groaning creation. Meantime, additionally, it is for all such to cultivate the graces of the Lord’s spirit, or, as the apostle says, to `put on Christ’ His character, His disposition, His meekness, gentleness, patience, long suffering, brotherly kindness, love, against which things there is no law, and respecting which, the apostle assures us, `If ye do these things ye shall never fall, for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ’ (2 Pet. 1:10-11.) These cannot be shaken out of the Lord’s hand by any tumults. Indeed, if they be in the disasters of the literal earthquakes they will have correspondingly grace sufficient for every time of need, and will be able to rejoice even in tribulation. Should they be in contact with some of the revolutionary earthquakes, still in patience they will possess their souls and be able to rejoice in their relationship to the Lord and their realization in spirit of His care and their knowledge that all things are working together for good to them that love the Lord to the called ones according to His purpose (Rom. 8:28.)

“It is of this class that the prophet declares, `We will not fear though the mountains be removed and carried into the midst of the sea (literally, we will not fear though revolution should carry all the governments of the world into anarchy.) We will not fear though the sea roar and be troubled (though the multitude of mankind cry out, threaten and give evidence of great commotion in socialism, etc. We will not fear though kingdoms tremble with the tempest of anarchy.) There is a river (the little flock, the church, whose names are written in heaven), she shall not be moved, earthquakes cannot dissolve the relationship subsisting between the Lord and His faithful, the peace of God which passeth all understanding rules in their hearts, (in the morning of the Millennium) by the first resurrection. ” (Psalm 6.)

SINS WASHED AWAY

Pastor C. T. Russell, of Allegheny, Pa., preached twice here today. His afternoon topic, “To Hell and Back; Who Are There? Hope for Deliverance of Many of Them,” held an immense audience for nearly two hours at the Grand Opera house. We report the morning discourse on crimson and scarlet sins, from the text, “Come now, let us reason together, saith the Lord; though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool” Isa. 1:18.

The consciousness of sin comes to every intelligent being in proportion to his knowledge of Almighty God. “All are sinners,” declares the apostle. He also quotes from the prophet, “All have sinned and come short of the glory of God.” In further explanation of the situation the scriptures declare that we were born in sin, shapen in iniquity, in sin did our mothers conceive us. Speaking of the very best intentioned of the race the apostle declares to will aright is present with us, but how to perform our good desires we find not, for such have the treasure of the new will in an earthen vessel, in a body that is prone to sin as the sparks to fly upward.

FORGIVENESS PROMPTS REVERENCE

With the consciousness of our own defects and the divine perfection, the natural tendency would be to hide from God, to avoid Him to realize that from His standpoint of perfection our very blemishes would seem to be magnified far beyond what they might appear in our own eyes and in the eyes of our fellow creatures, who realize their own blemishes. Nevertheless a small minority of the race have learned that they may trust the Almighty for mercy far beyond anything that could be hoped from humanity. At first this seems unreasonable and astounding, and we inquire for the reason and find it in the prophet's words: "There is forgiveness in thee that thou mightest be feared"—reverenced. This is the secret then of our ability to come to God in faith, in prayer, and of our ability to realize that He knows us best, He knows of our blemishes, is our best and truest friend. These who have come to the Lord have heard with more or less distinctness of His mercy.

True, His message of mercy has been greatly perverted and misrepresented, even by those who have experienced it and who delight to call themselves His servants. But even the perverted message has in it the tone of love and mercy, which becomes more and more attractive to us as our eyes discern our own blemishes and as our minds realize that we are not fit for the divine presence or for the heavenly conditions prepared for those enjoying the full image and likeness of God, unblemished by sin. It is when we are in this condition of heart, "feeling after God if happily we might find him" realizing that with Him we must deal eventually and hoping to secure His sympathy that we come to God. But before coming we must have been drawn, as the scriptures declare—"No man cometh unto Me except the Father, which sent Me to draw Him." (John 6:44).

SCARLET AND CRIMSON SINS

At first we thought of sin in a very superficial way we supposed it to be a condition very easily set aside, but the more we studied the matter the more we realized that the stain has entered into the warp and woof of human nature most thoroughly, and that to destroy it would mean our own destruction. The Lord represents this same thought in our text by comparing sin to scarlet and crimson. In olden times fast colors were still more difficult to secure than in our day, but fast reds had been secured which no amount of washing would fade or remove. This is the picture that the Lord gives us, that the stain of sin has entered the constitution of man, and that there is no power in us for its complete removal, and that he alone can make us white again can cleanse us from all sins. What a hope then this message from Jehovah brings to those who are awake to their condition and who desire to be freed from sin, to those who realize that they are slaves to sin and that it is the wage of death, to those who long for righteousness and eternal life.

THEY SHALL BE AS WHITE AS SNOW

The Lord assures us through many scriptures that some of us have already entered into this blessed condition not that we have attained perfection and are in our flesh as pure as snow not that every thought, word and deed is perfect as we would love to have it, but that God is counting some of us as though we were thus perfect that He so regards us and is willing to deal with us from this standpoint, and will eventually give us in the resurrection such perfect bodies as will be in accord with our hearts, our wills, our desires spotless, perfect bodies in which there will be no further trace of the blemish that came down to us from our forefathers in our birth. This class is assured in the scriptures that now their sins are covered, hidden from God's sight, but that by and by in the resurrection all these blemishes shall be forever blotted out.

But, alas, how small is this class! How few are now drawn by the Father, how few accept His grace through the Son, and may now rejoice in the covering of their sins and in the hope of their being ultimately blotted out. What about the remainder who now hear not, now know not, neither do they understand the grace of God? How about the great mass of mankind, of whom the apostle declares that the God of this world hath blinded their minds so that they cannot see with the eyes of their understanding, cannot appreciate God's character, cannot be drawn under present conditions? How about those who cannot hear in the true sense of the word the message of God's love? No matter what may be the difficulty which hinders them, has the God of all grace no love for them and no provision for their salvation? Will He be content to leave them in their fallen condition, blind and deaf as respects His goodness and mercy? or has He some arrangement in His great plan by which by and by they may all come to a knowledge of the truth?

We Answer--that this is true that the Word of God distinctly declares that He so loved the whole world as to provide salvation for all, and that the time is coming when all the blind eyes shall be opened and all the deaf ears be unstopped, when all shall know of the divine character for mercy and compassion even as we know of it who already have had the eyes of our understanding anointed and opened and hearing ears granted to us. True, a special blessing and favor is granted to those who now hear and who now accept. To them comes the additional privilege of consecration, self-sacrifice, and a participation accordingly with their dear Redeemer in the coming glories of His millennial reign.

What advantage have these? Much every way. Not only do they enjoy the peace and favor of God during the few years of this present life remaining to them, but if faithful they gain a transformation to a new nature, spiritual, heavenly, like unto the angels yet far above angels, principalities and powers and every name that is named, because they shall be partakers of the divine nature in association with their Lord, their Head and Bridegroom. O, what a wonderful blessing then comes to these favored ones who now hear and respond! Should they be jealous of God's mercy that it will ultimately extend to every creature, give all an opportunity of seeing and hearing? By no means! Indeed, if they have this condition of heart, of mind, it would demonstrate at once that they had not the mind of Christ, and if any man have not the mind of Christ he is none of His. (Rom. 8:9.) Let us, then, as the eyes of our understanding open hourly, daily, yearly, more widely to the glorious character of our God, and as we more and more come to see the lengths and breadths and heights and depths of His wonderful love and gracious provision let us more and more rejoice in Him and in His plan, for as the heavens are higher than the earth so are His ways higher than man's ways.

The greatest of all philosophies is the divine philosophy. Surely the great Creator, who informs us that He is working all things according to the counsel of His own will, is working also according to fixed principles of righteousness. It is this that our text invites us to examine—"Come, let us reason together, saith the Lord." Strange to say, the majority of Christian people seem not disposed to accept our Lord's invitation and to reason with him on this subject. Hence, and no wonder, they fail to grasp the Divine plan, and proportionately fail of ability to be rooted and grounded in that plan, and consequently they are deficient in most elements of reason which would permit them to have the firmest foundation of faith and to rejoice therein with exceeding joy. Proportionately they have an indifferent, shifty, uncertain, unsatisfactory faith, and proportionately lack its rewards of joy and peace and preparation for the privilege of fellowship with Jesus in the narrow way of self denial.

Let us heed the Master's invitation, let us reason with Him, let us inquire how it comes that He who condemned us as unworthy of eternal life and who told us that the wage of our sin was death everlasting death how comes it that he can now with truth and justice assure us, to the contrary, that our sins may be forgiven, and though as scarlet they may become white as snow. Is God changeable that He once condemned and now proposes to cancel the condemnation? Is God unjust that He once gave us a penalty too severe and that now He proposes to cancel it? or if He gave us a penalty that was right and proper, how can He with justice now set it aside and violate the principles of justice as well as make void His own sentence of death? To those who seek the Answer--to these queries concerning God there comes an abundance of satisfaction: God affirms that with Him is no changeableness, and that therefore the sin of Adam which we have all inherited, and the proper wage of which is death, can never be cancelled without a consideration, without a payment. He informs us also that no man could pay his own ransom price nor give to God a ransom for his brother, because all are under the original sentence of death.

Where then, we ask, is our hope? Who, then, would pay the penalty for Adam, and release him and all of us that are involved in His sentence by reason of inheriting his blemishes? The Lord, nevertheless, assures us that when there was no eye to pity and no arm to save us from our fallen condition, His own eye had pity and His own arm had prepared salvation. (Isa. 63:5) He points us to His beloved Son, who for the joy that was set before Him left the courts of the heavenly condition and nature, and was made flesh and took upon Him our nature that He might thus pay a corresponding price for father Adam, and in redeeming him redeem all of his posterity and their heritage, the earth. Ah! now light begins to break in, and we understand the apostle's words that it was because God must be just and yet desired to be the justifier of those believing in Jesus that He provided the way by which His Son became man's Redeemer.

But, we ask, would the great Creator deal unjustly with His only begotten Son, full of grace and truth, who never at any time transgressed the divine will? Would He place upon Him the burden of the sinner's guilt, and would not this be a gross injustice, a worse violation of the divine law than to have cleared the guilty race without a ransom? The Lord abundantly answers our query, and assures us that nothing was done contrary to the will of the Lord Jesus; that He gladly gave Himself on our behalf to die, the just for the unjust, that He might bring us to God. And we are and may be amazed at such generosity. Do we inquire how it could be possible that one would be willing thus to sacrifice His own welfare and interest on behalf of sinners?

The scriptures Answer--this query also, informing us that the Heavenly Father set before His Son a joy, a privilege and reward, the declaration being: "Who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God." Heb. 12:2.

What joy was this that the Father set before His Son? We Answer--that from the scriptural standpoint there were several joys commingled: (1) The joy of a thoroughly loyal Son to do everything that would be the Father's will; (2) The joy of His sympathy, His participation with the Father in benevolent designs toward our fallen race, His delighting to have a part in the uplifting of Father Adam and those who fell from divine favor through him unto sin and death; (3) Another feature of joy surely entered into this because how could our dear Redeemer have rejoiced first to humble himself, to take a human nature and to sacrifice that nature in death, unless the Father had included in the promise made Him an assurance of His resurrection from the dead, and that in that resurrected condition he would suffer nothing by reason of His sacrifices; that He would be raised from the dead, not to the human plane of being nor even to His own previous highly exalted state, but to the divine nature far above angels, principalities and powers. All of these weighty reasons combined to make the only begotten Son of God well pleased to be the Redeemer of mankind. Thus we see that no injustice has been done to anybody that the Heavenly Father's plan is so great, so wise, that it has brought not only a blessing to mankind but a high exaltation of reward and joy to the Redeemer also.

"TASTED DEATH FOR EVERY MAN"

We have just seen that in the divine arrangement Jesus' death was the offset to the penalty upon Father Adam, and that as all of Adam's posterity were involved with him in his death sentence, the logic of Adam was purchased back from the sentence and was included in him when he was purchased back from the sentence that as by a man came death so by a man also (the man Christ Jesus) should come the resurrection of the dead, for as all in Adam die, so all in Christ shall be made alive." (1 Cor. 15:21,22) As the dying included all the degradation, mental, moral and physical, ending in the tomb, so the making alive must signify not only an awakening from the tomb, but a bringing back from all the elements of death and degradation to the original perfection of the image and likeness of God which Father Adam enjoyed before he came under the sentence. His life, his experiences after being driven from the garden of Eden were experiences of death—"Dying thou shalt die." So then the promise, "Even so in Christ shall all be made alive," means much more than merely resuscitation and awakening from the tomb. It signifies restitution, which the Apostle Peter declares God hath now spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began. Acts 3:21

Ah! but there is a limitation; the race shared in Adam's sin because they were in his loins when he was condemned; it was by one man that sin entered into the world, and death the result of sin. Now reversing the matter, "Even so in Christ shall all be made alive." Is there a hope here for universal salvation? No! except that it would be built upon the hope that all eventually would come unto Christ, into relationship with Him; and that this hope, much as we might desire to entertain it, is forbidden by various testimonies of the Word of God, which tell us of the second death and of some who will fall away after having enjoyed the blessed privileges of redemption, as well as knowing about it.

We must give this expression, "in Christ made alive" its full, proper weight. At first this might seem to be too greatly limiting the salvation which God has provided that instead of its being applicable to every man, it would be appropriate only to the more honorable of the race, who have accepted Christ under the terms and conditions of this gospel age by faith, by sacrifice, by walking in the narrow way, by faithfulness even unto death, and the inheritance of the crown of life as the bride class.

SOME BRETHREN, SOME CHILDREN

To a superficial glance it might appear that there would be no distinction between those now received of the Lord and those whom He will receive during the Millennial age; but the scriptures are quite definite in differentiating these. The class now received of the Lord are called his “brethren” and his “bride,” and are distinctly said to be begotten of the holy spirit by the Father. As we read, “The God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ hath begotten us.” The believers of this gospel age are never called the children of Christ, but the children of God, the Father, as Jesus himself expressed it after His resurrection; speaking of His ascension He said, “I ascend unto my Father and your Father, to My God and to your God.” (John 20:17.) And there is an appropriateness in this, for it would be very inconsistent for the church to be spoken of in one breath as the children of Christ and in the next as the espoused bride.—(2 Cor. 11:2)

Those who will be brought to a knowledge of the truth and into harmony with the divine plan, through Jesus during the Millennial age, are referred to in the scriptures as the children of Christ, and He as the father of all who will there and then receive eternal life. This is one of the titles given Him by the prophets “Prince of Peace,” “Everlasting Father.” (Isa. 9:6) Neither is the title vain or meaningless, for the world, we are assured, will receive its life, its restitution rights and privileges, from Jesus, the great King of that age, the great Mediator, the great Life giver to the world. There is a logic in this, too, which we observe after we learn to heed the message. “Come let us reason together.” We perceive that the restitution of human nature and perfection and blessing and life everlasting which our Lord will distribute to all the willing and obedient during the Millennial age, is exactly what He purchased for mankind in His sacrifice.

Human nature was lost, human nature was redeemed; an earthly inheritance was lost, an earthly inheritance was redeemed; the first man was of the earth earthy, an earthly image of God, and was sentenced to death; his Savior became a man, flesh, of the earth earthy, that He might redeem or purchase back that which had been lost; and when the restitution time comes it will be the thing that was lost that will be restored, and the restorer will be the one who properly and truly will be the life-giver to all those restored, and the word life-giver is the equivalent of father. Throughout the Millennial age, then, the Christ of glory, Jesus and His Church, His Bride, partakers of the Divine nature, will constitute the kingdom invisible, which will have full charge and control of all the affairs of earth operating through the ancient worthies, perfected, will distribute the blessings of restitution to human perfection and life everlasting to all the willing and obedient, with both stripes and rewards to assist the good work, and with the penalty of second death for the extinguishing of all those who, with that full opportunity within their grasp, will reject the divine blessing. These will be the children of Christ, whom at the end of the Millennial age, at the close of His special reign, he shall deliver up to the Father, perfected and complete and entirely able to stand all the rigid requirements and tests of perfection.

ERRONEOUS VIEWS OF SIN FORGIVENESS

There are those who criticize the scriptural proposition that sins repented of may be justly forgiven under the divine arrangement. They point us to the views and practices of our Roman Catholic friends, and declare that the fact that these believe the priests have authority to cancel their guilt and to exonerate them becomes a power for evil in their lives, leading them to be less careful in respect to transgressions along these lines and regard the entire proposition of sin forgiveness as erroneous. We reply: In so far as our Roman Catholic friends ignore the scriptural arrangement in respect to justification, they err, and do injury to themselves as well as a general injury to the cause of Christ. The mistake, however, should be clearly discerned, and not be charged to the general doctrine of the forgiveness of sins, respecting which we must agree with the prophet that because there is forgiveness of sins with God, He is therefore to be revered.—(Psa. 130:4)

Whoever fails to realize the mercy of God fails to come within touch with the greatest power and influence that could possibly affect his life. The error of our Romanist friends lies in the putting of this forgiveness in the hands of the priesthood, which greatly alters its influence. The man or woman who goes to the Lord, intelligently realizes that his very thoughts are open and naked before the Lord, and that the only condition upon which he may realize forgiveness is a sincere heart-repentance of the sin, and application by faith of the merit of the precious blood of Christ, and restitution so far as possible to the one wronged by the sin. This, the scriptural doctrine of justification by faith, is the reverse of injurious it is helpful. All mankind through heredity are weak, liable to err, needing mercy, and, with many conscientious hearts, if no mercy were extended the effect would be despair. There is forgiveness with God that He may be reverenced; but this forgiveness is only extended through Christ. Divine justice stands unimpaired, irrevocable, but has provided the Redeemer as the way back to perfection and to harmony with God and to His just requirements.

HOSANNA! HOSANNA! TO THE SON OF DAVID

Pastor Russell preached to a large congregation here this afternoon in defense of the Bible, taking for his topic, "To Hell and Back." We report his evening discourse from the text, "And the most part of the multitude spread their garments in the way and others cut branches from the trees and spread them in the way... saying, Hosanna to the Son of David; Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord; Hosanna in the highest" Matt. 21:8,9.

Today is the anniversary of our Lord's triumphal entry into the city of Jerusalem on an ass, after the manner of the Jewish kings. It is celebrated by many Christian people as Palm Sunday, because, as our text recites, palm branches were spread before the ass on which our Savior rode, as a mark of honor and respect.

The narrative calls attention to this fact, stating that it was to fulfill the prophecies of centuries before that Israel's king would offer himself to them on an ass. Thus we read, "Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion! shout O daughter of Jerusalem: Behold, thy King cometh unto thee; He is just, and having salvation; lowly, and riding upon an ass, and a colt the foal of an ass." (Zech. 9:9) Our Lord had come from Galilee to Jerusalem to attend the great feast of the Passover, which He knew and foretold His disciples would be His last. His words on the subject were: "The Son of man shall be betrayed into the hands of men, and they shall kill Him, and the third day He shall be raised again" (Matt. 17:22, 23). Before Jerusalem He tarried over the Sabbath day at the home of Lazarus whom He had previously raised from the dead the brother of Martha and Mary. Their Sabbath ending at sundown, they had a special feast that evening, Jesus being the guest of honor, His disciples also participating.

HAIL, MESSIAH

Meantime, numerous people of Jerusalem had heard of His arrival. Their interest and curiosity were aroused because they had heard of the miracle of the awakening of Lazarus after he had been dead four days, and they had curiosity to see the man thus restored to life and the great Prophet or Teacher who had restored him. No wonder, then, that a considerable number came out to Bethany. The multitude caught the enthusiasm of the occasion, and without any suggestion from the Lord they began to acclaim Him, Hosanna! Hosanna! as we would say today, Hail! Hail! or Hurrah! Hurrah! They went forth, they declared their belief in Him as the Son of David the long-promised King of David's line, the Messiah who was to restore the kingdom of Israel and through Israel to bless all nations, as the representative of Jehovah. This is the signification of the words of our text.

What did this all mean? Why did Jesus thus present Himself as though He were the Jewish king? The Answer--of the scriptures is that this was in fulfillment of the prophecy that He came to the Jewish nation and proffered

Himself as the Messiah and King long promised and waited for. Unless He had thus presented Himself there could have been no special rejection of Him as the king. The offer was necessary in order to show good faith on God's part, and to show the unreadiness of the Jewish nation for the blessing God had provided and promised. God's promise to Israel was that when Messiah should come they should be the specially favored nation, and that if they were ready and willing He would accept of them and help them as His people, in conquering the world, in establishing His law, and thus in blessing with a rule and reign of righteousness all the families of the earth. Now is the day of their visitation, as the scriptures declare, and in order to bring that to a climax the Lord made the formal presentation. The incident of our lesson shows that the people in general would have been quite ready to exercise faith.

On another occasion, some time before, we remember that Jesus perceived that the disposition of the multitudes would have been to take Him by force and make Him a king, but He withdrew and departed elsewhere. It must have appeared to the disciples on this first Palm Sunday that finally Jesus was about to allow the people to have their way and make Him a king, and that He would even assist in the arrangement.

REBUKE THE MULTITUDE

Even amongst those who had come through interest and curiosity to Bethany were some of the religious leaders, who, sensing the enthusiasm of the multitude and hearing their cries of "Hosanna" to Messiah were greatly vexed and spoke to Jesus' disciples about it, that they shall call the attention of Jesus to the matter, that it was sacrilegious to call Him Messiah and to hail Him as a king. To the surprise of all Jesus declared that if the multitude should hold their peace the very stones would cry out, because the Prophet Zecharias, moved by the spirit of God, had prophesied long before (Zech. 9:9) respecting this very day and these very events which were transpiring, and had said, "Shout, O daughter of Zion, behold thy King cometh unto thee!" It was necessary, therefore, that a shout should be made proclaiming Jesus as the Messiah; it was necessary that some of the leaders of the people should hear that proclamation in order to increase their responsibility.

True, it was the unlearned who constituted this multitude, but Jesus Himself had testified that it was out of the mouths of such babes and sucklings is knowledge that God had ordained praise. With all their ignorance of the divine plan and of the law and the prophets, the masses were in better condition of heart to receive the Truth than were the leaders and teachers and doctors of divinity of the time. The latter had wandered far from the simplicity of the divine message through giving heed to the traditions of the ancients and various speculations of their own. It was these same representatives of the religious and ruling class who, noting the spirit of the multitude, deliberated together as to how they should put Jesus to death and Lazarus also. What could influence those educated and able and outwardly religious people to such a wrong course? We reply that they were influenced by a kind of loyalty and patriotism to sect, party, nation; they perceived that the growth of influence on the part of Jesus would mean the weakening of the institutions that they had labored to establish.

Over the hill and across the brook Kedron and through the gateway Jesus and His disciples and the cheering and proclaiming multitude passed, and the record is that the city was moved a great commotion was experienced throughout the city. The procession drew up to the Temple. Jesus alighted, and, backed by the crowd of people who recognized Him as the mighty Prophet Jesus of Nazareth of Galilee, who cleared the Temple of the money-changers and trades-men who were using as a place of merchandise the sacred building which had been consecrated to the worship and service of God alone. In doing this our Lord did only what every Jew was fully commissioned to do He was not a violater of the Jewish Law, but an upholder of it. It would be a different matter if He were living today, when the execution of the law is put into the hands of the officers, others not being permitted to participate.

YE SHALL SEE ME NO MORE UNTIL

It was on the occasion of this ride to Jerusalem and before they had entered the city that the procession stopped, and Jesus, looking over the sacred city, wept, saying, "O, Jerusalem, Jerusalem, that killest the prophets and stonest them that are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not! Behold, your house is left unto you desolate. For I say unto you, Ye shall see Me no more until that day when ye shall say, Blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord."

The test was past, the fact that a few of the populace had hailed Jesus He knew meant nothing; all knew that it signified nothing of accepting Him as the King, that the power really lay in the hands of the educated, wealthy, influential scribes, pharisees and doctors of divinity.

There was a blindness upon them as a people, they knew not because they were not in the right attitude of heart to rightly understand and appreciate and grasp the glorious promises God had given them; and our Lord's words intimate what the Apostle also confirms, namely, that the blindness was increased at this time. It was only to a few, a minority of that people, that the Lord said truly, "Blessed are your eyes for they see, and your ears for they hear." The great mass even of those who shouted Hosanna, were blind and deaf so far as any real understanding was concerned. But what is the signification of that word, "until"—"Ye shall not see Me more until that day." What day? Ah, there comes in a part of the scriptures designated the "mystery." The apostle explains that although Israel was there blinded and turned aside and rejected from God's favor, this rejection and blindness would not last forever, but would be set aside when another peculiar feature of God's plan had been accomplished. What other feature was there to be accomplished? The scriptures Answer—that God, foreknowing that Israel according to the flesh would not be ready or fit to be His Kingdom class, to constitute the bride class foreknowing that only a few, a remnant of them, would be fit for such a position, declared in advance the blinding and stumbling of the masses of the nation as a whole. St. Paul calls attention to this, referring to the Prophet Isaiah's words, "Though Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, yet a remnant of them shall return." Isa. 10:22.

A REMNANT ACCORDING TO FAVOR

Our Lord and the apostles both pointed out that the few of the Jews of that time who accepted Jesus constituted the nucleus of the holy or spiritual Israel, which the Lord then began to accept. The apostle's words on the subject are, "He came to His own and His own received Him not. But as many as received Him, to them gave He liberty to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on His name, begotten not of blood nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." (John 1:12,13.) But as there were not enough of those Jews to constitute the elect, the foreordained number, the bride of Christ 144,000 the Lord instructed and guided beyond the boundaries of the Jewish nation, so that the message of His grace during this Gospel Age has been extended in every direction throughout the world, with a view to finding others amongst all nations, peoples, kindreds and tongues who will have the same spirit and disposition of loyalty and faithfulness that was manifested by Israel's remnant first selected. It has required all of this Gospel Age to seek out this Little Flock, to gather them out and the work is not yet completed, although we believe that very shortly it will be that very shortly the last member of the elect body of Christ, the Bride of Christ, will have been found, instructed and tested, and prepared for the marriage for the union with Christ in the first resurrection, according to the glorious promise of His word.

Meantime, as a remnant of Israel was gathered out of a large nation more or less in sympathy with them, so in the sending of the message to other nations multitudes were more or less attracted into more or less sympathy with the message and with those being selected. As a whole, however, this little flock had found its experiences the same as did that little company to whom Jesus ministered and to whom He said, "If the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you. If ye were of the world the world would love his own; but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you." (John 15:18, 19)

As amongst the Lord's followers at that time there were not many very noble, great, wise, according to the course of this world, so it has been also with the class selected from other nations during this Gospel Age; the truth of God's message has not appealed to many of the worldly great or wise and not to many altogether.

ALL ISRAEL SHALL BE SAVED

Some of us perhaps were astonished when first we read the apostle's expression, "And so all Israel shall be saved; as it is written, There shall come out of Zion the Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob; for this is my covenant with them when I shall take away their sins." (Rom. 11:26, 27) We were taught our theology not from the Bible, but from the creeds which were formulated in more or less of the smoke and darkness and confusion of the "dark ages;" we were taught that when the church had all been selected, elected, saved, then a besom of destruction would fall upon the earth and upon all the remainder of its population, and worse than this that they all would for all eternity be under the control and dominion of fire-proof demons who would torture them.

How different the apostle's statement which clearly is that, as soon as the gospel church shall have been completed, the Great Deliverer will come forth for the blessing first of Israel and subsequently of all nations. It is this same apostle who elsewhere explains to us the mystery, secret that this elect church of this gospel age, the overcomers of the Jewish nation and of all the nations, gathered by the Lord and called His jewels, are to be members of the Great Messiah, members of the Great Deliverer, members of the Great Prophet, Priest and King. In the figure our Lord and Redeemer is the Head of the church, which is His body, and all of His faithful ones faithful unto death shall be counted in as members of that spiritual ecclesia which, glorified in the first resurrection, will be like the Lord and, with Him, be sharing His glory as members of His body and under His headship, the Deliverer of the world.

It was to this same event that our Lord referred in the words already quoted, “Ye shall see me no more until that day.” “That day” is the “day of Christ” the Millennial Day, in which the Messiah, Jesus the head and the church His body, shall constitute the royal priesthood, the prophet of the Lord, for the blessing and uplifting of Adam and all of his race, redeemed through the precious blood. The work of grace toward the world begins with Israel just where it left off. The nation to which our Lord declared, “Your house is left unto you desolate”—“until that day,” the apostle explains is to be received back again into God’s favor when that day shall come after the gathering out of the elect spiritual Israel in the interim. Mark how the apostle proceeds to point out to us that the future blessing to Israel is coming, not because of their worthiness, but because of God’s grace and goodness, and in harmony with His promise to their fathers.

ANOTHER PRESENTATION AS KING

When our Lord at His second advent shall offer Himself as king to Israel and to the world, it will be under very different circumstances from those of the Palm Sunday we are considering. At that time it was His intention, in harmony with His foreknowledge, to permit the blindness to remain with Israel and to permit them in their blindness to crucify Messiah. The apostle explains this saying, “I wot that in ignorance ye did it, as did also your rulers.” (Acts 3:17) It was a part of the divine plan that Christ should die for the sins of the whole world and that He should be crucified, “wounded in the house of His friends” by the very people to whom He was closest by ties of flesh, and through the precious promises of the law and the prophets. But at His second coming no such purposes are to be served. He comes to reign in power and great glory not, however, with an earthly glory, visible to the natural eye, but with a glory and dignity and honor similar to that which we give to the Father.

At His second advent, according to the scriptures, He will be revealed to the Jews, but not in the flesh, not to their natural vision. In the awful trouble of the “day of wrath,” which in a few years will be upon the world, Israel will bear a serious share. It will not only be the time of the world’s trouble, but, as described in the scriptures, “The time of Jacob’s trouble,” but “he shall be saved out of it.” The Lord will reveal Himself in connection with that deliverance, so that the eyes of their understanding will open. The apostle intimates that the salvation which is to come to Israel is a salvation from their blindness, in which they have been for more than eighteen centuries unable to recognize Messiah. He assures us that their blindness shall be turned away—"all Israel shall be saved" from their blindness. "All the blind eyes shall be opened and all the deaf ears shall be unstopped." Thus "Every eye shall see Him, and they also that pierced Him" see Him as we see Him now, we whose eyes of understanding have been opened, we who are no longer blind.

Ah, yes! the opening of the eyes of the mind is a much more important work than the opening of natural eyes, and the seeing with the eyes of the understanding is much more valuable, much more precious, than any sight we could have with our natural eyes, and it is this seeing with the eyes of our understanding that is the great blessing of God that is coming to Israel and the whole world. They shall not see Jesus in the flesh because He will not be in the flesh. He took the flesh for a purpose, for the suffering of death, but He will take it no more. At His first advent they saw him in the flesh, but He then testified to them saying, "Yet a little while and the world seeth Me no more" (John 14:19) with the natural eye.

YE SHALL SAY, BLESSED IS HE

Our Lord declared to the Jews, "Ye shall see Me no more until that day when ye shall say, Blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord." "That day" is surely coming. Prophesied for centuries, it has been on the way but cannot arrive until its "due time." It is the great day of Christ mentioned so frequently by the apostles and the prophets a thousand year day. It is the last day of which we read in the scriptures, the last of the week, the seventh. In divine providence there were to be seven great days, a week of seven thousand years, connected with the fall of man and his restoration to divine favor. The first of these days was the day of the fall Adam's day. Adam lived 930 years and did not quite live out his day, and died under the curse because of disobedience. For five successive great days of one thousand years each, Adam's posterity has since been battling with the conditions of the curse in themselves and in each other weaknesses mental, moral and physical. Born in sin, shapen in iniquity, some have plunged more rapidly than others downward, while others have striven a little to stem the tide of sin and death, but none have succeeded.

In due time, in the fifth day of this great week, Messiah appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself. He paid the penalty of father Adam, and thus redeemed him and all of his posterity; He waited through the remainder of that fifth day and all of the sixth gathering His elect, His bride, His joint-heirs for the kingdom, and in the close of the sixth day all things are ready for the establishment of the kingdom, which marks the beginning of the seventh “last day” of the great week the “day of Christ” the day in which Messiah, head and body will reign over the affairs and interests of mankind, supervising all their matters, causing all things to work together for good that all may come to a clear accurate knowledge of the truth, that all who will may be delivered from the bondage of corruption and restored during those “times of restitution” to all that was lost in Adam and redeemed by the precious blood.

This day of Christ, in the early dawn of which we are already living, will be the great Palm Sunday, for a palm is a symbol of victory, and the record is that Messiah shall bring forth judgment unto victory. His day, therefore, will be a day of victory, a day of judgment, a day of disciplining the world, a day of correcting it in righteousness, a day of blessing the faithful and of punishing with stripes of correction the wayward, until at the close of His Millennial reign every member of our race shall have had full opportunity to return to harmony with God and to perfection of being. Some of us realize the situation in advance. Some of us already are strewing palm branches in the way of this glorious King of righteousness, so long promised and now about to take His sceptre and reign. Some of us delight to shout already that His kingdom is nearly at hand. Hosanna to Him that cometh in the name of the Lord! To Him whose kingdom is a righteous kingdom, in accord with the great principles of righteousness, and whose blessing is to extend to every creature for their uplift, and who ultimately will purify the world by destroying in the second death all who deliberately and willfully reject the grace and goodness of God manifested through the Messiah.

CHRIST'S RESURRECTION INDISPENSABLE

Pastor C. T. Russell preached here today at 2:30 p. m. at the National theater in defense of the Bible and the divine character, his subject being “To Hell and Back.” We report his evening discourse on the Resurrection of Christ from the text, “But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that are asleep” (1 Cor. 15:20). He said:

The name Easter is of heathen origin, Easter being the name of a goddess of olden times. Similarly the days of the week are named from heathen deities, but under Christian influences these gradually have lost their heathen significance and gained a new meaning. Today throughout all civilized lands Easter Sunday is the remembrancer of the resurrection of our Lord Jesus from the dead on the third day after his death. To them that appreciate him as the great Light sent into the world for man's deliverance to those who appreciate him as the Sun of Righteousness, which shall ultimately shine forth to the blessing of all the families of the earth to such there could be no more appropriate day named than Sunday to mark the day upon which he rose from the dead, and by a resurrection entered upon the new life which is yet to bring such blessing to all mankind. And as for the word Easter, is it not appropriate also, since the east, the sun rising, spiritually points us to the great Sun of Righteousness and his kingdom, the foundation for which was laid in the death and resurrection of Jesus?

In view of the fact that this day is so generally celebrated by Christians as the memorial of Jesus' resurrection, let us now examine the matter of the resurrection and ascertain why it is that an event of so great importance in the Scriptures is today considered of so slight moment by the vast majority of Christians. The difficulty seems to be that a change in theological beliefs has made void and meaningless the Bible teachings on the subject of the resurrection. In the days of our Lord and the apostles the belief amongst the Jews and amongst the Christian converts was general that death was as real with mankind as with the brute creation, and that man's hope of a future life consisted not in his possession of an indestructible nature, but in the promise of a resurrection.

It was clearly understood that death not only affected the body, but the entire man that the penalty for original sin was death in the full, complete sense of the word, in harmony with the decree "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." Hence we find that amongst the Jews there were two principal classes one the Sadducees and agnostics who denied a resurrection and future life, and the other the Pharisees who believed the Scriptures, believed in the future life by a resurrection hope by the grace of God.

Our Lord confuted the arguments of the Sadducees that the dead were hopelessly dead and would have no resurrection by quoting the Lord's words to Moses at the bush, and pointing out that it would have been inconsistent for the Lord to say that he was the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob if they were hopelessly dead as are the beasts that perish. Our Lord says that these words showed or proved the resurrection of the dead that from the divine standpoint Abraham, Isaac and Jacob were not dead in the sense of being extinct. Our Lord further declared that the hour was coming in the which these ancient worthies, with "all that are in their graves, shall hear the voice of the Son of man and shall come forth". (John 5:28, 29)

RESURRECTION INDISPENSABLE TO FUTURE EXISTENCE

St. Paul, it will be remembered, on one occasion was in the hands of a Jewish mob and perceiving that they were part Sadducees and part Pharisees, he divided the mob, and gained a part of it to his support by crying out, "For the hope of the resurrection of the dead I am called in question this day" (Acts 23:6). The Pharisees who believed in a resurrection at once insisted that St. Paul should not be persecuted by those who denied the resurrection the Sadducees and Agnostics. The same St. Paul, in the chapter from which our text is taken, presented the strongest possible arguments proving the resurrection showing that it is indispensable. St. Paul met the issue squarely and declared that none could be Christians who denied the resurrection who did not believe in it thoroughly.

The chapter opens with the declaration that the foundation for the gospel lies in the fact that Christ died for our sins and arose again on the third day. He recites the fact that this is well attested by the words of reliable witnesses. Then he says:

"Now if Christ be preached that He arose from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead? But if there be no resurrection of the dead then is Christ not risen. And if Christ be not risen then is our preaching vain and your faith is also vain. Yea, and we are found false witnesses of God because we have testified of God that He raised up Christ whom He raised not up if so be that the dead rise not, for if the dead rise not then is not Christ raised." Vs. 12-15. How clear and distinct this argument is. The apostle in so many words shows that any one who denies the possibility of a resurrection of the dead must deny the resurrection of Christ from the dead, and if this be denied the entire bottom falls out of the Christian faith. And if we acknowledge that Christ rose from the dead, and thus admit the power of God for the resurrection of the dead, then we have the foundation upon which to build a hope of our own resurrection in due time and of the resurrection of others that all that are in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of God and shall come forth.

OTHERWISE CHRISTIAN FAITH IS VAIN

St. Paul was not the man to quibble nor to dodge issues because some of his hearers were lacking in faith. Mark the force of his argument in the succeeding words, culminating in our text. He says, "If the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised; and if Christ be not raised your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins. Then they also that are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." Vs. 16-18.

Mark his argument, Christian faith will be vain without the resurrection of Christ. Why? we ask. If it be true that good men go at once to heaven in the moment of death, how could faith in Christ's resurrection affect their interests either one way or another? How could the apostle say, “They that are fallen asleep in Christ are perished,” if He rose not from the dead? Ah, dear friends, the difficulty is that during the “dark ages” the Lord’s people seriously departed from the scriptures and from the facts, giving heed to false doctrines, heathenish doctrine to the effect that when a man dies he is not dead, but more alive than ever before, and hence needs no resurrection from the dead. This heathenish error, engrafted upon Christian theology long ago, has become so interwoven with the body of Christian faith and hope that it has gradually perverted the same and made of none effect the scriptural teaching of the necessity for the death of Christ, the necessity for His resurrection, the necessity for His coming again and the necessity for the resurrection of both the just and the unjust.

We are only getting awake to a realization of the confusion that has come to us through this neglect of the Word of God and acceptance of platonic philosophy. Surely no one can read thoughtfully this argument of the apostle presented in the fifteenth chapter of First Corinthians without being convinced that the writer believed that all who go into the tomb must sleep until the resurrection morning. Moreover they must see that this sleep is a figure of speech, which signifies that really the dead are dead, but are reckoned to be asleep because of the promise of a resurrection. Mark the apostle’s statement that if Christ has not risen from the dead those who have fallen asleep in Christ have perished that is to say, those whom we thought of as sleeping in Christ, and waiting for the Millennial morning for the Master’s call to come forth from the tomb are not really sleeping but really dead, if so be that there has been no redemption accomplished for them, if so be that He who died at Calvary stayed dead and did not rise from the dead on the third day as He foretold He would, and as the apostles declared He did so, they being witnesses.

BUT NOW IS CHRIST RISEN

Our text is the summing up of the apostle’s argument: he assumes that he has convinced any Christian who is inclined to doubt the value, the necessity, the fact of Christ’s resurrection. He says in effect: We Christians acknowledge this fact that Christ did rise from the dead: this is the very foundation of our faith. And more than this we believe that He was the first-fruits of them that are asleep. (R. V.) Note carefully the thought here expressed that Christ’s resurrection was a first-fruits or sample in some respects at least, of a resurrection that is to apply to others. Note the statement that He is the first-fruits of them that are asleep. The meaning is plain; the world of mankind had been dying for more than 4,000 years when the apostle wrote these words. Adam and all his posterity in death would have been hopelessly dead, extinct, as the brute beasts, had it not been for the divine sin and death.

Intimations of this coming redemption and deliverance were given as far back as Eden when the Lord said that ultimately the seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head implying that the victory of sin and death over Adam and his race would not be perpetual but be reversed. The same divine grace was still more clearly stated to father Abraham in the words, "In thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." It was in view of these words which were further corroborated and reiterated through the prophets, that the people of Israel came to have hope in a resurrection of the dead, build their hopes upon Messiah's power. The apostle's argument is that Jesus is the Messiah, that by His death He paid the ransom price for father Adam and redeemed him from his death penalty and thus incidentally redeemed all of his race, since all were condemned in Adam, while in his loins.

THEM THAT ARE ASLEEP

The revised version makes this text still more clear than the common version. The words, "them that are asleep," should leave no doubt in the minds of any as to what the apostle meant. The sleeping ones, the dead, were still dead, still asleep, when he wrote, although this was years after Jesus had died for our sins and risen from the dead. Later on in this same wonderful resurrection chapter the apostle shows clearly both how and when all these sleeping ones shall be called forth from the tomb. He points out a first resurrection of holy blessed ones who shall come forth in the resurrection spirit beings, heavenly beings. This class will constitute the first resurrection, or, as the apostle puts it, they will share in "His resurrection," because they have shared also in His sufferings and in His death.

Here is further corroboration then that our Lord was not risen from the dead a man, but, as the apostle declares, He was "put to death in the flesh, He was quickened in the spirit a spirit being." Or, as he again declares, "Him hath God highly exalted and given a name above every name." Of Him the apostle again declares, that He is the second Adam the second life giver and head for the race, and he adds, "Now the Lord is that Spirit." He assures us that our Lord was manifest in the flesh at His first advent in order that he might suffer death on our behalf in order that He might pay the ransom price for Adam and his race by dying the just for the unjust to sacrifice Himself as the man Christ Jesus. His resurrection, then, was in the nature of a reward for His obedience unto death and placed Him back again on the spirit plane and far above angels, principalities and powers and every name that is named the express image of His Father's person." Eph. 1:21; Heb. 1:3

CHRIST THE FIRST FRUITS

In a special sense Christ was the first-fruits of all who ever died in the sense that He was the first that should rise from the dead, as the Scriptures so plainly declare. Some have confusion on this point when they think of some three cases in the Old Testament and as many in the New Testament in which the dead were brought back to life before our Lord's death and resurrection. The explanation of how Christ could be the first that should rise from the dead, without ignoring these Scriptural cases, is a very simple one. According to the Scriptures, life and death are opposites; hence the very beginning of the working of death and imperfection in any being vitiates his life to that extent. He is no longer a living being but a dying being. From this standpoint Adam's dying began the moment the death sentence was pronounced against him, although he did not fully succumb to the death powers for nearly 930 years.

Christ Jesus Himself was the first one to come under the power of death and be raised completely out from under that power to full perfection of life and being. He was therefore in the highest and fullest sense of the word "the first-born from the dead" and "the first that should rise from the dead" (Acts 26:28), as our text declares, He became "the first-fruits of them that are asleep." This expression "first-fruits" surely has in it the thought of "after fruits" that as Jesus was the first to come completely from the power of death, so eventually others will be fully delivered.

The Apostle James (1:18) speaks of the church, "the body of Christ," saying that in God's plan "we should be a kind of first-fruits unto God of His creatures." Here we have an elaboration of the same thought, Jesus Himself was the first-fruits of all, and the church adopted and begotten of the Holy Spirit as the body members of the glorified Christ are declared to be with their head "a kind of first-fruits." This shows most distinctly that there are others besides the church for whom a blessing is in reserve a blessing of rescue from the power of sin and death by a resurrection. The Apostle Paul refers to this same participation of the church with her Lord a little later on in his argument. After pointing out that the blessing of the Lord is to be upon two classes, a heavenly class and an earthly class, the one as the stars of heaven the others as the sands of the sea, and after pointing out that the church, the "elect," is to constitute this heavenly class of the first resurrection (vs. 40-44), the apostle proceeds to indicate that the resurrection of the church will bring the elect into the image and likeness of their Lord and Redeemer as spirit beings, while the resurrection of the world will bring them to the standard of human perfection represented in father Adam. He says, "As in the earthly such are they also that are earthy; as is the heavenly such are they also that are heavenly." Continuing to speak of this heavenly class, the elect church, he says, "As we have born the image of the earthly we shall also bear the image of the heavenly." He proceeds then to point out a mystery or secret, assuring us that in the resurrection the Lord will complete that work of "change" which He has already begun in us in that our minds, our wills, have been renewed, "begotten again."

Progressing the apostle shows that it will be after the church shall have experienced this change from mortal to immortal conditions, from earthly to heavenly conditions that the promise of God through the prophet will have fulfillment, namely, "Death is swallowed up in victory. O, death, where is thy sting? O, grave (hades) where is thy victory? (vs. 54,55.) thus eventually the death of Christ operating first for the deliverance of the elect to the heavenly conditions will be made available to the world of mankind during the Millennial age to earthly conditions; to the intent that death itself may be swallowed up in victory that the power of the grave shall no longer prevail against the human family who have been "bought with the precious blood," but that all who will accept the divine favor then extended to them may come to a full victory through Christ over sin and over death and have everlasting life all others dying the second death from which there will be no redemption, no resurrection.

AFTERWARDS THEY ARE NOT CHRIST'S

The apostle refers to Christ as the first fruits twice in this connection but evidently with a difference. In our text he speaks of Christ Jesus as "the first fruits of them that are asleep," while in vs. 22, 23 he draws a different picture in which he again speaks of Christ as the first fruits, here, however, signifying the entire Christ, Jesus the head and the church His body. He says, "For as all in Adam die even so all in Christ shall be made alive, but every man in his own order." He then divides off these orders of the resurrection and referring to the first order, namely, that of the church, (Christ the head and the elect His body) he styles these the first fruits, gathered during this Gospel Age. With the completion of these first fruits the second coming of Christ will take place and then will come the great harvesting of the world, the great ingathering from all the families of the earth the great time of blessing to all who were cursed in Adam and redeemed by the blood of Christ. Such as will be saved during the Millennial Age are here briefly referred to as "they that are Christ's at His coming" that is to say those who will become His during His presence, His parousia during the Millennial Age under the ministration of the mediatorial kingdom of the Millennial Age. That this is the apostle's argument is evident from the verse following which says, Then will come the end of the plan of salvation when the kingdom under the whole heavens will be restored to the Father, all wrongful authority and power having been put down and brought into subjection to God.

INTELLIGENT EASTER JOYS

In proportion to our knowledge on any subject is our opportunity for joy and blessing therein. And thus it is that those of the Lord's people most clear in their knowledge of His word have the greatest joy and blessing in connection with every feature of His truth, including those precious things represented by this Easter Sunday. To these the import of the day is one of spiritual exhilaration and refreshment, their faith grasps the fact that our race condemned to death because of sin has been provided by the heavenly Father with a Savior and a great one that this Savior has already given His life as our ransom price, and been raised from the dead by the power of God to that high glorious station in which we recognize Him as King of kings and Lord of lords, possessed of glory, honor and immortality. We hail Him as the one who is to be the Lord of all in His coming kingdom and who is already the Lord of our hearts; Lord of all those who have heard and tasted of the grace of God, by faith, in advance of the world.

This Easter Sunday means still more than this; it speaks to us of our "adoption" through faith, to be "heirs of God and joint-heirs with Jesus Christ our Lord" in His heavenly inheritance and glory and work of the Millennial kingdom. It bids us wait with patience for our share in the resurrection which will complete the grand Easter morning, and following which the "Sun of Righteousness will shine forth with healing in his beams," to bless the sin-benighted world of mankind, "to give them beauty for ashes and the oil of joy for the spirit of heaviness and mourning;" to bid them to look up, and to help them rise up in the glorious restitution, which the Lord has promised shall be made available to "all the families of the earth." Acts 3:19, 21

Not only Easter Sunday but every Sunday celebrates the resurrection of our Lord and head and reminds us that we also are "risen with Him to walk in newness of life," and assures us that when all the members of the "elect" are completed, when all the trials and difficulties and testings and provings, the chiselings and polishings shall have been accomplished in us, the worthy shall be gathered by the Lord as His "jewels" and be manifested with Him in the glories of His kingdom. Let us wait with patience, with hope, and be of good courage and rejoice in any present privileges of suffering with Christ, in faithfulness to Him and the teachings of His word. Let us be assured by the words of the apostle, "God is not unjust to forget your work and labor of love, in that ye did minister to the saints and do minister." (Heb. 6:10) Let us be assured that every sacrifice made in the interest of the Lord's name and honor and cause and for His brethren's sake and in co-operation with His work of now electing the church will be appreciated by Him who readeth the heart and who knoweth them that are His; and who is giving to us such "exceeding great and precious promises, that by these we might become partakers of the divine nature." 2 Pet. 1:4

*“O! how precious, dear Redeemer,
Is the love that fills my soul,
I am thine and have this token
While I’m running for the goal.*

*Lo! a new creation dawning;
Lo! I rise to life divine;
In my soul on Easter morning;
I am Christ’s and Christ is mine.”*

DEAD SHALL HEAR! HEARERS SHALL LIVE!

Pastor C. T. Russell, of Allegheny, Pa., preached twice here today in the Lyric theater. In the afternoon his topic was “The Bible Defended To Hell and Back.” He had a very large and attentive audience. We report his morning discourse from the text, “Verily, verily, I say unto you, the hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God; and they that hear shall live” (John 5:25). The speaker said:

The meaning of our text is obscure to very many. On the surface it seems to teach an absurdity, namely, that the dead would hear first and live afterward. Whereas, the ordinary thought would be that they would live first and then hear. But our Lord made no mistake in the statement, and the text is very ample of solution when once the right principles of interpretation are recognized. To get the proper signification of these words we must remember that from God’s standpoint only three members of our race have ever been alive: Father Adam and Mother Eve, during their period of innocence while in Eden, and our Lord Jesus Christ, whose life unimpaired by sin was transferred from a high plane of spirit being to human nature when he, in the language of the apostle, “was made flesh,” that he by the grace of God, “might taste death for every man” (John 1:14; Heb. 2:9). The scriptures consistently hold to this thought that nothing short of perfection of being is alive, and hence that Adam and Eve and all their posterity who shared in their fall immediately became dying creatures and could not be said to be alive.

The statement of Revelation 20:5 is in full accord with this thought. The thousand-year reign of Christ is described, and the resurrection of the church to glory and perfection of life in the kingdom is portrayed, and then the general statement follows that the “rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished.” It will be the work of the Millennial age to fulfill the meaning of our text to cause all mankind, all the dead, first to be awakened from the tomb; second, to hear the voice, the message of the Son of God; and thirdly, if they will, to be raised by this message out of sin and death conditions completely, up to the full perfection of life as it was lost in Eden and redeemed at Calvary. But not until the dead world shall have heard the voice and obeyed it can they reach that perfection, the end which is designated as life. All the obedient then, having heard and having obeyed, shall live in the full sense of the word Adamic death, weakness, imperfection, will have no further power over them, because by the Lord's grace the work of the Millennial age will have raised them completely out of the sinful dying conditions.

ALL IN THEIR GRAVES COME FORTH

The context (vs. 28, 29) declares that "all that are in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of Man and shall come forth" unto resurrection. The intimation is very clear that the coming forth would not of itself constitute a resurrection, and this is corroborated by other Scriptures which tell us that the widow of Nain's son, Jairus' daughter and Lazarus were awakened from the sleep of death, or, in the Master's words, came forth from the tomb. None of these, however, lived again none of them were brought to perfection by their awakening. They were still under sentence of death, and were merely resuscitated for a brief time to die as others die under the death sentence. The first to rise to die no more was our Lord Jesus. His was a life resurrection a resurrection to perfection to life and being completely out of death. His, therefore, was an anastasis, or raising up absolutely. In harmony with all this is the testimony of the Scriptures that he was the "first fruits of them that slept." He was the "first born from the dead," he was the "first that should rise from the dead," and that "Christ dieth no more; death hath no more dominion over him" (1 Cor. 15:20; Col. 1:18; Acts 26:23; Rom. 6:9).

Accordingly, our Lord's words declare that after those in their graves shall have heard the voice of the Son of Man and come forth, unto those who have done good unto those who have pleased God, unto those acceptable to God through Christ it shall be a life resurrection or a raising up completely out of death, similar to that experienced by our Lord. Indeed, the resurrection of the church is elsewhere designated as the resurrection of Christ, who being the head and the church his body, the reckoning is that in his resurrection began the resurrection of the entire body. Hence the apostle declares again that his ambition was to have fellowship with Christ in his sufferings that he might also share in "his resurrection" (Phil. 3:10). But it is evident that those who will share in the life resurrection will be comparatively a very small proportion of humanity, because only a few have this testimony that "they pleased God," only a few have the witness of the word of God and of the Holy Spirit that they are accepted in Christ that they have been faithful to their privileges, opportunities and covenants. All others are grouped by our Lord's words together under the general term, "Those who have done evil," those whose course God has not approved. For these our Lord declares there will be a "resurrection by judgments"--mistranslated in our common version a "resurrection of damnation," but properly enough rendered in the revised version.

THE RESURRECTION BY JUDGMENTS

Having in mind that the resurrection process is to bring the individual up to the perfection of life, it is readily discerned that the life itself will not be possessed until the resurrection process shall have been accomplished. The great mass of the world then, after coming forth from the tomb not all at once, but, as the apostle declares, "every man in his own order" will still be in death. The resurrection by judgments must therefore in the case of these signify a gradual raising up to life through a process of judgments, a process of rewards and punishments, correction in righteousness. There will be disciplinary in character, helpful, with a view to the enlightenment, instruction and uplifting of all from the sin-and-death conditions to absolute perfection of life.

Preceding our text (vs. 21, 22), our Lord makes this same distinction between the awakening the dead and the quickening them, or bringing them to perfection of life, and declares that, as the Father Himself has power to do this, even so he has given the same power to the Son. Then he tells the reason, the necessity, for giving it to the Son because, "the Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment to the Son; that all men should honor the Son even as they honor the Father also. If we inquire what judgment is this that the Father hath committed to the Son, the Answer--comes that it was not the judgment against father Adam in Eden, for that judgment was by the Father and the sentence was from the Father to death. The world, once judged in Adam and condemned, could not be judged again and condemned again until the first judgment was set aside. The decisions of the great supreme court of the universe must stand inviolate. To rescind the sentence would signify either that a wrong was done by the original sentence or that a wrong was done in the setting aside of a rightful sentence. The scriptures show how God, maintaining the original judgment or sentence of death against the race, has nevertheless planned that our Redeemer should pay the penalty for Adam and all involved through his disobedience, and that having paid their penalty he might grant them a new judgment, a fresh trial, for everlasting life. This, then, is what our Lord meant when He said that the Father had committed the judgment of the world to Him. What a blessed promise that the world of mankind was to have a fresh judgment, a fresh trial for everlasting life! How thankful we are that the Lord had mercy upon us, and provided the redemption from the original sin and its death penalty, giving us thus an opportunity of a fresh trial or judgment at the hands of our Redeemer.

GOD HAS APPOINTED A DAY

How fully in accord with the foregoing is the apostle's declaration that God hath appointed a day in the which He will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained the Christ, Jesus the Head, the Church His body. (Acts 17:31.) It would not have been appropriate that God should appoint a day for the judging of the world for the granting of a fresh trial for the world of mankind, to permit the willing and obedient to gain eternal life had it not been for the divine arrangement that through Christ the original sin should be atoned for and its sentence set aside. But that day has not yet come. The apostle speaks of it as future: it cannot come until its appointed time. It will be the "day of Christ" The Millennial day, a thousand years long. Hearken to the apostle's explanation, "A day with the Lord is as a thousand years." (2 Pet. 3:8.) This day of judgment is a day of the Lord, one of His own appointment, and for a great work it is none too long.

The Scriptures do indeed refer to that day as a very trying ordeal, but the minds of the Lord's people filled with the crude ideas from the "dark ages" fail to examine the word carefully enough respecting the character of the judgments of that day. When now we look at them carefully, discriminately, we find that the events of that day will be just such as we might reasonably expect in the program of the just and loving God and Savior. As the apostle pointed out, God has left the world very much to itself for several thousand years, not specially interfering either to reward or punish. Satan in the interim operating through the weakness of fallen humanity and deceiving mankind has imposed himself upon them as their god or ruler, whom unwittingly they serve. And he has imposed false doctrines too, defamatory of God and injurious to man, substituting the traditions of men for the word of grace and truth. For long centuries God has permitted Satan to wield vast influence in the world for evil not that He was unable to restrain the father of lies and to deliver the world from its bondage of ignorance and superstition and error, but because, so to speak, He uses Satan's power for evil as a great grindstone, in connection with which the Lord has not only been polishing His "jewels," His "little flock," but also to some extent been permitting the world to get lessons respecting the exceeding "sinfulness of sin," and the unsatisfactory wages every way which it brings. It will be because sin and error and falsehood and deceit have so long held power that the change which God intends to bring in will appear so radical and be so stoutly resisted, and bring in such terrible trials and difficulties upon the resisters.

The thousand-year day of judgment, will begin, according to the Scriptures, as a time of trouble which will involve the whole world, religiously, politically, financially, socially, “in a time of trouble such as was not since there was a nation” in such a shaking (Heb. 12:26) as will shake loose and utterly destroy everything that is evil or in sympathy with evil, injustice, untruth, etc. We need not stop to detail the awfulness of that time of trouble with which the day of judgment will begin whose types and figures were represented in the time of trouble upon the Jews and the overthrow of their polity, A. D. 69 and 70, and again later in the French revolution. These judgments upon the nations and systems, political, religious, civil, financial exposing, dashing to pieces and destroying may already be noticed as beginning in the world, and may be expected to reach a culmination of violence in eight years, according to our understanding of the Scriptures. Thank God, the judgment upon the nations will be short, as well as severe, and will accomplish the good designs of the Great Judge in humbling mankind and making them ready for the new institutions and arrangements of their personal judgment or trial of that thousand-year judgment day, which will then be beginning.

JUDGE THE WORLD IN RIGHTEOUSNESS

The apostle says that the world will be judged in righteousness justly, fairly, properly with a view to the blessing of all who will accept the instructions of that day and come into harmony with God, and with a view to the destruction in the second death of all who will reject the favors of that day of judgment. We want to get rid of the false conception of the day of judgment which has blinded and injured us from infancy that it would be a twenty-four hour day and simply signify a re-trial of the human family, the sending back to heaven or hell or purgatory whence they came of all the human family. No such penalty is taught in the Scriptures, but on the contrary the Lord’s people are bidden to rejoice in view of God’s glorious proposition that the world shall be granted a day of judgment. Harken to the words of the Prophet David, who exaltingly exclaims:

*“Let the heavens be glad
And let the earth rejoice;
And let men say among the nations,
Jehovah reigneth.
Let the sea roar and the fullness thereof;
Let the fields rejoice and all that are therein;
Then shall the trees of the woods sing aloud
At the presence of Jehovah;
Because he cometh to judge the earth.
O, give thanks unto Jehovah for he is good;
For His mercy endureth unto completion.”
—1 Chron. 16:31-34*

I wish that those of you who are Bible students would take your concordances and note how many Scripture passages refer to “in that day,” “in his day,” etc. You will find wonderful things predicted of that glorious day when God’s kingdom shall be established in the earth, when his reign of righteousness amongst the people shall be inaugurated. It will bring blessings of restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all the prophets since the world began to all those who obey the Word of the Lord in that time. It will bring chastisements to any of them who might be tardy in the learning of the proper lessons of life, and it will bring the second death to all others who willfully and deliberately reject the grace of God at the hands of him who redeemed us all. And the church of this Gospel age, the “very elect,” have been promised of the Master a share with himself in his throne, “in that day.” And it shall be a portion of their privilege to be the judges of the world, as it is written, “The saints shall judge the world.” 1 Cor. 6:2.

Let us now apply our text again, “The dead shall hear the voice of the Son of Man and they that hear shall live.” Not only the millions who at the inauguration of the kingdom will not yet have gone into the tomb, but also the millions who have already gone down into sheol, hades all these shall come forth, come forth to hear the words of the Son of Man, come forth to be judged, to be granted a trial under fair and favorable conditions of righteousness come forth to have the eyes of their understanding opened and the ears of their understanding unstopped, that they may hear and know distinctly the right from the wrong, and that they may demonstrate their characters by their acceptance or their rejection of him that speaketh to them from heaven.

THE HOUR COMETH AND NOW IS

We should not overlook this statement of our text, that the hour for the dead to hear the Son of Man is not only a coming one, but that to some it “now is.” Ah, yes! to this other Scriptures agree, saying, “Blessed are your ears if they hear and your eyes if they see.” Some, a comparatively few in the present time, have ears to hear and eyes to recognize the grace of God in Christ. These in the Scriptures are called the “elect,” the church of the first-born, etc. I trust that many in this audience are such as have heard the voice of the Son of Man. I trust further that these discourses, published weekly in some eight journals of large circulation, reach a considerable number of those who have heard the voice speaking from heaven. But there are two ways of hearing! The apostle speaks of some as forgetful hearers and of others as receiving the grace of God in vain, and he urges those who now are so fortunate as to hear the blessed message that they “refuse not him that speaketh from heaven.” Heb. 12:25.

The intimation of the apostle’s words is that to once hear the invitation of the Lord in a full and satisfactory sense, and to once repudiate his message with deliberation, would mean the full end of all privilege to such an individual would prove that under no circumstances would he be worthy of eternal life. True, the opportunities of the present time are less favorable in some respects than those that will obtain during the Millennium but in other respects the latter are much more favorable. The rewards of obedience in the next age will be granted human perfection by restitution processes eternal life as perfect human beings in a paradise restored. But the rewards of those who now hear, who now accept, who now follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth, walking in his footsteps, are by faith, and are explained by the Apostle Peter to be “exceeding great and precious,” and he assures us that it is the divine will that through their influence upon our hearts and lives we might become partakers of the divine nature, with its glory, honor and immortality. O, yes! we who now hear have wonderful blessings, wonderful privileges, which more than compensate and offset the disadvantages of opposition from the world, the flesh, and the adversary.

THEY THAT HEAR SHALL LIVE

Not only will it be true that hearing in the sense of obeying the Lord will bring the obedient of the world during the Millennial age up to the perfection of life at the close of the Millennium, but it is also true of those who now hear of the grace of God in faith and obedience. Indeed the operation now is much quicker than it will be for the world during the Millennium. We are reckoned as justified from our old sins and from all the blemishes that are ours through heredity, and from all the weaknesses that are not willingly ours and that we are striving against. Then we are permitted to present our bodies living sacrifices to the Lord and to receive the begetting of the Holy Spirit to a newness of life, and thenceforth, according to the Lord’s word, we are new creatures in Christ Jesus old things and the old nature have passed away and all things have become new. After we believed it was the work of a moment to make a full consecration of our hearts to the Lord and to receive the anointing and begetting of his Holy Spirit.

There the new life began not in its perfection, however. As new creatures we needed, as the apostle explains, the milk of the word that we might grow thereby; later on we needed the strong meat, that we might be strong in the Lord and in the power of his might, and that we might be overcomers, conquerors, fighting a good fight in our hearts, keeping the faith, and so far as possible keeping our bodies under or in subjection to the new mind, the new creature. Of these the Lord declares in the context that they have “everlasting life and shall not come into condemnation (judgment), but have already passed from death unto life.” (v. 24.) They will not come into the judgment of the world during the Millennial age, for by reason of hearing the voice of the Lord now and rendering obedience to that voice, they are already accepted to eternal life as new creatures. All that there is for them henceforth to do is to maintain their fidelity to the Lord and the principles of righteousness for which he stands, doing their very best to fight a good fight. All else pertaining to their interests the Captain of their salvation, the heavenly Bridegroom, will see to. For them he will provide the necessary trials and difficulties, giving meantime the necessary encouragements and joys, and will bring them off conquerors and more than conquerors through him who bought them with his precious blood.

*“A little while, our trials will be over;
A little while, our tears be wiped away;
A little while, the power of Jehovah Shall turn the darkness into gladsome day.”*

*“A little while! ‘Tis ever drawing nearer—
The brighter dawning of that glorious day.
Blessed Savior, make our spirit’s vision clearer,
And guide, O guide us in the shining way.”*

LO, I AM WITH YOU

Pastor C. T. Russell, of Allegheny, Pa., preached here twice to large and attentive audiences. We report his discourse, the text of which was Matt. 28:20. He said:

In our text we have one of the very last assurances that the Redeemer gave to His followers after His resurrection and prior to His morning Ascension. It has been a source of comfort to many of us in that it implies a protecting care on the Lord’s part over all the interests of all those who are truly His; and it has also been a source of protection to many as they have realized not only the Lord's power to see their difficulties and to deliver from them, but also His knowledge of their course in life their sins of omission and commission, their successes and their failures. Nevertheless many of the Lord's people have had perplexity in respect to how they should understand this promise. If it were a fact that the Lord really went away and promised that He would come again in the end of the age to receive His people to Himself, how could He be present with them always in the interim? If, as He said, He ascended to His Father and our Father, to His God and our God (John 20:17) how could it be that He could be always with us? If He sat down with the Father in His throne how could He be still with His people in the world? Moreover, how could He be with all of His people wherever two or three were not together in His name, as on another occasion He promised?

In order to comprehend intelligently and appreciatively these promises of the Lord we must have in mind the great change which He experienced in His resurrection. It was after His resurrection that He said to His disciples, "All power in heaven and in earth is given unto Me." It was after His resurrection that He appeared in their midst, the doors being shut, and later on vanished from their sight, the doors still being shut. It was after His resurrection that He appeared in various forms during lengthy intervals throughout the forty days between His resurrection and ascension. It doubtless caused the early disciples considerable confusion of thought at the time the words of our text were uttered. Nevertheless the Lord's words were fulfilled to them, that many of His parables and dark sayings while with them would be much better understood after Pentecost, after the holy spirit had been imparted to them. As the man, Christ Jesus our Lord, practiced no legerdemain He did not appear and vanish either frequently or even once. He was subject to the same laws and rules that govern other human beings, except as respects His exercise of the holy power committed to Him in governing sea, waves, disease, etc. The change which He experienced in resurrection explains the entire situation and prepares us to understand our text.

NOW THE LORD IS THAT SPIRIT

"There is a natural body and there is a spiritual body," wrote the apostle. (1 Cor. 15:44.) Our Lord was a spirit being in the beginning prior to the time when "He was made flesh and dwelt among us." (John 1:14.) During the thirty-three and a half years of His life He was a human being subject to the usual conditions of humanity except where, with the Father's sanction, He was the Finger of God, used the Holy Spirit, the holy power of God in the working of miracles; but in His resurrection from the dead another change occurred, transforming Him back again to the spirit plane of being. Thus the apostle explains the resurrection, saying, "Sown a natural body, raised a spiritual body; sown in weakness, raised in power." True, these words are used to describe the resurrection of the church, the body, the bride of Christ; but His assurance is also all who share in this first resurrection are sharing in His resurrection, and the change which thus comes to us as His members is merely an experience of what our Lord already enjoyed when the Father raised Him up by His own power. The Apostle refers to this again, saying: "Now the Lord is that spirit" He is a spirit being. (2 Cor. 3:17) The disciples called Him Lord and Master when in the flesh and they did well for so He was, and He is still the Lord and Master to all who are truly His, though now in a more glorious condition the heavenly. He did humble Himself and took the bondsman form for the "suffering of death," as the apostle assures us (Heb. 2:9), but Him hath God not only raised from the dead but highly exalted, not only to the spirit plane of being, but to the highest place in that plane making Him partaker of the divine nature, "far above angels, principalities and powers, and every name that is named. (Phil. 2:9,10)

OMNIPRESENCE IS UNSCRIPTURAL

We should guard ourselves against unscriptural thought in connection with our heavenly Father, our Lord Jesus and all the spirit beings. Someone long ago asserted of these that they were omnipresent; that is to say, spirit beings could be present everywhere at the same time. This unscriptural declaration has been fruitful of much confusion and error, and may safely, therefore, be attributed to our arch-enemy and adversary, the devil. It seemingly honors God, but in reality paves the way to His dishonor and to the confusion of His people. As an illustration of the confusion that may come from this false doctrine of the omnipresence of God and Christ and the angels note the absurdity built upon it by the theosophists, Christian Scientists and, to some extent, by others, errors to which those are liable who receive this doctrine of omnipresence as scriptural.

The argument as used by some of those referred to is that God is everywhere present, therefore, He is in this stone, He is in that piece of wood, He is in that piece of metal, He is in my body, He is in the horse or the sheep, He is everywhere. Such absurdity! Who could believe it, do you say? We Answer--that many people have twisted and warped their minds gradually to the acceptance of these absurdities. These now proceed to say, in what way is God in the wood, in the stones, in the iron, or in the trees, in the sheep or in the dog? and they Answer--their own question, saying, God merely signifies good, and in one sense of the word good is useful; hence, to say that God is in the wood is merely to say that there is something useful in that wood. It can either be used in the construction of buildings or furniture or as fuel, there is something good in it. The same way the argument applies to animals, metals, minerals; they are all good for something, and if good means God, then God is in them all.

If to some one this appears a harmless kind of error, let him not conclude that he is right without further investigation; he will then perceive that by the time he has reduced God to signifying merely good he has destroyed his conception of God as a being, as a personality. Or, if it be Christ that is thought of as being omnipresent, then the personality of Christ is thus blotted from the mind, and instead of God and of Christ we merely have principles of goodness and justice and love. What a fearful loss this is to any one who has ever had a personal God and a personal Savior. But it does not come in suddenly; that would be too shocking and would be repulsive. It comes in gradually. First, the absurdity of it is amusing; then an endeavor is made to see if we could get our minds to operate after the manner of those who reach this conclusion; and the next step is that the possibility of looking from the standpoint of another proves that that other standpoint is correct. Thus gradually, too, many lose their faith, not having any substitute whatever and indeed it is impossible to find a substitute for God and for a Savior.

RETURN UNTO THY REST, O MY SOUL

(Psa. 116:7)

Whenever through curiosity or any other reason our hearts or minds remove to any other foundation than that which is laid for us in the word of God, our entire Christian faith and its rest are more or less shaken. And this should alarm us, but our adversary is adroit, and we are handicapped by the errors received from the “dark ages” and by the subtlety of the argument that to deny the omnipresence of God would be to seriously dishonor Him; and thus some well-intentioned souls, not however from the class the Lord is specially selecting or electing now, wander from his pasture and care, neglecting the Shepherd’s voice. He will doubtless recover them in due time, but meantime how great their loss in connection with the privilege of this Gospel age, joint-heirship with their Lord, the heavenly Bridegroom. Only occasionally does one of the truly spirit-begotten sheep, thus neglecting the voice of the Shepherd, wander into these forbidden paths. We may be sure that the Shepherd will call after them in various ways, because they are His, and it is for them to hearken to the text we have quoted, “Return unto the Lord, O my soul, for He hath dealt bountifully with thee.”

Where else can we find such good nourishment, such refreshment, as in the word of God? Those who have tasted that the Lord is gracious, and who have come to any appreciation of His word, should very soon realize the emptiness of the error and should quickly seek for the old paths. What rest of heart could there be for any who once had real fellowship with the Lord as a person, and who have learned to know Him through His word and through His providences what rest could such have in the barren wastes of speculation, which teach that He is merely a good principle that may be found anywhere, in sticks, stones, beasts and birds and creeping things. "Return unto thy rest, O my soul." Rest thee in the precious promises of God's word; know Him as thy Father, and His glorious Son as thy Redeemer and Instructor; hearken to His voice, to be sanctified through His truth; make ready as the virgin bride of Christ for the nuptial feast, so long promised and to be enjoyed to the close of this age, when the elect shall all be completed and enter into the joys of their Lord, and with Him begin the great work of blessing the world uplifting it out of sin and death to all that was lost, to Eden and perfection and the image of God.

THERE AM I IN THEIR MIDST

Coming then to the Scriptural proposition that the Lord Jesus did personally ascend to the Father a spirit being, and that nevertheless He did promise to be with His disciples wherever they might meet in His name throughout this Gospel age, we inquire in what sense is He present with us? The Answer--comes from the Master's own words. He informs us that He and the Father take up their abode in the minds of those who are truly consecrated to the divine will. But how? The Answer--is by His spirit, which dwells in us. Here again confusion comes to many minds, and they say, "Yes, the Holy Spirit; but how can the Holy Spirit be in my heart and in the heart of another Christian on the other side of the globe and in the hearts of all Christians throughout the world? How can the Holy Spirit be everywhere present?" Their difficulty is that they think of the Holy Spirit, not as the Scriptures present the matter, but along the lines of the errors which were introduced into the church as early as the third century, but which are quite unscriptural. They think of the Holy Spirit as a person. Of course a person could not be in your heart and in my heart and in the hearts of all the Lord's people everywhere at the same moment; it is an absurdity to think so, and no Scripture gives any warrant for it.

What the Scriptures do tell us, and what we can understand and what we can appreciate as reasonable, is that the Holy Spirit is the spirit or influence or power of the Father and of the Son, and this power or influence we can readily see can be exerted by the Lord everywhere. When we think of the meaning of the word spirit in the Greek, pneuma and that it signifies that which is powerful but invisible, we can see why angels are called spirits and why God Himself is declared to be a spirit, and how the Lord Jesus is called a spirit because all of these have power but are invisible to men. But the word spirit has still further reaching signification; it applies to any influence or power proceeding from any human being or a spirit being, because that power or influence is invisible. Thus, for instance, the Truth has power over the minds of men and thus over their conduct; hence it is spoken of as the spirit of Truth, the power of the Truth. So we read of the spirit of man, the power or influence of a man; so we read of the spirit of life, the power or energy of life, and again we read of the spirit of a sound mind, or a well-balanced disposition or judgment. These are illustrations of the Scriptural use of the word spirit; and we find on the other hand that the same word spirit, with the same meaning, is used in an evil sense, as, for instance, the spirit of wickedness, the spirit of sloth, the spirit of evil, the spirit of deceit, the spirit of dishonesty, the spirit of untruth, the spirit of the devil.

As there can be a spirit or power or influence exercised by man upon his fellow men and upon the lower animals, is it unreasonable to believe that the Great Creator, Himself a spirit being of the highest order, is able to exercise an influence upon the hearts of men through the Truth, or through a thousand agencies or channels which He may use? And would not this influence or power proceeding from God be, like Himself, holy? And is it not therefore properly called the Holy Spirit, the spirit of the Father? And since the Son is in full accord with the Father, is it not appropriate that we read that the spirit proceeds from the Father and from the Son? And can we not distinguish between this power and influence exerted by the Father and the Son upon us and by a spirit being? We can see how this influence can be exerted throughout the whole world upon all of the Lord's people everywhere and at one time, but it would be monstrously unreasonable to ask anyone to believe that a spirit being could be present in all hearts, in all minds, the world over.

THE PARAKLETOS THE COMFORTER

It will be remembered that our Lord, consoling His disciples, promised that after He had ascended to the Father He would send them the Holy Spirit, which would comfort them and be with them as His representative. His words are: "I will not leave you comfortless; I will come unto you." Hence the Holy spirit in the Lord's people is to them instead of the Lord Himself throughout this Gospel age. And what comfort they have received! What a blessing! What rest of heart! Not through having a person, or trying to believe in such an impossibility as that a person should be in each one and everywhere at once, but with the right understanding that this spirit or power or energy from the Lord Jesus is with us for our comfort, guidance and edification. What beauty and simplicity we find in this message from the Word.

While day by day the world, as represented by scientists, is finding what it considers to be natural laws governing the universe, which to them do away with the necessity for a God, the Lord's people, on the contrary, are finding in these same modern discoveries fresh evidences of the truthfulness of the Lord's Word and fresh help in understanding the modus operandi by which the Lord fulfills His gracious promises. For instance, a very few years ago the electric telegraph was unknown; yet today through a little wire a current may be sent which will communicate thought to the end of the world. If man with his limited energy and capacity can be guided by the Lord to the use of such a power in such a marvelous manner, shall we not say that the Great Creator Himself could do as much, and far more? If today, by the use of the telephone, we can speak to a little hole in the wall in our private room and communicate with a friend miles away in a private room without another ear to hear, shall we say that God, who arranged all the laws of nature, has no power to communicate with His people? Coming to the marvelous wireless telegraphy, we see in it something that still better illustrates the power of God through the Holy Spirit to communicate with, to cheer, to comfort, to assist, to direct as He may please any and all of His people anywhere, everywhere. Let us then appreciate rightly the meaning of the Lord's words that He will be with the twos and threes, that His Holy Spirit would comfort them, that this power from the Father would be a blessing to them during the period of His absence.

Is it asked, why then was it necessary that Jesus should leave His people and go to the Father before the holy spirit should come? We Answer--that such a delay would not have been necessary if the holy spirit were a person, but was necessary because the holy spirit is an influence, a power, from the Father and from the Son. To get the matter before our minds let us remember that mankind had been ostracized by his Creator, cut off from fellowship and placed under a curse or sentence of death because of sin. Let us remember that God had so arranged the matter that He could not deal with any of the race as sons and adopt them by His holy spirit until after they had been redeemed by the precious blood of Jesus. Let us remember that it was not only necessary that Christ should die for our sins, but as the scriptures explain it was then necessary that He should ascend on high to the presence of God, there to present on our behalf the merit of His sacrifice. It was as a result of this presentation that the forgiveness was granted to all those who believed, and who turned from sin, and who have consecrated themselves irrevocably to the Lord as members of the body of Christ. The holy spirit, or influence or power from the Father and from the Son was extended then at Pentecost first to these in this begetting sense, and since then the same spirit has still continued, with the church and was made available to all who in sincerity and truth turned from sin and in faith turned to Jesus, and in consecration presented their all to Him. These are inducted into the family circle, these come under the influence of the spirit of the truth, not only as it is presented to us in the word of God, but as it is communicated also by the various members of the body; and these coming into fellowship with the Lord, who have His approval, come under the special influence or power of the holy spirit as their comforter, their guide.

UNTO THE CONSUMMATION OF THE AGE

It was not merely to the disciples of our Lord's day that this promise was made, nor does it contain the thought that His second coming would be in a few days or months or years. We have quoted the marginal reading which we think is much to be preferred, since the word in the Greek here does not mean "world" in the sense in which we use that term today, but signifies epoch or period. Our Lord Himself intimated that there would be a gospel age, at the close of which He would come to gather His elect and to establish His kingdom, which He promised them they should share with Him, saying, "Fear not little flock, it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom (Luke 12:32); and again, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne" (Rev. 3:21); and again, "Pray ye, thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven." Matt. 6:10.

How gloriously this promise has been fulfilled all do not know. Only those who have taken the direct steps of faith and obedience and consecration, and who following these have received the begetting of the holy spirit only these have received the comfort, only these know of the joy and peace and blessing. Others, numbering amongst them many that are noble, many that are great, many that are well meaning, many that are wise according to the course of the world, could not testify on this subject, because they have not come under the conditions and have not received this blessing and have not had the presence of the Lord through His holy spirit. They are incompetent to testify in the matter, and should not repudiate the Lord's assurance of His presence and aid and comfort without testing the matter by obedience to his directions.

Moreover this appreciation of the spirit of the truth, the spirit of love, the spirit of the Father, the spirit of the Son, the holy spirit, the spirit of a sound mind, the spirit of wisdom, the spirit of sympathy with one another, the spirit of holiness, is a progressive work. As the apostle explains, we may be more and more filled with the spirit, filled with all the fullness of divine power, filled with more and more of the spirit of devotion and more and more with the spirit of holy joy and reverence and rejoicing in the Lord. Those who have not yet started considering the precious privilege of having the friend above all others, a companion ever near and ever dear, the supervisor of our interests, who according to His promise is working all things for our good. Let those who have already tasted that the Lord is gracious, drink still more deeply of His cup and be still more filled with His spirit of love and devotion and holiness. Yea, let us all appreciate more and more the benevolence of our heavenly Father and our Lord in the wonderful arrangement He has made for us during this period of our schooling and instruction and preparation for the glorious place in the kingdom to which He has called us as His bride and joint-heirs, that we may thus be qualified and prepared to extend the blessing of his spirit of holiness and truth eventually to all the families of the earth.

HE ASCENDED UP ON HIGH

Pastor C. T. Russell preached to his home congregation in Carnegie hall today on "The Ascension of Christ." His text was, "When he ascended up on high he led captivity captive and gave gifts unto men" (Eph. 4:8).

The anniversary of our Lord's Ascension falls in this week on Thursday next. After his resurrection the Lord remained for forty days with his apostles, instructing them before he ascended. His instructions, however, consisted largely of the experimental lessons he gave his apostles rather than in particular words. So far as the record shows, he was seen altogether eight times during those forty days, and apparently only for a few moments on each occasion. No lengthy discourses are recorded, no detailed explanations excepting on the day of his resurrection, when walking with the two disciples to Emmaus, as a stranger, he expounded unto them the Scriptures, showing the necessity for Christ's death and his resurrection on the third day. On the other occasion he seems to have been intent upon allowing them to draw certain inferences from the manner in which he made himself known. He identified himself as the same Jesus, who but a few days before had companied with them, eating, sleeping, discoursing, as had been his custom throughout the three and a half years of his ministry. But now, since his resurrection, they were to learn that the same Jesus had somehow changed, and, like the angels, were present with them frequently, yet invisible, and appearing from time to time only as some necessity would make a manifestation expedient. Thus they were to learn and did learn that their Master was no longer dead but alive, and that he was no longer a human being, but a spirit being, clothed with powers which were exercised by the holy angels throughout the Jewish dispensation, namely, the power to appear as men in a body of flesh and clothing as others.

If it is argued that so long a delay as forty days was unnecessary to give such practical instructions and illustrations, we reply that the Lord did not so consider the matter, and that even we can see the necessity for all that was done. The majority of the instances of manifestation were at the beginning of the forty days, one-half of them on the resurrection day, three of the appearances being near the close of the forty days, it follows that during the majority of the forty days the disciples had no communication with our Lord whatever. Evidently his intention was that the novelty of the matter should wear off, and that he would be with them to establish and start them afresh upon the new lines to be pursued from Pentecost onward. The result of their having no communication with him for so long a time is seen in the fact that the disciples began to go back to the ordinary pursuits of life, Peter, James and John, in organizing their old fishing business. This gave the Lord the opportunity of manifesting himself to them, again showing his power to either give or withhold prosperity in their fishing enterprises or other pursuits, and gave the further opportunity of instructing them that they should feed his sheep and his lambs, and in general continue the work which his ministry had merely begun, and which would be more effective in the future than in the past because of his sacrifice and because he ascended to the Father to present that sacrifice on behalf of those who already believed and on behalf of all who would subsequently believe, and to pour out upon his consecrated followers the holy Spirit, the Comforter, to guide them in all the journey of life and to direct them in his service.

HE WAS PARTED FROM THEM

Having finally accomplished all that was necessary in the way of their preparation for the future, and having instructed them to tarry at Jerusalem, there to await the outpouring of the holy Spirit upon them as his qualifying power for their ministry in his name, our Lord led them to the Mount of Olives, blessed them, and in the act gradually disappeared upward, a cloud receiving him out of their sight. We are not from this to understand that Jesus took a body of flesh and bones to heaven. On the contrary, the Scriptures distinctly state that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God. We are to remember the change which our Lord experienced in his resurrection, and that it was similar to the one which his faithful followers will experience in their resurrection, of which the apostle says, it is sown in weakness, it is raised in power; it is sown an animal body, it is raised a spiritual body. We are to remember that our Lord was thus raised a spirit being, and that "now the Lord is that Spirit" (2 Cor. 3:17).

We are in our minds to associate this with his appearing and disappearing during the forty days, his demonstrations that he was no longer a man, subject to human conditions, but that he was a spirit being, who could come and go like the wind, as he had previously explained to Nicodemus (John 3:8), and that as spirit beings in times past had appeared as men and as a flaming fire in a burning bush, so our Lord had the power to appear in the flesh, sometimes in one form and sometimes in another; sometimes garbed after one manner and sometimes in another the gardener, the stranger, a sojourner, and sometimes in a body similar to the one which had been crucified, bearing the marks of the nails and spear-thrust. We are to remember that these bodies were organized at the moment that he materialized on the spot sometimes in the upper room and sometimes elsewhere. We are to remember that when he accomplished his purposes of instruction and illustration he vanished out of their sight, and the fact that the doors were shut neither hindered his coming or his going. Thus it will be with all of the church of the first born who will share in the first resurrection, as our Lord explained the wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh or whither it goeth; so is every one born of the Spirit. We are now begotten of the Spirit, but then we shall be born of the Spirit, and have spirit bodies, and in that respect be like unto the angels, able to go and come like the wind, invisible to men except as some manifestation shall be necessary or desirable.

So then when our Lord ascended gradually disappearing upward it was a further part of the great lesson He was teaching his disciples respecting his Ascension. How else could they have known that He had gone? How else could a great spiritual truth be taught to natural men? We are to remember that the apostles were still natural men because, as we read, "The holy spirit was not yet given, because Jesus was not yet glorified." (John 7:39.) Hence all the instructions given to the apostles were suited to them as natural men and as such are helpful to all natural men attempting to approach God before they have received the begetting of the holy spirit and the ability to understand spiritual things. We can see that the entire procedure of our Lord was designed as an assistance to the faith of the apostles and all who should afterward believe on Him through their word: We can see that no other method of instruction on this subject would have been so satisfactory, so conclusive. The body in which our Lord had appeared as He ascended in their sight and was received into the cloud was of course an earthly body in heaven. He did not need such a body before He was made flesh, and He did not need it now, since He had again been made a spirit being.

HE LED CAPTIVITY CAPTIVE

The apostle in our text is quoting the words of prophecy from Psa. 68:18, which reads, "Thou hast ascended on high; yea, for the rebellious also, that the Lord God might dwell among them." The apostle by inspiration applies these words to the Lord Jesus. He tells us that the gifts that were given, mentioned in the passage, were those conferred upon the church at Pentecost, the gifts of the holy spirit, and which as fruits of the spirit still continue with the Lord's consecrated people, His servants and handmaidens. We may discuss these gifts on the anniversary of Pentecost, but on this occasion let us look particularly at the captivity which Jesus led captive. What does this expression signify? Some have suggested that it means that He led his own captivity captive; that is to say, that He had been a captive in death and that His Ascension implied his victory over death. But this evidently is not the meaning intended by the apostle, whose thought rather is as expressed by some translators, "Ascending on high He led a multitude of captives and gave gifts to men." What captives? What multitude of captives? How and where?

In answering the question we are reminded of our Master's teachings, which are summed up in the statement of the prophet Isaiah, who likens the human family to prisoners and compares the tomb to a great prison house. Twice does the prophet declare the deliverance of these prisoners: He represents our Lord as saying, "He (Jehovah) hath sent me to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives and the opening of the prison to them that are bound." (Isa. 61:1) And again the prophet declares that Jehovah God gave Christ "to open the blind eyes, to bring out the prisoners from the prison house and them that sit in darkness out of the prison house." (Isa. 42:7.) Moreover we find that our Lord quoted at least one of these prophecies and applied it to himself and his own preaching, saying, "This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears." The essence of his preaching was the opening of the prison doors and setting at liberty the captives of sin and death. He repeatedly told that he had come into the world to seek and save that which was lost to give his life a ransom for the prisoners. He repeatedly emphasized the resurrection hope, the hope for release of the prisoners from the dungeon of death. He declared, "I am the resurrection and the life," "No man cometh unto the Father but by me" there could be no reconciliation to the Father and no recovery from death except through the Redeemer.

Hearken again to his words: "Marvel not at this; for the hour is coming in which all that are in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of Man and shall come forth; they that have done good unto the life resurrection; they that have done evil unto the resurrection by judgments." (John 5:28,29.) Here then we have the testimony of Jesus and the prophets respecting the great work he came into the world to accomplish the release of mankind from the bondage of sin and death. But the power to release could only be accomplished by our Lord's own death, only by becoming our Redeemer could he become our Deliverer. In his own words the key to hades, the right or power to open the prison house of death and to bring forth the prisoners, came into his possession by reason of his death. He bought us with his own blood, bought Adam and all of his posterity the world of mankind in general. Jesus Christ by the grace of God tasted death for every man, and the assurance of the scriptures is that in due time every man shall profit by this redemptive work each and all shall be set free from the bondage of sin and death and have opportunity to return unto the Lord and demonstrate their loyalty to him and his righteousness, and to attain again to all that was lost in Adam.

TIMES OF RESTITUTION

We are not to get the thought, however, that the Lord at his Ascension led up to heaven a multitude of captives who previously had been in death. The captives are still dead, they are still in the prison house. The time has not yet come for the Great Redeemer to fulfill toward the race the promised work of calling them from the tomb, an example, an illustration of his power to do which was given in the case of Lazarus and others. Not only do the Scriptures teach that the resurrection is to be accomplished at the second coming of Christ and that meantime our friends in general “sleep in Jesus,” waiting for the time when he shall call the prisoners forth from the tomb in the Millennial morning. If corroborative testimony on this point is desired by any, it is found in our Lord’s own words, “No man hath ascended up to heaven save he which came down from heaven.” (John 3:13) But still more, if possible, to the point is the testimony of St. Peter respecting the Prophet David, whom the Apostle Paul mentions as one of the ancient worthies who had God’s approval. St. Peter says, “David is not ascended to the heavens,” and he uses these words after our Lord had ascended up on high and after he had received the power of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost.

The entire testimony of the Scriptures agrees that the resurrection of the dead the resurrection of mankind from the power of sin and death to the original perfection lost in Eden does not belong to the present time, but to a future age following our Lord’s second advent. Mark the apostle’s words explanatory of these, uttered after our Lord had ascended on high. He says: “Times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord, and he shall send Jesus Christ, who before was preached unto you, whom the heavens must receive (retain) until the times of restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began.” Since, then, we see that Jesus did not take with him a multitude of captives of sin and death when he ascended on high, when we see that the time for their deliverance is still future, when we see that before their deliverance the church must be gathered and taught and chiseled and polished and refined and made ready for the first resurrection to be the bride, the lamb’s wife and associate in his Millennial kingdom and in its work of blessing the world when we see these clear teachings of the Scripture, we inquire what then is meant by the statement that “he led captivity captive,” or

LED A MULTITUDE OF CAPTIVES

We Answer--that the meaning is that the value of our Lord's death was the ransom price for Adam and all of his race, and hence, although none of these were then led forth from the tomb, nevertheless, he who redeemed them might properly be spoken of as the great Victor who had conquered the power of death and who had delivered the captives, since power to accomplish this delivery was to be secured through the merit of his sacrifice and the great work itself fully provided for, merely awaiting the convenience of the great Deliverer and the program which the Father had outlined in his great plan of the ages. In this prophetic sense our Lord's death and resurrection and Ascension meant the deliverance of the entire groaning creation from the bondage of sin and death in God's due time—"every man in his own order, Christ the first fruits, then they that are Christ's at his coming" his parousia, his second presence, during the Millennium.

Thus we see that the deliverance of the captives, the resurrection of the dead, is in the Lord's plan divided into classes every man in his own order or rank; one classification, the first classification, sometimes called the first resurrection, includes merely the church class, the elect, for it is written, "Blessed and holy are all they that have part in the first resurrection." Another classification is mentioned by the apostle in Heb. 11:39-40, where, having described the overcomers of the past, he says that "they without us shall not be made perfect, God having provided some better thing for us." In other words, the church of this Gospel age, the bride class, ranks first in the divine order of deliverance from the power of sin and death, and through the glorified Christ; the Ancient Worthies will subsequently be delivered from death to perfection of life on the earthly plane, and then every man in his own order, the residue of the world sleeping in death, in the prison house, will be delivered.

Not only will they be delivered from the unconscious condition of death, represented as a sleep but after being awakened the captives will be released. This was illustrated in the case of Lazarus. At the Lord's command Lazarus came forth, he was awakened, rescued from the prison, death, but he still was bound with the grave clothes, and our Lord instructed that they loose him and set him free. Similarly the world when awakened will still be under the bondage of weaknesses of the flesh as at present, and, it will be the work of the Millennial age to release these bonds and set fully free from the dominion of sin and imperfection all the members of Adam's race redeemed by the precious blood of Christ. Thank God that in that glorious epoch everything will be favorable to those whom the great Deliverer has purchased, and whom he is willing to make free indeed if they will but hearken to his commandments and avail themselves of the privileges which his kingdom will supply. The great enemy Satan will then be bound for a thousand years and be unable to injure or deceive and every influence surrounding them will be favorable, and the Lord's judgments everywhere present to chasten them for misdeeds and to reward and bless and uplift them in response to their good intention and good effort. Thus the actual leading forth of the multitude of captives, the twenty thousand millions of the human family gone down to the sleep of death, comes during the Millennial age to the vast majority of the race. As for those who will refuse to hear the voice of the great Deliverer refuses to obey him, we are clearly informed that their portion will be second death. We read, "It shall come to pass that every soul which will not hear the prophet shall be destroyed from among the people." Acts 3:23.

NOW YE ARE FREE

We have taken a general view of the divine work of rescuing the human family, but now come to a special feature whose provisions have been limited by the Lord. During this Gospel age some of these prisoners of sin and death have been delivered in a measure from their captivity. The church, believers, whose eyes and ears have been opened by the Lord's favor and who have seen and comprehended to some reasonable degree the message of divine mercy, in advance of its coming to the world, have passed from death unto life they are reckoned as having been delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the sons of God. (Rom. 8:21.) These, however, are still subject to the weaknesses and frailties of the mortal body and to the besetments of the world, the flesh and the adversary. Only in the spirit of their minds do they readily enter into the joys of their Lord now. They, too, must wait until the dawning of the Millennial morning, but they have the promise that "shall help her right early in the morning." Psa. 46:5.

We perceive that now we are free to the extent that we possess knowledge and faith and exercise these; we are legally free, though actually still bound with the bondage of corruption, as the Apostle declares, "We cannot do things that we would." Our ground for rejoicing by faith is that God is reckoning us and dealing with us, not according to the imperfections of our imperfect bodies, but according to the perfection of our new minds. If the new mind is loyal to him, in other words, if we are pure in heart, pure in intention, in endeavor, we may be sure that he, who has begun the good work in us will complete it, and he has informed us that the time of its completion will be in the First Resurrection, when we shall be made like him and share his glory and see him as he is. Meantime he that hath this hope in him, he who is thus set free, he who realizes that God is counting him not according to the flesh but according to the spirit, will surely purify himself to the extent of his ability, even as he recognizes the perfect pattern of the Lord as the standard for all those who are seeking to walk in his steps.

The release that has come to us is very different from the one which will come to the world. Theirs will be an actual release, though of gradual accomplishment, as each shall come to a knowledge of the Lord and to obedience in harmony with that knowledge; each shall have divine assistance upward and onward, out of the sin and death conditions at present prevailing in his body and will step by step attain all that is meant by the Apostle when he speaks of the glorious liberty of the sons of God, into which he assures us the entire groaning creation shall be delivered all who desire this inestimable blessing. All others, according to the divine provision, are to be cut off in the second death.

THE ANTITYPICAL PENTECOST

Pastor C. T. Russell, of Allegheny, Pa., preached here twice today. In the afternoon in Tremont Temple an immense audience heard him, while many were unable to gain admission. His topic was "The Overthrow of Satan's Empire." We report his evening discourse, delivered in Berkeley hall, from the text, "When the day of Pentecost was fully come they were all with one accord in one place... and they were all filled with the Holy Spirit". (Acts 2:14) He said:

Upon this, the anniversary of Pentecost, it will not be inappropriate that we examine into the significance of the great event which, more than eighteen centuries ago, started the gospel church, inaugurated the Gospel dispensation. Let us, therefore, inquire of the word the significance of the event in type and antitype. The type was connected with the Jewish system of Sabbaths. The Jubilees could be observed only in their own land, the day and year might be observed anywhere, even when they were in the land of their enemy, in captivity. The year Sabbaths were each seventh year, and when a multitude of these had been reached, seven times seven years, the cycle of forty-nine years was followed by a great Sabbath year or fiftieth, called the jubilee, which to the Jew meant a time of restitution, freedom, a returning from servitude, the reuniting of the homes and families of those who had fallen into debt and had been scattered in consequence. It meant a return to the original patrimony, inheritance in the land, for nothing could be sold or invested in any manner in the fiftieth year. That year everything must be returned to its former estate. Thus the Lord in these year

Sabbaths typified the great Millennial epoch, the Sabbath of the Lord referred to by the Apostle Peter in his sermon on the day of Pentecost as “times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began” (Acts 3:21). The antitype of that jubilee year has not yet fully come, but to our understanding is nigh, even at the door. That will be the great rest time, when the whole world shall have rest from the power of sin and Satan the latter being bound that he may deceive the nations no more until the thousand years are ended. What a glorious rest time that will be!

The day Sabbath observed by the Jews had a similar cycle. The seventh day multiplied by seven made the cycle of forty-nine days from the time of the offering of the sheaf of first fruits in the beginning of their year; and the day following that cycle, namely, the fiftieth day, was intended to mark the fulfillment of the Sabbath cycle. The Israelites observed the type year by year, yet knew not what to expect as the antitype of the sheaf of the first fruits and the antitype of the Pentecost or the fiftieth day. We on this side of the fulfillment can discern most clearly their fulfillments. The waving of the sheaf of the first fruits represented most beautifully the resurrection of our Lord and his presenting before God as the first fruits from the dead—" the first fruits of them that slept" (1 Cor. 15:20). Fifty days from the time of our Lord's resurrection brought together the early church in harmony with our Lord's direction, in anticipation of some gracious blessing on the fiftieth day. And that blessing came in the outpouring of the holy Spirit, the influence of which has prevailed in the blessing of all who become members of the same body of Christ all who have come under the same anointing of the holy Spirit.

This seal of the holy Spirit brings to the hearts of true believers the true rest of faith, typified by the Sabbaths of natural Israel. Speaking of this class the apostle says, “We who believe do enter into rest” we enter into this rest of faith in Christ and his finished work as the remedy for our guilt and the basis of our reconciliation with the Father as attested by the begetting of his holy Spirit. All such as have entered this antitypical Sabbath keeping have experienced the peace of God which passeth all understanding ruling in their hearts.

Theirs is a perpetual Sabbath, seven days in every week, fifty-two weeks in every year all of their time is consecrated to the Lord, to be used according to the direction in his word, and his peace and rest is in the soul, whatever may be the turmoil or disturbances or labors of the mortal body incident to the necessities and duties of the present life. This Sabbath in the soul can be kept anywhere, at home or abroad, in prosperity, in adversity, yea, in the enemy's country, under the prince of this world. Nevertheless all who have this Sabbath in the soul are still waiting for the perfect rest, complete rest, that remains for the people of God, which is to be entered into, not merely by faith, but actually when they shall have experienced their actual change in the first resurrection.

THE TWO WAVE LOAVES

In the type, Pentecost marked the time for a special offering before the Lord of two wave loaves the first bread made from the new crop of wheat, the “first-fruits unto the Lord.” As the sheaf of the first-fruits represented the Lord himself in his resurrection, so these two loaves made from the first-fruits of the harvest represented the church presented to the Lord in consecration and accepted by him on that first antitypical Pentecost day the Divine acceptance of their consecration being indicated by the outpouring of the Holy Spirit. It will be observed that these two loaves were not unleavened but leavened. Leaven in the Scriptures signifying sin, impurity, implies the natural impurity of those who constitute this first-fruits offering unto the Lord. As the apostle expressed it, “We are all by nature children of wrath, even as others”. (Eph. 2:3.) The transformation of our hearts and characters in God’s sight is effected through the merit of our Redeemer, and is represented in this type by the baking of these loaves, which thoroughly stopped the leavening process and destroyed it.

Those who, in harmony with the Lord’s direction, gathered in that upper room on Pentecost day more than eighteen centuries ago represented the whole church of this Gospel age. And the two loaves signify two classes amongst the Lord’s people, just as the two goats of Atonement day represented the same. These two loaves and two goats do not represent true and false Christians; the false are not included the tares are not wheat in any sense of the word. It is amongst the wheat that there are two classes designated in the Scriptures as the “little flock” and the “great company.” The little flock, we remember, are styled elsewhere, the “body,” the “bride,” and have the promise of sitting with the Lord in his throne and of constituting his future glorious temple, in and through which all the blessings of the world should be ministered for the benefit of the world during the Millennium. The Great Company, on the contrary, we are told will be before the throne and serve God in his temple after they shall have come through great tribulations; these will be the “virgins,” the bride’s “companions,” who will follow her. (Psa. 45:14; Rev. 7:9.) We see then that the two classes represented in these two loaves, in which the leaven had been destroyed by the baking, and which were waved before the Lord on Pentecost, represented all the saved of this Gospel age—“a kind of first-fruits unto God of his creatures.”

UPON MY SERVANTS AND HANDMAIDENS

The Apostle Peter, explaining to the people and to the disciples the meaning of the Pentecostal blessing, was guided by the Holy Spirit to tell them that what they had witnessed was a part of that which the Prophet Joel had foretold, saying, "It shall come to pass after those days, saith the Lord, that I will pour out my spirit upon all flesh, but in those days I will pour out my spirit upon my servants and handmaidens." (Joel 2:28-29; Acts 2:17-18.) Although the prophet's statement is plain enough when once our eyes of understanding are opened to its meaning, nevertheless the statement is in such form as to be easily misunderstood by the casual reader. And no doubt it was put in the very form in which we have it with the very intention on God's part that it should be misunderstood in considerable degree up to the present time up to the time of its complete fulfillment. The meaning of the passage is veiled by the statement of the blessing in reverse order from that in which its fulfillment will come. This is proper enough, too, because the great plan of God is the blessing and salvation of the world in general, and although the salvation of the church is to a higher salvation, to be on a higher plane, to glory, honor and immortality, this comes as a step or means to the accomplishment of the great salvation of the world. Hence it was proper enough to point out the blessing of the world first; after certain days after the days or epoch of this Gospel age. And it was proper enough to state subsequently that during these days of the Gospel age the Lord will pour out his Spirit upon his servants and handmaidens. The smoke of the "dark ages" beclouded our vision as respects the world in general. The false theology then foisted upon the church, to the effect that all mankind were to be eternally tormented except the elect church, had the effect of blinding the eyes of our understanding to the meaning of many beautiful promises of God's Word, this one amongst the others. How plainly the matter now appears to our opened eyes of understanding! During this Gospel age God has poured out his Holy Spirit upon his servants and upon his handmaidens upon all mentioned by our Lord in the words, "Blessed are your eyes for they see, and your ears for they hear." All of these, as God's servants and handmaidens, have been privileged during this Gospel age to enjoy his favor perpetual Sabbath, perpetual rest of heart in the Divine favor, love and mercy in Christ Jesus, as well as a knowledge of and trust in the exceeding great and precious promises to be fulfilled in the first resurrection, when we shall enter into the "rest that remaineth for the people of God." Heb. 4:9.

POUR SPIRIT UPON ALL FLESH

But nothing would be more out of harmony with the teaching of God's word than to say that God had poured out His Holy Spirit upon all flesh during this Gospel age or at any time in the world's history. To understand this promise we must note carefully that the church is to receive its blessing in these days of favor and the world its blessing after these days of this Gospel age. It has become proverbial that truth is stranger than fiction, and so today notwithstanding the various declarations of God's word that He so loved the world while we were yet sinners as to provide a ransom for all; and notwithstanding the further declaration that Christ is yet to be the true light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world; and notwithstanding the scriptural promises of a Millennium of blessings, when the knowledge of the Lord will fill the earth as the waters cover the great deep, when the sun of righteousness will shine into every nook and corner and drive away all darkness and sin, and when God through His appointed representative, Christ, and His glorified church, will wipe away all tears from off all faces, and when he whose right it is shall take unto Himself His great power and reign, and subdue all things into harmony to the Father's will, Satan himself being bound and eventually destroyed notwithstanding all these things, how slow our hearts have been to believe these testimonies.

How prone we have been to believe Satan's miserable misrepresentation of the Divine character, in which he pictures our glorious Maker as a very fiend, plotting and designing man's eternal torture even before He created our first parents! It is in view of these delusions from the "dark ages" that any have difficulty in seeing that it would be just like the Heavenly Father to provide in Christ, not merely for the election of a little flock of the church to be the royal priesthood of the future, but just like Him to provide also the times of restitution and blessing for the world. It would be just like Him to provide for His servants and handmaidens during this Gospel age the Holy Spirit to guide, help, bless and instruct them, and it would be just like Him, too, that eventually, under favorable conditions of the Millennial day, He should pour out His Holy Spirit upon all flesh, and bring all mankind to know in deed and in truth the love of God which passeth all understanding that thereby they might be rescued through faith and obedience to God's appointed representatives.

The perplexing feature to some lies in the fact that "those days" of the prophetic statement have lasted so long--more than eighteen centuries. But we must remind all that from God's standpoint such a period is but a little while, because "a day with the Lord is as a thousand years." (2 Pet. 3:8.) A little while and our trials will be ended. A little while and God's royal priesthood will all have been anointed and instructed and every way qualified for their great work of ministering truth and grace, wisdom, love and power to all the families of the earth for their uplift from the conditions of sin and death, that they may come back into fellowship with God through our Lord Jesus Christ.

This glorious prospect for the world becomes more and more interesting to us as we look at it, and in proportion as we have the Lord's Spirit, the Holy Spirit of fervent love for God and all of His wonderful arrangements, and of fervent love for our fellow man, loving them as ourselves and desiring their blessing. As we realize these blessings God has in store for the human family, and which are to be poured out upon all flesh at the second advent of Christ and the establishment of His kingdom, we pray with increasing fervency, "Our Father, which art in heaven.... Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven." Yea, and on our own accounts also we pray this prayer for the establishment of that kingdom according to the gracious promises of the word, our exaltation to glory, honor and immortality at the right hand of our Lord, the bridegroom as His joint-heirs upon His throne.

WHAT THE OUTPOURING SIGNIFIES

All language is more or less figurative even when it is literal. When we read of the pouring out of the Holy Spirit, and remember that those who received it are spoken of as anointed with the Holy Spirit, typified in the type by the outpouring of the holy, sacred, perfumed oil, we get before our minds the picture evidently intended of the Lord. The apostle, writing to some who had received the Holy Spirit, said, "Ye have an unction (an oiling, lubricating, anointing) from the Holy One." The Holy Spirit poured upon the church at Pentecost signified to them God's peace, blessing, favor. The apostle Peter explains that this favor came to the church from her Lord, and that it was a sign or indication that He had completed for her the work of atonement, reconciliation, and that the Holy Spirit signified that the Father not only no longer condemned the servants and handmaidens as sinners because of Adam's transgression, but on the contrary, having forgiven them their sins, He had now anointed them with His Spirit, communicated to them His blessing, recognized them as in a special sense His children by the adoption which is in Christ Jesus.

The apostle's words are, "This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we all are witnesses. Therefore being by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Spirit, He hath poured forth this, which ye now see and hear." (Acts 2:33.) So far as God was concerned, He was now prepared to give to each of these accepted sons all the elements of His own character His Holy Spirit, His Holy disposition, the Spirit of the truth, the Spirit of love, etc. It remained for each of His servants and handmaidens thus adopted into His family to appropriate the Spirit, and the measure of their appreciation and their zeal would mark the increase of their capacity to receive it. They were to be filled with the Spirit; they were to be energized and to be filled more and more with the various Divine characteristics. This was not accomplished in the moment of the blessing, but was gradually approximated as the days and months and years rolled by, and as they with earnestness and desire sought to grow in grace, to grow in knowledge, to grow in love and all the fruits of the Spirit of the Lord.

A similar promise of the outpouring of the spirit upon all flesh signifies that the time will come that the world will no longer be dealt with as aliens and foreigners, but will be brought right to God. Is it asked, what more could be done by mankind that is now being done to bring them nigh to God? We answer, much more, very much more. God is not attempting now to “reconcile the world,” “all flesh.” His appointed time for that work is the Millennial age: Then, at the hands of the glorified Christ, know the Lord, for all shall know him from the least to the greatest of them. Then, as we have seen, Satan will be bound, and instead of evil agencies of corruption and degradation being at work all these shall be restrained, and the works of righteousness and truth shall prevail; and the contrasting picture given in the word is that as now darkness covers the earth and gross darkness the people (Isa. 60:2), then the Sun of Righteousness will arise with healing in his beams, and not a nook or corner of darkness will remain. The present darkness is permitted in order to the election, selection, of the special class that the Lord is now calling, who are required to walk in the dark, to walk by faith and not by sight to demonstrate their faith and their zeal by laying down their lives in the Divine service and for the brethren while even the eyes of their understanding can see only in part the Divine program.

The pouring out of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost came upon those who exercised faith unto consecration, but the outpouring of the Holy Spirit in the future will come as the result of a knowledge leading to obedience to God. When full knowledge shall prevail the same degree of faith that is now recognized will be impossible, and hence the reward of faith will no longer be open, but the reward of obedience to life and to knowledge will be granted, and that reward of obedience will be the imparting of the Holy Spirit, the Spirit of God, the Spirit of wisdom, the Spirit of a sound mind, the Spirit of the truth, the Spirit of love to all flesh. And it will come to pass, saith the Lord, that the soul that will not hear, will not heed, that glorious message, that glorious opportunity, and who will still prefer sin and disobedience despite his knowledge, will be cut off from amongst the people in the second death. Acts 3:23.

As the pouring out of the Holy Spirit now and its reception by the servants and handmaidens depends upon their energy in accepting and coming into harmony with it and as this harmony is a gradual development year after year, growing in grace, so with the world during the Millennial age. Throughout that glorious epoch, as the light of the knowledge of God is received into good and honest hearts, and as endeavor is made to obey the Divine message, grace, strength will gradually more and more come in, the hearts of men will more and more, be enlarged, until by the close of the Millennial age every true and loyal one of Adam's race--everyone appreciating God and desiring to do his will and to enjoy his favor and eternal blessing shall have had full opportunity for return to all that was lost of the Divine character likeness full perfection, physical, mental and moral. Consider how glorious will be the results of that pouring out of the Holy Spirit upon all flesh, how grand the consummation, when all sin shall have been blotted out, when all tears shall have been wiped from off all faces, when all the stains and imperfections of sin shall be eradicated, and every face and human form shall be perfect, radiant, in the Divine character-likeness and the joys of the Lord!

But while it is strengthening and refreshing and every way blessed for us to contemplate the Divine program respecting the future blessing of the world, let us not forget our own share therein; let us not forget that only as we become true servants and true handmaidens of the Lord and his cause that we can have a share in the blessing which he is now pouring out upon these only. Let us not forget that our share will be proportionate to our love and appreciation and our zeal and that therefore it should be the desire and aim of each one who has tasted of the grace of God to be filled with the spirit, the spirit of joy, peace, the Holy Spirit, the spirit of love. Let us labor and pray to this end, not only on our own behalf, but also on behalf of all others, even so many as the Lord our God hath called as many as are seeking to make their calling and election sure.

THE PRECIOUS BLOOD

Pastor C. T. Russell, of Allegheny, Pa., preached twice here today. The "Hyterion" was crowded to hear his defense of the Bible entitled "To Hell and Back." They gave him the closest of attention for two hours. We report the morning discourse on "The Precious Blood of Christ" from the text, "Of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and hath counted the blood of the covenant with which he was sanctified, a common thing, and hath done despite unto the spirit of grace?" (Heb. 10:29). The speaker said:

The time was, and not very long ago, either not fifty years ago when practically every orthodox minister believed and taught the necessity of the blood of Christ, and also the necessity for faith in his blood, as a condition for justification from sin and acceptance before God. But all this has changed, so that today, alas, very rarely indeed is the precious blood of Christ referred to in the pulpits of Christendom. Three conditions have influenced this change:

First Infidelity, masked under the title of the higher criticism, has really abrogated all the teachings of the Bible, and they merely use it as a text-book because a considerable measure of reverence for the Bible still exists amongst the "common people." Higher criticism and evolution theories have no use or place for the precious blood or any kind of sin atonement. The very suggestion of it angers them, for are they not all taught in the modern colleges and seminaries that the Bible records are old wives' fables, that man was created but one remove from the image and likeness of a monkey, and that now since he is higher than the monkey he could not have fallen downward but must have been falling upward to attain his present degree of intelligence.

Second Another class, who still hold somewhat to the Bible, have nevertheless been tainted by the higher critical theories until they are ashamed of the typical sacrifices of the Jews, and correspondingly ashamed of the antitypical sacrifice of Christ. Under what they consider to be the higher and nobler views of the subject, they claim that God, like ourselves, would have no right to insist upon justice, but would be obligated to exercise love and mercy, and hence that the intimations of the Scriptures that Jesus fulfilled the requirements of justice on our behalf as our sin offering are contrary to their esthetic ideas on the subject, and hence imply that they have attained a higher degree of religious perception and development than had the prophets, the apostles and Jesus himself.

Third The third class still hold to the Scriptures more fully than either of the foregoing, but have ceased to make special reference to the blood of Christ, the death of Christ, as man's redemption price, because they cannot explain it in harmony with an error in their creed, which, though unscriptural and contrary to wisdom and justice and love, they consider to be the very foundation of their faith namely, the doctrine of eternal torment. They say that if Christ died in our room and stead, if he paid our penalty and suffered for us, the "just for the unjust," either the penalty upon us was not eternal torment and Jesus did not pay it for us, or else his blood, his sacrifice, his death, was not our ransom price. Perceiving the conflict between the two theories these dear friends are perplexed, and unfortunately make the mistake of holding to the error of eternal torment as the penalty of sin, and thus continue their confusion of thought and fail to see that death was the penalty pronounced against Adam and his race, and that this was the very penalty which Jesus met on our behalf when he "died for our sins."

THROUGH FAITH IN HIS BLOOD

We appeal, dear friends, not to passion, prejudice or even reason on this subject, for how can you and I attempt to reason with the Almighty except as we receive our ideas of right and truth from His revelation. Those who attempt to reason with God and base their arguments on their own ignorance display their folly, and hence the scriptures declare that the wisdom of the world is foolishness with God, and likewise that the wisdom of God is foolishness with the world.

Accepting the divine revelation as our standard we find that everywhere the Lord declares, both in precept and in type, that without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sins, and looked at from the Bible standpoint the philosophy of this is easily perceived. God proposes to maintain the justice of His laws and regulations and government, and in order to prevent interference with these He has planned penalties. The penalty upon our race was clearly stated at the beginning that disobedience would bring death. God is not prepared to violate His word, to abrogate His law, to clear the guilty. He declares that He could not be just and do so, and that justice is the very foundation of His throne. He shows us that the way, the only way, in which He can release our race from its sentence of death and grant it any opportunity for a future life is through the provision of a ransom a substitute.

Fortunately our entire race was judged in father Adam, and it is his sentence that has passed upon us all, reckoned as his members. Hence only one sacrifice of one individual was necessary as a ransom, only a perfect man could have redeemed father Adam; but no perfect man could be found, since the entire race were of but one blood and all had shared in Adam's death sentence and its degradation, mental, moral and physical. Hence the prophet declares, "None could give to God a ransom for his brother." (Psa. 49:7.) It was here that divine wisdom and love found an opportunity for special manifestation. The Only Begotten of the Father and chief of all the heavenly hosts was tendered first the opportunity of becoming man's Redeemer and receiving from the Father an exceeding great reward and exaltation. Prompted by love for the Father, the spirit of obedience, and a sympathy for mankind, the offer was at once accepted, and he who was the beginning of the creation of God left his high estate, took the nature of man and was made flesh and dwelt among us, consecrating, sacrificing His life, and finishing the sacrifice at Calvary, the Just One for the unjust, that He might have the right to bring Adam and his race back from death-and-sin conditions into full harmony with God.

THE BLOOD OF THE COVENANT

The scriptures explain to us that the blood stands for or represents life, and consequently the shedding of blood represents death. Thus blood or any symbol of it represents death as for instance, when our Lord passed the wine at the last memorial supper and said: "This is my blood." He signified, This is my life, yielded up, sacrificed. Blood did not represent the life which our Lord set aside when He left the glory of the Father. No! in that condition he was a spirit being; blood represents the human life surrendered, "This is my blood shed for many for the remission of sins, therefore, signifies, This represents the earthly life which I have given up as a redemption price of Adam for his transgressions, effective toward him and all his posterity. Let is not be overlooked that our Redeemer states most positively that His life was given up, His blood shed, in order to make the remission of our sins; and that this implies what the apostle clearly states that without the shedding of blood there could be no remission. Heb. 9:22

The death of Christ is spoken of as the blood of everlasting covenant and the blood of the new covenant. The everlasting covenant was the one made with father Abraham and confirmed by the oath of the Almighty, to the attainment of which Abraham was obliged to shed the blood of the typical sacrifices. (Gen. 15:9,10.) The sealing of that covenant with the blood of Christ making it effective toward himself as the seed of Abraham and toward His church as members of His body, was symbolized, prefigured, in Abraham's offering his son Isaac in sacrifice and by the ram which became his substitute. All who will be of the seed of Abraham, spiritual, must recognize the death of Christ as the blood, the sacrifice, which makes effective that Abrahamic covenant and grants him a part therein with his Redeemer, as it is written, "If ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise." And to be heirs according to the promise it is required that all who would be of this seed class must partake of his covenant, must share with him in his sufferings. Under divine provision the same blood of Christ, the merit of His death, is to shortly seal the new covenant, which will be sealed at the second advent of Christ and become effective to fleshly Israel and through them to all the families of the earth. (Jer. 31:32-34; Heb. 8:8-13.) Thus we see that neither the church could be blessed under the Abrahamic covenant nor Israel and the world be blessed under the new covenant except by the merit of the blood of Christ.

WHEREWITH WE WERE SANCTIFIED

Our text refers to the sanctified or set-apart ones and not to the world. The world is not expected to know about, understand and appreciate the value of the precious blood. As the apostle again says, "To us who believe he is precious;" and again he says, we are "justified through faith in his blood." (1 Pet. 2:7; Rom. 3:25.)

Only those favored by God with the opening of the eyes of their understanding to an appreciation of the value of the blood of Christ as an offset for our sins on the ground of justification through faith only these can come unto the Father; only these can be begotten of the Holy Spirit; only these can be sanctified or set apart through the merit of his blood. what honor does God thus attach to faith in the blood! How necessary it is as a foundation for a faith that will stand and gain us admission into the favors and blessings of this gospel age! In the light of this testimony of the Scriptures how absurd it is for some to claim that the heathen are saved, sanctified, without a knowledge of Christ and his sacrifice, and without faith in the precious blood. How harmonious is the Bible testimony to the effect that “There is none other name given under heaven and amongst men whereby we must be saved” than the name of Jesus. Acts 4:12.

The heathen are not blamed or condemned for not exercising faith in the precious blood. The condemnation of our text does not apply to them in any sense of the word. God’s provision for the heathen is that under the New Covenant in the next age, the Millennial age, the reign of Christ and the church, every eye shall be opened, every ear shall be unstopped, all shall come to a clear knowledge of God and a full appreciation of the precious blood, and then will be their responsibility respecting it if then they ignore it the responsibility will be upon them and the result will be the second death. But in our text the apostle is speaking of those who now have the eye of faith and the ear of faith, whose eyes are already opened to appreciate the precious blood and the grace of God thus manifested toward us. The apostle declares that if any of us after having enjoyed this knowledge, this blessing, this grace, shall repudiate it and count it a common thing (marginal reading) consider the death of Christ in the ordinary sense as the death of others, and fail to any longer recognize it as the blood of redemption, such as one figuratively tramples the Son of God beneath his feet, declares him an impostor in that he professed to have come down from heaven and that he professed to give his life as a ransom (anti-lutron corresponding price) for the world’s life. In thus rejecting the only arrangement which God has made for our salvation they do despite to God’s favor, even though they claim that his favor will come to them and to all in another way without a ransom, and even though they claim that God’s grace and forgiveness and blessing will come through Christ as a teacher but not as a redeemer.

MUCH SORER PUNISHMENT

The apostle in the context pointed to Moses and the dignity of the law on Sinai, and how any transgression against it were punishable with death. Then in our text, referring to Christ as the antitype of Moses, the apostle asks how much sorer would be the punishment of any person who would willingly show disrespect to the Mediator of the New Covenant and to God's plan of mercy committed to his care. We do not use this word "sorer" today in the sense in which it was in vogue at the time our Bible was translated. To many minds it carries the thought of "more painful," but this is not the meaning of the word, nor of the original, which signifies "more severe." The question arises, What could be more severe than that which befell the Israelites who died because of disobedience to the law covenant? We Answer--that the law covenant was merely a typical and temporary one, which made nothing perfect and which fixed no eternal penalties.

The curse or sentence of the law against those who died under its edict was fully met in the death of Christ, as the apostle points out; hence all who were under the law were redeemed as well as and as full as all who were not under the law. Hence during the Millennial age those who died under Moses' law without mercy will, nevertheless, come forth under the blessed arrangements of the Millennial kingdom, that they may come to an accurate knowledge of the truth and a full opportunity of knowing and appreciating and obeying the great antitype of Moses, "Jesus, the Mediator of the New Covenant." (Heb. 12:24.) If the persons spoken of in our text should (because of their enlightenment as indicated by their knowledge of the truth) reject the very foundation of all the divine arrangement for their benefit, they would be much more culpable than they that rejected Moses and the typical arrangement of which he was the head. While in both cases the punishment would be death, the difference in the case of those who count the blood of the covenant wherewith they were sanctified a common thing is that theirs would be the second death from which there is no recovery suggested in the Scriptures.

ONLY ONE OPPORTUNITY

Some are inclined to speak of the grace of God in Christ as a second chance; and indeed there is a measure of truth in the statement, for did our race not have one chance in father Adam? And did not Adam and all of his posterity lose life in that first chance? From this standpoint it is perfectly proper to say that our Lord Jesus came into the world and redeemed Adam and his race for the very purpose of giving them individually and collectively a second chance for eternal life. We thank God for this, and rejoice that the promise is that this second chance not only is extended to a little flock, the household of faith, during the Gospel age, but that ultimately it shall extend to Adam and all of his posterity. O, yes, the doctrine of a second chance in this sense of the word is the very essence of the good tidings of great joy which shall be unto all people. Without a second chance we would all be hopeless, for the first sentence was unto death, and without redemption from that sentence Adam and all his race would have remained dead to all eternity in similar conditions to the brute beasts. It was God's mercy and love in Christ which provided another chance, a second chance for each and all. But we know of no third chance proposed anywhere in God's word for any individual. On the contrary, "Christ dieth no more; death hath no more dominion over him." Rom. 6:9

When we consider the favor of God in Christ offering release from the Adamic sentence, and an opportunity for return to the Father, we perceive that this is individually a second chance for father Adam, but individually it is the first chance for his posterity. Nor is this inconsistent; for the Lord proposes that this individual chance which he will accord to every member of the race through their Redeemer shall be so full, so complete, so satisfactory, that nothing more could be properly expected or even asked for.

WHO MAY PRAY WHOSE PRAYERS ARE ANSWERED

Pastor C. T. Russell, of Allegheny, Pa., delivered several addresses at the Bible Students' convention being held here. One of these, delivered today, we report in full. It was from the text, "If ye abide in me and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will and it shall be done unto you" (John 15:7).

Man is so constituted, veneration being one of the very highest organs of his constitution, that it may be said to be natural to most men to render homage to their Creator especially if they do not have a large development of the organ of self-esteem. However, in our busy day of push and rush, telegraph and express, there are so many things to engage the time and thought of the majority that they do not exercise properly this natural highest tendency of their natures; and by reason of disuse it becomes with many comparatively dormant, dead, until some calamity or trouble comes to waken it. The Psalmist's expression, "Before I was afflicted I went astray," would certainly be appropriate to many. Not a few of God's most earnest children owe much to his providential care of their interests to his permitting of adversity as a part of their experience. As the darkness of trouble encompasses the soul, and human succor is slow or vain, the heart turns instinctively to the higher power and appeals to its Creator and this is prayer. But with most who have become developed Christians the privilege of prayer is so highly appreciated as a channel of blessing that it becomes a fixed feature of daily life, and one of the most pleasurable and most profitable of all their religious experiences.

To such it is a pleasure upon awakening in the morning to recognize the blessing enjoyed in rest and sleep, to give thanks for the same, and to look for divine providential care and overruling in the affairs and interests of the day beginning. To the same class it is a pleasure also to join in family worship every morning, if conditions will permit; to the same class it is a privilege before every meal to return thanks in acknowledgement that God is the giver of every good gift, whether directly or indirectly received. To these the food tastes better because of this acknowledgement, and because the heart, the mind, is faced in the proper direction to receive God's mercies with thankfulness; and to those whose minds are thus at peace, at rest, proportionately more refreshment will be received from the food. At the close of the day this same class has pleasure in thinking over its blessings and privileges enjoyed, in making note of its own progress in the love and service of the Creator, and in giving thanks for all these, even while at the same time perhaps craving divine clemency because of blemishes and imperfections of thought, word or deed, not approved because disapproved of the Lord. The prayers of such go out to the Lord for further strength and help by the way, in the development of the perfect character most pleasing in his sight.

GOD HEARETH NOT SINNERS

Should or should we not urge men everywhere to pray? We answer, No. God has commanded all men everywhere to repent, but he has not commanded all men to pray; more than this he declines the prayers of those who are not his saying, "Unto the wicked God saith, What hast thou to do to declare my statutes, or that thou shouldst take my covenant in thy mouth? Seeing thou hatest instruction and castest my words behind thee" (Psa. 50:16-17). This is a very different view from the ordinary one. It is customary for the majority of Christian people to urge everybody to pray, but they do this from a lack of knowledge a lack of appreciation of the statements of God's word. Our Lord tells us that the Father seeketh such to worship him as worship him in spirit and in truth (John 4:23). The inference clearly is that he seeks not the worship of others. It seems strange indeed that the average man or woman, living practically without God, should suppose that he could suddenly, in a moment of trouble or fear, rush into the divine presence and implore divine aid in extrication.

This false idea, that sinners may come to God in prayer without conversion, without turning to the Lord Jesus, without accepting him, is a growing error. The so-called "new thought" of our day, which is gaining ground in various directions, helps along in this delusion, assuring all mankind that they are children of God, whereas our Lord Jesus said to some, “Ye are of your father, the devil, for his works ye do” (John 8:44). The new thought teachers as well as many others ignore the scriptural proposition that faith in Christ is the only door of access to divine mercy, that “no man cometh unto the Father but by me (Jesus),” that “there is none other name given under heaven and amongst men whereby we must be saved than the name of Jesus.” Everything not built upon his scriptural foundation must of necessity be false and hence injurious. The injurious effect is to hinder the sinner from realizing his guilt, his unworthiness of divine favor, and to lead him to think that conversion is obsolete, the twaddle of the past; that each one should think of himself as the son of God, an heir of heaven, and feel the dignity of all this and act it out praying to God and believing that he hears, and acting along the line of that mischief strong in the error, encased in the delusion, and thus specially barred and hindered from coming to God in the only right, true, acceptable way the way of the cross, the way of faith in Jesus.

THIEVES AND ROBBERS

Our Lord not only declares that “No man cometh unto the Father but by Me,” but He also declared that He is the door to the sheepfold the only door. Whoever, therefore, attempts to come to God otherwise than through faith in the precious blood of Christ is a thief and a robber is attempting to grasp illegitimately a blessing and privilege. The fact that he cannot grasp these does not affect the case; his intentions are fraudulent, wrong.

We may divide mankind into three general classes: (1) The masses who know not God, including not only the heathen, but those who are living in sin, whose mental eyes are closed to holy things, and who are looking in the opposite direction for selfish gratification. (2) A class of believers who have recognized the undesirableness of sin, who have recognized Jesus as the door, the way to God, and who are trusting that ultimately somehow they will choose that way, which they have not yet chosen because of its narrowness and the sacrifice which it would cost at the present time. (3) A proportionately small number of the believing class who have heard and accepted Jesus, have renounced sin in toto, and, more than this, have made a full consecration of their hearts and live to the divine service, with full agreement and desire to walk in the footsteps of Jesus.

LET US DRAW NIGH UNTO GOD

Of these three classes be it noted that the last mentioned alone, and they a comparatively small number of the whole, have the divine promise that their prayers shall be heard. The first class has no promise whatever, as we have already seen they have no access to the ear of God; they are, as the apostle describes, “without God, having no hope in the world.” (Eph. 2:12.) True, the scriptures show a future hope for this class during the Millennial age, when they shall all be brought to a knowledge of the truth and to an opportunity for a full reconciliation with the Lord. But their time is not now. If they do not now hear of the Lord's grace and respond thereto, and come within the invitation of the Lord Jesus, they have no "access into the grace wherein we now stand and rejoice. (Rom. 5:2) True, our Lord said that "men ought always to pray and not to faint" not to get discouraged; but we must remember that He was speaking not of mankind in general, but of the Jewish nation, which had been selected, separated from the world as God's peculiar people, believers in Him and typical of spiritual Israel. In this class the Lord especially addressed those whom he elsewhere designated Israelites, indeed, in whom there was no guile.

The second class mentioned above has indeed some liberties as respects prayer particularly at the beginning of their experiences, when first they turned from sin to serve the living God, when first they began to exercise faith in Christ and to seek to know the will of God. Their faith, we are told, is accounted to them for righteousness; they are reckoned as justified from sin, and as thus at peace with God no longer at war with Him either through wicked works nor antagonistic minds. The apostle says of such, we have joy and peace through believing. This class includes not only those who have repented of sin and approached God through the door of faith, but it includes also the children of believers, who are reckoned as justified and as in the same relationship with God. We can readily understand that the mercy of God would be extended to this class, to the extent of permitting them to come to God in prayer as believers in Him, and as those desirous of knowing God's will and doing it. But they cannot forever remain in this attitude, because their prayer for knowledge and for divine instruction being answered brings to them responsibilities, and the Lord addressing this class says, "Why call ye Me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" Luke 6:46

If they continue in this attitude of failing to heed the word of the Lord, they gradually lose their standing with Him lose their justification, and become like the remainder of the world without special divine favor. The reason for this is that God in the present time, during this Gospel age, is not seeking to bring all men to a knowledge of Himself He is not now exhausting His mercies and blessings and instructions, but is merely seeking for a special elect class, a little flock, who will not only rejoice in the privilege of abandoning sin, but rejoice also in the privilege of following in the footsteps of the Lord in opposition to sin, to the extent of laying down their lives with Him in the service of righteousness. This is the third class mentioned above the elect. It is for this class that the blessings and privileges and favors of the throne of the heavenly grace are especially offered. It is this class that the apostle addressed, saying, "Having therefore courage, brethren, by the blood of Jesus, to enter into the holiest.... Let us draw near with a true heart and full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from a consciousness of evil and our bodies washed with pure water" In the sense that they have been cleansed or justified through faith in the Redeemer; and in addition to this sprinkling and washing they have become members of the royal priesthood by a consecration of themselves, a covenant of sacrifice even unto death, and as such under-priests they are permitted to come into that condition symbolized by the first holy of the Tabernacle and the temple, wherein was the candlestick and the table of shewbread and the golden altar of incense the latter symbolizing specially the privilege of prayer, for, as the scriptures explain, the incense from the altar represents the prayers of the saints. Rev. 8:3,4

IF YE ABIDE IN ME

Note particularly that this is the thought of our text. It is not addressed to everybody not even addressed to all believers; but merely to those believers who have come into Christ, into membership in His body, His church, whose names are written in heaven. Our introduction into the body of Christ is not at the moment of our turning from sin to righteousness, it is not at the moment of our accepting Christ by faith as our redeemer, it is not at the moment of our joy and peace in Him through believing. No, it is subsequent to all this, at the moment when we have presented our bodies living sacrifices and receive the begetting of the Holy Spirit to a new nature. These are styled new creatures in Christ Jesus, respecting whom we are told, "Ye are not of the world even as I am not of the world; I have chosen you out of the world." Again we are told, "If any man be in Christ he is a new creature; old things have passed away and all things have become new." But it is not sufficient that we thus begin a new life which under one figure is represented as a begetting to the spirit nature which will be attained in the first resurrection as a birth from the dead and which in another illustration is represented as a birth in the present life, the apostle saying, "As new born babes desire the sincere milk of the word that ye may grow thereby." It is after we have become such spirit begotten ones, new creatures, new born babes, members of the royal priesthood of which Jesus is the great high priest, members of the anointed body of which He is the glorious head then it will be necessary for us to abide in Him. How long is not stated before we may apply to ourselves the gracious promise of our text. But here we notice another condition, namely,

IF MY WORD ABIDE IN YOU

The first restriction as to the privileges of our text seems to limit it to a very small number indeed to those only who have come into membership in Christ and are abiding in him. But now this second limitation makes the matter still more exclusive, for in addition to becoming abiding members, loyal, we must have the Lord's Word abiding richly in us before we can claim this promise. What does this mean? It surely signifies that we must pass from the infantile stage of "babes in Christ," desiring the sincere milk of the Word, and must become users of its strong meat before we can have a full right to apply this text to ourselves. The Apostle Paul assures us that milk is for babes, but strong meat for those who are more matured and who have their senses exercised by reason of use.

Here then we see a part of the difficulty why so many Christian people make fruitless prayers, as, for illustration, when President Garfield lay dying millions joined in prayer for his recovery without avail; when President McKinley lay dying millions again joined in prayer without result. What was the difficulty that these prayers were not heard and answered? Perhaps it was in line with the Apostle Paul's statement, "Ye ask and receive not because ye ask amiss" (Jas. 4:3) in harmony with your own desires. And are there not hundreds of thousands of prayers offered daily similarly without avail and for the same reason because those who utter the prayers are not in Christ, not abiding in him, and because his Word is not abiding in them. We are not disputing that some real Christians joined in those prayers; we are not disputing that some joined in them who were abiding in Christ; but we do question if many joined in those petitions for Garfield and McKinley in whose hearts the Lord's Word abode.

The difficulty with the majority of those in Christ seems to be that they are "babes," with little knowledge of the "strong meat" of the divine Word, little relish for it and little ability for its digestion. And as for "the milk of the Word," the majority of them have had it so diluted with the traditions of men and the impurities of false doctrine that they are weaklings in respect to knowledge of God and of his plan. His Word does not dwell in them richly and abound (Col. 3:16), as we are assured it should do with all who are the Lord's and making proper progress in the good way, in the footsteps of Jesus. Alas, that we must speak thus in a day when Bibles are published by the million and to be found in nearly every home! Alas, that in this day of Sunday schools, international lessons, etc., it should be true, as foretold by the Lord through the prophet, "My people perish for lack of knowledge." There is a famine in the land, not for bread, nor for water, but for the hearing of the Word of the Lord. Ministers of Christ who have vowed to preach his Gospel are otherwise engaged, some preaching capitalism, some preaching socialism, some preaching science and some preaching bosh and nonsense; some preaching evolution, some preaching higher criticism few preaching Christ, the only door into the sheepfold, the only way to God, the only channel of prayer and divine blessing.

Describing the proper attitude of the Lord's true sheep at this time, the prophet says, "Thy Word was found and I did eat it." (Jer. 15:16.) There is an abundance indeed of the good Word of the Lord, but false doctrines, the traditions of the "dark ages," have so covered and hidden the precious message of divine love and grace that the latter is discredited, and those who take the Word of God seriously are counted as fools for his sake, but now as ever the people who do know God shall be strong and do exploits. (Dan. 11:32.) Now more than ever those whose eyes have been opened and whose ears are unstopped, and who have by the grace of God entered into covenant relationship to him through faith in the Redeemer, these are now being fed, strengthened as never before by the message of grace and truth. "Helping hands" and "Bible Keys" are ready for these, that they may enter fully into the precious things of the divine provision and feast thereon and grow strong in the Lord and in the power of his might. It is to these that the words of our text are specially applicable.

"YE MAY ASK WHAT YE WILL"

Having found the class addressed by our Savior we rejoice with them in the grand scope of his promise this class may have whatever they wish. God's Word is the guarantee! How could a richer promise be given? Let us see what they will ask for and how greatly they will be prospered by reason of the privilege granted them.

Will they ask for earthly riches and become millionaires? No; they will remember that they exchanged earthly blessings for heavenly ones in their consecration vow, when they presented their bodies living sacrifices, holy, acceptable to God, their reasonable service. They therefore cannot ask for earthly riches, blessings they cannot pray to become millionaires.

Can they not petition for honor and power for themselves? No; for the Master himself said that if any man will become his disciple he must take up his cross and follow him, and that the disciple cannot be above his Lord, and if they called the Master of the house Beelzebub, still more may they be expected to say respecting his inferior servants. They therefore cannot pray for earthly name or fame. But may they not pray for the temporal prosperity of the Lord's work, the building of churches and the removal of debt encumbrances, etc? We answer, No; they have no authority in the words of Jesus to thus pray nor indeed to contract any debts in his name.

May they then pray for physical health for healing from disease especially that they may be strong physically to do much service for the Lord and his cause? No; because nothing in the Master's words has given them authority thus to pray nor right to thus expect. The Master healed not himself neither did he heal any of his disciples of physical ills, nor were the gifts of the spirit conferred upon some in the early church, so far as we have any record, not used upon the apostles or any of the church, but merely upon the world and this as a sign or evidence of divine power a prophecy of the coming blessing of restitution of all things during the Millennium. (Acts 3:19.) But some may inquire, even though Jesus did not specifically say that we should pray for physical health and did not heal any of his disciples, and although the apostles healed none of the brethren but merely counseled them to diet themselves. (1 Tim. 5:23) in cases of illness, is there anything that would forbid us to take such a position today forbid us to pray for physical healing? Did the Lord ever utter a word to the effect that his disciples ought not to pray? We Answer--that although he did not specify that we might not pray, in so many words, his general teaching was to the contrary that he who seeketh to live, preserve his life, shall lose it; and that he who is willing to lose, to sacrifice, his life as one of his disciples, walking in his footsteps, shall find it shall gain eternal life.

This, we note, is the very essence of the covenant that all of the Lord's disciples are invited to make in order to become members of his body. Our Lord's words are, whosoever will be my disciple, let him take up his cross, deny himself and follow me present his body a living sacrifice. As then our bodies by covenant are sacrificed, where would be the privilege of soliciting in prayer a divine interposition to hinder the sacrifice from being accepted? Let us not forget the words of our Lord respecting the work accomplished at the second coming, "Gather my saints together unto me, saith the Lord, they that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice." And not merely those who have made the covenant to sacrifice, but particularly those who to the extent of their ability have kept that covenant by sacrificing. It is of this class that our Lord declares, "They shall be mine, saith the Lord, in that day when I make up my jewels." Mal. 3:17.

Of the Lord it is declared that his victory was attained through the things which he suffered and it is also declared that our final victory depends upon our suffering with him, "for if we suffer with him we shall also reign with him." Rom. 8:17.

THE PRAYERS OF THE ELECT

The apostle remarks that the effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much. (James 5:16.) The only righteous ones there are from the divine standpoint are those mentioned in our text, namely, those who are abiding in Christ. They are reckoned as righteous, as perfect, because their blemishes are all covered by the robe of Christ's merit. Their effectual and fervent prayers must be in accord with the limitations of our text, namely, in accord with the words of our Lord otherwise they would not avail much. So now our query is, "For what may these special ones of this little flock ask the Father, with the full assurance of faith that they shall have it?"

Ah, we reply, those who reach this glorious station reach a place where they have little confidence in their own judgment of what would be for their highest welfare or for the highest welfare of their friends, or of the greatest service to the Lord's cause. Hence, in their humility and appreciation of their own unwisdom, they would be disposed rather to prefer that the divine will should be done, and not to interfere with the operation thereof. Those who attain this position of abiding in Christ and having his word abide richly in them are surely in a position in which they have a clearer conception than others of what God has done in the past and is doing now and purposes yet to accomplish in his own due time. And as they get glimpses of the lengths and breadths and heights and depths of the love and mercy of God toward themselves, their families, their neighbors, yea all the families of the earth, they wonder and adore; and instead of feeling desirous of instructing the Lord to do further along lines of their ideas, they feel so humble and so full of reverence toward Him that they can only praise Him for His loving kindness and gratefully accept His provisions neither could they ask for more. They have already received more than they could have asked or thought, and they perceived that the divine plan is so comprehensive as to be beyond the power of improvement by them. And as for themselves, they learn to have the Lord choose their inheritance for them and choose the way in which they should go most safely, most securely, most swiftly, to obtain all the riches of His grace and the glorious provision that is made for their eternal future as well as for the present life and promised them in the future more than they could have asked, according to the richness of his grace and loving kindness toward us in Christ Jesus.

However, the attainment of this the Christian's ideal condition as outlined by the Master's words of our text does not mean that they will not have further need or desire to use the throne of the heavenly grace. They will have such need, but they will use it chiefly as a place to offer incense of thankfulness to the Lord for what he has already done for them, a place to leave their purposes great and small, realizing that the "Father himself loveth them, cares for their interests, and is according to his gracious promise making all things work together for good to them that love him. Their songs and prayers take on continually more and more of the quality of thankfulness, praise, faith, hope, confidence and less and less do they have desire to ask for earthly things or to in any measure seek to move the divine arm, which already is actively engaged in the deliverance of his people and all the families of the earth from the bondage of sin and death. Wondering and adoring, thanking and praising, we fear to touch matters that involve so much.

PRAY WITHOUT CEASING; IN EVERYTHING GIVE THANKS

The apostle here expresses the sentiment, the spirit, the disposition of the class addressed in our text. Their whole lives become a psalm of thankfulness to the Lord, every word, every act of life is so intimately associated with the Lord and his will and so thoroughly submitted to the divine will, as to be a part of the general prayer which from these is continually ascending, that the Lord's will may be done in their hearts, and that his kingdom may come throughout the world.

St. Louis, Mo., August 11, 1907

“YOUR FATHER KNOWETH’

Pastor C. T. Russell preached here today from the text, “Your Father knoweth what things ye have need of before ye ask him” (Matt. 6:8). The speaker said:

Wrong views of the divine character and purposes in respect to the eternal destiny have led to wrong views on nearly every subject treated in the divine Word. For instance, neglecting the direct statement of the scriptures as to who may address God in prayer and who may not, the greater number of Christians as well as worldly people, believing that eternal torment is the destiny provided for the vast majority of the race, are glad to hope that somehow, by “luck” they and their friends will escape that doom, even though no more worthy of divine favor than the majority of mankind. They therefore encourage the thought in themselves and in others that, regardless of real faith, regardless of their acceptance of God's arrangements in Jesus, regardless of their having failed to come into vital relationship with Jesus, they believe that at any moment before they die they may breathe a prayer, or have a pastor or priest or friend pray for them, and as a result receive all the blessings and favors of God as surely as though they had spent a life in consecration and attempted obedience to the divine will as outlined in the divine word. While ready to admit that those who have lived in sin and alienation from God would have no right to expect of the Creator mercy, favor, eternal life in heavenly glory, they have concluded that everything religious is aside from their own ideas of practical common sense, and that such a view is no more unreasonable than the reverse proposition, namely, that all are going to eternal torment who have not come into harmony with God, however soberly and decently they may have lived. The one inconsistency seems to them to balance the other.

The fact is that neither proposition is scriptural: God's ways are just and righteous altogether. As he has not ordained eternal torment as a penalty for sin, neither has he ordained that a sinner's prayer, uttered a few moments before his death, would change his eternal destiny. We are not forgetting the dying thief, whose recorded prayer and prompt Answer--seem to be the foundation of much of the expectancy along this line. We are to remember that his request was not that he should go to heaven nor was that our Lord's promise. In his dying hour he recognized and confessed himself a sinner; he recognized the Lord as the great One, the Son of God, suffering unjustly, he knew not why. He had faith, however, in Jesus' claim that he was the Messiah the one who had been promised of old as the great king, the establishment of whose kingdom would bring blessings to the Jews and to all the nations of the earth by bringing all back into harmony and relationship with God. By faith he looked forward to that kingdom and confessed it, saying, "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom" the very kingdom for which the Lord taught his disciples to pray, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven" the very kingdom that is to be established at the second coming of our Lord. Our Lord's Answer--was in harmony with the request.

As the thief did not ask to go to heaven, neither did Jesus promise that he should go. As the thief asked to be remembered when the Lord had come into his kingdom when he would take to himself his great power and begin his reign, this is what Jesus referred to when he said, "Amen (so be it as you have asked), thou shalt be with me in Paradise." It will be at the second coming of Christ that Paradise will be restored as promised, and in Paradise that thief will surely be, and his repentance and confession was a step in preparation for the blessings and privileges of that kingdom a step in advance of his comrade; a step which will never need to be restored. Paradise was lost 6,000 years ago by the disobedience of the first Adam. Our Lord as taking the place of the first Adam in respect to the race has redeemed the world of mankind, and as a result at the second coming Paradise is to be restored, and mankind by restitution processes is to be brought back to the full perfection of being which Adam possessed in Eden so many as will not return under those favorable conditions being destroyed in the second death.

VERILY I SAY UNTO THEE THIS DAY

A careful analysis of the text, then, shows that our Lord did not mean that the thief would be in Paradise on the day on which they died, but on that day on which Paradise will be restored the great Millennial day, the "day of Christ," the day of which the apostle says, "A day with the Lord is as a thousand years." As the scriptures originally were written without punctuation, those who have fallen into the error of supposing that nobody dies, but that the moment of apparent death is in every case an entrance upon a superior degree of life, seize upon this text and punctuate it according to their misconceptions, so as to make it say in contradiction of all the facts that the Lord and the thief would both be in Paradise in a few hours. As a matter of fact, as the apostle points out, our Lord went not to paradise but to sheol, hades, the tomb, and was dead three days, and rose from death on the third day and ascended to the Father thirty days later. We remember, too, that Jesus said, in speaking to Mary after His resurrection, "I ascend to My Father and to your Father, to My God and your God." Our Lord did not go to Paradise, but to hades, for the very good reason that the Paradise promised had not yet been established nor is it now established. Its establishment will come in the Millennial age.

Consequently the thief is not now in Paradise, but in the grave, in the state of death, sheol of the Hebrew, hades of the Greek. "He knows not anything," as the wise man foretold. (Eccl. 9:5.) He is where the apostle Peter declares the great prophet and King of Israel is—"David is not ascended into the heavens" his sepulchre is with us until this day." (Acts 2:34,29.) the time has not yet come for paradise to be established and the thief must wait, but waits in unconsciousness for the time when Messiah, as the great King, shall speak to him and to all the prisoners of hope gone down to the great prison house of death, saying, Come forth, show yourselves. (Isa. 49:9.) "Marvel not at this," says Jesus, "for the hour is coming when all that are in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of man and shall come forth." (John 5:28.) The penitent thief will come forth and also the inpenitent one, for it is written, "There shall be a resurrection both of the just and the unjust." (Acts 24:15.) The one will come forth justified because of his exercise of faith, the other thief will also come forth, but the penitent one will have much advantage in various ways in that day. Though both will have the advantage of that time, when the knowledge of the Lord shall fill the earth as the waters cover the great deep, and when all shall know the Lord from the least to the greatest of them, so that it would be unnecessary to preach to the many more, "Know thou the Lord." (Jer. 31:34.) In that day all the proper thoughts and endeavors will be rewarded with a blessing from the Lord, according to His promise that those who give even so trifling a blessing as a cup of cold water to one of His disciples will by no means lose his reward. Likewise those who have done evil will have by their evil deeds marked their characters to their disadvantage, so that they will have more difficulty than others of their time in attaining to full restitution of all that was lost in Adam.

Rightly punctuated, our Lord's expression, "Verily, verily, I say unto thee this day, thou shalt be with me in paradise," has great force and signification. The day that the thief acknowledged Him was indeed a dark day, in which even the disciples had fled, in which the Master Himself was crucified as a blasphemer. No wonder he said, "Verily I say unto you this day" this dark day, this day which seems so unfavorable to the faith in me you have confessed notwithstanding this you shall be with Me in paradise according to your request, according to your prayer, "Remember Me when thou comest into thy kingdom."

THAT THIEF WAS A JEW

If inclined to urge that the experiences of the thief prove that any sinner may come to God in his extremity, we remind you that this sinner's case was a special one in that he belonged to the specially favored nation of the Jews, which at that time was in divine favor under the law covenant made with Moses at Mount Sinai. Under that covenant all of the Jewish nation were God's people, temporarily at least, and had privileges of prayer as such. God had provided the Temple as a house of prayer for that entire nation, and had granted them the privileges of prayer. Since that time their law covenant has been set aside, so that a Jew today would have no more right or privilege of prayer than would a Gentile, a "sinner," of whom it is written, "We know that God heareth not sinners." John 9:31

Besides, that Jewish sinner came to God through the Mediator of the New Covenant, Jesus, and it was through that Mediator that he had the assurance of coming blessing. None today are justified by the typical sacrifices of the Law, and only believers are subjects of the atonement effected by our Lord Jesus; hence only believers can come unto the Father through him. It is therefore, wholly erroneous that any and everybody can come to God as he may please. God declares that by reason of sin our race is unfit to have fellowship with him. He has declined to entertain such fellowship or to recognize sinners, and is thus maintaining the dignity of his righteousness. But meantime, in the exercise of his love and mercy, he has provided a new and living way by which the sinners whom he has condemned may return into harmony with himself and become the recipient of divine favor unto life. Nevertheless the terms and conditions are strict and unalterable and read, "No man cometh unto the Father but by me," "There is none other name given under heaven and amongst men whereby we must be saved,"—" than the name of Jesus." "He that hath the Son hath life, he that hath not the Son of God hath not life" the "wrath of God abideth on him." (John 14:6; Acts 4:12; 1 John 5:12; John 3:36.) Those upon whom the wrath of God is abiding certainly need not attempt to approach God in prayer, or otherwise than by his appointed representative, the Redeemer.

OUR FATHER IN HEAVEN

It is a great mistake and quite contrary to the word of God that many are teaching and preaching the fatherhood of God as respects all mankind thus ignoring the Redeemer and His office, rejecting Him as the door to the sheepfold the way, the truth and the life. God did indeed acknowledge Himself as the Father of Adam when the latter was perfect, before his disobedience; and thus we read that Adam was a son of God as truly as the angels are styled the sons of God. But none others of the human family from then until our dear Redeemer's advent were ever styled sons of God. That blessed title of relationship has not been sullied. Our Lord Jesus could and did properly claim this title because it was true of Him; His life was from God, and He was recognized of the Father. Then came the call of this Gospel age the invitation first to the Jews and afterwards to the Gentiles to become children of God. This is the invitation under which we have come into God's family an invitation based upon the redemptive work of Jesus and our renouncement of sin and acceptance of Him and consecration to follow in His steps. As the apostle says, "Beloved, now are we the sons of God." (1 John 3:2.) We are indeed not sons in the full glory and full sonship which is promised us when we shall share in the first resurrection. The apostle declares, "Now are we the sons of God, but it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when He shall appear we shall be like him."

This is the same thought proclaimed in the Gospel of John (John 1:11,12), "He came unto his own and his own received him not. But to as many as received him to them gave he power (privilege) to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name," and who are begotten of the Spirit. It is a high honor indeed to be recognized as God's children and to be permitted to pray, "Our Father which art in heaven." The more the Scriptural limitations along this line are recognized the better it will be both for the Lord's people and for the world. The latter will see that they have something to do before they can claim they are children of God, the brethren will see more clearly, more distinctly, the privileges which they have entered into and the honors and blessings conferred upon them. It is the children of God that the apostle addresses, saying, "Let us then, dearly beloved, come with boldness (courage) to the throne of grace." (Heb. 4:16.) Others have no right to come with courage to the throne of grace no right to come at all if they are unbelievers. Hence in the divine program we are not sent to pray with sinners but to preach to them to declare to them the only name given under heaven and amongst men whereby they may come into relationship with God as his children and have the privileges of prayer.

But while the privileges of prayer really belong to those who not only have recognized sin and accepted the Lord Jesus as their Redeemer, and additionally have consecrated their little all to him and to his service, nevertheless the Lord does not seem to confine the privilege of prayer to this consecrated class. In much mercy he has provided that as soon as we have fled from sin and accepted Christ we may be counted as members of the household of faith, even before we go on to make a consecration, which brings us into membership in the church, which is the body of Christ. So, then, there are two classes who in the present time have access to God in prayer: (1) The justified ones; (2) the justified who have consecrated themselves, and who in consequence styled the royal priesthood, members of the body of the great High Priest. But there is a difference as respects the liberty of these two classes at the throne of grace. The first class have access to the Father only through Jesus, the Redeemer, in whom they have justification. The second named class have the same approach, but in addition are assured by the Master, "The Father himself loveth you." (John 16:27.) This last named class has come into that special relationship with God which is termed the begetting of the Holy Spirit, hence theirs is a place of special nearness and favor. These may draw nigh to the golden altar of the Holy and offer incense as members of the body of Christ, whereas the others, who have not made the consecration, are not in the condition typified by the Holy but are in the court condition, and can approach the Father only indirectly. The words of our Lord in our text and its context, the Lord's prayer, were addressed to the consecrated class as represented by his apostles; and all who are sincere at heart and right-minded after they have come to an appreciation of justification, the forgiveness of their sins, should be glad to present their bodies living sacrifices, and to thus join the royal priesthood class and become recognized of God as members of the body of Christ, which is the church, and thus come to the enjoyment of the privilege of prayer in its highest and truest sense.

REPETITIONS ARE VAIN

Having found, then, the particular class addressed in our text, we hear the Master's injunction to them that they use no vain repetitions that they must not count the value of their prayers by the number of the words used nor the number of moments or hours spent upon their knees. The true disciple must remember that God looketh upon the heart and that he seeketh such to worship him as worship him in spirit and in truth. Remembering this, they will be on guard against prayer formalities, against hypocritical prayers, to be seen of men, to be heard of men, to be supposed to be very righteous. The true disciple will seek the divine benediction, and is urged by our Lord to seek this in private, in the secret chamber the secret chamber of the heart. In the moment of trial or difficulty how quickly we can enter it, look to our Father in heaven and receive his blessing and guidance! This will not hinder us from more formal prayer in private with wife or husband or children. Neither will it hinder us from prayer at the gatherings of the church, which is the Lord's family or household. Indeed all of these various opportunities for worship are commended to us by the words and examples of our Lord and the apostles.

Our Lord declares that those who hypocritically pray in public for the sake of being heard, for the sake of being considered pious, have their reward, the reward they are seeking, the approval of those about them. But having gotten their reward for their prayers, they must not expect anything from the Lord; it was not his favor they were really at heart seeking, but the favor and approval of men, from whom they got their reward, the reward they sought. The exhortation to us is that if we appreciate most the Lord's favor we will seek most earnestly to approach him with sincerity of heart.

KNOWETH BEFORE YE ASK HIM

Our Lord assures us that the heavenly Father knoweth what things we have need of before we ask him. Our asking is not therefore to be with a view to giving our all-wise Creator information. Nor is it to be with a view to changing the divine purposes, but rather it is to be a manifestation of our faith and trust, which will bring us into closer relationship of his favors. Thus the child at the table spread with earthly bounties is invited to pass his plate for a share, and the passing of his plate signifies the acceptance of the invitation and well represents the proper attitude of prayer. It is for the child to appreciate the provision which has been made and to accept with thankfulness. And so with God's people; their prayers are merely their acceptance of things which God has for them and is pleased to give them. And while he would have us understand that he is the giver of all blessings, and that therefore our temporal mercies are from his bounty as well as our spiritual favors, nevertheless he would have us more and more be solicitous for the spiritual advantages, which are his best gifts, leaving to him to determine what portion of earthly blessings and mercies and comforts would best serve our necessities without interference with our highest welfare and the portion of spiritual blessing which we desire and which he has promised. Every proper prayer, therefore, of the children of God should be in line with this declaration of our text that our Father knoweth what things we have need of before we ask him. We neither ask him to get from him more than he is willing to give nor different things from what he has provided, but we may have the things which are expedient for us, the provisions of his love and wisdom. The apostle intimates that all things God sends us through his providences are to be received with prayer and thanksgiving, with grateful appreciation of the providences of God on our behalf. We are to count our blessings and give thanks rather than to study our wants and urge a fulfillment of them according to our natural tastes, preferences and ignorance.

Consequently as the Lord's people grow in grace and knowledge and love their prayers will indicate this, in that they will abound more and more in thankfulness and in requests for the Holy Spirit rather than in petitions for earthly things.

THE SPIRIT MAKETH INTERCESSION

Discussing this subject of prayer, the apostle declares that we know not what things to ask for as we ought, but that the spirit maketh intercession for the saints according to the will of God. (Rom. 8:26.) Many have grossly misunderstood this declaration, and supposed it to mean that the Holy Spirit was a person who went to God on behalf of his saints and implored God to grant their desires somehow, contrary to the divine will. Nothing could be further from the thought the apostle is here expressing. His teaching is to the contrary of this, that when the Lord's consecrated ones come to the throne of grace in harmony with the divine invitation, they are sometimes ignorant of what would be the proper requests to make of God. As babes in Christ we might ask for something that would be very injurious to us or misunderstanding the divine word we might petition for things that were never promised to us at all. As an illustration of this we have probably all heard earnest Christian people praying that God would fulfill to them the declaration of the scriptures, "He will baptize you with the Holy Spirit and with fire." (Matt. 3:11.) these dear Christians ignorantly pray, "O Lord, baptize us with fire." They know not what they ask for; they have misunderstood the divine word. John's declaration which they quote was a prophecy of (1) the Pentecostal blessing upon the church, and (2) a prophecy of the fire of trouble which would come upon the Jewish nation after the Israelites indeed had all been gathered out by the Gospel call, the time of awful trouble which came upon that nation, culminating in its utter destruction in the year 69 A..

The dear Christian people who so earnestly prayed to be baptized with the fire, therefore, would be most astonished if the Lord would answer--their petitions. But God does better for them than they pray; he hearkens to their spirit, to their real meaning, to their intention, to their heart's desires. He hears not, recognizes not, answers not the faulty phraseology of the well meant prayer, but accepts the petitions of their spirits, their hearts, when these come before him with groanings that cannot be uttered. That is to say when the heart at times is overburdened and desires fellowship with the Lord, and in its weakness knows not how to express itself, its groanings and desires and intents are all discerned by the Lord and accepted as the real petition. Thus indeed does the Lord help our infirmities. Thus does he every way care for those who are his in Christ Jesus, especially the "little flock" who are seeking to walk in the footsteps of our Redeemer. All things are theirs, for they are Christ's and Christ is God's. Even their imperfect and blemished petitions are all answered for them exceedingly abundantly better than they could have asked or thought.

Let us, therefore, come with holy courage to the throne of grace in every time of trouble, in every time of need, in all of life's trials and difficulties not as those who dictate to the Almighty, but as children coming to a father. Let us tell him of our distress, perplexities, and ask him for solution of them all according to the divine will and intention, and let us arise from our knees with hearts cheered and lightened and full of faith that he who hath begun the good work in us will complete it unto the day of Jesus Christ.

THE SIN-OFFERING AND THE COVENANTS

The following pages are taken from a stenographic report of a "Question Meeting" conducted by Pastor Charles T. Russell, of Allegheny, in St. Louis, Missouri, Sunday, August 11, 1907.

I was glad to accept the invitation of the St. Louis Church to hear certain questions, perplexing to some, and give answers to the best of my ability, with the hope and prayer that the subject may be clear to our minds. We are living in a time when the Lord declares His people shall see eye to eye. He says this shall be characteristic of our day: "When the Lord shall bring again His people the watchmen shall see eye to eye." (Isa. 52:8) We trust that while some of us, called Elders, might be called watchmen in a special sense, yet all the Lord's people are watchmen. We are all seeing what the Lord our God has brought to us, and looking to that word which is the only revelation of the Divine will. So all should see eye to eye. Those asleep are not watchmen, but as soon as they become watchmen they will come to see eye to eye. As we come nearer and nearer to an object it should be more clearly seen by all of us.

If we recognize that we are in the harvest time of the Gospel Age, then we ought to recognize certain things as belonging to that harvest time. If we are not in the harvest time we ought not to expect anything particularly different from what has been the course of the Lord's dealing throughout the past; but so surely as we are, we ought to expect something peculiar to the harvest time. What are we to expect? With us the Jewish nation is a figure, an example and type. You remember having studied that matter. They had their priesthood, their high priests and under priests, we have ours; they had their tabernacle and we have ours; they had their golden candlestick and we have our golden candlestick of Divine truth and light. So when it comes to the harvest we find that their harvest was a particular pattern of this age. If Jesus was present to do the work there, so He will do the work here. What was the work? Separating and reaping, and gathering together of the Lord's elect. How was that done? By the promulgation of greater knowledge and greater truth. He made known certain things. Well, then, we should expect there to be greater knowledge of God's plans pertaining to this time, as there was to that harvest time. We ought to remember that that was the end of the Jewish age and the opening of the Gospel age, and the Apostle, by inspiration, speaks of the light that is to come upon the "ends of the ages," upon the ends of those ages where they met, and these two ages where they meet. That light did not precede our Lord's presence, and while there has not been gross darkness over this Gospel age, the special light from God shines upon the "ends of the ages." It is in harmony with this that you and I have received from the Lord the great blessing of clearer light. It would be very difficult for us to say what is the most valuable feature of Divine truth. It is all important, all necessary, that the man of God may be "thoroughly furnished." (2 Tim. 3:16,17)

Now, dear friends, this clear light on the end of the age came in connection with the understanding of a mystery. What mystery? The "mystery" the Apostle Paul talks about. You remember how this was on the end of the Jewish age and the opening of the Gospel age. The Lord made known the mystery "not made known to other ages and dispensations and which is now made manifest." (Rom. 16:25, 26; Col. 1:26, 27.) You remember how frequently he speaks of this mystery. He explained that the Messiah to come was to be not only our Lord Jesus Christ, but also the Church His Bride. They supposed that the great Messiah was coming and was to be king of their nation and their nation was to convert the world, but they did not know He was going to take out of the Jewish nation the joint heirs of the world.

Then the Apostle says there was another part they did not understand. God not only proposed to take some of that body of Christ from the Jews, but from all the nations of the earth, that He might make of each one a part of the Christ. This is what the Apostle brings to our attention. He says God gave Jesus to be the head of the Church. This is "the mystery" not made known in previous ages. This mystery was not even made known to all the apostles. You remember it was made known to the Apostle Paul, and while the writings of the other apostles are in harmony with this thought, you do not get it from them you get it from Paul. He tells us that God has given to him visions and revelations more than to all the other apostles, and it is manifest from his writings that he had this clearer vision and knowledge. So it is from the Apostle Paul's writings that we get this knowledge of the mystery. Peter did not understand it; he was at first in opposition to the Gentiles, but the Lord sent to him the vision of the sheet held by the four corners, by which he was shown he must not consider the Gentiles any longer as common and unclean. (Acts 10.) You see, then, that at that time the Apostle Peter did not have the thought of the oneness of the Body of Christ. That is a part of the mystery Paul says was made more clear to him through visions and revelations than to them all. And yet that very thought was lost sight of the oneness of Christ and the Church when the Church began to get the wrong impression that it was to convert the world. When they thought of everybody they could not think of the "Body of Christ" including everybody. It destroyed this thought that the Church is the mysterious body of Christ that is to rule all the earth and bless the earth.

So this thought was hidden from all during the Gospel age, and our parents and friends did not see this subject, which is now clear to us. It is clear to us because we are living in the harvest time of the age, when God is brushing away the darkness and allowing our eyes to see and understand. This light was lost sight of during the Gospel age, and now this is the particular thought brought to your attention, namely: That Christ the head, and the Church His Body, is the great anti-typical Moses, the great Prophet God has been raising up, through which the blessing is to come to Israel, and through Israel to all the nations. (Acts 3:22,23) Christ is the head, and through the members of His Elect is to bless Israel and all the nations. When did this feature of light come to our attention? It came to my attention in 1869. I was thinking along these lines, seeing that our friends in the churches were wrong, and seeing the second coming of Christ was the thing to be expected, and along about 1873 I got so far as to see that there was restitution coming to the world, but I did not understand what restitution meant. I supposed that when the world was blessed it would come to be in the same sort of spiritual condition as the Church, and not until 1878 did the light of that feature come, in respect to the fact that the Church is to be of a separate and distinct nature, and is to be used by the Lord in blessing Israel and through them blessing all the nations. What is the basis? The matter we are to discuss this morning The type of the Sin Atonement, and the Day of Atonement.

You have it in a booklet called "Tabernacle Shadows," published in the Fall of 1880 there was the basis of it. Christ is the great High Priest and the Church is associated with Him as the under priests, and to be associated with Him in the glories of the future when the atonement day is over and the sacrifices ended. So have in mind that the basis of any light we have today rests upon this subject of the atonement sacrifices and the sin-offerings of this Day of Atonement. The light has come along these lines. God has been pleased to bless this thought. If that becomes evident to you, you will be very slow to cast aside that which has brought you to the light you have. It is on this line God has granted all the light in which we are now rejoicing.

I shall be pleased to Answer--any questions.

PART I. THE SIN-OFFERING

(Question) How does the "Sin-offering," typified in the Atonement day sacrifices, differ from the Ransom, or corresponding price, paid by Jesus Christ for Adam's forfeited life?

(Answer) The two are not to be associated at all, any more than two of our Lord's parables. If you take the parable of the Wheat and Tares and the parable of the Ten Virgins and try to combine them you will find it impossible to do so, because one is discussing one subject and the other another subject. They are both true, and plausible, and both teach beautiful lessons, but not the same lesson. They are both parables given of God; they do not contradict, but they do not teach the same lesson. And so when we talk about the Ransom, that is one thought, and the Sin-offering is another thought, and we are not to mix the two.

Suppose you were to say, "The Church is called the brothers of Christ and the Bride of Christ and the living stones of the temple. How could Christ marry his own brothers, or the living stones of the temple?" This is confusion these are different figures. They must be kept separate and distinct. In the matter of the Ransom, that is one picture in which the Lord shows us that Adam was condemned while the race was yet in his loins, and that the Lord Jesus Christ as a ransom takes the place of Adam and gives his life for Adam's sin, and thus purchases Adam and his race. This is a pretty picture a true picture and could not be supplanted by any other. If that were left out we would not get the same teaching from God. But we do not want to mix it with any other. How one person buys another, how one person with his race in his loins is bought by another having a race in his loins. Jesus gave Himself in exchange for father Adam and his race. That Adam had a wife associated with him in the transgression, and Christ Jesus a bride to be associated in the work of redemption, is not considered. It is all confined to the one thought that by one man sin entered the world, and so, by another, Jesus Christ, a ransom has been paid for the race redeemed.

WATCH TOWER, 1907, Page 47, Col. 1, third line from foot: "Reading the article in question more carefully, you will perceive that it is not discussing the Redemption, but the SIN-OFFERING, which is a DIFFERENT VIEW of the great transaction."

I presume the question is, How do these two harmonize? Evidently it would have been better if we had not introduced the matter of the Ransom in the first quotation. It would have left it clearer. We are not discussing the Ransom at the time, but the Sin-offering. It tends to confuse. To some minds it might not. The attempt to make the subject too broad and take in two thoughts has been confusing to whoever took this up.

(Question.) May the Church be said to share in the Ransom, actually, reckonedly, or not at all?

(Answer.) So far as the Ransom is concerned, the Church is never said to share in the Ransom. The Ransom is the price and our Lord Jesus is declared to be a ransom for Father Adam. As for Mother Eve, she did not need a ransom she was considered as a part of Adam she came from him, was his wife and was included with him. So with the Church; our part is not shown in the Ransom, for we would correspond to Eve, and she was not shown in the Ransom; nor are we.

(Question.) Does the Church share in the anti-typical Atonement-day sin-offerings, actually, reckonedly, or not at all?

(Answer.) She does share in the anti-typical Atonement day offering. She shares actually in the most positive sense. The Apostle Paul says (Col. 1:24), "seeking to fill up the measure of the sufferings of Christ," and he says, "You have us for an example," so as he was filling up, all those who take up their cross and follow Jesus are sharing with Him. Are we actually sacrificing anything? There are different minds. A thought will strike different people differently. If we read "I am crucified with Christ," some might think they would have to be nailed to the cross. It is not their fault that they cannot grasp the thought but there are some that cannot grasp it. We are crucified with Christ; we are partakers with Him in His sufferings. That is a fact. It is not imagination. Some one says, "I never suffered anything." I am sorry for you. If we have suffered with Him we shall reign with Him. (2 Tim. 2:12) If we be crucified with Him, then we may have joint heirship with Him in His glory. If any one cannot say that, do not feel discouraged, but do not war with those who can do it. Try to say it. If you cannot, then you lack the spiritual vision. Pray to the Lord that you may say this.

I think of a dear brother who died recently who lived near Providence, Rhode Island. When our Brother Streeter came into the truth he was publishing a little paper and he discontinued it and introduced all his subscribers to the WATCH TOWER and started in to preach. He was very much interested in an old retired Adventist minister living near him. He said: "I tried to make the truth plain to him and could make no impression. Finally I concluded it was no use, and so I said to him: `I know that you are a good man and one of the Lord's children, and I have tried to make this matter plain and clear to you, but I see that you are too old to grasp the subject, and I have concluded that the Lord will not require it of you. So I am not going to bore you with this any more. When we meet we will talk about the Lord and His goodness, and have prayer together, and not talk about these things that are objectionable to you. ' The next day the word came, 'Come down to see me. ' I went down, and the old man said: 'Brother Streeter, after you went out I got to thinking and praying, and I said to the Lord, "Lord, am I too old to learn anything? If I am not, help me. I want to know the truth." Before I got off my knees the whole thing became clear to me. ' "

I do not say that is the way with everyone, but that it is the proper course if there is something we do not see. The Apostle James says, "If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God, who giveth liberally and upbraideth not." (Jas. 1:5) We shall know the things that belong to our day. My Answer--is, we are most assuredly members of this Sin-offering. "Thus is shown that the Redeemer and Restorer is spiritual, having given up the human a RANSOM FOR ALL, and that from this highly exalted spiritual CLASS all blessings must proceed." (MD Vol. 1, P. 293, Par. 2) What does that mean? We are not discussing the sacrifices of the atonement day in this quotation. We are discussing another matter that has no bearing. What do we mean by this? I answer, we refer there not only to Jesus, who gave up His human nature, but also to the Church. Each member of it, as he becomes a part of the body of Christ, must give up his right to share in the redeemed human nature. What is true of the head is true of the body. The only difference between Christ and the Church is that Christ was perfect actually and gave Himself, actually, the pre-human and human nature, on behalf of the world; but you and I have no such nature, have not anything that would be suitable for sacrifice. But as we are justified by faith, God counts us as though we were perfect in order to accept our sacrifices as perfect. He first justifies us and after that if we will take the proper steps we may be sanctified. The day of atonement is the time of the acceptance of this sacrifice. "Now is the acceptable time." How acceptable? We used to think it meant, "if you want to escape Hell, God will now accept you to Heaven." But we now see that this scripture means "now is the acceptable time" in the sense that God is now willing to accept your sacrifices. For you have heard the message that His death atones for your sins, and you being justified by that death, present your body a living sacrifice; this is the acceptable time. Will he accept the sacrifice the next day? No. All the sacrificing will be over. It only belongs to this Gospel age. It began with Jesus, the great Head of our priesthood. It ends with this Gospel age, and there will be no more opportunity of being accepted. The day of sin-offering will be at an end, and nobody will be accepted after that. The Elect will be complete then. There will be no adding to or taking from. No one can get into that class except as a sacrifice, for the Apostle Paul says priests are ordained to offer both gifts and sacrifices. So if you are a priest you are to offer gifts and sacrifices. What is the difference? A gift might be something that would be offered, and yet not anything necessary for you to do, as a sort of incense. That is not a sacrifice, that is a gift; as priests not only offered animals, but also incense that went up as a perfume. All priests are ordained to offer both gifts, and also sacrifices for sins. (See Appendix "A") WATCH TOWER, 1907, Page 47, Col. 1, Paragraph 3: "You never read in any of our articles or books, or sermons, the statement that the Church redeems anything or anybody. Quite to the contrary; we have often been accused of making a hobby of the ransom doctrine that our LORD JESUS `tasted death for every man, ' `gave Himself a RANSOM FOR ALL. ' You can take the Bible and read: "Judas went and hanged himself," and another place that says, "Go thou and do likewise." If you put these two together, what kind of sense do you have? It is equally possible to take things out of the WATCH TOWER and make them seem something not intended. In this case we are saying that Christ, the head, and the body make sacrifices. When did Jesus make His sacrifice? When he presented Himself. When did He present Himself? When he came to John at Jordan.

You say, I thought His sacrifice was made on Calvary. It was finished there; it was made at Jordan and it is of that experience that the Apostle says speaking of Jesus there—" Lo, I come, (in the volume of the book it is written of Me) to do Thy will, O God." (Heb. 10:7) He came to that when He was thirty years of age.

You say, was His death reckonedly finished there? Yes, in a sense. It was the beginning of the New Creature from that time. The old creature finally lost life on the cross, and the new creature was glorified three days later. So with all others; the time when you made your sacrifice was when you presented your body a living sacrifice, and you are henceforth living in newness of life, being refreshed and growing strong in the Lord; the new creature growing, and the old creature dying, until finally death will be complete. (Question) Is it correct to apply the Apostle's words (quoted below) to the Church's sacrifice, as proving that the sin-offering for the world is not yet complete, since they have not yet received remission or release from the penalty of sin; and to say that the blood (life) of the last member of Christ's body must be shed before the world can receive remission?

Heb. 9:22: Apart from the shedding of blood there is no remission.

Heb. 10:18: Now where remission of these is, there is no more offering for sin.

(Answer.) Yes, I would say it would be proper to apply both of these scriptures to the work of this Gospel Age, which began with our Lord's baptism, where He made His sacrifice which He finished at Calvary, and which has since been continued by those of the Seed who walk in His steps. It is true of the whole Body of Christ that the shedding of blood is necessary. It is not possible for us to be of the Church unless we suffer with Him. If we suffer with Him, we shall reign with Him. The Apostle is right. We are partakers of the sufferings of Christ, and these sufferings, Peter says, were spoken of by the prophets of olden times when they testified of the sufferings of Christ and the glories to follow. (1 Pet. 1:11.) The sufferings occurred, but did the glory follow? No. What is there if we have not glory now? The Apostle says we have the whole world travailing and groaning; they are waiting for the glory of the manifestation of the sons of God. (Rom. 8:19, 22.) The manifestation cannot be consummated until after the sons have been found. Dear friends, if any one does not wish to be a living sacrifice, he has the chance to step out. The Lord is not compelling anybody. He is merely giving us the opportunity. He is not going to force you. He will deal with others by and by. He is dealing now with those who want to have fellowship in His suffering that they may have fellowship in the glory of the kingdom.

(Question.) What does the Anti-typical Day of Atonement accomplish?

(Answer.) I answer, the Anti-typical Day of Atonement is for the sins of the whole world. This atonement-day service performed for the twelve tribes was typical of what was to be done by the Son of God for all who desire to come into harmony with God. First of all, there was the elect, the priests of the tribe of Levi. The work the High Priest does and the others join in helping to do is the work of atonement, the High Priest accomplishing it and the other priests being counted as members of the body of Christ who is doing the work and is making the sacrifice for our sins. He appears in the presence of God in our behalf not on the world's behalf, but on our behalf. Christ has been in the world for all these eighteen hundred years in the sense that He has been represented by you and by me and every consecrated one of those under-priests, and finally the sin-offering will be accomplished and He will apply the blood of this sacrifice as He applied the other sacrifice, only the merit of all is in His own blood. We have no merit except as He imputes it. The Apostle intimates there is no merit in the Church that the whole merit is in Christ. Rom. 12:1: "I beseech you, therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God that you present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God." Holy? Paul says you are holy, acceptable. How did that come? "To us was imputed the righteousness of Christ.” (Rom. 4:24) His merit has been applied to us. Whatever merit or excellence our sacrifice has is in Him, and through it we may possess the privilege of being associated with Him by and by in the glories of His kingdom.

(Question.) The question was asked: What was specifically accomplished in the Anti-typical atonement, and the Answer-- was, the completion of the sacrifice of Jesus and the Church, his body. What was the value of this sacrifice? What did it accomplish?

(Answer.) The Lord’s object in having a whole Gospel Age instead of a few days was to have an Elect Church, instead of merely having our Lord as the one Elect; because if Jesus had been intended to be the Redeemer and the Church left out of the mission there would have been no Gospel Age provided for at all. The Gospel Age is for us to make our calling and election sure. So if He had not had a Gospel Age it would have meant He did not want an Elect Church; but if He did, as in the case, then He did want an Elect Church.

(Question.) Does the perfected Church participate with Christ in the next age work?

(Answer.) The Church is to have a share in the sufferings now, and in the glory then.

(Question.) The suffering is for the purpose of perfecting the Church so that it may be fitted to do the work in the next age?

(Answer.) The Church is of importance, even if there was no work in the Millennial Age. The Son shall give immortality to whomsoever He will (John 5:21, 26), so here is the Father, the Son and the Bride, all having this quality of glory and honor and immortality. I think that so far as the Church is concerned, God wishes to show, not only to men but to angels, that He is able to accomplish this thing through His Son, who came down to this world into the depths of degradation that we might be partakers of the Divine nature. God could have gotten along without the Church. He did not need the Church, but it gave Him pleasure to accept the Church as joint heirs with Christ, and the Church has been seeing the exceeding richness of His grace in His loving kindness toward us. Not many great, wise, learned, hath He chosen, but chiefly the poor. (1 Cor. 1:26) God not only wished Jesus to be the Savior of mankind, but the manifestation of His love. The Heavenly Father hath exalted the Son, and He will make us joint heirs with Him in glory and immortality. The exaltation of the Church means a manifestation of the love of God.

(Question.) We have an actual part in the atonement?

(Answer.) The word Atonement takes in a large scope, and ultimately all of mankind will have the opportunity of coming into it. The sacrifice of Christ was applied first to the House of Faith, including the Body of Christ; not to every one. He hath ascended on high, and we have an Advocate with the Father, because He appears for us. (1 John 2:1; Heb. 9:24) What do we mean by that? In the sense that if you had a suit, and the case came up in court, and you should address the judge, he would not hear you; you would have to get an attorney. So we have an attorney, and that attorney is termed an "advocate." We have an advocate an attorney Jesus Christ the righteous. How can He be our attorney? Because the Father "hears him always." (John 11:42) What is the basis on which He appears before the Court of Justice? His sacrifice to cover our sins. We are in harmony with the sacred word of God, which says you can only come through Christ. The Advocate says, "No man cometh unto the Father but by Me." (John 14:6) What about the world? They cannot come, because there is only one Advocate, and they have not gotten Him yet. As soon as they receive Him they are believers. "Blessed is the man to whom the Lord doth not impute sin." (Rom. 4:8) The world cannot come. The Father hath no dealing with the world. Will He have dealing with them in the next age? The Advocate will take them Himself as Mediator, to set up a reign of righteousness.

(Question.) The High priest took the blood of the goat and sprinkled it before the altar. Is this an actual or a reckoned part of the Atonement?

(Answer.) I do not think Jesus takes some literal blood into Heaven, and sprinkles it before the mercy-seat there, but the blood as was represented in His sacrificed life. Jesus appeared in the presence of God offering His sacrificed life and said: "This is on behalf of those who believe in Me." So he will again present not our blood, but His own blood, as He counts our blood as His blood. The blood becomes one and he says, "Accept this blood also, this sacrifice also; accept this on behalf of the sins of the whole world." It is all His merit.

(Question.) Is it correct to say that the sprinkling of the blood of the Atonement-Day sacrifices on the Mercy-seat signifies the resurrection of the sacrificer as a New Creature?

(Answer.) We answer, no. The sprinkling of the blood has no signification of that kind. I will picture that before your minds: First of all the High Priest went out to the altar and there he slew the animal; then took some of the blood in his hand, and incense, and went beyond the first veil into the Holy, and inside the Holy there was a candlestick, and there was a table of shew bread, and he sprinkled incense upon the fire and the smoke rose as a perfume, entering beyond the second veil, where was the Most Holy; then he took the vessel containing the blood and passed beyond the second veil. That passing was the death of Christ, and the rising on the other side was the resurrection. He went under the veil, but he rose again on the third day. After our Lord's resurrection He remained forty days, then ascended on high. He there tendered to the Father on behalf of the class He represented the blood shed by His death. For whom did He sprinkle that blood? For "Himself and His house"; for His Body, the Elect, and for all the house of Faith. These were covered by the first sacrifice Lev. 9. Then He took the other sacrifice He took the blood of the goat and did with it just as He did with the blood of the bullock, only He did not offer it "for His house", but "for the people." Now the question is, did Jesus die two times, once for the Church and then for the rest of mankind? Once only. Where, then, does this second sacrifice come in? The Lord indicated that the Church would be partakers with Christ; He is the great High Priest with us as members of His body. He has been offering the sacrifice. You are not doing it, you are not the priest. We offer ourselves to Him. He says "I will count you a member of my body." We give ourselves to the Lord, and He accepts us as members, and the matter of how the sacrifice shall take place is not especially one for us; but we shall ultimately be with Him. We give ourselves to Him, into His hands, and He accepts us as members of His body. So the High Priest was the one who did the sacrificing in both cases. He did not sacrifice the bullock and then tell one of the under-priests to sacrifice the goat. Nobody has any standing before God except the High Priest, and it is only in this way that we can be accepted that our flesh can be counted as Christ's, and we can be counted as New Creatures with Him in glory.

There were two sacrifices, and yet both were offered by the one priest. From this all the light of the present day has come; if we suffer with Him we shall reign with Him; by dying with Him we shall live with Him. Is not that what the Apostle meant when he said, "I beseech you, therefore, that you present your bodies a living sacrifice," etc.? For a while it never really entered into my mind what it meant. The Church has the privilege of living in this day of suffering, and there is the distinction God is making between the Church and the rest of mankind because we suffer with Him, we shall reign with Him. And He has given us His "precious promise that we may become partakers of the divine nature." (2 Pet. 1:4) This promise assured to us the privilege of laying down our lives. You remember how the Apostle put that in his letter to the Phillipians (Chap. 3:10):—"That I may know the power of his resurrection."

Paul knew the resurrection was to come to the just and the unjust, and he says, "If I might know the power of His resurrection." What are the conditions? Being "made conformable unto his death." If we do not go into His death, we will not go into His resurrection. How do we go into His death? What is the difference between Christ's death and the death of any other man? Christ's death was a sacrifice, and we are counted in with Him as part of His sacrifice; so we become partakers with Him in the sufferings of the present time and the glories to follow.

(Question.) What is the scriptural objection to understanding the Apostle's argument in Rom. 6:1-11 to be that our "old man" as a sinner died in the person of his substitute, Jesus, on Calvary; and that therefore we should be raised with him (Jesus) to walk in a "new life" of holiness? Please give a brief exposition of these verses.

(Answer.) "What shall we say then? Shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound? God forbid. How shall we, that are dead to sin, live any longer therein." You will perceive the Apostle is not speaking to Jews, not to the Gentiles, nor to mere believers, but to those who are dead to sin, and have surrendered themselves to die with Christ. "Know ye not, that so many as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death?" We do know. We know to be baptized into Christ is not into ordinary death. But you are baptized into His death. Was that a death to sin? I think not. He "knew no sin." (1 Pet. 2:22) He could not die a death to sin. We were baptized into his death. Therefore that means that our death was not a death to sin, as His death was not a death to sin. Of course our death includes a death to sin. When we give up our lives that we may share with Christ in his sacrificial death, it means we have enlisted to battle against sin have sworn that we will lay down our lives in battle against sin. How shall we that are dead to sin, and whose lives are buried with Christ, how could we consent to sin? We might have imperfections of the flesh, but to be in harmony with sin would be impossible to those who have given up their lives.

"Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death, that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. For if we have been planted together in the likeness of His death, we shall be also in the likeness of His resurrection." That is to say, if we have given up ourselves to be like Him in death, we shall also be like Him, sharers, in His resurrection; the resurrection and death being linked together. Whoever goes into His death goes into His resurrection, and who does not, does not. Just as surely as Jesus' death was a sacrificial death, so must ours be.

"Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin." This old man is crucified. Just as Christ at his baptism had given up his earthly life, and the remaining years of his ministry were to be newness of life, as the old creature was dying; so the Apostle says we may reckon ourselves, our old nature, the old creature, as being crucified with him; it is a slow, lingering death, but we are living as new creatures and the old creature is dying. We are willing to be crucified with him, and suffer on account of sins with him, that we may be with him in his glory.

“For he that is dead is freed from sin.” That is to say, when you are actually dead, you will be actually free. You will never know any more of the temptation of sin. He that is dead is set free from the power of sin. So the Apostle says, though we were once the servants of sin, after being set free we have become the servants of righteousness. In the eighth chapter of Romans he tells us—“But if the Spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you.” God’s Spirit will not come to dwell in you until after you have received the Holy Spirit, but if you have made your consecration and received the Holy Spirit “The Spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by His Spirit that dwelleth in you.” Our Adventist friends apply this to the future, and say that God will quicken their mortal body. We say if we have made our consecration God has given us His Holy Spirit, and this Holy Spirit is already energizing this mortal body. You shall not be “carried away” as formerly, but having the Holy Spirit, you shall walk in newness of life. “Therefore brethren, we are debtors, not to the flesh, to live after the flesh but to the Spirit.” In this chapter he is speaking of the new creature that is triumphing over the flesh. The New Creature might not have perfect control over the flesh, but the Apostle says the Lord is judging these new creatures by their wills, and where the will is right, there can be no sympathy with sin. He has enlisted and laid down his life to battle against sin.

PART II. THE COVENANTS

(Question.) Should the words of the Apostle in Heb. 9:16, 17, as follows, be understood to teach that the word “testament” or “covenant,” as used in the scriptures always carries the significance of a “last will and testament?”

16. For where a testament is there must of necessity be the death of him that made it.

17. For a testament is of force where there hath been a death; it doth never avail while he that made it liveth.

(Answer.) I do not know why we should say the word “testament” always means a covenant. Every will is a covenant, but we could not say every covenant is a testament. I do not understand the purpose of this question.

(Question.) The point is made that the definition of the Apostle in Hebrews is the Scriptural definition of the word, so that we are to understand that in every case where that word is found the Apostle has furnished a definition of it. The contention is that the Apostle’s definition makes it always carry that significance in the Scriptures.

(Answer.) We read in Genesis that God made a covenant with Abraham. If that could not be carried out until the death of the one who executed it God would have to die and God is not going to die. So you see “testament” is not to be used as the only definition of covenant. It would not be appropriate at all there. It would mean that to carry out the testament he would have to die.

(Question.) When does the Abrahamic Covenant become operative, and when the New Covenant?

(Answer.) The Abrahamic Covenant became operative in Christ. It was to the effect that there was to be a “Seed of Abraham.” Nothing could be done until the Seed should come. That Seed was Christ. The Apostle says, you remember, in Galatians, that the Abrahamic Covenant is typified by Sarah, who had no children; she represented that covenant and was barren for some time. Hagar represented

3H394

Sarah, but was not Sarah. This law covenant had a seed; Hagar had a child, Ishmael, who corresponds to the Jewish nation, and as Hagar was a bond woman, so this was a bond covenant, and as Hagar was a bond woman her son was a bond servant. So all Israel are under bondage of the law. The Apostle says by and by the time came when Sarah had a son, and when she did Ishmael was jealous, and so this corresponds to the natural Israel now fighting against the true Israel of God, which is Christ and all that accept of him. The Apostle is saying that the Abrahamic Covenant began to have its fulfillment in Christ, and he says not only Jesus, “but you brethren are the children of the promise.” He makes it still more clear in Gal. 3:29: “If you be Christ’s then are you Abraham’s seed;” not Ishmael’s, but you belong to the real seed, which is Christ. If you belong to Christ you belong to all that is typified in Isaac and Rebecca. The Lord gave Rebecca also to be a type of the Church and as Rebecca became joint-heir with Isaac, so the Church becomes joint-heir with Christ.

(Question.) Is the Church called, during the Gospel Age, under the Abrahamic or New Covenant, or both?

(Answer.) Under the Abrahamic covenant. There is no New Covenant yet. There were three wives of Abraham: Sarah, barren for a time; Hagar who bore Ishmael; and also Keturah, the third wife, by whom he had many sons and daughters. These three wives represented the three covenants. All of Abraham’s seed came from these three; so we do not have two mothers, two covenants, but one. This matter was not always as clear to our minds as it is now. We started in with our minds very much befogged, but gradually we got to see what the Scriptures meant and they became clear to our mental vision. But it took time. In one place the Apostle says: “He hath made a former” and I did not think at the time he was telling the Jews that their covenant was doomed to pass away; I thought he was speaking to us. The Jew said, "Moses gave us that covenant; God gave us that covenant. We are the greatest people in the world, and our covenant will never pass away." They could not imagine such a thing. The Apostle was trying to prove to them that it would. He says, "Hagar was your mother. You are not Israel's sons." They thought they had Abraham, but Paul says not. They did not see it because they could not see it. But this we can see was what the apostle meant. He was telling that those Jews never were the real "Seed of Abraham;" that it was intended their law covenant should pass away, and to prove it he said (Heb. 8:7-13): "Don't you remember it reads, 'I will make a new covenant after those days? Don't you see if he meant he would make a new covenant the old one would be useless?' He tried to get the Jews to see their covenant would not last forever and be the only covenant. We see their covenant did pass away and they, as children of the flesh, are not children of the Spirit. We see that Jesus is going to fulfill that promise (Jer. 31:31-34): "It shall come to pass that after those days I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel," and bless them. With my eyes not clearly open at the time I confused that New Covenant with the Abrahamic Covenant because the Apostle said that the old should pass away and the Sarah covenant come in. But when we examine everything it becomes clear.

WATCH TOWER, 1898, Page 197, Article entitled, "Mercy Rejoiceth Against Judgment": "The death of Christ sealed or ratified or made complete and binding this New Covenant between God and man..... We see then that since Calvary, since the sealing of the New Covenant with the blood of the Mediator, since that New Covenant was thus ratified or made effective, the triumph of love and mercy over justice and the sentence of death originally inflicted has been a fact..... The object of the present call of the Church..... to share in the benefits and privileges of the New Covenant," etc.

I Answer--this: We are thinking all the time of the original covenant God had made and which became effective to us in the death of our Lord. This death not only brought us into relationship with the Abrahamic Covenant; it is also the basis of what is to be done for the world in the next age. So the New Covenant was related to the Lord's death. The New Covenant had as a basis the fulfillment of the death of Christ. Jesus said at his Last Supper, giving the cup, "This is the cup of the new testament the New Covenant in my blood shed for many (for all) for the remission of sins"; in other words the cup of his death was to be efficacious not only for the Church, but for all humankind: "This is the cup of my blood, shed for the remission of sins; drink ye of it." This is the cup which brings justification to the whole world; the cup of suffering and death which seals the New Covenant, and I invite you to join with me in the sealing of that New Covenant." So when the disciples said (Matt. 20:22-23): "Grant that we may sit one at thy right hand and one at thy left," he said, "Are you able to drink of the cup I shall drink of?" No one can be with him on his throne except that he drink of this cup and share in his blood. So the hope of being with him in his throne is in sharing his cup as well as being baptized into his death. If we are partakers with him we are members of his body. If not, we are not. Somebody else will get in, for the body must be full. No one could serve as High Priest unless he had all his fingers and toes. Why? Because those parts were necessary to represent full completion, a specific principle that part could not be added or diminished. There will be neither one more nor less than the elect number. If you fail to get in, somebody else will, for that number must be full. No one can be of the Bride of Christ except he shall drink of his cup. "Drink ye of this cup."

WATCH TOWER, 1903, page 436: "While the benefits of this gracious arrangement are only for "us," for "believers," for those who come unto God by Christ under the provisions of the New Covenant..... etc."

I answer, there I used the New Covenant as a name for the Abrahamic because my mind was not clear that the Abrahamic Covenant was the old Covenant, made long before the Jewish Covenant.

Quoting further from the WATCH TOWER above mentioned: "Our call and acceptance are based on the New Covenant, etc. We have seen that all those acceptable to God in Christ were obliged to come unto him under the New Covenant."

I Answer--just the same thing. We have nothing to do with that New Covenant. It means what it says. "It shall come to pass after those days I will make a new covenant." You see the difference between after those days and during those days. "Those days" are the Gospel Age. During those days the Lord does something for Spiritual Israel, taking out the Body the Bride. (Joel 2:28,29.) "It shall come to pass after those days I will pour out My spirit upon all flesh." But "in those days," said the Lord, "I will pour out My spirit upon My servants and My handmaidens." Nobody else in those days. "It shall come to pass after those days I will make a new covenant." In other words, not until after this Gospel Age can the New Covenant be sealed. Our Lord gave His life for the sealing, but left something for you. He said, "Drink ye of it," for this is the basis on which this New Covenant is sealed. WATCH TOWER, 1907, Page 9, Col. 1, Paragraph 2: "Entirely separate and distinct from both of the foregoing covenants is the Lord's promise of a New Covenant." In this article we were discussing it from our present greater enlightenment. If you will look back you will find you have done a great many silly things, and that is one of the silly things I did. Because I have got my "thinker" to work, and see that what I thought was the New Covenant is not the new one, somebody takes me to task. (Foot of same col.) "The New Covenant belongs exclusively to the coming age as the Abrahamic Covenant belongs exclusively to the Gospel Age, and as the Law Covenant applied exclusively to the Jewish Age." Page 10, 1st col. 2nd line: "The New Covenant is not yet in existence." Quite correct. The New Covenant is to be made "after those days," and awaits its ratification until after the last member of the Body of Christ shall have tasted death, because no testament can be in effect while the testator lives. The whole Church has been accepted as the Body, but not until the last member has gone will the blessings of the New Covenant come to the world.

(Question.) If the Church is accepted and blessed under the provisions of the New Covenant,— (Answer.) It is not accepted and blessed under the provisions of the New Covenant. It is accepted and blessed under the Abrahamic Covenant.

(Continuing Question.) —and they, being "Christ's" are so constituted members of the Seed of Abraham,—

(Answer.) That is not the way they are constituted. They are constituted by being united to Christ as the Bride, as was illustrated in the case of Rebecca when she was married to Isaac and became joint-heir with Isaac; so the Church becomes joint-heir with Christ.

(Continuing Question.) —will not all those who during the Millennial Age come under the provisions of the New Covenant and are blessed by it also thus become members of "the Seed," and thus the promise to Abraham be fulfilled to them, i. e.: (Being) In thee and (being) in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed;"

I answer, no. There were two seeds. Rom. 4:16—"..... to the end the promise might be sure to all the seed; not to that only which is of the law, but to that also which is of the faith of Abraham; who is the father of us all."

The Apostle's thought seems here to be that while there is only one in number, yet there are many of us in another sense in the sense that all nations are yet to become the children of Abraham; as all the nations will come into harmony with God, they will become of God's seed, so that all may ultimately be the children of God. Abraham was the father of Ishmael, and the father of Keturah's children, and yet only one was called "the Seed," the Seed which the promise specified. In that sense Christ and the Church is the only Seed, but in a general sense, that all mankind may receive the blessings, they may become the seed of Abraham, but not The Seed. There is a particular seed, the Seed of promise, and the general seed.

(Question.) Tell us how you found out all these things.

(Answer.) I will tell you, sister. Here a little, and there a little. The Lord, we are told, has hidden His plan so that none of the wise shall understand; He “hath hidden these things from the wise and revealed them unto babes.” And it is in proportion as we become humble, teachable children, that we can learn them. It was intended in God’s plan that there should be a special light upon the ends of the ages, and it is this special light God is giving us that we understand to be our blessing. The Lord has been blessing and making these things known in a natural way. The Lord said (Rev. 10:7): “It shall come to pass in the days of the sounding of the Seventh Trumpet that the mystery of God shall be finished.” The Trumpet began to sound in 1878, and one of the first things to be accomplished is that the mystery is to be finished. The Apostle says he had far more knowledge of the mystery than any one else. He says God had given to him more knowledge than to any one else. We understand it is our privilege to see some of these things with the same clearness the Apostle Paul saw them. He says he was not permitted to tell these things. It is now privileged to be told. Why did God tell Paul anything? Because he was one of the Apostles, and it is necessary that all knowledge shall come through the Word of God so that God will not need to give special revelations today. And he kept the things secret until the due time, and when the due time had come the things were made clear.

(Question.) I want to know, where did you get all this? From the New Testament?

(Answer.) From the Old Testament and the New Testament both. Paul says “we have an anchor of the soul.” What is the anchor of the soul? This promise that God made to Abraham and Isaac; and everything Paul said in the New Testament is proved by the Old Testament. We would not be wise to leave out the Old Testament.

(Question.) What is the New Testament?

(Answer.) I see what you mean. Do we call this book the New Testament? God never called this book the New Testament. He was not meaning this book. It has nothing to do with the “New Testament.” This is not the sense in which the “New Testament” is used.

(Question.) What do you call it if it is not the New Testament?

(Answer.) You might call it “asparagus.” You might call it anything.

(Question.) Isn’t it the Word of God?

(Answer.) Yes, but I do not think any of the apostles called this the New Testament. It is a name that has been given by man. We call this the New Testament, but it is not called so in the Scriptures.

(Question.) Didn't Paul say he was a minister of the New Testament?

(Answer.) Yes, but he was not talking about this book.

(Question.) What was he talking about?

(Answer.) About the work of Christ. We are talking about the New Testament. God says it shall come to pass that after those days there shall be a New Testament, a New Covenant. Jehovah was talking about this New Testament, this New Covenant. Paul was a servant of it and was talking about it, and you may be a servant of it and talk about it. I am talking about the New Covenant. I am saying it is your privilege and mine to be sharers in the sealing of that New Covenant which is to be a blessing to the world. So Paul was an able minister of that New Covenant.

(Question.) Was it JEHOVAH, or the Son of God, who made the covenant with Abraham?

(Answer.) It was Jehovah who made the covenant with Abraham. The Son of God had nothing to do with covenants until He became flesh. His time of work began when He was made flesh.

(Question.) Will Christ be the testator of the New Testament of God?

(Answer.) It is God's covenant in Christ. God has purposed that through this Seed all the earth shall be blessed. I do not say how. I leave the matter in Christ's hands. He is the life-giver of the world, and therefore the father, the prophet, the great priest and king, and shall work all through the Millennial age because all power has been given into his hands. Not that which is his own power individually, but power delegated to him by the Father, and the Father gives him the power to do this; and so the Millennial age will have to do with Jesus and the Church in the same way the Jews had to do with Moses. But they had all to do with Moses, and Moses with God. As you remember on several occasions, God said to Moses, "Let me alone that I may destroy this people." God put it in this way to show us how completely Moses was the mediator, and that what Moses did God was doing. So in the Millennial Age, what the glorified Christ shall say will be just the same as if the Father had said it. And just as in the Bible, Abraham's children had to do with Isaac, so here God has provided a blessing in Christ, and whoever gets any blessings gets it under Christ. It is all in Christ. The whole work looks to this Christ, and during the "day of Christ" he shall bring all things into subjection.

Paul brings out the thought that a testament is of no force until the testator is dead. I believe he meant to say the New Covenant will not be in force except under certain conditions; because God was the testator. He had in view certain conditions, which must be fulfilled.

We sometimes read that God declares “I am thy redeemer, and beside me there is no Savior,” and then again we read that God sent Jesus to be the Savior of the world, and again we read that Christ gave himself, and again we read that God gave his Son. These are different accounts, and we are obliged to harmonize them. So in this case it is said he became a testator. I think it is really God who is behind the whole matter, but since Christ was not forced to it, it may be said to be his testament. So you may be said to join in this testament. Sacrifice is a different thing from execution. Execution would be by force, but sacrifice brings in the thought of voluntariness. So we are doing the Father’s will, and so when Christ was making this testament he was carrying out his Father’s will, and in harmony with the Father’s original covenant. It was his gift of life to the world, and the sealing of that arrangement by which God is willing to receive men.

APPENDIX “A”

The following letters are self-explanatory East St. Louis, Ill., March 27, 1909 Mr. Charles T. Russell, Allegheny, Pa. Dear Brother Russell:

A local caviler and adversary of the harvest work is endeavoring to make capital out of a claimed inconsistency in the following passage from DAWN STUDIES, Vol. 1, page 293, par. 2:

“Thus is shown that the ‘Redeemer and Restorer is spiritual, having given up the human a ransom for all, and that from this highly exalted spiritual class all blessings must proceed.”

The point criticized is the use of the word “ransom” as applied to a “class.” This passage is placed in juxtaposition with some positive statements from your pen that Jesus Christ was the sole Ransom, or corresponding price paid to cancel the penalty passed on Father Adam for sin, and a contradiction claimed to be proven thereby.

Of course these passages offer no difficulty to any who are not seeking to pick flaws; but as your use of the word seems to me so perfectly harmonious and consistent in the passages referred to, I desire for the benefit of some who may be confused by the artfulness and vehemence of your critic to state my understanding of your use of the word, and ask if I rightly apprehend your meaning.

Am I right in taking it that precisely the same difference exists in your use of the words “redeemer” and “ransom” in the two differing statements referred to, as occurred in your use of the word “mediator,” about which an article appeared in a recent TOWER? That is, in some instances it is used in a general and broader sense, in others in a particular and specific sense, as applied to the doctrine of the Ransom? If I am correct in my understanding, the passage from Vol. 1 hereinbefore quoted should be understood to mean that the “spiritual class” referred to (Jesus the Head, the Church His Body) are, in the Plan of God, the ones who buy back —” redeem” the race of mankind “all” from the sin and death condition ; their humanity being the cost to them the price or “ransom” given which privileges them to have a share in the work of restoration and blessing. Thus I understand you had no reference here to the specific doctrine of “the ransom” the illustration of the importance and exactness of God’s Justice the life of the man Jesus paying the exact equivalent for the forfeited life of the man Adam.

If my statement of your meaning meets with your approval I would be glad if you would write me a few lines so stating, to be used in connection with this letter in meeting the attacks of the adversaries.

With much Christian love, I am as ever,

Yours in the King’s Service,

Mr. Horace E. Hollister, East St. Louis, Illinois

Dear Brother:

Your kind letter regarding the use of the words “Redeemer” and “Ransom,” reached us in due season, and delay in reply has been occasioned by the press of work attendant upon our removal here.

Your letter presents our understanding of the matter perfectly; therefore, we could add nothing to it. Much obliged to you for bringing the matter to our attention as you have, and remain,

Yours in our Redeemer,

ADDRESS ON “TO HELL AND BACK”

Tries to Prove by Scriptural Proofs That the Hell of the Bible is Not a Place of Torment But Merely the State of Death the Tomb.

Pastor C. T. Russell, of Allegheny, Pa., editor of “Zion’s Watch Tower,” delivered an address at the Majestic theatre Sunday afternoon on the subject, “To Hell and Back.” A number of people from out of town were in attendance. Mr. Russell said in part:

“I hold that it is the best of God’s people, the tenderest of heart, the most Christianlike, who have had trouble with the question of eternal torment. I know how to sympathize with them because once I had similar distress of mind, and, like others, was obliged to say, ”If I believe this doctrine and meditate upon it, it will surely make me crazy, as it has done hundreds and thousands of others.” Such loving hearts have found a palliation but not a relief, not a satisfaction, in the thought that somehow, perhaps, somewhere, at some time, God’s character would be cleared of the dreadful stain cast upon it by this doctrine, which we believed to be the teaching of God’s book, the Bible.

“I, too, once so believed and feared, and was ashamed of my God because of the injustice, lovelessness, devilishness implied in the theory taught me from infancy, that God, knowing the end from the beginning, had created our race under conditions as we see them; that He provided a great place called hell for their torture, and created a corps of fireproof devils to attend to the matter, and provided also fuel enough to perpetuate the torture to all eternity. I felt thankful indeed to realize myself an object of divine mercy and favor, but my heart went out for the thousands of millions of human beings of civilized as well as heathen lands who had gone down into death utterly ignorant of ”the only name given under heaven and among men whereby we must be saved”—” neither is there salvation in any other.”

“That I thoroughly believed this doctrine you may know when I tell you that at 17 years of age it was my custom to go out at night to chalk up words of warning in conspicuous places, that peradventure I might save some from the awful doom. And the while I wondered why God, who is the infinite power, did not blazon forth some words of warning upon the sky or cause angel trumpeters to announce positively and forcefully the doom to which the world in general was, I supposed, hastening. I was an admirer of the great Baptist preacher, Charles Spurgeon, and esteemed him very highly for the honesty and candor which made his sermons so dreadfully hot, believing as I did that he was an exceptionally honest minister, and that others who believed similarly were grossly derelict of duty in not preaching hell more strenuously. ”But I am here this afternoon, dear friends, to explain to you how in great mercy God opened the eyes of my understanding to see that the doctrine of eternal torment is not the teaching of the Bible, but on the contrary is a misrepresentation and blasphemy of the great and holy name. I am here to prove to you that the doctrine of eternal torment has come down to us from the Dark Ages in the hymns, and catechisms and creeds, and that it is not only contrary to reason, but also contrary to the word of God.

“Demon gods vicious, spiteful, merciless are known to all the heathen peoples. The Bible alone of all religious books teaches a God of love, sympathy and compassion, sympathetic with His creatures and desirous of rescuing them from their fallen estate. It was during the ”Dark Ages,” when the spirit of Christ, the spirit of love, became so nearly extinct even among Christians, that they thought it perfectly proper and pleasing to God that they should tear one another limb from limb on the rack, that they should burn one another at the stake, that they should torture one another with thumbscrews and fill each other’s mouths and ears with molten lead it was at that time and by those of our deluded ancestors that this doctrine of eternal torment was torn from heathendom and engrafted upon the teachings of Jesus and His apostles.

“You are all aware that the Old Testament portion of the Bible was written in the Hebrew language and the New Testament in the Greek. We will commence with the Old Testament. We find that the word ”hell” everywhere throughout the Old Testament is a translation of the Hebrew word “sheol,” which occurs altogether sixty-six times, and is translated three different ways in our common version: thirty-two times grave, thirty-one times hell and three times pit. It should have been translated grave or tomb in every instance. Indeed, in two instances, where it is rendered hell in the common version, the marginal reading says, “Hebrew, the grave.”

“We now call your attention to the fact that the word sheol in the Old Testament, which we have shown means merely tomb, the death state, is the exact equivalent of the word hades in the New Testament Greek, which likewise means tomb, the state of death. For instance, in Psalm 16:10 we read, ”Thou will not leave my soul in sheol” (hell, the tomb), and we find St. Peter quoting this on the day of Pentecost (Acts 2:27-31), “Thou will not leave my soul in hades,” hell, the grave. St. Peter proceeds to explain that David spoke this not respecting his own soul, but the soul of Jesus, and thus foretold our Lord’s resurrection from the dead on the third day. How simple, how plain the entire matter is from this the scriptural standpoint.”

SEVEN WOMEN TAKE HOLD OF ONE MAN

Allegheny, Pa., Sept. 8 Pastor C. T. Russell addressed a congregation of about 800 this afternoon in Allegheny Carnegie hall from an unusual text, "Seven women shall take hold of one man in that day, saying, We will eat our own bread and wear our own apparel, only let us be called by thy name to take away our reproach" (Isa. 4:1). The speaker said:

Many of the prophecies are highly figurative, symbolical. Doubtless they had some measure of application to the circumstances and conditions of the people of Israel at the time they were written, but we have apostolic authority for concluding that their principal lessons were intended for spiritual Israel. Saint Peter declares that "holy men of old spoke and wrote as they were moved by the Holy Spirit," and that "not unto themselves but unto us they did minister the things which are now reported unto you" (2 Peter 1:21; 1 Peter 1:12). Our Lord and the apostles in their teachings quoted continually from the prophecies, and invariably applied the lesson to their day or to some future event of this gospel age. Hence, we are abundantly justified in assuming that our text is applicable to some period of this gospel age. Its peculiar expression, "In that day," reminds us that it is usual all through the scriptures in referring to the closing period of this gospel age, with its time of trouble and general church and world confusion incident to the inauguration of the new dispensation, the millennium. It is proper, then, that we seek to apply this scripture to our time, and appropriate its lessons, whatever it may be.

Throughout the scriptures a woman is a symbol of the church — a pure woman of a pure church, a corrupt woman of a false church. We find our Lord comparing the true church in the end of this age to a company of virgins part wise and part foolish — and likening himself to the bridegroom, who at the end of the age had come to receive his espoused church to himself in glory. John the Baptist pictured the matter after the same manner, saying, "He that hath the bride is the bridegroom:" the Apostle Paul amplifies the figure, declaring, "I have espoused you (the consecrated church) as a chaste virgin unto one husband, which is Christ" (John 3:29; 2 Cor. 11:2). Here, as well as in the Lord's parable of the virgins, the Jewish marriage is set forth as the example of pattern of the union between Christ and the church a very different figure from our marriage custom of the present time. With the Jews in olden time, when a betrothal took place, legal and binding documents were signed by or for the contracting parties, but no actual marriage or union took place for about a year. During that year, while waiting for the coming of the bridegroom to receive her unto himself, to take her to his own house, it was required of the espoused that she should be as faithful, as loyal, as true to her espousals as is now expected of any true wife who has been actually and fully married to her husband. We see the harmony between the Jewish marriage custom and the Lord's dealings with the church. None are espoused to the Lord except as they have entered into a formal and definite contract with him. This contract on the Lord's part being the exceeding great and precious promises of the scriptures, assuring the espoused that if found faithful she shall be joint-heir with her Lord, the Bridegroom, in his millennial kingdom and all its glories. The contract on the part of the church is our covenant of consecration, loyalty, faithfulness unto our Redeemer, to whom we are espoused, even unto death. The interim following our personal acceptance of the Lord's gracious promises by a full consecration of our all to him and his service until we actually die corresponds in a measure to the betrothal period of the Jewish maiden; but the still clearer and more exact fulfillment of the figure is found in the history of the church as a whole; the Lord's virgin church was espoused to him at Pentecost, and has been awaiting the coming of the Bridegroom and the resurrection change to glory, honor and immortality the marriage, the union for nearly nineteen centuries.

THE BRIDE IN KINGDOM GLORY

Our Lord continued the same lesson and illustration in his last message to the church, recorded in the book of Revelation. There he still continues to picture the church as a betrothed virgin, unmarried, but under strictest obligations to purity and faithfulness down to the end of this gospel age where she is represented as making herself ready for the Bridegroom coming and for the marriage. To be ready, as the apostle explains, she must have on the wedding garment, and it must be "without spot or wrinkle or any such thing" (Eph. 5:27). Not that any member of that glorious company could ever hope to maintain absolute purity and perfection, since all were "born in sin and shapen in iniquity" (Psa. 51:5), but that the robe representing the imputed righteousness of Christ covers every unintentional blemish and imperfection, and that any blemish or soil or spot or wrinkle upon this robe would be a cause of such grief to the betrothed one that the stain would be removed and the wrinkle pressed out by the gracious arrangements made therefor by the heavenly Bridegroom, who presented the robe and gave the directions by which it might be kept "unspotted from the world" without spot or wrinkle or any such thing."

The same record shows that with the resurrection "change" in the end of this age the "espoused virgin" church will be no more, because she will have passed from her espoused state into the more exalted one of the Bride married or united to her Lord and Bridegroom.

Note the symbolical picture by which she is represented: the New Jerusalem coming down out of heaven that is, the heavenly kingdom, the new government or rulership of the world, is then pictured as the glorified church, the bride, for we read that the messenger said to John the Revelator, "Come and I will show you the bride, the Lamb's wife" (no longer the espoused virgin). Then he showed him the holy city, filled with the glory of God

3H399

(Rev. 21:9-10). The grand office or work of the church in glory is also pictured before us as the work of the Bride the Spirit and the Bride shall say, Come, and whosoever will may take of the water of life freely. At the present time not only is the church not the Bride, but neither is she privileged to say, Come, to whosoever will, but only to "as many as the Lord your God shall call" (Acts 2:39); for with the calling and drawing of this present time there is a measure of election, as the scriptures declare in our Lord's words, "No man can come unto me except the Father, which sent me draw him" (John 6:44). Moreover, there is no river of the water of life now. That bountiful provision is for the future for the world during the millennial age. Now, as our Lord declares, those who believe in him and become his consecrated followers are granted to have in themselves a well of water springing up unto everlasting life (John 4:14). The river of the water of life and its bountiful provisions for the world of mankind, to which all will be invited, is most clearly and distinctly set forth as belonging to the epoch of the millennial kingdom, when the church will be no longer an espoused virgin, but the Bride, the Lamb's wife when she will be no longer in a condition of humiliation and groaning because of her burdens, but, filled with the glory of God, the kingdom of her Bridegroom with which she will be associated will be the fountain (the holy city) from whence will proceed a great river of truth and grace, which all mankind may drink of to full satisfaction and everlasting life, if they will.

MANY CHURCHES OF CHRIST

The heathen, and children in Christian lands, when they begin to study the Bible, are perplexed and inquire, Which is the church of Christ? They see various churches of various names claiming that they are branches of the church of Christ. The unsophisticated mind inquires, Which is the true? Which did Jesus establish? Of which was He the head and founder? To which did the apostles belong? The Answer--implies a measure of confusion and reproach. Each denomination claims to be as good as any other and a little better, to be as true as any other. A measure of confusion comes as they severally endeavor to tell us their origin and founders, for one saith I am of Calvin, I am of Luther, another I am of Wesley, another I am of Zwingli. But when confronted with the thought that these various sects and parties all originated within the past few hundred years, and when asked how they can reconcile this fact with the declaration of the scriptures respecting the founding of the church by Christ with the twelve apostles as the living foundation stones, they are confused.

The more courageous attempt an explanation and tell us that they believe that their church was the original one founded by the Lord and the apostles, but that a great falling away from the original simplicity took place, so that for long centuries Methodism was forgotten, Calvinism was forgotten, Lutheranism was forgotten, etc., until later these various teachers re-established the original church. But, we ask, How could Wesley re-establish the original church if Calvin had re-established it? How could Luther re-establish it if Zwingli re-established it? Again there is confusion of face and stammering and hesitancy for an answer. Then the Church of Rome, the Greek church and the Church of England come forward and declare that their organizations are older than any of these others, and that hence theirs are the true, the original; but again we ask, Which of you is the oldest? and where did your organization begin? Give us the proofs. All claim genuineness and originality, but none can show any existence of their present organization earlier than the third century. And when we contrast their elaborate and formal services with the simplicity of the early church, as described in the New Testament, we are sure that there can be no identity between the two. When we compare their doctrines with the doctrines of Christ and the apostles, as set forth in the New Testament, there is an equal in harmony their claims fall to the ground for lack of support. The doctrines and practices of the churches of the Reformation period and since evidently are much more in harmony with the practices and doctrines of the apostolic church than are the older systems; but they are still far from thorough accord with each other and also out of accord with the original.

DIFFERENT IN FAITH AND PRACTICE

We have no time here to discuss fully the difference of faith and practice between the various denominations of today nor to contrast with these the faith and practice of the church organized by the Lord. We will merely refer to a few of these later. The scriptures teach that there is but one God, the Father, and one Lord, Jesus Christ. (1 Cor. 8:6); that the Father is above all, that he sent the Son to be our Redeemer, and that when He had faithfully accomplished the work the Father raised Him from the dead and exalted Him to His own right hand or place of favor next to Himself and the Redeemer Himself said, "The Father is greater than I." (John 14:28) But the various churches, each claiming to be the original, unite in telling us that there are three Gods, "equal in power and glory." Sometimes they explain that the three Gods operate as one God, at other times they claim that there is but the one God, but that He has made three different manifestations of Himself to assist us in comprehending Him, and that each manifestation is as much the one God as the other.

What confusion! How impossible for those whose minds are thus addled to understand respecting the divine plan of salvation, to comprehend the scriptural statement that "there is one God, and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus; who gave Himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time." (1 Tim. 2:5, 6) How could one part of God be a mediator for men with the other part of the same God? Above all, how could God in one manifestation die as Adam's substitute and ransom, while the same God in another sense would accept that ransom and raise the other part of Himself from the dead? How can our dear friends, confused by the errors they have carried with them from the "dark ages," understand or appreciate that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures, and that the Father raised Him from the dead by His own power on the third day. In their confusion of trying to think of the Lord Jesus as being one in person, one in essence, etc., with the Father, they cannot imagine that He died at all, for if God died in any comprehensible sense there was a period in which the universe was without a God! and how could the Father raise the Son from the dead if the Son was merely another name for the Father. All this confusion has tended to undermine the faith of the more rational members of all these various churches, until today their faith is a very indefinite thing, hard to define, if indeed it has any form or tangibility. So disgusted have people in general become with their inability to harmonize their creeds of the "dark ages" with common sense that many of the brightest have abandoned the matter and sought to formulate new and more rational conceptions.

But, alas, the great Adversary, as the Apostle forewarned, manifesting himself as an angel of light and leader into all truth, has captured their college and seminary professors and most prominent ministers. He has beguiled them, as the serpent beguiled Eve, with a hope and ambition for greater knowledge than that furnished in the divine revelation. They have become wonderful unanimity "Higher Critics" and "Evolutionists." In the name of all that is holy and good they are persuading the leading minds in all these different churches that the Bible is not the Word of God, that it is wholly unreliable, that Jesus and the apostles were honest enough, but not brilliant scholars, and were unable to detect the falsities of the Old Testament upon which all of their teachings were based. These wise men of our time assure us that the story of Adam and Eve is not a statement of fact that at very most it might be considered an allegory, which twenty men might guess at and interpret in twenty different ways. They assure us that there was never a Garden of Eden, there never was forbidden fruit, there never was a sentence passed upon Adam because of his disobedience in perfection, and that, therefore, the Scriptures delude us when they tell us that it was by reason of this sin that death entered into the world. They tell us that Adam was merely one removed from a monkey, and hence far from able to keep any divine law, and far from capable of being judged or condemned to death on account of disobedience. And since they deny the fall, and that man thus lost his home, his life, his relationship to God, they perforce deny also that there was any need of a Savior. They deny the Lord's words that He came "to seek and to save that which was lost." Denying that there was any sin they deny that Christ died for our sins and rose again for our justification. (1 Cor. 15:3) They entirely ignore the apostle's statement that by one man's disobedience sin entered into the world and death as the result of sin; and thus death passed upon all men because all are sinners. (Rom. 5:12) Thus do they make void the word of God, and set up instead of it human tradition, human theories the golden image which all are required to bow down to and worship if they would be called respectable, intelligent, sane.

CHURCHIANITY—CONFUSION--BABYLON

We have seen that the Scriptures refer to the true church of Christ as the espoused virgin of the Lord, and that they indicate clearly that eventually she is to be the bride, the Lamb's wife. But where is she now? Where has she been all through the period between the days of the apostles and the present time? We Answer--that the Scriptures explain that she has been in the "wilderness." (Rev. 12:14). In other words, she has been in disfavor, ignored, and to the worldly wise unknown. Some of her members have been scattered in the various denominations already referred to and some of them outside of all of these. Of the true church the Master said, "If ye were of the world the world would love its own. But because you are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you." The apostle, again describing this class, declares of them that not many wise, not many great, not many learned, not many noble, not many mighty are called but chiefly the poor of this world, rich in faith. The popular institutions already referred to are worldly; their aims, their ambitions, their methods are worldly, and hence there can be very little religious sympathy, fellowship and cooperation between the majority of these sectarian systems and the minority in them who are true to the Lord and to his Word.

The majority think it strange that the minority are such peculiar people, that they take such different views of life and its proprieties, that they set their affections on things above and not on the things of the earth, that they love a prayer meeting better than they love a ball, a concert or a theater. They think it strange that they do not join with them in all the various questionable means employed for raising money for church purposes, the fairs, socials, charades, lotteries, grab bags, etc., and as the apostle intimates they are very likely to speak evil of those who have more of the Spirit of the Lord and of the apostles, the spirit of holiness. Our Lord's parable of the wheat and the tares explains the situation exactly. He sowed the good wheat seed and the apostles followed in the same work, but subsequently the great adversary sowed tare seed, errors, and brought into nominal Christendom many who were Christians merely in name, and who professed morality for their personal advantage either in the hope of escaping the torment of the future or in the hope of gaining temporary advantage in the present life. This sowing checked the real wheat and hindered its development to a very large extent, so that today, look where we will over the field of Christendom, we see comparatively few of the true wheat class comparatively few true disciples of the Lord, willing and glad to walk in his footsteps in the narrow way of self-sacrifice and service. We see the vast majority ignorant of the truth and grace of the Lord not knowing Jesus as the personal Savior, not knowing from what they were redeemed, not knowing of the call nor to what they have been called, not knowing of the necessity of the trials and difficulties of this present time for all those who will be faithful to the Lord, and not knowing the exceeding great and precious things which God hath in reservation for them that love him.

We see that the fruits of the Spirit possessed by the wheat class are not esteemed and not enjoyed by the tare class, namely, meekness, gentleness, patience, long suffering, love. We see, on the contrary, that the tare class is full of earthly ambition, earthly schemes and plans, and in every sense of the word give evidence that they are of the earth earthy. Some of these tares are fine, noble people in many respects; some of them give largely out of their abundance for garnishing the sepulchers of the righteous, for stained glass windows representing the Lord crucified or the apostles preaching the truth, but they have not the root of the matter in them, they have never taken up their cross to follow the meek and lowly one; they have never consecrated their lives to the Lord's service, even unto death; they have never entered the narrow way, which alone leads to glory, honor and immortality, to which the true church has been called. Having in mind the numerous brands of churchianity, Presbyterians, Methodists, Lutherans, Roman Catholics, etc., and having in mind also their various conflicting doctrines, we can not wonder that the Scriptures use the word Babylon as a name for these systems as a whole especially when we come to know that the word Babylon signifies confusion. You can put your finger with some degree of definiteness upon the teachings of Confucius and his followers and know what they believe; you can do the same with those of Buddhists, Brahmins and others, but not so with Christians, for their doctrines are legion, as are their names, and it becomes necessary to find out what kind of a Christian one is in order to know what is his faith.

TO TAKE AWAY OUR REPROACH

The confusion of doctrines among the various branches of churchianity has brought reproach upon them all. The heathen are inquiring how it comes there are so many different kinds of Christians, and how it comes that they all have their own Bibles, and how it comes that they all can get their various theories out of the same book. This is a reproach that is being keenly felt by the leading minds of all denominations. As a consequence their creeds are being very generally ignored, while the organizations built upon and by those creeds, as upon foundations separate from others, are held unto most firmly. A Presbyterian may despise his creed, and frankly tell someone, as a Presbyterian minister did, that if he wanted to believe the creed he must swallow it as he would a Brandreth pill, for if he would attempt to chew it he would never swallow it. Hence the Longer and Shorter Catechisms are practically buried, as things better to be forgotten in the interests of the prosperity of the denomination which formerly built upon them. And it is much the same with other denominations and their creeds; the systems are being worshiped more than ever, and the creeds being repudiated more than ever.

But why should this be if the creeds are admitted to be unsatisfactory and better buried? Why should not all Christians come together upon the simple ground of faith in the Bible accepting that as their only creed? Why? Because to do this would wound their pride, would destroy their denominational integrity would destroy the image they have so long worshiped. Each denomination expresses itself as quite willing to absorb all the others, but not willing to be absorbed by any of the others not that they see that there is any principle involved but only because of pride and churchianity and a lack of the real Spirit of the Lord. And as the apostle says, "If any man have not the Spirit of Christ he is none of his." Hence in churchianity and its various branches there are evidently many, a large majority, who at heart are not the Lord's, but their own. They speak quite truly when they say that they belong to this or that denomination. It owns them body and mind, they serve and reverence it as the heathen do an idol.

As this situation is more and more clearly seen, and as the people realize the unsatisfactoriness of their old creeds, and as their theologians dispense to them their new creed of higher criticism and evolution and salvation by self help and good works, the various denominations are saying to themselves, Go to now; let us build a great tower of Babel; let us have a federation of denominations without any particular creed, without any particular faith, without any particular hope, without any particular aim except our self-preservation as denominations. Let us build so high that the floods of trouble that we apprehend shall do us no injury, but let us have no confidence in the ark, Christ Jesus, and feel no necessity for being hidden therein, nor of being buried in the likeness of Christ's death and thus carried over to the new dispensation promised.

SEVEN WOMEN IN THAT DAY

Who are the seven women? We have seen that women are pointed to as representatives or types of the churches that the true church is symbolized by a woman, a virgin and the false systems by harlots, unfaithful to their Bridegroom. Seven is recognized throughout the scriptures as being a symbol of completeness. And so we assume it here to signify all the churches of this world but not to include the true church, which is not of this world and which does not follow its course. We have come to the time when these seven women that is to say, all the various sects and denominations are with one heart and one voice feeling the reproach of their situation, as already described. And what is their conclusion as to the proper course to be pursued? We Answer--that the one man of our text properly represents our Lord, the heavenly Bridegroom, and that our text signifies that all the nominal churches have come or are about to come, "in that day," to the place where they will desire to be merely called the churches of Christ, and want nothing more whatever to do with him. They want to hold their sectarian names, Lutheran, Catholic, Methodist, etc., but they want also to be called Christians that is their chief asset, almost their only asset. For the doctrines of Christ they care nothing, and for any thought of redemption and covering of sins through Him they care nothing; it is merely a name that they desire. "We will eat our own bread and wear our own apparel —merely let us be called by Thy name."

THE TRUE CHURCH TO THE CONTRARY

We have already intimated that members of the true church are still associated in these various earthly systems represented by the seven women of our text, but they will not be therein long, for one by one they are hearing the voice of truth crying to them, "Come out of her (Babylon), my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins and receive not of her plagues." (Rev. 18:4) The more these women want to eat their own bread and to wear apparel of their own furnishment, the more all the true ones of the Lord's people among them will awaken to the true situation and find that they have neither part nor lot there. The true church does not wish to eat her own bread; she wants the bread that came down from heaven. She does not want her own theories, her own plans of salvation, her own schemes, her own methods, but desires rather that which God has provided as her daily portion—"Meat in due season for the household of faith" things new and old from the store house of divine truth. Neither does the true espoused virgin of the Lord desire to wear her own apparel, for she has come to understand that her own righteousness is as filthy rags. She has learned and is learning more and more to appreciate the robe given her by the heavenly Bridegroom the wedding garment. She trusts more and more in the merit of her Redeemer, the covering of whose justification was symbolized by the skins of the sacrifices given to Adam and Eve as the covering for their nakedness.

The message of the Lord has gone forth to his church of the present epoch, counseling all those who claim to be his that they trust not in uncertain riches, earthly riches, but that by faithful sacrificing of the earthly interests they buy of the Lord the gold tried in the fire, the divine nature, and that they maintain the white raiment of justification, and that their eyes may see clearly the things that make for their peace and the things to come the riches of grace, the knowledge of which has not entered into the heart of the natural man. The Lord addresses the nominal system of the present time at the closing epoch of this age, saying, "Thou sayest I am rich and increased in goods and have need of nothing; and knowest not that thou art wretched and miserable and poor and blind and naked. I counsel thee to buy of me gold refined by fire, that thou mayest become rich; and white raiment that thou mayest be clothed, and that the shame of thy nakedness be not made manifest; and eye salve to anoint thine eyes, that thou mayest see." (Rev. 3:17, 18) To whatever extent, dear friends, we have had the spirit of Babylon, the spirit of the world, and the confusion of doctrines that are contrary to the Word of God, let us get rid of these. To whatever extent we have had blindness and misapprehension of the true riches, and a failure to appreciate the white raiment of Christ's righteousness, let us finally accept the Lord's favor and anoint our eyes and see the glories of the situation of the true espoused of the Lord, that we may make our calling and election sure as well as be burning and shining lights in the world for those who are seeking the true ways of the Lord.

“THE MORNING COMETH, AND A NIGHT ALSO”

Toronto, Ont., Canada, Nov. 17 Pastor C. T. Russell, of Allegheny, Pa. preached twice here today to exceptional audiences. One of his discourses was on the overthrow of Satan’s empire. The other, which we report, offers soothing assurances as to the outcome of the present financial spasm, although it forewarns us of drastic conditions seven years hence not prophesied, but expounded from the scriptural prophecies, and said to have been publicly taught by the speaker for more than thirty years. His text was, “Watchman, what of the night? the morning cometh, but a night also.” (Isa. 21:11-12) He said:

It is the duty of the watchman on the walls of Zion to declare the whole counsel of God the bitter as well as the sweet. This duty we continually seek to perform. It is appropriate that the glories of the millennial epoch, foretold through God’s word, should receive more of our attention than the darker picture of the night of trouble with which it will be introduced. It is appropriate also that we give, as the scriptures do, still more attention to the inculcation of the principles which go to form Christian character amongst the Lord’s consecrated people, because these are essentials to their attainment of the glorious privileges and honors of the kingdom; because this is the work in hand, the Lord’s work the gathering from amongst mankind the very elect to be the Bride of Christ, His joint-heirs in the millennial kingdom and its glorious work of instructing and uplifting the world in general. We have not failed, however, to point out that the millennium will not be introduced by the preaching of the gospel and resulting conversions.

We have shown that the preaching of the gospel is the method by which the Lord is now inviting those who have “ears to hear” to voluntarily join His standard and follow in the footsteps of Jesus and thus become God’s very elect, but that after this election is complete the divine method of dealing with mankind, according to the scriptures, will be wholly changed. Then, instead of preaching to those willing to walk by faith in the light of the divine Lamp, the word of God, there will be laws, commands, rules with rewards for the obedient, and “stripes” for the careless; while the whole world, instead of longer being in darkness, will be filled with the light of the knowledge of the glory of God. Because then Christ and the church will be to the world the sun of righteousness to scatter its ignorance and superstition, and to assist it out of its degradation up along the highway of holiness to Edenic blessings, and may be reached by all who will by all who will by the close of the millennial age.

We remind you again of what we have already shown that according to the most favorable statement of the world's statistics there are more than 1,200,000,000 of heathen today, whereas a century ago the number was 600,000,000. Here we see the net result of the century of most wonderful missionary activity the world has ever known twice as many heathen at its close as at its beginning. If any one still is in doubt as to the correctness of our position, that the millennium is not to be brought in by the preaching of the gospel, let him not only reflect that there are no scriptures in favor of that position, but let him reflect also that if in this day he could convert all the 1,200,000,000 of heathendom to nominal Christianity such as prevails in civilized lands, the millennium would not yet have come, for surely Christendom is as far from millennial conditions as is heathendom. Discontent, unhappiness, are even more widespread amongst the civilized than amongst the heathen. No reasonable mind can conceive of the possibility of human endeavor bringing the world of mankind to the condition referred to in our Lord's prayer:

*"Thy Kingdom come, thy will be done
On earth even as it is done in heaven."*

"WILL GOD'S KINGDOM COME?"

All reasonable minds must concur that there are only two courses open to us either (1) to repudiate the Bible as an inspired and authoritative teaching, and thus to free ourselves from its innumerable references to God, the kingdom of heaven, that is to be established under the whole heavens, to which every knee must bow and every tongue confess, and of which Christ is to be the great King and His church of the very elect, His bride and joint-heir in the kingdom; or else (2) we must admit that the kingdom so clearly foretold in the scriptures will be introduced by some different means than that which the majority of Christendom has for the past century expected. We must accept the scriptural presentation that our Lord's second coming is for the very purpose of establishing that kingdom, and that when He thus takes to Himself His great power and establishes His rule amongst men, it will be done by force, as the scriptures declare, and not by the preaching of the gospel, which by that time will have accomplished its purpose of gathering the elect the willing and the obedient the bride class.

In view of the fact that I have been publicly declaring by voice and by pen for more than thirty years that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand, and that it will be introduced by a "time of trouble such as was not since there was a nation," it is not surprising that the present financial flurry is bringing in numerous inquiries in line with our text, "What of the night?" Is this the beginning of the awful trouble in which the gospel age will close and the millennial day of blessing be introduced? More than two million copies of the "Divine Plan of the Ages" are in the hands of thinking people, many of whom for years have been noting the truthfulness of its delineations of the events of the harvest of this age the period of forty years from 1874 to 1914, during which the millennial age is lapping into the gospel age, the one beginning, the other closing. A lesser number of people have followed us in the study of the prophecies along these lines in the volume entitled, "The Time is at Hand" a lesser number, therefore, see clearly, definitely, the foundation of our expectations in the word of God, and from this class chiefly come the inquirers. The others well know what we are now explaining, namely, that the severity of the trouble which will wind up present institutions of the world in a worldwide anarchy is not to be expected for yet seven years. But as we have already shown, the unrest amongst mankind will increase as we near the climax. The scriptures intimate clearly that what is coming is a parallel, an antitype, to the awful trouble upon the Jewish nation, which terminated their polity in A. D. 70. Again, as we have already intimated, the apostle likens the trouble coming to "travail upon a woman with child." In harmony with the figure our expectation is that there will be numerous spasms or throes of trouble upon Christendom, increasing in severity up to the last, in which present institutions will die.

"THE NIGHT IS FAR SPENT"

"The night is far spent, the day is at hand," the apostle declared eighteen centuries ago. (Rom. 13:12) The entire period of the night is six thousand years, and hence he was quite right in declaring that it was far spent in his day more than two-thirds of it had passed. This is the Scriptural figure everywhere used; the period of the dominion of sin and death is likened to a night time, a period of darkness, ignorance and superstition. Well does the prophet cry, "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." (Psa. 30:5) During this dark night, according to a reasonable estimate, twenty thousand millions of our race have gone down to the tomb, to sheol, to hades, to death, and only those who have some knowledge of the divine plan through the Scriptures know that the Lord's provision for these is an awakening from the dead, the tomb, and subsequently the possibility for all of them to attain, if they will, perfection and eternal life. The Prophet David spoke of this awakening in the morning of the millennial age from the prophetic standpoint, declaring that joy was then to come to the millions who weep now, not only for their departed ones but also by reason of the imperfections, mental, moral and physical, which they find in themselves and in their neighbors and friends.

What joy that morning of the new dispensation will bring to humanity! To the "little flock," the friends of God, who have walked in the footsteps of their Master in the narrow way of self-sacrifice, it is to bring a share in the first resurrection to glory, honor and immortality. To the remainder of mankind it is to bring, through the Redeemer and His glorified bride, the blessing of release from the bondage of corruption, the bondage of sin and death. No wonder the same Scriptures, which call the present a night time, which declare that “darkness covers the earth and gross darkness the heathen” (Isa. 60:2) picture the future as a sunburst of blessing, bringing not only relief from Satan, who will be bound for a thousand years, but bringing relief also upon terms of obedience, from all the aches and pains and imperfections and dyings which now so distress every creature. No wonder that those who caught but a glimpse of the matter in bygone times, before this feature of truth had become meat in due season, were ecstatic. No wonder the Psalmist, speaking under divine inspiration, repeatedly thanked God for the coming prospect, when the kingdom should be the Lord’s and He should be the Governor amongst the nations and the earth and the fullness thereof should render unto Him the praise and honor and obedience due unto His name. No wonder the apostles looked forward to the second coming of our Lord and prayed, “Even so come, Lord Jesus. Come quickly.” No wonder this thought quickened the early church to a zeal and earnestness which was astonishing to their fellow men, who “took knowledge of them that they had been with Jesus and had learned of Him.” (Acts 4:13) And they were hoping for a share in the kingdom which He had promised them when He said, “To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne;” and again, “Pray ye, Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven.” Rev. 3:21; Matt. 6:10.

“THE MORNING COMETH”

In our text the prophet takes his standpoint in our day, and in Answer--to the question whether or not the night of sin and error and superstition and sorrow is nearly ended, he declares that the morning nears. To our understanding daybreak began more than a century ago in the year 1799. That is a prominent date in the Scriptures as the close of a prophetic period, following which there would come to the world great enlightenment, great increase of knowledge along every line, as a stirring up, an awakening, a preparation for the new millennial day and its great work. The earliest awakening was along religious line, and nearly all of the great Bible societies were organized within fifteen years of that date, and the largest of them within four years. The Word of God has been the torch which led the best of minds to their grandest achievements during the century which followed. Today theologians, college professors, and in general all the elite of the world, under the lead of higher criticism, have rejected the Bible; but this is not to its discredit, but to theirs. They have become vain in their imaginations, wise in their own conceits, neglectful of the inspired Word, and the result is that they today are in blindness as respects the times and seasons in which we are living. Hence the world, which knows not God, is without special leadership from those to whom it might reasonably look for guidance in the present time, when more than ever the wisdom from on high is needed.

The Scriptures declare this period since 1799 under two names: (1) the “Day of his Preparation” (Nah. 2:3); (2) “The Time of the End” (Dan. 12:4) It is the period which closes the epoch of what the Scriptures term the “present evil world,” and introduces the “world (age) to come, in which dwelleth righteousness.” (Gal. 1:4; 2 Pet. 3:13) It will then be noticed at a glance by every thinking person that this period should be, must be, the most wonderful in the world’s history thus far the period of the most profound change imaginable the overthrow of the empire of darkness under the prince of darkness, and the inauguration of the empire of light under the prince of light Christ and His glorified bride. To be as brief as possible such a day of preparation and change should have two leading characteristics, and these we find.

“THE DAY OF PREPARATION”

(1) So wonderful a day as that which the Scriptures declare is coming should be prepared for. So wonderful a sunburst should give a considerable dawning light before the Sun of Righteousness itself would flood the earth with beams of glory and blessing. And is not this what we find? Is not the whole world awakening from the darkness, ignorance, superstition and slumber of past centuries to a newness of thought, of intelligence, to an awakening of their senses? Is not this the only explanation reasonable for the wonderful progress along every line of invention, in mechanics, chemistry, etc.? Is not this the Answer--to the prophetic declaration that in this day of preparation, this time of the end, many would run to and fro, and knowledge would be increased? But, alas, the world by wisdom knows not God, and instead of returning thanks to Him for present blessings, and recognizing them as forerunners of the millennial kingdom, as the Scriptures explain, we find mankind on the contrary seeking an explanation along lines of worldly wisdom concluding that we are merely experiencing the results of a process of evolution, and indeed endeavoring to eliminate the Creator entirely and rejecting His Word, casting aside the torch. Thus it is that in the gray dawn they see not the stone of stumbling in their pathway, and realize not the ditch of unbelief into which they are so rapidly falling.

(2) If the whole world were saints, full of faith, obedience and love to God, the blessings coming to us in this time would be wisely used for the mutual good of the entire human family. But it will be admitted that only the few are of such a spirit that the majority, both inside and outside the nominal church, are controlled by the spirit of the world, the spirit of selfishness. Hence the blessings of our day, although so abundant that they have overflowed in every direction and benefited every member of our race afar and near, have come chiefly into the hands of the worldly wise and acquisitive. We perceive that in the increasing light of each decade the wonderful ingenuity and skill of the world's brightest minds turn increasingly in the selfish direction. Not content with much luxury they seek more. With commendable zeal, energy and skill immense projects are accomplished, and more and more mankind in general, though richly blessed through these same channels of genius, find that the bulk of the world's wealth and practically all of its opportunities are passing into the hands of aggregated capital, trusts, etc. While the intelligent will acknowledge that they are receiving a blessing in conjunction, and that their lot is far better than that of their forefathers, nevertheless, the masses have caught the acquisitive spirit as well, and a hunger for wealth is in nearly every bosom and a scheming for it in nearly every brain. Consequently this wonderful day of blessing, instead of bringing thankfulness, gratitude, happiness, contentment, praise and thanksgiving to the Giver of every good, is more and more bringing the reverse of this —unhappiness, discontent, envy, malice, hatred, strife, which the apostle denominates "works of the flesh and of the devil." As a result there is a mad financial rush everywhere as it is discerned that those who have already procured possession of the wealth of the world practically control the situation for the present, and apparently also for the future. The result is the engendering of a spirit of bitterness against them well illustrated in the many unreasonable and unjust attacks upon capitalists who are far more just and generous than the majority of those who assail them through the press. However, we are not discussing particulars but broad generalities.

We are not discussing grades of selfishness, but the great fact that selfishness as a principle is more and more gaining control both of the poor and the rich, and is leading on with rapid strides to the very culmination which the scriptures indicate will be with us within eight years—" a time of trouble such as was not since there was a nation." (Dan. 12:1)

Our Lord quotes this prophecy and applies it, we believe, as we do, and adds the encouraging statement that there would never be such a time of trouble afterward. (Matt. 24:21) The effect of this trouble will be so over-ruled by divine Providence in the establishment of the kingdom of righteousness, the kingdom of light, that such a tribulation will never again be possible. Of that glorious millennial time the scriptures declare, "the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness." (Isa. 26:9) They will learn that the ways of righteousness are the ways of the Golden Rule.

But it will require time, and undoubtedly the great lesson that is coming respecting the unprofitableness in the end of the rule of selfishness will be a valuable preparation to the world for the learning of the advantages of the rule of love.

“The knowledge of the glory of God shall fill the whole earth,” declares the prophet. (Hab. 2:14) And again, “The sun of righteousness shall arise with healing in its beams”; and again, “Then shall the righteous (Christ and His glorified church) shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father.” (Mal. 4:2; Matt. 13:43) “He that hath an ear, let him hear.” During that glorious day “righteousness will be laid to the line and justice to the plummet, and the judgments of the Lord will be abroad in the earth —judging the world in righteousness giving them the knowledge of the truth and the opportunities for obedience and the assisting and uplifting influences of that time, and then rewarding every good endeavor and punishing with corrective “stripes” every soul of man that doeth evil, and ultimately punishing with everlasting destruction those who deliberately, willfully, persistently refuse to come into harmony with the divine arrangement and to go up on the highway of holiness to full perfection and eternal life.

“AND A NIGHT ALSO”

Our text recites just exactly what we find, namely, that although the night of six thousand years is now spent, and although we are in the morning of the new dispensation and its gray dawn is already awakening many of the sleeping ones a brief period of dense darkness an early morning storm which other Scriptures show to be terrific is to arise. Various symbols in the Scriptures are used to represent this brief period, which in the Scriptures is known as a “day of wrath and fierce anger.” Sometimes a symbol of storm is used and a hurricane is described, a whirlwind swift and terrible. Again the symbol is that of a flood, at other times of fire melting the earth. The latter symbol has been mistaken by our Second Day Adventist friends, and indeed by nearly all Christendom, as represented in their creeds, to imply a literal burning of the earth, which on the contrary, the Scriptures declare is “to abide forever.” (Eccl. 1:4) We quote one Scripture of this latter class in evidence of our position. The prophet declares, “Wait ye upon me, saith the Lord, until that day (the day of wrath) when I rise up to the prey; for my determination is to gather the nations, to draw together the kingdoms, that I may pour upon them mine indignation, even all my fierce anger. For the whole earth shall be devoured by the fire of my jealousy.” (Zeph. 3:8) We already witness the gathering of the nations the drawing of them together by the power of steam and electricity, which today makes China nearer to your city than New York was a century ago. This drawing together of the nations in their interests, financial, social and sympathetic, makes the coming cataclysm instantly worldwide in a manner impossible before, and like a fire present institutions will be speedily consumed under the ruthlessness of anarchy. True, anarchists today are few, but Socialists throughout the world are growingly numerous, and it is our expectation that within seven years they will be very powerful. We are not blaming them with having anarchistic intentions we believe that many of them are noble and generous and little realize the position they will feel themselves forced to assume and the awful world-wide tragedy they will assist in precipitating. We counsel all who are the Lord's people that while these things will come to pass, as the Scriptures have portrayed, none of the Lord's consecrated people should have any part therein. Those who pray "Thy Kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven," should see to it above all things that the divine will is done to the extent of their ability in their own hearts, in their own lives, in their own families, in their own business. In proof that our interpretation of the foregoing passage is correct in proof that the fire of God's jealousy which will then devour the earth is symbolical and not literal, we call attention to the verse following which reads "Then will I turn to the people a pure language (message) that they may all call upon the name of the Lord to serve him with one consent." If the fire were literal and the earth were actually melted there would be no people left to then hear the message of the Lord and to serve him. The fire is symbolical, and the very forcefulness of the statement and the strength of the language is an evidence to us of the terrible character of the trouble which we expect will engulf society, symbolized by the word "earth," within eight years.

"THE SUN SHALL BE DARKENED"

Symbolically in the Scriptures the church is represented as a woman clothed with the sun and the moon under her feet. (Rev. 12:1) The force of the symbol is that the Church of Christ has a special enlightenment in the gospel, which in this figure is represented by the sunlight, and she stands upon the moon, which represents the Jewish system, the Mosaic law, which, as the apostle declared, was a shadow of the better things of the gospel. Using this figure of speech, our Lord declares respecting the trouble time with which this age will close, that in it the sun shall be darkened, the moon will not give her light, and the stars will fall from heaven. (Matt. 24:29) While accepting as a matter of fact that there has been a literal fulfillment of this statement within this generation within less than a century, we hold, nevertheless, that there is a symbolical application. To our understanding it is now being fulfilled, and its fulfillment bears a close relationship to the coming trouble. The sunlight of Christendom, the gospel message, the Bible, is being rejected by the very highest standard-bearers in Churchianity. Higher criticism, which is a refined name for infidelity, is not only taught in practically every college of Christendom today, but is taught also in the religious denomination, yea, with its handmaiden, the evolution theory, it has even invaded the common schools and has threatened also the Sunday schools.

Thus the sunlight of gospel truth, which has enlightened the church, is fading out gradually and being eclipsed by worldly wisdom. In the same proportion of course, the moon, the Mosaic law, the typical foreshadowing of gospel truth, is becoming darkened, so that it is not an uncommon thing to hear prominent Christians speak of the "bloody sacrifices" of the Jews in olden times, and failing entirely to understand what the Apostle Paul explains, that "without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sins," and that God provided the sacrifices of the law as foreshadowings of the "better sacrifices" of Christ and those who follow in his footsteps, presenting their bodies living sacrifices. (Heb. 9:22,33; Rom. 12:1; Col. 1:24) Furthermore, are not the stars in the religious firmament falling the brightest ones, to whom Christendom has looked for leading and guidance and instruction are they not falling from their position in the estimation of Christendom? What a bright star in the religious firmament was the Apostle Paul as well as the other apostles, and are not all these falling from their exalted position in the judgment of the masses of Christendom? so that it is not an uncommon thing to hear the worldly-wise doctors of divinity imply that the apostles were earnest, but ignorant, and thoroughly incapable of shedding any light upon the church in this our day when the heavenly wisdom is being rejected and the earthly wisdom is being sought.

With the breaking down of faith in the Bible as a divine revelation and guide, Christendom is left without chart or compass as she enters the great gale that is before us. Is it not time that those in all denominations and out of all denominations who are at heart loyal to the Lord and his word should take their position firmly in defense of the truth and manifest their loyalty? Is any other course for them a safe one? Can they expect to grow in grace and knowledge and to be able to "stand in the evil day" (Eph. 6:13) unless they do manifest such a loyalty? I exhort you all dear friends, and the hundreds of thousands whom I weekly address through the public press, that we not only awake to the importance of the glorious morning so near at hand, and the preparation therefor in the purity of heart and life and faithful zeal for the Lord, but that we do all in our power to bring the knowledge of present truth to all those who have an ear to hear. The trial, the testing is bound to reach every professed child of God very speedily, and those unprepared by the truth are almost certain to be overwhelmed with the error, which is spreading everywhere and preparing the world for the climax beyond which we see, but they cannot see as yet, the glorious sun of earth's great jubilee.

AWAKE THOU THAT SLEEPEST AND RISE FROM THE DEAD

Pottstown, Pa., Dec. 29 Pastor C. T. Russell, of Allegheny, Pa., preached twice here today in the Auditorium. He had a splendid hearing both forenoon and afternoon. We report the morning discourse from the text, "Awake thou that sleepest, and rise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light." (Eph. 5:1) He said:

Sometimes the scriptures speak of natural sleep, and sometimes, as in the present case, they use the word figuratively. Sometimes they speak literally of the resurrection, the awakening of the dead, and sometimes, as in our text, they use the statement figuratively. Those who can understand nothing except the literal are as blameworthy as those who fail to understand the literal and appreciate only the symbolical. We must learn, as the apostle suggests, to rightly divide the word of truth to discern the actualities and also to appreciate the symbolism drawn therefrom. Our text presupposes the world in a general sleep of lethargy, stupor, ignorance, as respects the great and wonderful features of the divine plan, and in this respect it agrees with the entire testimony of the Bible, which shows that the light of divine revelation during this gospel age is designed only for a special class of mankind only for those who have come into relationship with God through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. Others are said to be in "darkness," in "outer darkness," "asleep."

THE AWAKENING NOW GENERAL

The world is as unawake to the true spiritual things of the divine plan as it ever was. Only a few who figuratively "hear the voice of the Son of Man"—"the voice of Him that speaketh from heaven" only those are really meant by our text. But in another sense of the word we are living in a time of general awakening amongst mankind. More thinking is done along all lines than at any previous period. We understand the scriptures to teach that this general awakening is a part of the divine Providence incidental to the ushering in of the new dispensation the millennium. It would have been an easy matter for the Lord to have aroused the world, quickened investigation, and lifted the veil of mystery along various lines of human invention long ago. Such men as Edison tell us that their richest findings in the field of invention they stumbled upon. True, they do a large amount of searching; but the finding is usually in a place and along lines which they had not at first surmised. This seems to have been the history of all the inventions of our wonderful day. It is of the Lord that we have the electric light instead of the tallow candle.

It is of the Lord's providence that within the last seventy-five years steam and electric railroads have been invented and brought to such wonderful proficiency.

In these conclusions we are merely following the scriptural suggestions of the Old Testament. Moses was instructed to prepare the tabernacle its furniture, etc., according to peculiar patterns; and when there were no artisans capable of the work the Lord instructed him that he should choose out from amongst the people cunning workmen, and that the Lord would put His spirit upon them to the extent necessary to accomplish His will. So in our day the Lord's spirit, the Lord's power, has been operating through the chemists, machinists, etc., for the perfecting of various inventions which afford so great comfort and so largely augment the wealth of the world.

The printing press has kept pace with the rapid increase of learning amongst the people, and human invention has found the way to turn trees into paper, and thus to carry enlightenment to the increasing millions of those awakening from the ignorance and superstition and stupor of the past along various lines. Two of the large dailies of New York City alone consume twelve cars of timber per day in this manner, and scatter it to the four winds for the further awakening and enlightenment of the masses. What a picture is before us. What an influence for good or for evil.

We are not of those who believe in total depravity. On the contrary, we believe that very few are so illy born as to be devoid of an appreciation of truth and righteousness, and some desire for them. But, alas! as the scriptures declare, "There is none righteous, no, not one." (Rom. 3:10) In the minds and bodies of all there are seeds of selfishness, meanness, depravity, inherited through the fall of Father Adam and accentuated as his posterity have come down and down more and more, losing the image and likeness of God in which he was created. None can dispute the statement of scriptures that we "are born in sin, shapen in iniquity, in sin did our mothers conceive us." This being the condition, it is manifest to every one that mankind needs strong government for the suppression of sin, for the encouragement of the elementary principles of righteousness, for the building up the race along the lines of its fall. But we find also that there is no such reign of righteousness today, and, furthermore, that mankind in general are becoming so imbued with the sentiment of independence, love of freedom, etc., that few would be ready to voluntarily support a reign of absolute righteousness, justice, equality, which would give to every man an equal opportunity with his neighbors, and no more. Selfishness has maintained its full strength in the human character during the fall, while benevolence has gradually suffered. The ambition of all who are awakening seems to be to selfishly obtain the largest and the fattest portions of earth and its comforts for themselves. This natural propensity or disposition is the rule almost without exception. Even amongst those who are sincerely seeking to walk in the footsteps of the Redeemer, and in whom His Spirit exercises considerable sway, there is generally a substratum of selfishness which needs combating with all the strength of the individual, backed by his growing benevolence, to keep him in the narrow way of self-sacrifice.

PLUNGING INTO A CATASTROPHE

The wisdom of the Lord in withholding the special enlightenment now causing this present awakening becomes more and more manifest as we come to realize the meaning of the world's situation at the present time. We have already pointed out in the Millennial Dawn volumes that our Lord, the apostles and prophets, in the Scriptures, fore-announced this tidal wave of enlightenment and the good and evil consequences which should result. We have given the Scriptural proofs that the evil consequences will be anarchy, world wide engulfing everything financial, political, social and religious, and also that God will use that extremity of human perplexity and discord and unwisdom to teach mankind important lessons respecting his dependence upon his Creator for guidance and aid; and that, following up that lesson of need, the Lord will establish the great kingdom of righteousness the kingdom of God's dear Son the millennial kingdom. That kingdom will be the one necessary to deal with mankind along the lines of enlightenment and along the lines of truth and righteousness and justice.

How wise, then, it was on God's part to allow the world to die in a measure of darkness during the past centuries until His due time had come for the establishment of His kingdom. Not in vain do the Scriptures declare that unless those days of anarchy which are coming which we believe will be witnessed within the next seven years be shortened there would be no flesh saved. While the race in general lay asleep in darkness, ignorance and superstition, the few guided its affairs according to their own interests, which generally meant conservative governments. The kings for the most part avoided war, from fear of loss to their own prosperity or dominion surely not always in the interest of their people, for the preservation of their lives and their property. Surely not always, either, were wars undertaken or avoided along the lines of justice or of love. The black history of the past forbids that we take such views. But now the awakening of the people means individualism the thought of each for himself for his own gain, for his own prosperity. There are exceptions to every rule, and we are not considering the exceptions but the rule. Under the enlightenment of our day distinctly mentioned in the Scriptures as the period in which "many will run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased" (Dan. 12:4) the influences are making rapidly for that condition of competition which will eventually disintegrate the world and bring about the anarchious state described in the Scriptures as the time in which “every man’s hand shall be against his neighbor.” Selfishness will thus go to seed, and the crop will be wonderful terrible.

ARISE FROM THE DEAD

Our text does not refer to such an awakening as we have just described. During this Gospel age the Lord has indeed been awakening some, but not with a view to making them more selfish, not with a view to hastening them into a time of trouble. As already intimated, only a peculiar class of the Lord’s people all through this age have been awakened, those who have heard the voice of the Son of man and His voice not only awakens them, but calls them to arise from the dead. Here we call to mind our Lord’s words: “The hour is coming and now is when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and they that hear shall live.” The time for the majority of the world to hear this voice is the hour that is coming, the period of the millennial age, when all the blind eyes shall be opened and all the deaf ears shall be unstopped, and when the knowledge of the glory of God shall fill the whole earth. Our dear Redeemer says that this hour is not only a coming one, it began with the beginning of this Gospel age in a very limited measure. Some can hear now, though they are few. Of them the Master says, “Blessed are your eyes for they see and your ears for they hear.” There is a special blessing connected with this true hearing of the voice of the Son of man in this age the blessing of a special privilege, a special calling, a special opportunity of becoming members of the kingdom class, the bride class joint heirs with the great Redeemer himself in the millennial kingdom. The world in general is not only asleep in the sense of being unconscious of the great divine plan, but it is also dead in sins, and a sentence of death is upon all, inherited through Father Adam." Rom. 5:12

Whoever during this age and now is in that proper condition of honesty of heart and desire for righteousness that will permit him to hearken, to hear the voice of the Lord in this present time, hears a denunciation of sin and proclamation of the divine standard of righteousness, and additionally a message of God’s loving mercy in His provision of the death of Jesus as man’s ransom substitute, through whose stripes all of our blemishes are healed. To all who hear this message it has appealed that they rise from the dead, that they separate themselves wholly from the dead world, that they begin to live reasonable, sane lives, in harmony with their Creator and His laws of justice and love. The actual resurrection of the future, we are told, will be by the power of God, because the actually dead have no power to help themselves. But in our text the figuratively dead ones who hear the voice of the Lord are called upon to arise from the dead to separate themselves. “Come out from amongst them and be ye separate, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you, saith the Lord.” (2 Cor. 6:17) This, of course, as the apostle explains, does not mean that we must entirely disassociate ourselves from our neighbors and relatives who belong to this dead class not vitally related to our Redeemer and not thoroughly turned from darkness to light, from sin to righteousness—not begotten again of the Holy Spirit. St. Paul declares that to do this would mean that we would be obliged to go out of the world. (1 Cor. 5:10) The right thought is clearly given us, namely, that we should be in the world but not of the world separate from the world in our minds and dispositions, our aim in life and our methods.

THE NARROW WAY TO LIFE

By and by, during the millennial age, when mankind in general will hear the voice of the Son of Man and they that hear shall live, the hearing will not be so difficult as now and obedience to the voice of the Son of Man will not be so difficult as at present. To hear, to obey, now this voice from heaven, and to arise from the dead, mean frequently the breaking of tender ties, sometimes the loss of earthly prospects, sometimes tribulations of one kind and sometimes of another. Our Master indicated this when He said, “Whosoever will be my disciple, let him take up his cross and follow me,” and again. “Narrow is the gate and difficult the way that leadeth unto life.” “Ye are the light of the world,” but “the darkness hateth the light.” “Marvel not if the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you.” “If they have called the master of the house Beelzebub (prince of devils) they will not speak approvingly of you if you follow my course.”

But why should this be so? If right is right, if it is good, if it is blessed, if it is to be preferred to evil and sin, why should not the world of mankind praise, laud and honor those who seek to walk in the Lord’s steps? We Answer--that the world is blind to these things; the world knoweth us not even as it knew Him not. If Jesus were living in the flesh today no doubt fault would be found with Him as it was during the years of His ministry and as it is with His followers today. Our Lord explained the reason, namely, that wherever the light shines it is a reproof to darkness. So wherever truth and righteousness, according to their highest standards, are enunciated or lived, there is an opposition on the part of those who by this would be condemned, reprov’d, and this includes nearly all of the great of the world, whose lives are ruled by selfishness in some form unavoidably so, because they have no higher ideals, not being begotten of the holy spirit. It is for this reason that our Lord declares that no one could be popular with the world and with the Heavenly Father his popularity with the world would mean unfaithfulness to God.

When we see that to rise from the dead in this sense will mean the breaking of tender ties, we will not be understood as advocating that the enlightened ones, the quickened ones, should desert their families or their mates in life, or be careless of their stewardship in life. Quite to the contrary, the admonitions of the Lord's word should make them the better husbands, the better wives, the better parents, the better children, the better neighbors, the better friends, whose constant influence and Christian aim would be to bless and do good. The difficulties which we are forewarned will come upon the Lord's faithful ones are not to arise from faults of theirs, as the apostle says, "Let none of you suffer as an evildoer or as a busybody in other men's matters. But if any man suffer as a Christian let him not be ashamed." (1 Pet. 4:15) The sounder mind of the new creature in Christ will enable Him to deal more kindly, more generously with those with whom he has to do in life, the dead, but will hold him to a strict responsibility in religious matters to the Lord to His teachings as set forth in His word.

CHRIST SHALL GIVE THE LIGHT

Notice that the enlightenment is not to be expected, according to our text, until after we have been awakened from our slumber and have taken the positive step of separation from this world arising from the dead. Then Christ will give us light. Hence this expression, "Arise from the dead," is the equivalent to other scriptural expressions signifying a complete consecration to the Lord, a presenting of our bodies as living sacrifices, holy and acceptable to God through Jesus an entrance of the difficult gate and narrow way. Whoever, therefore, is expecting to have clear light and knowledge of the divine plan whoever is expecting to understand the Bible without first having taken the steps of faith and consecration, and awakening and arising from the dead, have a wrong expectation. We must indeed have a measure of enlightenment before we can exercise faith, but this in our text is represented by the words, "Awake, O, sleeper!" The awaking is our enlightenment our discovery and our condition of sin, degradation and condemnation to death, and of God's mercy and love and provision for us. But whoever does not use this measure of enlightenment by arising from the dead, by a full consecration to the Lord, does not come into the glorious privileges of the children of God does not come to a knowledge of the deep things of God. This is the picture given us in Israel's tabernacle and court.

First, there was the gateway, in front of which stood the altar, and the believer was typically represented as coming from without into the court. First, he discerned the altar of sacrifice, which implied a realization of his own sin and of God's provision for us: secondly he beheld the laver for washing, not cleansing, which implied that all who would approach God must do all in their power to cleanse themselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, if they would perfect holiness. The next step was for the justified one to pass beyond the first veil out of the court into the holy, where stood the table of shewbread, representing his spiritual food, and the golden candlestick giving a special light, which none outside could see and appreciate or understand. Thus the Lord shows His gracious provision for those who awaken now and who arise from the dead that they may have a special food, the heavenly bread, and the special privileges of the golden altar of incense, at which they may approach the throne of the heavenly grace and obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need. Heb. 4:16

THE PATH OF THE JUST SHINETH

These justified, spirit begotten ones, started on the new way, not only get a special enlightenment at its beginning but they find it, as the scriptures have foretold, a “path of the just which shineth more and more until the perfect day.” (Prov. 4:18) This is true of the church individually and collectively. Individually, our Christian experience should grow brighter every day, every year, and the end of the path should thus be refulgent with the light of the knowledge of the glory of God —of His character of His plans, of our relationship to Him, of His love and care and provision for us and for the world of mankind. But while this is true, the thought of the prophecy especially applies to the church as a whole, whose pathway has been a shining one, enlightened by the lamp of the divine word; and its illumination now in the end of this age to those who are on this pathway is exceeding great. To those who are walking in the light the present time is one of great refreshment and blessing and spiritual strengthening. God, foreseeing the awakening coming to the world and the increase of knowledge along the lines of earthly wisdom, knew that the church also would need a special blessing of enlightenment; hence His promise that at this time the wise should understand not the worldly wise, but the wise toward God of whom our Redeemer spoke, saying, “I thank thee, Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hidden these things from the wise and prudent and has revealed them unto babes” the truly wise. (Matt. 11:25) Various scriptures assure the church of a special blessing from the Lord at the present time, and this promise has been more than fulfilled. The divine plan for the church and subsequently for all who will of all mankind is now cheering and comforting the hearts of God’s people in the most remarkable manner.

There never was a time when Christian people required more decision of character than now. It might be thought by some that in the “dark ages” when conscientious convictions sometimes caused martyrdom, that more decision of character was needed than at present —when such public martyrdoms are barred by public sentiment; but we believe this is not the case. Outward and fierce persecutions develop martyrs. Today there are undoubtedly thousands who would be willing to go to the stake rather than to renounce their allegiance to the Lord; while many of those thousands, tested along more subtle lines, would waver and yield. We see this, for instance, in every direction and in all denominations. True, honest Christians, who would die promptly rather than deny the Lord, are captured by a more subtle temptation, and really deny Him and His word by subscribing to creed tenets which they do not believe, and by ignoring and failing to enunciate what they really do believe. In a word, the latter course is so general amongst ministers and church officials that, false and dishonorable though it be, the conscience excuses it, palliates it and finally endorses it, even though the word of God condemns it and declares that such is not the course of the overcomers for whom has been provided the great prize of the high calling of God.

The end of this age, as we have already suggested, is to witness anarchy throughout the whole civilized world Christendom and is to involve religious as well as civil institutions. The elect are assured that they shall be accounted worthy to escape those things coming upon the world. We understand this to signify that all of the "elect" shall be "changed," will pass beyond the veil through the power of the first resurrection before the severity of the crisis of the world's trouble. But the scriptures as clearly foreshow that just before the world's cataclysm of trouble there will be a special time of trial and trouble upon the church. The apostles repeatedly call this to our attention, and our Lord's great prophecy of this time also does so. The Apostle says, "The fire (trouble) of that day shall try every man's work of what sort it is." (1 Cor. 3:13) He proceeds to show that every Christian who is building upon Christ as a pure foundation will be saved if he maintains his stand there; but the faith-structures of many, founded upon the wood, hay and stubble of human traditions and "doctrines of devils" would be consumed by the fire of this day. He declares that while some faith-structures would stand the tests, others will suffer loss and be "saved so as by fire."

Referring to the same times elsewhere, the same apostle says that the Lord "will send (permit) strong delusions that they may believe a lie, because they had no pleasure in the truth." (2 Thess. 2:11) We are to understand from this that the fiery trials with which this age will end will closely test their faith-structure throughout Christendom, and that the Lord intends this to be so that the approved may be made manifest and that the others may receive corrections in righteousness, which will eventually work out for them salvation as a great company who will wash their robes and make them white in the blood of the lamb, in that time of trouble. (Rev. 7:14) Those who keep their garments unspotted from the world by carefully seeking to know and to do the will of the Lord and by applying for forgiveness and cleaning for their unwilling faults, constitute the "little flock," the bride class, the very elect, who will be joint-heirs in the kingdom, seated with the Lord in His throne. This class, elsewhere styled the 144,000 who follow the lamb whithersoever he goeth, are quite separate and distinct from the great company of saved Christians who will come up out of great tribulation to stand before the throne with palm-branches of victory, instead of being seated in the throne with crowns of glory.

HIGH TIME TO AWAKE

The apostle wrote, "Knowing the time, that now it is high time to awake out of sleep; for now is our salvation nearer than when we first believed." (Rom. 13:11) Surely we are still nearer to the consummation of our hopes; surely, therefore, the Lord's people today should be more than awake should be more than ever separate from the dead world should have still higher ideals as we have better hopes than others. And in view of what we have just seen respecting the testing time now due, we should be doubly on the alert that, as the apostle says, "Ye may be found of him in peace at his appearing." The special trials of our day we have referred to, and may refer to again more particularly. On this occasion we content ourselves with impressing our text upon our hearts, upon our minds, trusting that the influence may extend to all the actions and affairs of life especially to our loyalty to the Lord, His brethren and His truth, "Awake thou that sleepest, and rise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light."

The opening of a New Year is most auspicious for the formation of fresh resolves and starting anew in the way of righteousness, after making our peace with the Lord and accepting by faith His forgiveness for the blemishes of the past. Let us forget the things that are behind and press onward to the things that are before the prize of our high calling in Christ Jesus.

1908 Convention Report -- Cincinnati, Ohio, Mar. 1, 1908

LOVE FEAST

After opening the service with song and prayer, Brother Russell spoke as follows:

Dear Friends: The time has come for our convention to close. From various expressions of joy that I have heard, I am sure that this has been a joyous convention, and I have rejoiced with you. Some of the friends have remarked that the fact of the debates being at the time of the convention seemed to lend something to the keen interest of the convention, and we are glad that it is so.

When first we met our Brother White, he heard that there was to be a convention here and was greatly disturbed; he did not understand why. I said, This has nothing to do with you Brother White, but is merely a gathering of the friends that want to be at the debates and who do not want to wander around the streets of Cincinnati. I could not make out why he felt so until he called on me last Sunday, and I saw that in calling the convention, he thought, we would drown him out like a political convention, and he could not be heard.

I said, Brother White, you do not know these people; they have no such thought. He said he had supposed they would spend the next day discussing what had been said the night before. I said, You can come into the convention at any time and you probably will not hear your name mentioned.

He could not understand how we could have a convention and not have a quarrel or wrangle over his name and doctrine. I said, you will find them all true brothers and sisters. I want to tell you that it was one of the encouraging features of the whole matter to note your good nature and respect; and I can see from one year to another, and from one convention to another, your growth in grace and the spirit of the Lord. I trust that you all hold with me that if we had all knowledge without love it would profiteth us nothing. God is not rewarding us according to knowledge, but according to character. I trust that the other hundreds of friends left at home, whom you represent here, will also get a blessing from this convention. Give to the dear friends there our loving greetings, not only mine personally, but of the whole convention. All cannot come together, but all ought to desire to do so.

I was very pleased to note during the debates that you all exercised a kindly spirit, and I never heard an unkind expression about our opponent, even if all was not as we would desire, but that the Lord would bless the brother's eyes that he might see the truth. I want to tell you how much I appreciate that.

We are not here, dear friends, to war and fight. We are to edify and build one another up in the most holy faith.

From what I can learn, you have had a feast of fat things, spiritual feasting, enjoying the Lord's Word and talking about the Lord. But think, dear friends of the joy beyond the veil, when we shall have part in the first resurrection, and be like our dear Redeemer.

We are all longing for another General Convention, dear friends, and many of the friends have asked me: Brother Russell, when will we have our next convention. I have told them that so far as we can now say, the next will probably be at Pittsburgh. You know we have moved from Allegheny over to Pittsburgh; they have changed the name of Allegheny and taken it in, and now Allegheny is simply celebrated as the home of the Watch Tower Bible & Tract Society, and I do not know what Pittsburgh will be, but it has been known as being black, and now we want it to be white.

We are hoping to have a convention in Pittsburgh about the 1st of September. Arrangements are not complete, but we think this is one of the most favorable years. We expect to have only one General Convention this year, and all the friends will like to get to Allegheny and Pittsburgh on one occasion at least. There will probably be some favorable arrangements for railroad rates. We expect to have on that occasion at least 2,000 friends.

I was thinking as Brother White made the remark the other evening in his discourse, he said, "this Russell Doctrine is putting people to sleep, and they do not care for anything religious at all." I was thinking how incorrect his view is. I was noticing, for instance, and I would like to have had time to call his attention to it, that there were about 600 attending this convention from various parts of the United States, Canada, Massachusetts, Maine, Oklahoma, Kansas, and all around everywhere, and I suppose the 600 spent at least $20 each during the week making $12,000 spent for this convention. I was thinking of the fact that Brother White and his associates in the Christian denominations, the Presbyterian, Methodist and Baptist, etc., and all the others, have been preaching hell fire and torment in Cincinnati for one hundred years, and yet here in Cincinnati, without railroad-fare, lodging expenses, etc., there was a comparatively small number present compared with the population of the city. We would call attention to the fact that about six hundred came a long distance at large expense, and those that came from Cincinnati without expense were not many more. Probably two thousand attended in all. Some might say that was money wasted. I used to take that view, but as I see the spirit manifested and note the Scriptures which say, "Forsake not the assembling of yourselves together" and "They that loved the Lord spake often one with another," I do not think it a waste of money. You want to speak with one another and to exchange fellowship. "They that loved the Lord spake often together and a book of remembrance was written of them that thought on His name." "They shall be mine in that day that I come to make up my jewels." We want to be in that jewel class. We want to be rightly exercised by our experiences so that there will be developed in us, more and more, the character-likeness of our Lord Jesus, and if your coming together and all we spend for it helps to develop that character, and you feel you have your money's worth and more, all I can say is, God bless you.

I was thinking of a suggestion made that perhaps the people had not come because of money. We never ask for money. I give you an idea of the sentiment of the people: I told you in the address to colporteurs that as I was talking one night and shaking hands after the debate, some one came up and put ten dollars in my other hand. The next night, some one put a twenty dollar gold piece in my hand. Last night I opened some mail and in it was a letter from Toledo. Brother Kuehn sent a draft for $100. and said, I am sure there are some expenses there and I want to have a share, and he said, As I was writing a check to get the draft, my partner, who is not in the truth at all, but a business man, said: What are you going to get that draft for to send down to the Watch Tower Society? When I said yes, he said, Count me in for half: I want to have a share in that too. You see how the spirit of the matter goes. Instead of having to ask the people for money, I have really had to tell people they ought not to give so much money but ought to keep it for themselves. Is not that peculiar?

There are only twenty-five minutes before I must say goodbye and catch my train, so I will shake my hands now. (He waved his hands and the audience all responded.)

The Pilgrim Brothers were then asked to come forward and form a line in front of the platform. Then the Cincinnati colporteurs were asked to come forward, the brothers lining up on one side of the Pilgrims and the Sisters on the other side. Then all the other colporteurs present were asked to come forward and form in line. (A very large number came forward, so much so that it began to look as though there would be no audience left. Brother Russell said, I am afraid I made a mistake, this is more than I contracted for. There were in line, eight Pilgrims and seventy-nine colporteurs, forty-one brothers and thirty-eight sisters. There were several others in the audience who did not come forward because of lack of space.

Brother Russell then led the way, passing down along the line shaking hands with all and breaking bread with the Pilgrims, each of whom held a plate of bread. The audience followed Brother Russell in this farewell greeting.

“Blessed Be the Tie that Binds” was sung, and thus on March 1, 1908, closed the BEST Convention.

GOD’S PLAN VS MAN’S PLAN

Pastor Russell addressed the Bible Student’s convention this morning, taking for his text the words of St. Paul: “We know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose. For whom He did foreknow, He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son, that He might be the first-born among many brethren. Moreover whom he did predestinate, them He also called.” (Rom. 8:28-30) The speaker said:

The Prophet remarks in his proverbs that “the liberal soul deviseth liberal things.” (Isa. 32:8) By every process of logic and human reasoning we should suppose that the Almighty God would be by far the superior of every human being in that His sentiments and plans would be higher than ours. True, we are informed that man was created in his Maker's moral image and that this enables him to reason and think on moral subjects on a higher plane than does the brute creation. But the same Scriptures inform us that the entrance of sin has wrought havoc with the likeness of God in the human race, blurring it and in a considerable measure obliterating it. While disagreeing with those who claim that "total depravity" has overtaken our race, we are all witnesses to the fact that the moral sense of the race is variant, that some have very little idiots none and that its brightest representatives have their limitations which are recognized by themselves as well as by their friends. For the highest standards and conceptions of justice, love and wisdom we look beyond ourselves and all our fellow-creatures to that which is perfect, which believers are hoping to attain in the resurrection. That perfect condition of heart and mind will signify our renewal in our Creator's likeness, He being the perfect standard before our minds. The Scriptures admonish us that Satan, moved by selfish ambition, rebelled against Jehovah and His government and that he has since sought to use his every opportunity and ability to ensnare our minds, to poison them against our Creator, to make His goodness appear in a false light, to put light for darkness and darkness for light. Looking over the world we perceive that to a large extent he has been successful. Our race has followed his misleadings, as the Apostle points out in Rom. 1:28, where he assures us that man originally in accord with God became alienated and forsook the Lord who gave them over to a reprobate mind and evil works, by which they have degraded themselves more and more. As a consequence we see members of the race who are almost devoid of the original likeness of God and proportionately blind to the truth—"The god (Satan) of this world hath blinded the minds of them that believeth not." 2 Cor. 4:4

MAKING AND SERVING IMAGES

Nevertheless, amidst all the darkness that prevails respecting God and His true character and plan the organs of reverence and worship persist in the human brain and hence we find amongst all people a tendency to worship, to acknowledge responsibility, and this, combined with a realization of their own imperfection and unworthiness, leads them to fear the God whom they do not know. To assist them in the worship which they feel they should render they make images of earth and stone and metal or with silk batting and gold thread. These images are as different from each other as are the conceptions of their makers. Nevertheless, they illustrate three things: (1) Power, strength, ability; (2) intelligence, wisdom, knowledge of us and our whereabouts and doings; (3) anger, malice, hatred, vengeance, cruelty. Most evidently the poor heathen do not know the true God, hence do not worship and serve Him. They need a revelation that will remove from their mental eyes the delusions which now prevail and give them a glimpse of the true God gracious, merciful, kind, loving, as well as wise, powerful and just. Alas! The poor heathen, we see need to learn the message of God's love exemplified in the gift of His Son who died for our sins and thus opened the way for our return to harmony with the Father. We send missionaries, we give millions of money and thousands of prayers for the breaking of the bonds of ignorance and the opening of the blind eyes of the heathen. We thank God that so many have this degree of appreciation of God and this degree of sympathy for the heathen.

But let us come nearer home, let us look about us in the lands of highest civilization where Christian doctrine has prevailed for centuries, where from the least to the greatest should have had an opportunity to learn of the grace of God in Christ and to become reconciled to God. What do we find in so-called Christendom? We find scores of sects of Christians possessed of the same mental organ of veneration, exercising it to some degree in worship. We find that more intelligent than the heathen they realize the impropriety of making images of God out of wood, stones, metal, etc. But we find also that each sect or party has made a mental image of God and described this mental image until the disciples of each cult may worship the same mental image. We are not finding fault with these, for without some mental appreciation of the Divine Being worship would be impossible.

WORSHIP YE KNOW NOT WHAT

We are reminded of our Lord's words to the woman at Samaria, who inquired about the worship of the true God. Our Lord said to her, "Ye worship ye know not what." And undoubtedly this is true of the majority of worshippers of all the various sects and creeds. They worship, they exercise the organ of veneration, partly under the impulse of fear, but without particular knowledge of whom they worship and without any particular desire to become acquainted with Him, that they might know the only true God and Jesus Christ whom He has sent to be our Redeemer. (John 17:3) This is true undoubtedly of the majority of worshippers of all the sects of all Christendom. But, on the other, hand in all the sects are to be found those who have a different creedal image of God before their mental vision. We are interested in the comparison of these various mental images of God; let us take a glance at a few of them as presented to us in the creeds of some of the most prominent Christian denominations.

THE CALVINISTIC IMAGE OF GOD

One of the highest conceptions of the Almighty, one of the most noble that prevails to a large extent in Christendom, is the Calvinistic. It pictures the Almighty as the high and lofty one possessed of all wisdom, knowledge, power; that He is grave, dignified, commanding reverence and worship. There is much in this image to attract our attention; it is so much nobler than any of the images of the heathen we have ever seen. It inspires us with awe, with reverence. But there is something lacking, a cold chill of fear comes over us as we gaze upon the august majesty. His face is serene and calm, but cold and unsympathetic, ungenerous; stern justice and uncompromising firmness are there. But love! Oh, love is lacking! We tremble before this image, and the more so as we hearken to the message which this God of Calvinism has sent to those who have the ear to hear him. He has declared His omnipotence, His justice and unchangeableness; He has declared an election and predestination of a little handful of our race to wondrous glory in His presence and equally foreordained and predestinated that the vast majority of our race shall have none of His loving favor, but shall die in heathen ignorance non-elect, predestinated before their birth not only to ignorance of the only name in the present life but to an eternity of suffering in the ages to come.

To the inquiry respecting the justice of this program, the Answer--comes that those heathen not favored with a knowledge of Christ were foreknown of God to be unworthy, and that they would not have received Him if they had heard His message. If we ask respecting the masses of Christendom who have heard of the only name but have rejected it and failed to become His footstep followers as saints if we inquire what hope there is for these, the Answer--is that there is none. Alas! we say, as we turn away to seek for a still higher ideal, a still more glorious image and a still more blessed message! This Calvinistic image, glorious in many of its features and details, can never satisfy the longings of our hearts, for while its pictures of justice and of power are satisfactory, its lack of love and sympathy makes us fear that it is deficient of the most important element of a truly noble character. We say to ourselves that with all of our weaknesses and faults we would love even our enemies too much to torture them, especially to torture them to all eternity hopelessly, uselessly. We would say to ourselves that if we possessed the wisdom and power of the Calvinistic God, the love in our hearts and sympathy would have co-operated with our wisdom and power and would have hindered us from creating a soul that could not be destroyed, could not be blotted out of existence. For this is the claim made in the name of this image of God; that He so made man that he must live forever, that God Himself could not destroy him and that being unworthy of a place in glory God has no alternative but to perpetuate his existence in misery. Our reply is that this implies either a lack of power or wisdom on the part of the Calvinistic God.

THE ARMINIAN IMAGE OF GOD

Arminianism offsets Calvinism. While the latter is held by almost all the various branches of the Presbyterians and by almost all Baptists, Congregationalists, etc., Arminianism is most particularly represented today by our Methodist friends of different branches. The celebrated "five" points of Arminianism are in substance: (1) Conditional Election. (As in opposition to the unconditional election held by Calvinists.) (2) A Universal Redemption, or that Christ died for all alike, though only those who accept His atonement by faith will be actually saved. (As in opposition to the Calvinistic theory that the atonement was only for the Elect.) (3) That salvation is by grace; or man can exercise true faith only by the regenerating grace of the Holy Spirit, with which, however, he can co-operate. (As in contradiction to the Calvinistic view that the grace of God his mercy, His forgiveness, His assistance was only intended for the Elect and applies to none others.) (4) That God's grace is not irresistible. (As in contrast with the Calvinistic theory, that it is irresistible; that the Elect cannot resist God's grace, but must yield to it.) (5) That to fall from a state of grace is possible. (As in contrast with the Calvinistic view, that for the Elect to fall from grace is impossible.)

Looking at this mental image which has appeared to an increasingly large number of Christian people during the past century, we perceive that while it is a less dignified image than the Calvinistic one it has more warmth, more love, more grace. This draws our hearts sympathetically toward this image, to a considerable degree. But as we look and hearken to its message we are impressed with the thought that it, too, is lacking in some particulars. It seems deficient in the qualities of wisdom and power. Its message is really no broader than that of the Calvinistic image: the same "Little Flock" only will reach the heavenly kingdom, the same thousands of millions will be condemned to an eternity of torture. The only difference between these two images seems to be not in the result of their work but in the method pursued therein. Unlike the Calvinistic image the Arminian one does not elect, does not foreordain, does not predestinate, but gives to every member of the race all the blessings, all the opportunities, all the knowledge, all the assistance it can render them, so that if they are lost it is in spite of the best endeavors of the Arminian image for their aid. And so when the vast majority of mankind are lost in eternal torment it will not be because God willed it so, not because He predestinated it so, but because He could not help it; because with His very best endeavors He was unable to bring about a more favorable condition either in civilized or heathen lands, because the great adversary, Satan, had more power for evil than He could control for good.

Alas! Alas! The benevolent designs of this image can never reconcile us to its weakness, its inability, its unwisdom to foreknow and to fore-arrange and to accomplish its good and loving purposes. We need a God who is not only loving and generous and just but who is wise enough and powerful enough to make His love of practical benefit to our race. These deficiencies in wisdom and power are the very points in which the Calvinistic image displays such grandeur. But it possesses the love quality which the Calvinistic image lacks. Alas! Neither image can fully satisfy our hearts. The proper mental image of the true God to be satisfactory to our hearts, must be complete perfect in justice, in love, in wisdom, in power. And this can be said of neither of these. We must look further. Surely the Bible is the divine revelation of the divine character, and surely an error has been made by which some of the God's people have shown Him from one side, ignoring the other, while others have shown Him from the opposite side. It should be the ambition and effort, dear friends, of every true child of God to formulate before his mental vision that proper image of God which would be complete in all respects, which would be in harmony with every declaration of the Bible the image of God before which we could bow and worship and adore, the image of God which would awaken in us the grand conception of the Almighty as superior in every particular to all of His creatures, infinite in wisdom and love and justice and power.

THE SCRIPTURAL IMAGE OF GOD

Seeing that the two mental images thus described are worshipped by all Christendom as the best and grandest imaginable; and seeing, also, that these have been entertained for centuries by some of the best minds, we might naturally enough be deterred from even attempting to formulate before our minds and hearts a superior image. But, then, we remember that the time was when these images were novelties and had few adherents. We remember that these were vast improvements upon the grosser misconceptions of those who burned each other at the stake and otherwise tormented one another, and were esteemed to be the most particularly copying the divine character, method and program. We take courage, too, when we remember that we are not left to the resources of our own imagination in formulating the proper image of God. We remember that God has revealed himself in His Word, in the Bible, and properly we go to it for guidance lest in our imagination we should be equally unsuccessful as others. We are encouraged again when we find that these two most prominent images before the minds of Christendom had both been constructed with the aid of the Bible.

We say to ourselves: If the Bible presents one of these images to some minds and the other image to other minds it surely proves that there has been some mistake in interpretation, because as the Word of God it cannot be yea and say nay. It cannot contradict itself as these two creedal images contradict and oppose each other in vital points. Let us, therefore, give the more earnest heed as we go to the Bible. Let us be sure to cast away all of our preconceived ideas, notions, opinions, etc.; let us build afresh our image of God from the very foundation, accepting nothing in respect to it that is not in full accord with every other portion of that revelation. Let us expect that the true God must be as perfect in His love as in His other qualities and that He must be as perfect in His wisdom and in His power as He is in His love. Surely any other image of Him must be defective.

Coming thus to the subject of the Bible our text meets us as a consoling and encouraging message and declares in one breath not only the justice of God and His love, but also His wisdom to foreknow and prepare and plan for the execution of His justice and love. It tells us further of His divine power to carry out all that His wisdom, justice, and love have planned. How encouraging the statement, "My Word that goeth forth out of my mouth shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it. For ye shall be delivered with joy and brought home in peace;" "For my plans are not your plans, neither are your methods my methods, saith the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my methods higher than your methods and my plans than your plans." (Isa. 55:11, 12:8) How divine mercy shines through these declarations of divine foreknowledge and power! And be it noted that the context is in full accord with this, showing that the deliverance with joy and homecoming in peace is future, during the Millennial Age when Christ who redeemed the world shall be its deliverer from the power of sin and death, its deliverer from the prison house of death sheol, hades. The homecoming will mean the restitution to the former estate of harmony with God, lost through father Adam's disobedience, but redeemed for all the willing and obedient by the precious blood of Christ. In our Father's house are many mansions, many stations: one is for the angels, another for the "Little Flock" of the Elect, and still another for the world in general, who will be brought into harmony with God as a result of the Millennial blessings, during times of restitution of all things spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began to fall cursed by the fall but redeemed by the precious blood.

The picture continues. Our context declares that instead of the thorn and the briar there will then be the fir tree and the myrtle tree. The thorn and the briar are here used to typify the wicked, the injurious who now flourish. The fir tree there represents the evergreen whose balsamic influence is healthy, giving a refreshing effect, while the myrtle tree, also an evergreen, yields sweet perfume and berries that are a delicacy. These two trees represent mankind under the favorable blessing of the Lord during the Millennium, yielding good influences and themselves possessed of everlasting life, symbolized by the evergreen qualities of these trees.

THE WORD OF GOD'S MOUTH

The difficulty with God's people for centuries has been that they have not given sufficiently critical heed to the word of God's mouth; they have been contented too frequently to take the words of men, or, as our Lord declared, the traditions of men instead of the Word of the Lord. The lesson to us is that we must give heed to the Word of the Lord if we would have true wisdom, and the words of man must be hearkened to only as they are found to be in close alignment and assistances to us in the study of the divine Word, which alone is authoritative. As an illustration of how we have added man's word to the Word of the Lord and thus have perverted the teachings of the Scriptures, we remind you of the scriptural declaration that the "wages of sin is death," and "The soul that sinneth it shall die," and again, that "all the wicked will God destroy." (Rom. 6:23; Ezek. 18:4; Psa. 145:20) These plain statements taken at their proper valuation leave no room for misunderstanding the mind of the Lord. But we are not content thus to do, we add to the Word of the Lord and say the wages of sin is not death, and hence the word death here must be understood to mean life in torment. And again we said, it cannot be true that the soul that sinneth it shall die, because we have often heard the theory that the soul cannot die. Hence we must twist and wrest this statement of God's Word to mean its opposite. We must say the soul that sinneth it shall never die, but shall live forever in an eternity of woe and God Himself cannot destroy it. Again we said, There must be a mistake about the statement that God will destroy the wicked, for we have been taught from infancy that He will preserve the wicked by miraculous power, so that the fires of torment will not consume them but merely cause pain, and again have we not heard that matter is indestructible. Thus we have beclouded our reason and made void the Word of God through the traditions of our elders and seniors, our ancient and honorable ones Doctors of Divinity. And how silly the only real argument here adduced that matter is indestructible, that it passes from one form to another. We are not considering the indestructibility of matter; it is not in question that if you burn a man up his entire body will pass into gases. Undoubtedly there was as much matter in the world before Adam was created as afterward and as much today as there was then. But matter is not conscious, matter cannot suffer, cannot enjoy, hence the argument is merely a sophistry. When the Lord says, "All the wicked will be destroyed," let us accept this statement as the very truth and know that when the wicked are destroyed they will be no more, even though the matter which once composed their bodies shall have been turned into various gases. Let God be true though it prove every creed to be a lie. Let us go back to the word of the Lord that from its standpoint we may have the true image of God's character before our minds and may worship Him in spirit and in truth.

WHAT SAYETH THE SCRIPTURES

If then the Bible written by various pens, guided by the Holy Spirit, or Spirit of God, is God's Word or message to His people, let us hearken to it. What say the scriptures?

3H415

They tell us that man was created in God's image and likeness, that he was intelligent, upright and worthy of trial for eternal life and that he was placed on trial in Eden. They tell us that he was disobedient, not through ignorance or deception, and that he thus came under the divine sentence a death sentence. Not a word do they tell us of his being condemned to an eternity of torture with devils some place beyond the bounds of space and time. Not a word do they tell us of his being condemned to Purgatory to expiate his guilt. They not only declare that the penalty for disobedience was announced to him in advance of his trial, but that after his trial he was cast out of Eden so that the penalty might take effect, so that he might die; and they reiterate the penalty, saying, "Dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return." How plain! How simple! no one could misunderstand this simple statement without the assistance of trained theologians, skilled in the art of handling the Word of God deceitfully or wresting the Scriptures, as St. Paul terms it. The Bible record goes on to show that from that time onward sin and death prevailed, and that their reign has since continued we all can testify. God's only word on the subject was, "Dying thou shalt die," and "Dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return." He did, however, give a glimmer of hope when pronouncing the sentence upon the serpent; he declared that ultimately an offspring from the woman should bruise the serpent's head. This was a dark saying to our first parents, but to us it is luminous by reason of what has since transpired. We see that the Seed of the woman is Christ Jesus the Head and the Church His Body. The clear intimation is that eventually this glorified company shall have a victory over Satan which in some manner will inure to the benefit of the entire race. In the light of other Scriptures we see that the death of Jesus was necessary as the very foundation of any blessings of forgiveness toward our race and we see that those who have accepted Jesus and received forgiveness have during this Gospel Age been invited to become of the Elect Church, His joint-heirs in the Messianic Kingdom which is to crush Satan, destroy evil and release mankind from bondage to the reign of sin and death, delivering so many as will "Into the glorious liberty of the sons of God" freedom from death, everlasting life.

For nearly eighteen centuries God was silent, giving no word, no message of hope except the glimmer which came from Enoch's prophecy, "Messiah cometh with myriads of holy ones." (Jude 14) After eighteen centuries God revealed His purpose further and more particularly to his servant and friend, Abraham. After testing the loyalty of his faith God declared to him, "In thy Seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." (Gen. 18:18) Although this word of God could not be broken and could not return unto him void but must be accomplished in its due season, nevertheless the time for its accomplishment being long God added his oath and swore to Abraham the certainty of this promise, "In thy Seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." For centuries this was more or less a plain promise which the nation of Israel hoped they would inherit. For eighteen centuries more they waited for Messiah to be sent to them to exalt them, to use them as the Seed of Abraham in blessing the world with a divine law and government, stamping out sin and lifting up the slaves of sin from the prison-house of death and from the power of sickness.

"In due time God sent forth His Son." The time seemed long from the human standpoint, but through the prophet the Lord reminded them that a thousand years in His sight are but as yesterday. Jesus at His first advent accomplished a different work from that which His nation expected; it was necessary that He should first redeem Israel and all the families of the earth before He could give them the permanent blessing of life eternal. The penalty upon them was death and they had gone down to sheol under it. And so we read that Christ died for our sins, that His soul descended to sheol, but that He was not left in sheol, in hades, but was raised therefrom on the third day. (Acts 2:27) He did not pay an eternal torment penalty, for no such penalty had been announced; he paid a death penalty, the one the Scriptures declare God had announced and afflicted. Thus the basis was laid for the general blessing of every creature, because Christ died as the substitute or ransom for father Adam, and in his redemption all of his race were involved, just as through His transgression they were all involved. Jesus the Messiah first offered the privileges of joint-heirship with Him in the sufferings and in the glory that should follow and a share in the heavenly nature to His own people, the Jews, and when few of them accepted the proposal we are told that the remainder were blinded until His second coming. (Rom. 11:7) Thus it came that in God's providence, after selecting the remnant of Israelites indeed to be members of the spiritual Seed of Abraham, joint-heirs with Himself, our Lord subsequently turned to the Gentiles to take out from them a people for His name. (Acts 15:14) He has been finding and gathering these for over eighteen centuries and soon we believe the work will be completed, the last number of the Body will have been called, accepted and found faithful, and then this election or calling of the Seed of Abraham will be at an end.

What will follow? We Answer--just what God's Word declares. He said: "My Word that goeth forth out of my mouth shall not return unto me void, but shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it." He sent it forth to Abraham and all who would believe, announcing the blessing of all the families of the earth. But that has not been accomplished yet. He sent forth a further message through Jesus to all who would accept of Him that thereby He might gather out the Spiritual seed of Abraham. This message will not return void, but will find a suitable class, a Seed of Abraham class which God can use in conjunction with our Lord Jesus for the blessing and uplifting and restitution of mankind in general. It has prospered in the thing whereto it was sent. It evidently was not sent to convert the world, neither is such a statement to be found in the Word of God. It was sent to gather out a people for His name, both from the Jews and from the Gentile nations. It will accomplish this, the Seed of Abraham will be found, and just so surely as that occurs the other part of the promise will also be fulfilled, namely, that in and through that Seed all the families of the earth shall be blessed.

ELECTION AND FREE GRACE HARMONIZED

Here we find supplied by the Scriptures the very features which were lacking in the Calvinistic view or image of God. We see the election of the Church during the present time, an election according to favor, and we equally see that the great mass of the world are non-elect, not called, not chosen, and that they consequently could not be faithful to a calling they did not receive nor even hear about. But so far from the election of the Church signifying the condemnation of the remainder of mankind, the world, the Word of the Lord to Abraham tells us that this Elect Class will be God's instrumentality for the blessing of the non-elect. And through the Prophet, in our next text and elsewhere, the Lord repeatedly draws attention to the Millennial Kingdom, which will be established under the whole heavens for the breaking down of sin and the exaltation of righteousness and the assistance of all who under that enlightening influence will be willing to go onward to perfection on the highway of holiness. Now we are beginning to see in the proper image of God not merely the dignity of His foreknowledge, His wisdom, His justice, His power, but we see also in him the love which so draws our hearts and which calls upon us to bow before Him and adore Him, because his righteous dealings are being made manifest to us, because we are learning gradually that his plan must be considered as a whole, because we are applying in their proper places those promises which belong to the world and which assure us that they shall be brought into divine favor and have glorious opportunities for gaining by obedience eternal life.

In this view also we find the elements of character lacking from the image of God as given to us by our Methodist friends of the Arminian view. Here is the very God of love they were looking for, all loving, all generous, all kind, yet just, not sparing the guilty from the punishment He had meted out to them death not proposing in any sense of the word their torture at any time. Here we see the qualities lacking in the Arminian image, we see God's justice, wisdom and power as well as His love. We see that He has the Millennial Age for the purpose of granting free grace to every member of the race under much more favorable conditions than now prevail. We see that the election of the present time is not to the disadvantage of the world, but that ultimately it will be to their great advantage, when the elect Seed of Abraham, as the agents of God, shall bless all the families of the earth.

THE PROMISE AND OATH OF GOD SECURE

But can we be sure of this, can we be sure that after the election of the Church the world will not be destroyed or tormented but receive divine blessing? Are there other proofs? Yes, dear friends, when once you get the eyes of your understanding turned in the right direction and away from the hobgoblins of eternal torture and fireproof devils, when once you get the eyes of your understanding rightly focused upon the Word of God, you will see that it is full of exceeding great and precious promises not only to us, the Church, respecting the Millennial Kingdom and joint-heirship in it and a fellowship with the Lord in the glory, honor and immortality of that blessed state on the spirit plane, but we see also the rich provisions God has made for the entire race of Adam redeemed by the precious blood.—" In Thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed."

Let us quote another Scripture pertinent to this subject. The Apostle declares that the Church is this Seed of Abraham, joint-heir with her Lord, saying, "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's Seed and heirs according to the promise." (Gal. 3:29) The promise is not yet fulfilled and cannot be until the Elect, the Seed of Abraham, is completed. We are heirs of that promise and our inheritance of it will mean our glorification and our authorization to begin and to complete the work of blessing the world of mankind by releasing them from the bondage of sin and death and helping them onward through faith and obedience back to harmony with God and life everlasting.

Let us, then, dear friends, have full confidence in the Word of God that it will be accomplished, that it will not return void. Let us co-operate with this word and thus make our calling and election sure. To this end let us lay aside every weight and every besetting sin and run with patience the race set before us, the race for the crown of life, for joint-heirship with our Lord, for a share with Him in the great work of blessing all the families of the earth.

1908 Convention Report Supplement, February 25, 1908

ADDRESS TO THE COLPORTEURS
BY BRO. RUSSELL

There were about four hundred at this session and Brother Russell spoke in part as follows:

Dear Friends: I have a great deal of pleasure in meeting the Colporteurs, intending Colporteurs and Sharpshooters. I will suppose you are not all colporteurs and will have to suppose you are not all intending colporteurs, but I will suppose that almost all are sharp-shooters. By sharpshooters, we mean those who are seeking to introduce the truth in a particular bundle to their neighbors, friends, acquaintances, etc., seeking to use every opportunity to try to reach them. Such an one is a sharp-shooter, in comparison to a colporteur who fires a regular volley, going from house to house, mowing down the ranks. We speak now of mowing them down and not shooting. Our Lord is represented as having a sharp two-edged sword, and with it He will smite the nations. How glad they all will be when they fall down under Him, smitten how glad they will be. Some of us have not needed to be smitten; we have had that element of righteousness, or reverence of God, which led us by God's grace to feel after Him, if haply we might find Him. As in one of the parables, He represents Himself as the king, the appointed king who goes into a far country to receive His kingdom, the authority of the kingdom and to return and exercise that authority. So our Lord has gone into heaven itself to await the time when He will be duly inaugurated and shall take unto Him His great power and reign. You remember how He illustrated the matter: When He was going, He called His servants His own servants, delivered to them His goods and said, Occupy until I return. Did He call all the people or all the world and deliver to them His goods? No. He called His own servants and said to them, Occupy until I return. Then He took His journey. And then after that, some of those who were not in sympathy with Him sent an embassy and said, "We will not have Him reign over us." Who is this? It is the whole world. Is not that the attitude of the world and has not that been their attitude always? "We don't want His reign of righteousness; we oppose Him and His reign; we don't want these stringent rules, love, love, love, etc. no liberty at all in Christ." There is, and there is not, dear friends. Some like to have the restraint that belongs to love and some do not. Those that do not are the ones represented in the parable that sent the embassage and said they did not want or care for Him or His reign. "We want the power; we like the arrangements of this world; we like the prince of this world better than the Prince of Peace." Of course there are others that take a more moderate course who say, "We are not thinking about it; we do not care; we are making money and we will look out for our own." There are a great many who are in opposition to our King and do not want His reign.

You remember in the parable that when He returned at the second coming of our Lord He gathered His own servants, the ones to whom He committed His goods and said, occupy until I return. He did not gather the early saints, the Apostles, etc., but all the representatives today, representatives of the same class to whom he committed his goods, and we have some of those goods now in our possession; they are the talents and pounds we are to multiply and use to the glory of our Father, so that when He reckons with us, we can say, you gave me two and behold I have made two. And some with one talent can say, I have doubled it; I have never had very much, but I have done the best I could. And others with five say, it is doubled and now I have ten, and I gladly lay it all at your feet, glad to do anything.

After getting through reckoning with His servants the Church, the next procedure of the king who begins to exercise His power, after announcing that He is present says, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord. I do not say you have done many things, but you have been faithful and I have proved you, and whether with one talent under trying circumstances or with five, you have used and doubled them; I have seen your faithfulness, and he that is faithful in that which is least would be in that which is much, and vice versa. You have been faithful over a few things, enter thou into the joy of the Lord; have thou dominion over two, five cities, etc., as the case may be.

Where is this dominion? The Millennial Kingdom.

Who are we? Those to whom He committed the goods; those with whom He reckoned at the end of the age.

Then what? Where are those enemies that sent the embassy? Bring them hither, slay them before me. It sounds very cold and heartless, until we find out what kind of sword is to be used; when we find it is the broad-sword that goeth forth out of His mouth. When they find out, they will say, slay us that we may be the friends of righteousness and truth.

One of the Psalms says, (Psa. 45:5) "Thy arrows are sharp in the heart of the King's enemies." Yes, the arrows of the truth will cut deep. Then the psalmist goes on to say that, because of the arrows in thy heart they shall fall. Yes, says the prophet, "Unto Him every knee shall bow and every tongue confess." We are glad that we are not of those that need to be smitten with the sword or stricken down with the arrow. No, His message to us has been different, because we have been in a different condition. He says, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden." Why did not He strike an arrow into our hearts? Because our hearts were already broken and we were in sympathy with Him; we were feeling after Him. Thank God! "Blessed are your eyes, for they see; and your ears, for they hear." And let us sympathize with those that have not the eyes and ears, and let us not be unkind or bitter either in thought, word or deed. But we cannot have sympathy with their opposition. Remember that we are not to put the sharp arrows in their hearts. Oh no! That is not for us. By and by, after the King comes in triumph, He shall send forth the arrows. There will be a great time of trouble then. It is not for us to do the kingdom work now, but we are to do the work that He has given us to do. We are some of these servants; we are not all of those servants. Whoever has consecrated himself to the Lord has some talents and pounds, to be used in His service.

Now, dear friends, I speak to you from this standpoint, of those that are shortly to give an account. That will not make any real difference because it is shortly; we ought to be just as faithful as though we knew it was a thousand years. But it helps to make us more keen and wide awake to realize the time is short, that the Lord is looking at us and noting our zeal, enthusiasm, etc., that we are using to invest the talents and pounds. On the other hand, it brings a responsibility that might make us fearful, but it should also bring great satisfaction to realize that we are co-laborers with Jesus Christ.

What a remarkable thing it is that we are permitted to be ambassadors of the Lord, representatives of the Lord. How wonderful it is! I never get through thinking in my own mind, dear brothers and sisters, of the wonderful grace the Lord has bestowed upon us. I can imagine the angels looking at us and almost becoming envious, not that they would wish to take away our part, but that there might be an opening for them to be ambassadors of the Lord to tell the good tidings. The more we take this view of the matter, the more we become impressed with the honor and what it is to be used in the Lord's service, the more it will lead us, as the Scriptures enjoin us, to lay aside every weight, and run with patience the race marked out. What if we do see that the path marked out for us is not one of glory at the present time. We see that our Master did not tread the path of glory. What if we do see that to be on His side is to be misrepresented and misunderstood. The disciple should not expect to be greater than his Lord, and if the great Head should prove His loyalty to the Father by His faithfulness in enduring the contradiction of sinners against Himself, what shall we say about those humble ones who say they are glad He has given us any opportunity at all. What an honor!

There is a legend; I do not know that it is true, that the Apostle Peter met his death by crucifixion, and when the time came to be crucified, at his own request he was crucified head downward, saying, It is too great an honor to be crucified as my Master was. If we could have the privilege of serving or associating with Him in any part of the work, the more humble part or whatever it might be, the privilege of laying down our lives in His cause is so great that the other things are not worthy of comparison. We feel that it is almost too great an honor that we should serve with Him. When we get the right view, we will be glad to suffer and be all that we can for His sake, for the truth and the brethren. Whatever we do to each other, because they are His, it is counted as though it is done to Him on His account.

Well, what has this to do with the colporteur and sharp-shooter work? Oh, it has so much to do with it; it is the very essence of the matter. I can readily understand that those who have not been long amongst us might misunderstand the attitude of the colporteurs. People are so apt to think of everything being done from a financial standpoint. It is so apt to be the case, because everything on earth is done from the financial or business standpoint that it is almost impossible for the people in general to get their minds open wide enough to understand that there are really some people in the world that are really trying to lay down their lives, not to make money, nor to have anything except the Lord's approval. Don't be disappointed if you are misunderstood the Lord and the Apostles were misunderstood. Marvel not if the world misunderstand and hate you, and say all manner of evil against you, but REJOICE and be EXCEEDING glad. You are doing it, not for the world, but you are doing it for the Lord. Primarily you are doing it for those who are not His. How? I mean in this way; you are not doing it for the world, because now is not the time for the world's judgment; that time when the world will have the decision of eternal life or death is the Millennial Age and we who know that can see from the Scriptures that we are not laying down our lives for the world; that is not what the Lord invited us to do, but we are to lay down our lives for the brethren. The brethren are those that believe as we do. And how can we lay down our lives for them? There are others of the brethren who are still in darkness, still blinded, still just as you and I were, true brethren of the Lord when we were in darkness and Babylon and saw little of the Divine Plan. Did somebody serve you and me? Did the Lord use some brother to bring the truth to your attention? And as such, as you received the truth, you became the channel or vessel to disseminate the truth to others of the brethren, not the world, for it is not the time to try to reach the world, but it is the time to try to reach those the Lord is going to use. The Apostle Peter says the Lord is taking out from among the Gentiles a people for His name. And, the Apostle Peter tells us more about this kind of people. In what way? He says they are a peculiar people in their zeal for God's work, and that will include good doctrine, as good doctrine makes children of good works, but we are not to put all stress upon doctrine. This peculiar people zealous of good works and good doctrine, is a royal priesthood, a holy nation. Why, Brother Russell, how are we a nation? Well, you know some of us were German and some of us were Scotch, some Irish, some French and some American. Well, what are you now? O, we are new creatures; ours is the heavenly country. Do you suppose that if a man was born in Germany and called a German and was begotten of the holy Spirit that he would not be called of the holy nation. Ours is the heavenly country. If there is any mistake, he made it, but I don't think he made any mistake. This family of God is a new nation, and as a new nation, it has its own peculiarities. We see some peculiarities that belong to the German, English, Spanish, etc. They have theirs and so has the new nation, and those are the ones you and I want to have. Not the kind of peculiarities that some people have when they think they are religious; they wear a certain cut of coat, bonnet, etc.; but we want to be peculiar in heart, zeal, love and earnestness for the Lord and the Brethren, and willing to lay down our lives. In this way they are to be peculiar; they will do things for the love of the Lord and for the brethren, and they will not do it for money. It is altogether a new doctrine to all except those begotten of the holy Spirit.

As an illustration of this: A minister called to see me in Allegheny, of the Reformed Presbyterian Church, and said:

“Brother Russell, I have been requested by the editor of the New York Independent to ask you something about your church.”

I said: “Brother, I have no church. That is one fault I have to find with the rest; they make a church of their own, which we do not think is the Lord's.”

“Well, you know what I mean; those that believe as you do.”

I said: “I hope you believe as I do; we do not recognize any difference in the Lord's people; they are either the Lord's people or they are not, and we recognize all who have the Lord's Spirit and claim to be the Lord's brethren, and so I hope you are one of our church, the church the Lord describes, whose names are written in heaven.”

“Well now, Brother Russell, about this organization that believe as you do?”

“Well, I do not know how many believe as I do; we try to believe as near as we can what God says, and we do not even write down their names.”

“Well, you have a congregation you take up collections?”

“No, we never take up collections.”

“How do you get money?”

“Well, I will tell you. Whenever people get rightly converted and get the truth into their hearts deeply, they are so anxious to do something they say: ‘Brother Russell, here is some money; I want to get into the work.’ We never ask for money.” He looked at me, as much as to say, “do you think after saying that I believe you?” I said: “Brother, that is a fact, we never ask for a cent, and we never take up a collection, and yet the people are anxious to get their money in.”

That is so different, dear friends, and the whole thing is so different from anything that you and I ever heard of, or that you ever find anywhere else, and you know it is useless to try to explain it to anyone else.

Last night, a man on the platform handed me some money; I did not stop to look how much it was, and here it is it is a ten dollar bill, and I do not know who the brother is. A number were near me and I was shaking hands and he found my other hand and stuck the bill in it. This is only an illustration.

Now, dear brothers and sisters, what manner of persons ought we to be; that is what the Apostle said and that is what he says to us. We are not trying to flatter you or to make you think you are more than you ought to be. None of us are satisfied with ourselves, and the more you go along the narrow way, the more you will appreciate the perfection of God’s great plan and great love, you will see more deeply every step and every day so that you will feel more dissatisfied today than you did yesterday. That is to say, you will see how far short everyone, yourself included, comes from that divine standard of perfect love. I do not mean that you are going backward; I know you are not; I can see this in my general contact with the Lord’s people, that they are growing in the truth, in His spirit and the spirit of a sound mind. It is the spirit of love shed abroad in your hearts; not in a little spot, but shed abroad, and you love all that are the Lord’s, and not only those who are the Lord’s, but those outside who are not yet the Lord’s, in whom you can see some element of the right character and the image of God. Also for those who are out of the way, far off in darkness, whom the great adversary has blinded. And more than that, your love is going out toward your enemies. I can see that spirit growing, not only in this convention, but also from your letters.

I suppose our mail at the present time at the Bible House is about 500 letters on Monday, and the rest of the week from 250 to 300 a day. Those letters tell the story of the growth in grace and knowledge and love and the spirit of the Lord. I am glad to tell you that I can see you are making progress; but don't try to measure your progress by how you feel or what you did yesterday; don't fool yourselves, for the Lord is not mocked. We want to think soberly, as the Apostle says. If we are not progressing in love every day, we ought to be afraid. Let it drive us to the Lord, knowing what He has done for us and what His character is.

I am digressing somewhat from what I intended to say. What I wanted to bring to your attention was that, as the love of God and the brethren and the world is shed abroad in your hearts more and more it leads you to want to do more. The person that never gets anything but a good appearance and feeling and never wants to do anything is sure to fail. The Apostle says, show your faith without works; I will show you my faith by my works. That is a fair translation. The Lord is not going to judge us by our translation. The Lord is not going to judge us by our works; if He did, we would all come short, and so much shorter than others; for so many of the Lord's people have but one talent and would come far short. It is not works He is going to judge by, but according to your faith. But not a dead faith that has no works, but a living faith that does as much work as it can, and trusts in the grace of God. These are doing things, realizing that God will reward us according to our endeavors, not by results, but He expects as many results as we are capable of. Faith and works both have their proper place. God is looking to us to work according to our ability and to demonstrate our faith by using our opportunities that come to us, with all the efforts in your lives and in my life. The words of your mouth? Yes. The meditations of your heart? Yes. The conduct in your lives? Yes. They all tell; they may not be telling me, I am not competent to judge; they may not tell your neighbors or your brethren of your congregation with whom you are acquainted, for they are not able to judge. There may be things that hinder you from doing colporteur work, etc. it is none of their business. It is none of my business why you do not engage in the work; that is between you and the Lord. It may be in the volunteer work, it is between you and the Lord. He knows the reason. I do not know how much you are doing, and you do not know how much I am doing. None know about each other, just the Lord, and He it is that does the determining. You and I want to have all our arrangements in accordance with the fact that the Lord knows all about it, and He it is, by and by, that will say, if you are faithful, "I will make you ruler, etc." So let us avoid criticizing others, but let us criticise ourselves. What am I doing; what am I doing to show that I appreciate the fact that He redeemed me with His precious blood, has forgiven my sins, accepted me as a joint-heir with Christ and has given me the privilege of being with my Lord and Master what am I doing to show my appreciation? It is our duty to do all that we can to make it plain to the brethren that they may see. If there is anything in my course that is not all that it might be, I would be glad to explain it, but if I did not, you should not criticize. Let us do all that we can; it is the Lord that pronounces the penalty. The Apostle says, Let us judge, or criticize; ourselves for if we judge ourselves, we would not be judged by the Lord; He would not need to chasten us. But if we are chastened, we are chastened of the Lord. He does it, because He loves us and counts us as sons. What son would not a father chasten, if he saw that he needed it? But those outside may pass on without any chastening. It is also the privilege of the children to show the Father their appreciation in their daily lives, that they will not need to be chastened, that they judge themselves, look out for their own conduct, to see if they are glorifying the Lord in their bodies and minds and spirits, which are His.

Note, this applies to the colporteurs in many ways, for they are laying aside the other cares of life to be ministers of the truth. Why, Brother Russell, do you call them ministers of the truth? Yes. Why, I thought that ministers were always called "Reverend". Not in the Bible. They are called that by others who do not know what the Bible means. In the Bible, the word "minister" means "servant", and if they are serving God, they are serving those who are God's people, ministers of righteousness, ministers of the truth; they believe they have the truth and they believe they are ministering the truth when they are declaring the good tidings hither and thither. Why don't they go to just the right ones? Because we do not know who the right ones are, and the Lord has been pleased to let it be so all down through the Gospel Age. One man said to me, Brother Russell; why do you have so many of these paper pamphlets printed; why do you distribute them all over, trying to pull down the churches? I said, no, we are not trying to pull down the churches. If we pulled down the churches, all the tares would get in and bother us; we do not want the tares. We want to go here and there and pull out a grain of wheat, and the bundle will not miss them, for it will look much more uniform without them. Why then go to them at all? Because this is the Lord's providence and because we do not judge, He judges. All we can do is to scatter the bread, as He said, upon all waters, not knowing which will prosper, this or that; we leave it all to the Lord. And so, we all have a blessed privilege, whether scattering the tracts or carrying the reading matter of a more pronounced character, we are only doing all in our power to spread the knowledge of God and His glorious Plan. We are not responsible for the result that is all with the Lord.

Wherever there is a head of wheat, the Lord knows how to reach it. You would be astonished at the information we get at the Bible House. For instance: A man who had gotten a copy of Millennial Dawn, began to read it, as he did he became angry and threw it into the fire and then went out of the room. It was a boarding-house, and just then the landlady came into the room. The book had caught fire around the edges, but she picked it out of the fire, put out the blaze, kept the book, read it, and she is now a sister in the Truth to-day. Rather a peculiar way.

One of the colporteurs was telling me of a case in New York City; some one had thrown a copy in an ash barrel, and a young man, a foreigner, saw the book and thought, My, a good book put in the ash-barrel! He was a poor boy; he pulled it out, and that boy, through reading that book three years ago, would today astonish doctors of divinity with how much he knows of the Bible. Yes indeed. So, my dear friends, it is not always the books you put into the hand of the people that buy them that bring the fruitage.

I think of another case in Colorado. This party said, I am a poor preacher in the mountain regions, preaching the gospel, and as I go from place to place, the ranchmen would say, come in here, we will always have a bed and a bite to eat. So one place I went in, the ranchman said, I have a book here somebody sent me, and I can't make head or tail out of it, and you many have it. He said to me, "Brother Russell, I made both head and tail out of it; it was Millennial Dawn. The Lord sent that book to me, and not to that young man." We know not which will prosper. He told you and me to go on, confident that the Lord is guiding His work, confident that in this harvest time, the same Great Reaper is superintending the work that superintended the harvest work of the Jewish Age. It is my understanding and your understanding that every Israelite indeed, in whom there was no guile, was brought into contact with the truth and had an opportunity to receive the harvest message then due to be known. It was his right according to the divine arrangement, as said the Apostle, that it should have been preached to you who were natural Jews, necessary because it was God's plan, that those natural Israelites should have an opportunity of coming to Christ first, and to know that it was the harvest time. And just so here; I have every confidence, dear friends, that every Israelite indeed Spiritual Israelite every one that is truly the Lord's, whether in China, India, Iowa, Kentucky, or wherever it may be the Lord knoweth them that are His, and how to get the true meat in due season to them, the harvest message, in their time, and that He will not fail.

Will they get it if we do not do it? Yes. It is the Lord who has charge. You remember that when He was about to ride into Jerusalem before His crucifixion, they spread their garments on the way and as Jesus went along, they shouted, "Hosannah to the King of Israel." The Pharisees said, What are they talking about? Jesus said, If they should hold their peace, the very stones would cry out. Why? Because God had said through the prophet, "Shout, for thy King cometh, meek and lowly, riding on an ass, etc." There had to be a shout, and if they had not shouted the stones would have that prophecy had to be fulfilled. Just so here, dear friends, if you do not wish to take part in the shouting and blowing of the silver trumpet, the Lord will blow. In the Jubilee day, they were to blow a silver trumpet. We are now in the antitype, and the Great Jubilee is about to begin, and the silver trumpet is to be blown. Blessed are you and I if we have an opportunity to blow. Whoever blows or hears gets a blessing. There is no damnation in it. We are not going to have you suppose God is damning 99 out of every 100. We see that the nominal systems, if they are blessing any one at all, they are damning nearly everybody else. This message that is being blown on the silver trumpets by the colporteurs, pilgrims, volunteers and sharp-shooters is all one work. In the literal harvest, there are many different kinds of instruments, reapers, mowers but I guess I had better not say anything about farming, for I do not know much about it. Whatever it may be, dear friends, whatever our connection, the harvest work will go on. If we are disloyal or fail to appreciate the privilege, that is our loss, for the Lord will see that the harvest work is carried on. We have a great God who is not dependent on you or me or any one else; He is Master of the situation, as He says in Isa. 55:11, "My work which goeth forth out of my mouth shall not return to me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please and prosper in the thing where unto I sent it." That is a great God. How we can trust Him, and we can rest in His all sufficient wisdom and power, and as we feel very humble, we can say, "Lord where can I glean a little?" We may not have a very large weapon only a little sickle, we may not do a large public work, but there are corners of the field that have to be gleaned that otherwise might be passed by, something that the Lord is leaving for you.

Perhaps my work is more like the large mowers, going around, as do also the pilgrims, but there is an individual work, something for each one to do. None are left out. The Lord has made it possible for us all to join in this great work, and be co-laborers with our Lord Jesus, who is the Great Reaper.

I do not know that I ought to make any distinction respecting the value of these different parts of the work, volunteer, colporteur, pilgrim or sharp-shooting work; I think they are all important, but the important thing is for us to see in what way you and I can best glorify the Lord; in which way can we use our time, talents, etc., whether great or small, in the Lord's service. Some are being greatly blessed in the colporteur work, I think of one family where one after another of the family have come into the truth and then entered the colporteur field. Are they doing it for money? No, that I know. What are they doing it for, what hope have they? Love for the Lord, the truth and the brethren.

I could tell you something of the same kind respecting doctors who have given up good practices to engage in the work; and lawyers too, not those who make a bluff at being a lawyer, for a bluffer has no business to give up but lawyers that had good practices have given them up and gone into the work. One of our pilgrim brethren, one who was a lawyer of no mean ability in his state, was glad to give it up. How much salary does he get? I will tell you just a secret between you and me it is a pretty big salary, but most of it is beyond the veil, most of the salary. What does he get this side the veil? He said, "Brother Russell, I think if I put my affairs in shape, I think I have enough money to keep my family, and I think I have enough money to buy my own clothing. You were speaking to me sometime ago about the pilgrim work, and I feel like accepting your suggestion about this pilgrim work if it is still open, and I think the only necessary thing is the railroad fare." Pilgrims come cheap, don't they?

Now they preach twice every day. How many preachers getting five thousand dollars a year preach twice a day? How many go about the country, away from their families for five thousand dollars a year? Why do these do it? O, they are seeking to be in harmony with the Lord's arrangements, seeking first the kingdom of heaven that is, in harmony with it and its arrangements, its privileges, etc., to serve the King and the kingdom class those that are to be the heirs of God, and by the grace of God to be themselves heirs of God, to share with the Lord, as His Bride, the glory honor and immortality and the great work of blessing all the families of the earth. These are the rewards. Do you not see that IT IS A WONDERFUL REWARD, my dear friends. The more you think about the glory, honor and immortality that God has promised to His faithful, the more you will appreciate the fact that it is a high calling, a most wonderful arrangement that God has made, and it does not cost us much.

You know people today are looking for bargain sales, and there are hours for bargain sales. Just so in this matter; there is a great bargain sale and the hour for the sale is the Gospel Age, and it is nearly over. The bargain is the crown of life and joint-heirship in the kingdom, and it is going for a song. What? The cost of your lives. The cost of your lives do you count your lives as a song? Well, not exactly, but you don't count your lives as very much. Well, you say, "I have some money." Well, how much? A thousand or ten thousand dollars. Suppose you had a million dollars, it would not be the snap of your finger in comparison with what the Lord has in reservation for those that love Him not worthy to be compared, said the Apostle Paul. He summed up what he had sacrificed and said, "I do count them all as but loss and dross and dung that I might win Christ." What did he mean by "winning Christ?" How win Christ? Win the Anointed. How? Win a place in the Anointed Body of Christ. Don't we get it here? Only nominally, the real place is beyond the veil. Paul said in Philippians, that he counted it all as loss and dross that he might win Christ and be found in His resurrection. How know His resurrection? How experience His resurrection? By having a part in His death, and having a part in the resurrection from the earthly nature to the heavenly nature, changed in a moment into His resurrection. The same resurrection that is promised to all the members of His Body. If you can win a place in His resurrection, you can count that every thing you have surrendered as loss and dross for a place in the Anointed one, a membership in the Royal Priesthood beyond the veil. All that you can surrender is not worthy to be mentioned. And so with us all. Let us get a right estimate of things. You see people raking together millions of money and they do not know what to do with it, more than they could use in a hundred years if they lived in the most luxurious manner, yet they are busy raking in more and more. It seems to me there is something wrong with them. Then they look on the other side and say, What are you doing? Suffering, my you must be crazy. But we think they are crazy and that they are wrong. If they are right and if everything is earthly and whoever collects together the most money is right, then we are all fooled. Just as the Apostle said, "we are counted as fools all the day long." But if we are right and that great prize is obtainable that you and I have caught sight of, then all the world are fooled and they are casting aside the biggest thing imaginable. They are like the one in Pilgrim's Progress who with a muck rake was gathering in shells and failed to look up and see the better things. The world does not see the right thing. Why? Their eyes are closed—"The god of this world hath blinded their eyes." How do we see it is it because we are so much more brilliant than others? No. Not many great, not many wise or learned. How then do we see? O, you have the blessed eye-salve. The Lord said, "Blessed are your eyes, etc." Thank God! Have we anything to boast of? No. We have the grace of God. It appeared for all men, but all men have not yet seen. We have the blessed privilege of seeing, but ultimately it shall be to all people, the veil will be lifted and all will be able to see the blessing the Lord has for all.

Now is the acceptable time, now is the time for you and I to make a sacrifice if we would gain this great prize. And the opportunity? The opportunity is right at your hand and at my hand. In the Lord's providence He has given an opportunity to every one who has a desire to do so, to spread this harvest truth.

I have been thinking of our various methods, and I said, How does it come that we have all these various things in operation that are so different from other people? I do not know, the Lord has just been guiding it. Take for instance, the enormous circulation of the Dawns at the hands of the colporteurs. How did that happen? We never thought of doing it that way. We tried the ordinary methods in book stores, but the Lord permitted the Adversary to drive them out. We could not sell the books in the ordinary way and did not know what it meant, perhaps did not trust the Lord enough. So now, if something seems to go wrong, we look around to see what is wrong. (See previous reports, "Addresses to Colporteurs", for a fuller description of the early attempts to sell through book-stores.) Then the thought came of some one going out and selling them from house to house, and so it has spread all over, not only in the United States and Canada, but in England, Scotland, Norway, Germany, Australia, etc. The Dawn is even published in Greek. There was a man in Greece running a candy store. A brother went into his shop and bought something and laid down a tract saying, Here is something good to read. After reading it, he asked for something more to read, and was given the Dawn. As a result, he sold out his candy store, and came to Allegheny, laid down $250 and said, Can I do something. Cannot the Dawn be translated into Greek? We arranged the matter with a man connected with Columbia College, but did not succeed in getting it translated, and so the Greek Brother said, I think I had better try it myself. So he went back to Greece and there found a party who has translated the Dawn into Greek and has come into the truth himself. Then our Greek brother wrote us, saying, Here in Athens, all through the season, various people come here by boat, and I want to have books in all languages, and I will find some people who will want to have something to read while on the boats. So he sent for the Dawns in all languages, and he visits the boats and sells Dawns to the passengers in any language they want. That man is a minister of God. How do the colleges make a minister? They take him and train him out of all reason, so that he does not know anything, they teach him that instead of "the soul that sinneth it shall die," that he shall live forever in torment. But God has a way of taking humble things of this world and making them ministers of his, mighty through God to the pulling down of the strongholds. Don't feel too humble, but properly humble. Feel that it is not yours, but the Lord's message, and we are honored to be permitted to in any way tell His message.

We would advise that the brothers go two and two and the sisters two and two, after the manner of sending forth the message by the early Church.

The service then closed by prayer from Brother Russell.

THE LIVING AND THE DEAD

Johnstown, Pa., Mar. 15 Pastor C. T. Russell of North Pittsburgh, Pa., addressed large and intelligent audiences twice here today in the Grand opera house. We report one of the discourses which was from the text, "You hath He quickened who were dead in trespasses and sins." (Eph. 2:1) He said:

The scriptures everywhere declare that Adam's sin and disobedience not only brought a sentence of death upon himself, but upon all of his posterity. Thus do they account for the fact that while God's intelligent creatures on the angelic plane have life eternal, His earthly creation, man, is subject to death. As we think of the sickness, pain, sorrow, trouble involved in this death sentence, and that it has passed upon all men, and that approximately 20,000,000,000 have been born in sin, shapen in iniquity and after more or less serious experiences with the dying processes have gone into the tomb during the past 6,000 years, we stand amazed. We hearken to note if this is a just penalty, or if our race has suffered too much of a penalty for sin. As we learn the divine decree governing the subject we are forced to admit that no injustice has been done us, that father Adam justly forfeited the blessings and privileges that had been conferred upon him by a gracious Creator, and that we of his posterity have shared in a natural way His blemishes and hence are unworthy of eternal life. We are all ready to admit that with all the discouragements and sorrows and aches and pains and dying we prefer that we have lived rather than that we had never been born. Logically, therefore, we are under obligations to our Creator for whatever measure of joy and blessing we can secure in our present life, even if death ended all for us, even if there were no hope beyond the tomb. But that there is such a resurrection hope set before us in the scriptures we are about to show.

Let us not pass this subject without adverting to the fact that under the delusions of the "dark ages" we for a time supposed, in harmony with medieval creeds that the penalty for "original sin" was not death, but the very contrary life in an indescribable and everlasting torment. It is fortunate for us that we got the eyes of our understanding opened to the fact that such teachings are unscriptural, erroneous, and were formulated during the "dark ages" by our ancestors; that they had so far lost the right conception of God and the proper understanding of His word that they thought it to be God-like, Christ-like, just and loving, to pull one another joint from joint on the rack, to pour molten lead into each other's mouths and ears, to cut each other's tongues out, and to burn one another at the stake. Those evil fruitages in the lives of our ancestors we condemn, and must condemn also the evil doctrines which led to them. How thankful we should be that, with the dawning light of the new dispensation shining upon God's word, we can now read there a divine plan in full harmony with the justice, wisdom, power and love which we should expect in a good God. Now we can see that death, with its incidental sorrows and pains, is the divine penalty for sin, and this would have meant that our race would have perished like the brute beast had not God in great mercy come to our rescue and provided a Savior and a great One, "able to save unto the uttermost all who would come unto the Father through Him." Heb. 7:25

GOD HATH GIVEN ASSURANCE UNTO ALL MEN

That our Lord Jesus came into the world to save sinners is the repeated statement of the scriptures. But how do we know that the death of our Lord Jesus was accepted of Jehovah as the offset or ransom price for father Adam's transgression? How do we know that as the race was lost under condemnation through Adam's sin it was redeemed by Christ? We indeed have the apostle's word for this, and assurance that as all in Adam die so all in Christ shall be made alive. But has God given any outward specific indication that He is satisfied with this arrangement? We answer, Yes! The apostle's words indicate this. He says, "God hath given assurance unto all men in that He hath raised Him from the dead." (Acts 17:31) Our Lord's resurrection was an assurance that the Father was well pleased with Him—that in Him was no sin; and since He gave His life for the sin of Adam and his race, His resurrection signifies that His sacrifice was accepted of God and that sooner or later it will be applied. It is an assurance unto all men not in the sense that all men have heard nor that all men appreciate this, but in the sense that it is for all men, open to all men who have the ear to hear.

CONDEMNATION PASSED UPON ALL

The apostle's statement is clear that condemnation to death passed upon all men because all are sinners. (Rom. 5:12) He intimates, however, that this condemnation or curse or sentence of death has been lifted from some when he says, "Ye were children of wrath, even as others (still are)." (Eph. 2:3) Again he remarks that believers have escaped the condemnation (death sentence) which is on the world. What does he mean? The scriptural Answer--is that during this gospel age God is dealing in a special manner with a small number of the race who have ears to hear the faith message that has been promulgated ever since Pentecost. The message that comes to these is purposely in such a form that only a particular class of the world will be able to receive it. The intimation clearly is that not all have the hearing ear. The facts of life corroborate this for few even in civilized lands hear, understand, the message. The great mass even of the civilized are confused, and, as our Lord said to the Samaritan woman, “believe they know not what.” As to the heathen, twelve hundred million of them, according to statistics, have not heard in any sense of the word of the “only name given under heaven and amongst men whereby men must be saved.” (Acts 4:12) These are facts! It is also a fact, worthy of note here, that the heathen are increasing rapidly. A century ago there were only half as many according to statistics six hundred million.

So we see the world blind and deaf to the glorious arrangement He has provided of salvation from death at the hands of Jesus during the millennial age, and by the process of resurrection. Their eyes and ears are turned in the very opposite direction from the truth on these subjects, not only by heathenism, but also by much of the preaching of our day. Only a few, and they but imperfectly see and hear of the grace of God. Only these few comparatively, therefore come within the limits of present acceptance with God, for “without faith it is impossible to please God.” (Heb. 11:6) These few who, with more or less of enlightenment, really believe in the Lord Jesus and trust in Him, are the acceptable ones. These may know of God’s arrangement for the cancellation of their sins, and may now by faith accept and wear the robe of Christ’s righteousness imputed to them. These may walk by faith in the narrow way of self-sacrifice, self-denial, in the footprints of their Redeemer. These, by so walking faithfully, may gain a great prize, which the scriptures call the crown of life, and glory, honor and immortality. The great mass of mankind, who have neither the sight nor the hearing of faith, can have neither part nor lot in this matter; they are yet in their sins. These by faith are reckoned as alive from the dead the remainder of the world being still under sentence of death. Whatever their prospects for the future, they have received nothing of the Lord yet, and cannot receive anything from Him during this age except upon the faith terms which He has appointed. We will consider these and their hopes and their prospects later on.

RISEN WITH CHRIST

The thought that consecrated believers are from the divine standpoint begotten again to new life or, under another figure, are risen with Christ to walk in newness of life, pervades all the teachings of the apostles. These are called “a new creature,” “new creatures in Christ Jesus.” For them “old things have passed away, all things have become new” through faith, by which they first believed in Jesus as their Redeemer and accepted the forgiveness of sins, and then, secondly, by faith made a consecration of their justified selves to the Lord and His service even unto death; and then, still by faith, experiencing the begetting of the Holy Spirit; the anointing therewith, and its guidance to the extent that they henceforth live new lives not after the flesh, but after the Spirit. These, as the apostle suggests, set their affections on things above and not on things of the earth. (Col. 3:2) By faith they accept the “exceeding great and precious promises” of God, which are applicable to them and not to the world in general, and he promises that if they are faithful in the sacrificing of earthly interests now they shall at the second coming of their Lord be received of Him and be made actual new creatures in the first, the chief, resurrection; and thus “changed” actually from earthly to heavenly, from natural to spiritual conditions, they shall be like unto the angels, like unto their glorious Lord, and sharers with Him in the great millennial kingdom which God has promised Him by and through which kingdom the world is to receive the great blessing secured through the merit of the sacrifice at Calvary.

QUICKEN YOUR MORTAL BODIES

Our Second Adventist friends and some others have evidently misunderstood the apostle’s argument of Rom. 8:11, in supposing it to refer to the resurrection of the church in mortal bodies human bodies such as we now have. The entire context shows to the contrary of this. The apostle’s words are, “If the Spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, He that raised up Christ Jesus from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by His Spirit that dwelleth in you.” Most evidently the apostle refers to the work of grace operating in the hearts of consecrated believers in this present time. His argument is in respect to the power of the holy Spirit of God; it was mighty enough to raise our Lord Jesus out of death, will it not be sufficiently mighty in its operation in us to enable us as new creatures not only to keep our mortal bodies dead as respects sin, but also to energize and quicken them in respect to works of righteousness in the service of the Lord and of the brethren and of all men as we have opportunity? So then the new creatures in Christ are in no sense of the word to compare themselves with the world, but are to remember our Lord’s words, “Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you and ordained you that ye shall bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should be permanent... If ye were of the world the world would love its own; but because you are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you.”—(John 15:16,19)

3H424

The loss by many of this scriptural thought that the church is separate from the world, and has a separate judgment or trial, has been a costly one. The fact that large numbers of unregenerate people, who have not been begotten of the holy Spirit, have been accepted as true Christians has let down the standard of true Christianity from the lofty place of imitation of Jesus and the apostles to the ignominious standard of the average of civilized society. We can sympathize with those who did let down the standards, for we see that they had generous motives not merely to excuse themselves from the high standard, but especially to include with themselves those who had no such standards because of their misunderstanding of the scriptures, and their supposition that whoever is not of the church, not of the elect, is hopelessly condemned to an eternity of torture.

HOPE FOR THE WORLD

There is no hope for the world during this gospel age because it is a faith age the time for the gathering of the very elect, the time for the preparation of the “saints.” All scriptural hope for the world for those whom the apostle mentions as blinded by the god of this world and deaf to the influence of God’s message now lies in the future, in the millennial age. The world’s hope is briefly summed up in the apostle’s words, “God hath appointed a day in which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained.” (Acts 17:31) We can readily see that the judgment or trial of the world to which the apostle refers is future; and since the world as we have seen has been wholly condemned to death, it follows that it already has had one judgment or trial and that it is now suffering under the adverse sentence therefrom. As our Lord declared, “He that believeth not is condemned already.” (John 3:18) The condemnation started in Adam and held on to all of his race and still holds them all under the death sentence, and as we have seen only consecrated believers escape from that sentence. Hence the declaration of God’s appointment of a day for judging the world must mean a new trial. And this is in full accord with the scriptural declaration that, so far as the original sentence was concerned, “Jesus Christ by the grace of God tasted death for every man.” (Heb. 2:9) In other words, the death of Jesus in its ultimate benefits will cancel all of the original condemnation, the original sin of Adam and his race and will set all mankind free from that original death sentence. But as we have just seen this is not yet accomplished but has only set free a little handful of consecrated believers whose eyes and ears were specially blessed of the Lord and to whom during this gospel age has come a special judgment or trial in advance of the world.

The world’s trial will last for a thousand years, the millennial age, and the church now on trial, as we have seen from other scriptures previously, is being prepared of the Lord in advance to be associated with the Lord himself as the judges of the world when it will be on trial. We remind you of the apostle’s words, “Know ye not that the saints shall judge the world?” (1 Cor. 6:2) How glad we are, then, that the Lord’s redemption work, which now avails for believers only will ultimately be made available to all the families of the earth in the day when the shadows of ignorance and superstition shall have passed away, in the day when Satan shall be bound that he shall deceive the nations no more, in the day when the sun of righteousness shall arise with healing in his beams, in the day when the knowledge of the Lord shall fill the whole earth as the waters cover the great deep, in the day when the wayfaring man though a fool may not err therein, in the day when none shall any longer need to teach his neighbor and his brother, Know thou the Lord, for all shall know him from the least to the greatest of them. Rev. 20:2; Mal. 4:2; Isa. 11:9; 35:8; Jer. 31:34.

THE DEAD SHALL HEAR HIS VOICE

In full harmony with what we have already seen respecting the deadness, and the fact that a few of these hear now with the hearing of faith, and that all the remainder shall hear by and by, we note our Redeemer's words: "The hour cometh and now is when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of the man and they that obey shall live." (John 5:25) For the world of mankind in general this blessed hour of hearing, understanding, coming to a knowledge of the truth, is still future the millennial age. For the exceedingly few of the race who have the hearing ear the hour for hearing "now is." The effect of the hearing in both cases would be the same; the voice, the message of the Son of man, is life giving. "He is the way, the truth, the life." (John 14:6) He is the way to God no man cometh unto the Father except by him; he is the truth, the word of God, the only message of salvation is that of which he is the center; he is the life those who receive his message, his instruction, his grace, may have life, and that more abundantly than was heretofore possessed by man.

Those who hear now by the hearing of faith not only learn of Jesus as their Redeemer and the way to God, but they receive a special invitation to become his joint-heirs in the kingdom. This the apostle styles, "The high calling of God in Christ Jesus," and again, a "heavenly calling," because it is to heavenly things, and not merely to a restitution to earthly things lost in Adam and redeemed for the world in Christ. But those who will hear the voice of the Son of man in the coming hour, in the millennial age, will not be invited to walk in the "narrow way" of self-sacrifice, nor be invited to joint-heirship with Christ in the kingdom, for the kingdom class will then have been completed, the kingdom itself will then have been established, and the "narrow way" of testing and trial necessary to joint-heirship in it will have passed away and the "highway of holiness" will have been opened up, in which there will be no stumbling stones and no darkness and no ravenous beasts to hinder, to oppose, to intimidate, to stumble those who would draw nigh to God in Answer--to the voice that will then assure them of the forgiveness of their sins through the merit of the great sacrifice, and the possibility of attaining all that was lost in Adam human life, human rights, human honor and glory, a little lower than the angels and in the image of God.

A little later on in the same discourse Saint John gives us the Master's words (v. 28,29) which assure us that this hearing on the part of the dead world is not merely to those who will not have gone down to the tomb, but applies equally to the others who have gone into sheol, into hades, into the state of death. The Master's words are, "Marvel not, the hour is coming in which all that are in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of man and shall come forth. They that have done good to a life resurrection, and they that have done evil unto a judgment resurrection." (R. V.) How clearly the matter is here stated! The dead are not to come forth from heaven, nor from purgatory, but from their graves. These will include two classes: Some who have approved themselves to God in the present life and some who have not. The approved ones will come forth from the tomb to a life of resurrection, a complete resurrection to life, an instantaneous change in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, from corruption to incorruption. The others, who have not been approved of the Lord, shall come forth also that they may have a resurrection, a rising up, a deliverance from corruption into the full liberty of children of God. But theirs is not to be an instantaneous change to the perfection of life. No, to their advantage they will come forth from the tomb in an imperfect state in practically the same condition in which they died come forth that they may have a rising up to perfection a rising up by judgments, disciplines, rewards and punishments, during that day of judgment which God has appointed, a thousand-year day. It will be during that thousand-year day of their judgment that they will hear the gracious voice of the great King, their Redeemer, assuring them of God's love and the provision made for their assistance out of sin and death conditions, assuring them also that there are certain principles and laws in connection with the divine government which must be obeyed if they would attain to the glorious privilege of life eternal, assuring them also that "all the wicked will God destroy" all who, when they have a full, complete knowledge of righteousness and truth, love unrighteousness and error. Then, as the Apostle Peter says, "It shall come to pass that the soul that will not hear that prophet will be utterly destroyed from amongst the people." Acts 3:23

MOUNTAINS CARRIED INTO THE MIDST OF THE SEA

On Board der Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, April 12 The following comes to us from Pastor C. T. Russell, of Pittsburgh, Pa., en route to Great Britain on board the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse. He said:

I choose four texts: (1) "We will not fear, although the earth be removed and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea." Psa. 46:2. (2) "The sea and the waves roaring" Luke 21:25. (3) "The wicked are like the troubled sea, which cannot rest." Isa. 57:20. (4) "I saw a new heaven and a new earth, for the former heaven and the former earth were passed away, and there was no more sea." Rev. 21:1.

All languages were originally pictorial. The Chinese, for instance, particularly illustrates this, for all their characters are merely abbreviated pictures and our own language, although not pictorial after the same manner, is largely figurative or symbolical as to thought. Indeed, we recognize as the highest form of any language its poetic or pictorial beauty and harmony. But with the hard thought which came down to us from the "dark ages," that the divine plan consisted of a chance in a thousand of gaining an eternity of bliss and nine hundred and ninety-nine chances in a thousand of suffering an eternity of torture, everything connected with the Bible became so wrapped with gloom and every thought connected with the Almighty and His provision for the future of mankind so draped with despair that few except gloomy symbols were recognized. Our minds were perverted by the wrong thought of God, and the symbolisms of His Word were used by the adversary to further affright us and drive us away from our best, our truest friend.

Let us construct a picture before our minds; let us suppose the vast oceans, constituting three-fourths of the earth's surface, to represent the masses of mankind unsettled, unattached, without property, with little hope or prospect, with illimitable longings, but no power to satisfy them, "without God and having no hope in the world." Eph. 2:12. Let us consider the land behind and before us in our journey to represent society, fixed, established, desirous of peace, having something which it does not wish to lose, which it does not wish the sea class to wash away. As in the sea we find shallows and mighty deeps, so on the land surface we find low, marshy places, higher places and mountain peaks, and each of these various levels or heights may properly represent to our minds various degrees of prosperity or adversity. The mountain heights would represent the princes of society, merchant princes, bankers, as well as political powers. As from time immemorial there has been a conflict between the land and the sea, the latter sometimes in a storm violently attacking the former and seeking to capture it, so between the two classes here represented; the sea class helpless and without property is envious of the earth class, those who under the present social order seize and possess the chief blessings. Consider also the sky, the heavens, as symbolizing something still higher than either the sea or the land, as symbolizing the ecclesiastical power or influence which more or less dominates all classes and from which and through which come the showers of refreshing and the gracious sunlight of blessing. Upon the sea class these were comparatively wasted, but upon the land class, or those socially organized, these blessings from the sky are represented in the fruits, flowers and vegetables, which bring joy and comfort, and in the streams of water which bring refreshment to those living on the earth to the social world. In the sky, the heavens, shine not only the sun, representing the gospel light and grace, but also the moon, representing the law dispensation, and there shine also bright stars representing the teachers and

GUIDES OF HUMANITY

Do these figures fit well to the facts? Do you see that these are remarkable correspondencies? Do you wonder how these happen to occur to our minds? I will tell you. They thus occur to us because they are thus used in the scriptures under these symbolical figures. The Lord through His Word has presented to us some wonderful truths which may be ours as soon as we recognize them, but which cannot be recognized by us except as we come into accord with the Lord and the spirit of His truth which He has promised will guide His followers into all truth and show them things to come. John 16:13. Let us apply these figures as outlined and note that the lessons they bear are in fullest accord with the literal statements of the word. We note from the scriptural standpoint we are still in the night time, that the morning has not yet come, that the sun of righteousness has not yet arisen with healing in His beams and cannot do so until the elect gospel church shall have been completed, glorified, and made partaker with her Lord of His glory and associated with Him in the work of shining forth upon the world for its blessings. Meantime the scriptures give the thought that the church is clothed with the sun, that sunlight is upon the church to the extent that any of its members are able to appreciate it. The sunlight, clearness of sight, is however, in their hearts and lead to their relationship to the Lord not the sunlight to light their pathway in the world. As for the pathway it has always needed the light of the lamp, the Bible—"Thy word is a lamp to my feet, a lantern to my footsteps" has been true throughout this gospel age, and will continue to be true until its close, when the new dispensation shall be ushered in and the sun of righteousness shall shine forth. It is merely in our hearts that there is sunshine all the way. As represented in the symbolical picture the church is the woman clothed with the sun and with the moon, representing the law dispensation, under her feet; her position is superior to that of the law, her enlightenment respecting the divine will is of a higher order, yet in full harmony with the law the moon.

3H426

Our Lord, picturing the events connected with the close of this gospel dispensation and the gathering of the elect in the end of this age, describes a great trouble which will affect both the church and the world. He declares that the sun shall be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light; the stars shall fall from heaven and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken and then

He tells us of distress upon the earth, society and of a great storm amongst the sea class. "The sea and the waves roaring." We see many of these things already fulfilling; the sunlight of divine truth is becoming darkened even in the hearts of very many. The theory of evolution led on to higher criticism of the Bible, which is but another name for agnosticism, doubt, unbelief. Particularly within the last thirty years this hypercritical spirit has spread amongst the learned in colleges and pulpits. As a consequence the sunlight of truth in the hearts of God's people has become greatly darkened and worldliness has taken the place of religion, and while church organization has been maintained and advanced it has been merely with a form of godliness without the power so that the salvation that is now being preached is a social uplift rather than heart regeneration of the individual.

As for the falling stars, have not many ministers ceased to be burning and shining lights as respects the truth, as respects proper guidance? Is it not true that there is not a more confused body of educated men in the world than the professed ministers of Christ of all denominations? They know not what to believe; the majority show that their faith in the word of God is gone, they no longer have any use for the Lamp except as a mere ornament. They are now being guided by their own worldly wisdom, which, the scriptures declare, is foolishness with God and will ultimately lead them astray and have much to do with the approaching wreck as it shall affect present religious institutions. Many of these stars have already fallen from influence, and hence ceased to be light-bearers, and the number of these falling stars seems to be increasing day by day. As a consequence the next step of our Lord's great prophecy is having its fulfillment—"the powers of the heavens shall be shaken." They are shaking now, although the shaking is far from complete. The public no longer regard ministers of Christ as unselfishly sacrificing their time and energy in order to carry blessings to the minds and hearts of the people; they now regard them as laborers striving like men of other professions for the honors and emoluments connected with their position. Proportionately their influence and power are shaken and far from what it once was.

ON THE EARTH DISTRESS AND PERPLEXITY

Our Lord's prophecy proceeds to show the logical consequence of the darkening of the sun and moon, and the falling of the stars, and the shaking of the confidence of the people in the present religious institutions; that this will lead to distress of nations with perplexity, "men's hearts failing them for fear and for looking after the things which are coming upon the world" —because of this shaking of confidence in religion and because of the roaring of the sea and the waves. He who cannot see the fulfilling of these things is blind to them, whether he be a Christian or merely a moral person. His eyes surely cannot be open else he would perceive that the rich and the great and the influential are all peering into the future as respects the things that are coming upon the earth, society, realizing the breaking of the religious influence which hitherto has held mankind and realizing also the growing storm on the sea amongst the restless of mankind, as represented in socialism. Day by day the storm increases, the waves of the sea roll higher in their encroachments upon the land, society, and roar the louder in their threats and in their demands. He that hath an ear may hear this message, and those who are wealthy hear it with alarm and, with calm foresight, recognize what others do not, namely, that present conditions presage a coming conflict, a storm of trouble, such as the world has never before witnessed. And in this their foresight is correct; it is in harmony with the Scriptural declaration that "there shall be a time of trouble such as was not since there was a nation." Dan. 12:1; Matt. 24:21

Let us not be misunderstood in thus applying our third text, "The wicked are like the troubled sea which cannot rest." In one sense of the word the whole world of humanity is wicked, in that all men by nature are out of harmony with God. Let us not be misunderstood to mean that all those who are symbolically represented as being of the highlands and the mountains, the princes and kings of the earth, social, political and financial, are either righteous or good. Quite to the contrary we hold that there is much unrighteousness connected with these highland classes and much that is good connected with the sea class. The Lord, in telling of the future arrangement of things, the new order of things, assures us that it will be very different from the present in every respect; that there will be no more mountains and no more seas; that there will be a general leveling amongst those who will constitute the new social order, the new social earth. Then the sea class will be non-existent; that is to say, mankind in general will be lifted out of the depths of sin and degradation, and, under the proper regulations of God's kingdom, a general equality in the world will be established, as it is written, "Every valley shall be exalted and every mountain shall be made low." (Isa. 40:4) All the lowly, humble ones shall be lifted up and all the high ones shall be humbled. Some Scriptures represent this leveling work as being accomplished by the inundation of the sea and others represent it as being accomplished by fire which shall melt the whole earth. Both of these, however, are figurative expressions representing the same time of trouble which will bring about a new social order socialism on its highest and best plane and under heavenly direction and power.

As an illustration note our first text. The entire Psalm, of which it is a part, is a picture of the great trouble day in the end of the present age in which the Lord will overthrow present institutions and establish the world of mankind under new and more favorable arrangements under the rule of King Immanuel and His bride, the church. Speaking of the true church class, the “little flock,” the “saints,” it says, “God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in time of trouble. Therefore will we not fear, though the earth be removed and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea. Though the waters thereof roar and be troubled, though the mountains shake with the swelling thereof.” The one class in the whole world which will not be involved in this severe trouble are the saints of God. Even though they should as fully as others enter in that trouble it will be different with them owing to their knowledge through the Scriptures as to why the trouble is coming and what its results will signify in the way of blessing, restitution, uplifting of mankind under the new dispensation, which this day of trouble will serve to usher in.

What a graphic picture is here of how the mountains or kingdoms or great ones of the present time that now uphold the present structure will be shaken, overwhelmed, swallowed up in the midst of the sea. Even the very thought of these things causes the world to quake, but the Lord assures His people that they may lift up their heads and rejoice, knowing that at this same time will come the deliverance of the church, her glorification or change from human to spiritual conditions by the first resurrection power. The Lord, through the prophet, proceeds to give the interpretations of these symbols in verse 6. Instead of speaking of the raging waves we read, “The nations raged, the kingdoms were moved, God uttered His voice and the earth melted.” The earth, society, has not yet melted, though we sometimes say that because of friction between certain classes of society matters are getting very hot. They have not yet reached the melting point, but let us be assured that every word of God shall ultimately have its fulfillment and that the earth, society, shall melt when the mountains are carried into the midst of the sea, when the masses of discontented ones shall overwhelm present governments and institutions of every kind and law and order shall be completely dissolved in anarchy.

THE EARTH MELTED

I remind you of another Scripture which speaks similarly of the earth melting, saying, “Wait ye upon me, saith the Lord... for the whole earth shall be devoured with the fire of my jealousy.” That the fire is not literal any more than the waters is evidenced by the succeeding statement, namely, “Then will I turn unto the people a pure message, that they may all call upon the name of the Lord to serve him with one consent.” (Zeph. 3:8-9) If the earth should literally melt there would be no people, of course, remaining, but when society shall have melted and disintegrated and when, under the Lord’s transforming power, it shall thus be converted into a new organization and new society and new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness, then, indeed, the people, having learned a great lesson from their wonderful experiences in the time of trouble, will be prepared as never before to hearken to Him that “speaketh from heaven.” (Heb. 12:25) The assurance that he will then give to the people a pure message is consoling, especially when we remember the confusion that has prevailed respecting the Gospel message as it has been presented to the world messages so inharmonious and inconsistent that the great minds of the world, with few exceptions, have been unable to receive them, and have been rather turned away from the Lord than turned to Him. The same thought of God’s instruction of mankind after the earth has melted is given in Psalm 46, where we read that after the trouble God will speak peace to the world, saying, “Be still and know that I am God. I will be exalted amongst the nations; I will be exalted in the earth.”

THERE SHALL BE NO MORE SEA

Mark the harmonious thought set forth in our fourth text, namely, that when the new heavens and new earth shall have been established (the new social order and the new ecclesiastical order, for the elect church will have then been glorified), when the former ecclesiastical and social order shall have forever passed away, then there will be no more sea. Under the new order of things, under Messiah’s kingdom, a sea class will be no longer necessary or possible; because the new order to be established for mankind will contain all the benefits and blessings of the highest and wisest socialism and mean the largest possible good and blessing to the world of mankind, without exception or discrimination. And as for the willingness of any to be submissive to that new order of things, it will be compulsory, as we read, “It shall come to pass that the soul that will not obey that Prophet (that great King of the millennial age) will be utterly destroyed from amongst the people.” (Acts 3:23) It will be a case of coming into harmony with the arrangement of matters as they shall be then or of being cut off, though we are assured that stripes will first be administered, that corrections in righteousness will be given with a view to helping all in the right path, the path to everlasting life. No wonder that those whose eyes were opened to see the divine plan and the divine Word should rejoice greatly at the prospect of the second coming of their Lord in power and great glory to establish His kingdom and to rule the world in righteousness for its uplift and blessing, as well as to gather His saints to Himself to be His bride and joint heir in the blessing of the world. No wonder such are represented as crying, “Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly.”

We have no question whatever that many of those who are now clamoring for socialism are sincerely honest when they tell us their motives are not purely selfish, that they are thinking beyond themselves of the general welfare of mankind. They sometimes upbraid us because we tell that while the new dispensation, according to the scriptures, will usher in many of the blessings they sought by socialism, yet we discourage socialism because it will eventuate in anarchism. Some fail to see the consistency in these statements, and we take this opportunity to explain that our standpoint is not merely our human judgment, which concurs, but that our judgment is guided primarily by the word of God, which instructs all who hear His voice to wait patiently for Him and not to attempt to take power into their own hands. His voice instructs those who are followers of Jesus to be subject to the powers that be, because the powers that be are ordained of God, permitted of God. The Lord's people are to heed His voice whether they see the philosophy of His direction or not. But as they progress in the way, they find He has promised that the secret of the Lord is theirs, and that He makes known to such His object and purpose in the present permission of things which He does not approve and with which He does not expect His people to be in sympathy. He informs us that the present permission of evil is designed to work out rich blessings in the Lord's own way. Some of these blessings we now enjoy, as for instance, lessons of patient endurance in well doing, in faithfulness to principle, though opposed by the world, the flesh and the adversary, and secondly, the lesson of sympathy for the poor groaning creation, not only for those who are poor financially but also for many of the poor rich, who also belong to the groaning creation, whose deliverance awaits the coming of the Lord and the establishment of God's Kingdom in the world. Nevertheless, harmony with the direction of God's word, that His people should be "subject to the powers that be" until He shall attend to the changing of them, keeps these from identifying themselves with the sea class, the restless class, the discontented class; they are, therefore, in the scriptures represented as dwelling on the earth. This does not signify, however, that they are satisfied with present conditions; no, they cannot be satisfied with anything short of perfection and the glorious things which God has promised to them in the resurrection change. Hence, prophetically, they are represented as saying: "I shall be satisfied when I awake in thy likeness." (Psa. 17:15) It is another matter entirely, however, to be contented. As the apostle says, "Be content with such things as ye have" not content so that we would not improve our blessings if opportunity seemed providentially to open, but content to have them as they are until the Lord's providences shall indicate a change. We are, therefore, to be content with present conditions and institutions and to make the best of them, and so far as lieth in us to live peaceably with all men while waiting for the blessed hope and the glorious revelation of our Savior and His kingdom and our change to be like Him and to share in that kingdom. We are to be content even though the Lord's providence should permit us to come into tribulation or to suffer persecution, content to have all the chiseling and polishing which He sees that we need to fit and prepare us for His presence as vessels unto honor and for the Master's use made meet.

TWO PENTECOSTAL BLESSINGS

ONE FOR THE CHURCH, THE OTHER FOR THE WORLD—TIME AND EFFECT OF EACH

Pastor Russell addressed a large congregation at Northside Carnegie Hall yesterday afternoon, taking as his topic the two Pentecostal blessings. He took for his texts Acts 2:17-18, giving, as he explained, a preferred rendering, thus: "And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh, and your sons and daughters shall declare it, and your young men shall see the visions of which your ancients dreamed. And in the meantime on my servants and on my handmaidens will I pour out my Spirit, and they shall proclaim it." Pastor Russell said:

The importance and significance of the Pentecostal blessing of nearly 19 centuries ago, which still abides with the servants and handmaidens of the Lord, very few seem to appreciate. The reason for this lack of appreciation is found in the fact that very few have received the Pentecostal blessing; and the Apostle explains their situation, saying, "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, neither can he know them  because they are spiritually discerned." (1 Cor. 2:14) But to the fully consecrated believers God gives the blessing of His holy Spirit to the intent that they may know the "deep things of God." (1 Cor. 2:10) Only the spirit-begotten ones, therefore, may be expected to understand, to appreciate the signification of Pentecost. To these it signifies the beginning of a new life begetting again, "not of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." (John 1:13) Pentecost, therefore, marked the beginning of the Spirit-begotten Church, the Bride of Christ, just as the anointing of Jesus with the holy Spirit at the time of His baptism marked His begetting of the holy Spirit to the divine nature, to which He was born of the Spirit in His resurrection —" the first-born from the dead," "the first-born among many brethren." (Col. 1:18; Rom. 8:29) The Bride class, whose begetting began at Pentecost and which has been in process of development from then until now, will be born from the dead in the first resurrection, and then the glorified Church, sown in corruption, raised in incorruption; sown in dishonor, raised in glory; sown an animal organism, raised a spiritual organism, will be like her Lord, and the marriage of the Lamb will be accomplished the union of Bridegroom and Bride, of our Lord, the Head, and the Church, His members.

THE MEANING OF THE BLESSING

When our Lord left His followers and ascended on high He bade them wait for this holy Spirit anointing as a preparation for the ministry, the service to which He had invited them joint servants with Himself in the cause of truth and righteousness and the divine plan. He said to them, "Tarry ye in Jerusalem until ye be endued with power from on high." It should be evident, then, to us that no one is authorized to preach or teach in any sense of the word the heavenly things, the spiritual things, except those who have received of the holy Spirit as a preparation, as a qualification. It is not the laying on of human hands that bestows this holy Spirit of the Lord, and hence many who are public ministers of the Lord, possessing not the holy Spirit, being not begotten, therefore, to newness of nature, are blinded and cannot see afar off, cannot discern the "deep things of God," the spiritual things. Such are entirely out of place when posing as preachers of the divine word. But on the other hand the weakest, the humblest of the Lord's people, begotten of His holy Spirit of meekness, gentleness, patience, long suffering, brotherly kindness, love, through a full consecration of his heart to the Lord, is qualified, prepared to dispense truth to others yea, "the deep things of God." Hence we find that sometimes people of very limited education and very limited talents can be and are being used of the Lord in making known the riches of His grace and loving-kindness in Christ Jesus. We do not say that all Spirit-begotten ones are equally competent in the presentation of the truth of God's word; but we do say that all the Spirit-begotten ones are authorized to teach, to expound to the best of their ability; and that this is implied also in the prophecy respecting this anointing, which came first upon our Lord Jesus, the Head of the Church, which is His Body, and at Pentecost was poured forth from Him as the Head to the consecrated members of His Body.

This anointing of the Holy Spirit was typified in the anointing oil used in the consecration of Israel's priests and kings, of which we read in Aaron's case that the holy oil, fragrant with incense, poured upon his head, ran down his beard, yea, even unto the skirts of his garment. Thus Aaron was a type or picture of the Anointed One Jesus the Head, the Church His Body. The divine blessing, poured originally upon our Lord Jesus at the time of His baptism, we are told, was the Holy Spirit without measure, without limitation, because He could thus receive it, being perfect—"holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners." The blessing that came at Pentecost was the same Holy Spirit that was symbolized by the oil, which by that time had extended down from the head to the body, the Church. But only the first members are shoulders of the body, as it were, for there at Pentecost and since then the Lord has added to the Church others and still others of His consecrated ones, and these, coming into the body, have come under the anointing which needs not be repeated, but which will extend all the way down to the end of the age and consecrate and enlighten and bless all who thus come into true membership into the "Body of Christ, which is the Church," "whose names are written in heaven."

The prophet mentions the coming of this anointing to the Lord as the head, saying, "The spirit of the Lord God is upon me, for He hath anointed me to preach the good tidings to the meek, to bind up the broken-hearted, to declare the acceptable year of the Lord and the opening of the prison doors, and the setting free of the captives" of sin and death. (Isa. 41:1-2) Thus the prophet declares that the anointing signifies or implies the qualifications for ministry, and this implies that those not anointed are not qualified to minister the truth. Our Lord Jesus himself subsequently quoted this prophecy, showing that after the anointing came upon himself He began preaching the message of God's grace to the meek, binding up the broken-hearted and declaring the acceptable year of the Lord the epoch in which God is willing to accept the sacrifices of Jesus and of all those who, walking in His steps, present their bodies living sacrifices in the service of truth and righteousness. This acceptable year or epoch will close when the full number of the elect shall have fully availed themselves of the blessed opportunity of sacrificing their earthly interests. Then, glorified together in the first resurrection, these shall be the divine agency, the spiritual seed of Abraham, for the blessing of all the families of the earth, for the opening of the prison doors of the tomb and the setting at liberty of all the prisoners of sin and of death and for the granting to all an opportunity for return to divine favor and to everlasting life through obedience.

WHENCE CAME THE BLESSING?

The apostle indicates that the Holy Spirit is a spirit of meekness, gentleness, patience, long suffering, love. But it is more than this, it is a power of God, a begetting to a new nature, an enlightening influence which came at a particular time to particular persons and which was never manifested before that time except in the person of our Lord Himself, as we read of the period preceding Pentecost, "The Holy Spirit was not yet given, because Jesus was not yet glorified." What was it for Jesus to be glorified and what had that to do with the giving of the Holy Spirit? The Scriptures Answer--that a divine sentence, called otherwise the curse, the sentence of death, the wrath of God, rested upon all mankind up to the time of the Pentecostal blessing; and there that condemnation ceased, passed away, and divine favor came in and was manifested toward a certain few who were ready to receive the blessing. They had previously been prepared for it by our Lord's ministry. He had explained to them that to be His disciples meant to deny themselves, take up their cross and follow Him. He had explained to them that they need not marvel if the world hated them; for it had hated Him, and the servant was not above his Lord. Hence these consecrated ones, full of faith, waited for the blessing of the Lord, which would properly qualify them for His service as well as bring a blessing to their own hearts.

But what was it that our Lord Jesus did that affected the conduct of the Heavenly Father so that the Holy Spirit of begetting was shed forth after our Lord's ascension, but could not be shed forth before that time? The Scriptures assure us that God could not grant His blessing of adoption to eternal life and sonship to those who were the children of wrath; that it was necessary first of all that a redemption price should be paid. Hence it was necessary that Jesus first should be presented and should lay down His life as a sacrifice for sins. This He did during the three and a half years of his ministry, and of this He spake on Calvary, saying: "It is finished." The sacrifice was finished there, but yet the Pentecostal blessing did not come; it still waited until Jesus would be glorified, until He had ascended to the Father. The apostle tells us what our Lord did in the Father's presence, saying, "He ascended up on high, there to appear in the presence of God on our behalf," to appear before the bar of the Heavenly Court as attorney or advocate for us, His consecrated followers, and for the household of faith. According to a type of the matter given us (Lev. 16) our Lord presented before the Father the merit of His sacrificed life as an atonement for original sin, but he applied it not to all mankind, but merely to the household of faith, including the royal priesthood.

St. Peter tells us that the shedding forth of the Holy Spirit was to be considered as an evidence that the Lord Jesus had appeared before the Father and presented the sacrifice of atonement on our behalf, and that the Father had been well pleased to accept it, and that the shedding forth of the Holy Spirit implied this acceptance. (Acts 2:33) Let us not forget, then, that intelligently to acknowledge the begetting of the Holy Spirit is to acknowledge that even those consecrated to God were not acceptable to Him until after the redemption price had been paid and presented on our behalf.

But let us not forget that the begetting of the Holy Spirit is merely the beginning of the deeper work of grace which is in progress day by day until we shall have been filled by the Spirit, filled with all the fullness of God, until, indeed, we shall be in heart copies of God's dear Son. This Spirit of the Lord is first within us, and subsequently will enlighten us and fill us with the graces and fruits of the Holy Spirit before we shall be meet for the inheritance of the saints in light, before we shall be qualified to enter into the joys of our Lord and share with Him the glorious kingdom and power through which all the families of the earth are to be blessed.

THE WORLD'S PENTECOST COMING

Keeping strictly defined before our mental eyes the difference between this Gospel Age, styled "in these days," and the Millennial Age, which will follow it; keeping also in mind the fact that in these days only the servants and handmaidens get the blessing of the Holy Spirit, and that with equal certainty "after these days," "in the end of the days," in the new dispensation, all flesh will be blessed of the Holy Spirit, let us see first why this will be so, and, secondly, what it will mean to mankind.

We have seen that the Pentecostal blessing upon the Church waited for a certain sacrifice to be finished and to be presented before the Father; that if that sacrifice had never been finished and presented, or if it had not been acceptable to the Father, the first Pentecostal blessing would not have come; and we suggest that similar conditions will attach to the second or the coming blessing. But does someone say, But there can be no more a sacrifice for sins, Christ dieth no more? We answer, Yes, quite true, but the death of Christ is not yet completed; the sufferings of Christ are still going on. According to the divine program those who during this Gospel Age have accepted discipleship in its full meaning have presented their bodies living sacrifices to God. These are the ones who have now been begotten of the holy Spirit as servants and handmaidens, and accepted of God as "members of Christ," "members in particular of the Body of Christ." The sacrificing of these members of the Body of Christ has been in progress ever since Pentecost and still progresses; and, as the Apostle declares, this signifies a filling up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ. (Col. 1:24) The special invitation to these is that, if they suffer with Christ, they shall also reign with Him; their flesh is counted as His flesh. Although they were not worthy according to the flesh to be sacrifices, nevertheless His merit imputed to them has made them worthy; as the Apostle again declares, "Present your bodies living sacrifices, holy and acceptable to God, your reasonable service." (Rom. 12:1) So then the flesh of the Lord's consecrated ones, the flesh of all those begotten of the holy Spirit as members of the Body of Christ, is being sacrificed, and the exaltation will not take place until the last member of the Body of Christ shall have suffered in the flesh, as the Apostle again says, "As Christ has suffered for us in the flesh, arm yourselves also with the same mind” (1 Pet. 4:1), the same disposition to suffer in the flesh, to renounce the interests of the flesh, to present your bodies living sacrifices, to fulfill the will of God, even at the expense of the interests of your flesh.

Now we see the signification of the Apostle’s declaration that the angels aforetime desired to look into these things, inquiring concerning the times and seasons which mark the sufferings of Christ and the glory that should follow. (1 Pet. 1:10-12) The sufferings of Christ, beginning with Jesus the Head and continuing with the apostles as members of His Body and with all the faithful in Christ Jesus since, have now progressed for nearly 19 centuries, and we believe will soon be finished. Then the glory will follow promptly.

THE BULLOCK AND THE GOAT

In the type on the Day of Atonement, which corresponds to this Gospel Age, the high priest offered two sin-offerings first the bullock, which represented himself personally, and secondly the goat, which represented the Church, his members. We are explicitly told that the two sacrifices were handled alike; that everything was done to the goat that had been done to the bullock; that this corresponds to the Scriptural declaration that we must be associated with Christ in the sufferings of this present time if we would share in His glory and work in the future. But while the two sacrifices were treated alike, the blood or merit of the sacrifice of one was for one purpose and that of the other for another. The blood of the bullock was used to make atonement for the sins of a special, limited class Aaron himself, together with his sons and the tribe of Levi. The blood of the bullock was not offered for any others of the nation. It will be readily seen that this corresponds exactly to the work accomplished 18 centuries ago by Jesus the Lord, when He ascended on high and made application of His own merit and sacrifice, not for all the people, but merely for His Body, the Church, and for His house, the household of faith; and upon these alone came the divine blessing.

The second offering, that of the blood of the goat, on the contrary, was not for the priest and not for the tribe of Levi, but for all the others of that nation. This clearly foreshadows that when the sacrifice of the Church, the Body of Christ, is complete, the blood, the merit of this part of Christ’s sacrifice, will be applied on behalf of “all the people,” excepting those who were atoned for directly when our Lord ascended on high and appeared for us the household of faith.

THE SECOND PENTECOSTAL BLESSING

Here, then, we see that the second Pentecostal blessing, promised through the prophet and corroborated by the apostle as coming in the last days, at the close of this Gospel Age, will not come upon the servants and handmaidens of the Lord, for they will not need it. By that time they will have been glorified with the Lord, as members of the High Priest's Body. They will have passed beyond the second veil into the Most Holy, the heavenly condition itself. As our Lord Jesus received the blessing of the Father, shed forth at Pentecost upon His members, so the complete Christ, at the finishing of the presentation of the sin offering for the world of mankind, will receive the blessing of the Father the sanction, the permission, the authority, the power to go forth and to bless "all the people," "all the families of the earth."

We are not to understand that this shedding forth of the Spirit upon all flesh will come to them while in a condition of rebellion against God, but rather that as they hear the message of Messiah and seek to come into harmony with His Kingdom, the truth will more and more be granted to them, and more and more they will have the spirit of the truth, the holy Spirit, the holy disposition, accompanied by a power of the Spirit, a power of the truth working in them, energizing them to do God's good pleasure. In some respects their experience will correspond with ours, but not in all respects. The Spirit of the truth, as we receive it, testifies to us respecting a change of nature obtainable through the sacrifice of earthly interests; but the Holy Spirit, as it will then operate through the truth, will testify to all of the possibilities of their attaining to human perfection and uplifting or restitution from the degradation and sin and death conditions back to the image of God, possessed by Adam and lost for himself and all his race by his disobedience, but redeemed by the precious blood of Christ.

During the Millennial Age the world will receive the Lord's Spirit more and more completely as they experience restoration from the mental, moral and physical imperfections of the present time. Thus, while the pouring out of the Lord's Spirit upon all flesh will begin early in the Millennium, it will progress to its close, when all so desiring it will have returned to the fullness of divine favor and divine likeness, and all the unwilling and disobedient at heart will have died the second death, from which there will be no recovery.

THE EVERLASTING ARMS

ARE UNDERNEATH GOD'S PEOPLE.
DIVINE COMPASSION
FOR THE GROANING CREATION—PASTOR RUSSELL AT WAYNESBURG, PA.

Waynesburg, Pa., June 14 Pastor Russell delivered his anti-infidels discourse, "To Hell and Back," at the Opera House here today to a large audience. We report his evening discourse from the text, "The eternal God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms." (Deut. 33:27) He said:

Whoever delves sufficiently into the Word of God, and, with an honest mind, weighs its precepts and promises, will be fortified against the growing spirit of higher criticism, new theology and evolution. Such will see in our text a beautiful poetic sentiment, skillfully adapted to our interests as a fallen race. And so far from ascribing these words of golden sentiment to a member of our race only a short remove from a monkey, he will, on the contrary, discern that such a noble sentiment and lofty expression could be copied to advantage, but could not be improved upon by the loftiest intellects of this, our boasted brain age. Indeed, the peculiarity of the poetry of the Bible is this wonderful adaptation to the heart interests of every class to which it is addressed. The merit of Shakespeare's poetry lies in the fact that it faithfully interprets human nature; yet Shakespeare had the Bible for one of his text books; and that he used it to a considerable degree is evidenced by his copying sometimes its style and sometimes its phraseology.

Many, indeed, admire Shakespeare's writings who do not admire the Scriptures; partly because they are ignorant of the latter and partly because they have not yet come to that condition of mentality, ripeness and experience which would enable them to partly appreciate the beauty and poetry of the Bible. Ignorance of the Bible is largely the result of its misrepresentation through the false doctrines and creeds formulated during the Dark Ages, and since under the same influences. Our adversary had much to do with the blinding of the minds of those who formulated those errors, as is absolutely proved by the records of their wicked persecutions committed in the name of God and religion and Christian love. Since the Bible is the handbook of Christianity every reflection against the latter attaches to the former; and hence we may see that the world's failure to be interested in Bible study is largely owing to misrepresentations of God's character and plan, erroneously supposed to have proceeded from the Word of God.

BIND UP THE BROKEN HEARTED

We remarked a moment ago that the majority of mankind never reached that degree of development in life experience which would enable them fully to appreciate the grandeur of some of the expressions of the Bible; as, for instance, of our text. By this we do not mean that such lack intelligence and education. On the contrary, some of the best educated are undeveloped in this direction, and some of the most illiterate are highly developed in the power of such an appreciation. The Apostle Paul tells us that mankind as a whole is a groaning creation, travailing in pain together and waiting for deliverance at the second coming of Christ and the establishment of His Millennial Kingdom. Rom. 8:19-22

But this groaning creation understands very imperfectly its real situation. It recognizes that something is wrong; that the world is and for centuries has been under the “reign of sin and death.” It perceives that with “longings infinite” the course of human life is short; that its environment is unfavorable for happiness, mental or physical; and it determines that time must not be lost in speculating respecting the why and wherefore of the situation; but that if any pleasure is to be gained no time is to be lost in starting in its pursuit.

Hence we see the whole world thinking, planning and chasing after happiness, some by one road, some by another, but all with the one end in view, the attainment of something called pleasure, which will be an offset to and an antidote for the aches, pains, sorrows, trials and disappointments common to the world in general.

Remarkably few people are philosophical. Scarcely any sit down to count the cost of pleasure or of wealth; otherwise they would quickly discern with the wise man of old that “all is vanity.” They would see that the battle for wealth brings victory for but the few, and that by the time victory is gained health and energy are largely gone and one foot is partly in the grave. They would perceive that a race for name and for fame is sure to bring more or less of opposition from others running in the same race, and that even the few who attain find the object but a gorgeous bubble which perishes in the grasping. Even the more humble ambitions for home and peace and love and happiness in the vast majority of cases result disastrously.

And sometimes a second or a third repetition of the endeavor proves equally unfruitful. The Bible, however, presents a philosophy concerning the present life and the one that is to come which only the few are willing to accept without first “trying their luck,” as already set forth, and proving to themselves the truth of the Scriptural statement that all earthly ambitions are vanity. The formation of hopes and aims are vanity and bring no satisfying reward; or if the reward be gained it is usually at an equivalent or greater cost. Only by such as have learned to philosophize may the voice of the Lord through the Bible be heard, promising to heal the broken heart with a heavenly balm.

THE WEARY AND HEAVY LADEN CALLED

It was our Lord who declared that it was his mission to bind up the broken hearted, and not to break the hearts of men. In harmony with this he said: "Come unto me, all ye that are weary and heavy laden and I will give you rest;" "Come unto me, all ye who have been vainly striving for rest, for happiness, for peace, for love, for joy, and "I will give you rest;" "Ye shall find rest unto your souls;" "My peace I give unto you, yet not as the world giveth peace;" "Let not your hearts be troubled neither let them be afraid;" "Let the peace of God which passeth all understanding rule in your hearts." Matt. 11:28; John 14:1,27; Phil. 4:7

To the few of philosophical mind who can learn by observation and to the many who by experience with sorrow and trouble and heartache and tears are broken-hearted to these the teaching of God's Word is precious, different from the teachings of all the heathen Bibles. In none other is divine sympathy divinely portrayed, in none other is a God of love and compassion revealed, as expressed briefly in the declaration, "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish but have everlasting life" as the holy angels possessed and enjoyed in harmony with God and all His gracious provision for those who come into a knowledge of His goodness and love, and who obey Him.

Note the contrast between the erroneous teachings of the "dark ages" respecting an angry God viciously delighted in the torture of 999 out of every thousand of his creatures and the compassionate, loving, tender, gracious, caressing expression of the Bible itself in which we read, "For he hath looked down from the height of his sanctuary; from heaven did the Lord behold the earth; to hear the groaning of the prisoner, to loose them that are appointed to death." Psa. 102:19,20

While the Scriptures most explicitly tell us of the times of refreshing which shall come to the world in general at the Second Advent of our Lord and of the times of restitution which shall then be inaugurated; and while these have been in a large measure the theme of all the holy prophets since the world began (Acts 3:19,21), nevertheless the great majority of the Scriptures, especially of the New Testament, are addressed to the Elect Church, the Christ, the Seed of Abraham, which is now being selected. These alone now have the ear to hear the divine message. The remainder of the world must wait for the dawning of the new dispensation, in which the Lord assures us that all the blind eyes will be opened and all the deaf ears will be unstopped. (Isa. 35:5) But as our Lord said to some in his day, so it is still true that a special blessing has been provided in connection with this election for all who have the ear to hear, "Blessed are your ears for they hear; and your eyes, for they see." (Matt. 13:16) True, our responsibility is increased in proportion as we see and hear, likewise our joys, our pleasures and our possibilities as respecting the glorious things to which we are now being called by divine grace.

It is to this spiritual Seed of Abraham, the Elect, the Anointed Messiah class (Gal. 3:29), that our text has special application. It is pleasant indeed for us to know of God's sympathetic love for the world, and of the attestations of His provision that ultimately every knee shall bow and every tongue confess and every member of the race have the fullest opportunity of coming to a clear knowledge of the truth and to a full harmony with God. Rom. 14:11; 1 Tim. 2:3,4

But in the meantime while Satan is not bound, while sin still prevails, while the Church is still being presented as living sacrifices, and while faith is still requisite, how precious to these is the divine promise of our text and many others like it. The everlasting God is their refuge; and underneath them are the everlasting arms. Well has the poet said: "Ah, whither could we flee for aid when tempted, desolate, dismayed!" How wonderful that these who were children of wrath even as others, under a death sentence with the remainder of the world, how wonderful that the eternal God has adopted these into His family, made them partakers of His Holy Spirit, crowned them with His loving kindnesses, prepared for them joint-heirship with Jesus in

His Kingdom, and sent them the message of His love and grace. Well has the poet said:

*"God is the refuge of His saints
When storms of sharp distress invade,
Before we enter our complaints,
We behold Him present with His aid."*

The Scriptures present the thought that the Lord's people are surrounded by enemies of every kind the Adversary himself and fallen humanity, considerably under his domination and spirit — including often those who are dear to us according to the flesh. All these are represented as being unreliable, unworthy of full confidence, because they are out of accord with God; because under the delusions of error they have a wrong spirit and often mistake light for darkness and darkness for light, righteousness for sin and sin for righteousness; yea, the Lord's people even are admonished to be on guard lest their subtle adversary, Satan, should beguile them from the right attitude of heart and conduct, and under some specious form of temptation should lead them to do those things which are contrary to the light and to the spirit of the Divine Word the law of love.

Hence the Scriptures warn us to have no confidence in the flesh and to keep our hearts, because out of them are the issues of life.

If we fail to keep our hearts in the right attitude of love for God, for the brethren, yea, for our enemies, we might soon be entrapped by the Adversary and made servants of sin contrary to the real intention of our hearts. Hence, while fleeing ourselves for refuge to the Almighty God, and remembering His love, and trusting therein, we should see to it that we are full of a similar love toward all others, especially toward those of the Household of Faith. We should measure our love not by the world's standard, not by any selfish standard, but by the Lord's divine standard

*“The love that is perfect, the love that is pure,
That we may with patience all things well endure.”*

Then, for the present it is our privilege continually to call to the world's attention the blessed rest and peace which God has provided in Christ, and that this is a world-wide provision that only a certain class may enjoy its blessings and provisions in the present time.

How simple are the terms by which we can thus come into this blessed relationship with the Lord. 1. We must renounce sin, which we should be glad to do the more we learn of its real character and injurious qualities. 2. Having heard of the redemption accomplished through Jesus we must believe in the same fully according to the record, and must accept our share, realizing that without the imputation of righteousness we could have no standing whatever with the free. 3. We must consecrate our little all to the service of the Lord, the truth and the brethren, and to do so acceptably we must realize that our very best, our very most, is an offering far too small, and aim very humbly to accept the Lord's grace. By this door of faith, obedience, consecration, we enter the precincts of the heavenly family, become heirs of God, joint heirs with Jesus Christ our Lord we enter into the refuge and feel about us the Everlasting Arms.

WHERE ARE THE DEAD

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 5 Pastor C. T. Russell addressed a large audience in the Alvin theatre on the topic, "Where Are the Dead?" He was listened to with rapt attention, and many of his hearers apparently concluded that the Bible contained much that they had never heretofore noticed. Many of them expressed themselves as determined to search the scriptures more carefully—like the Bereans of old, to ascertain whether these things be true Acts 17:11. The text for the occasion was from St. Peter's words on the Day of Pentecost—"Men and brethren, let me freely speak to you of the Patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his sepulchre is with us unto this day  For David is not ascended into the heavens." Acts 2:29, 34

The speaker said: Accepting the recognized fact that the whole world is rapidly going down into death and the estimate that twenty thousand million of our neighbors and friends have already gone thither, our topic of this afternoon will be recognized by all of you as a most pertinent one. It is a question which should be considered as in the first rank of all questions. To be without thought on this subject or to discuss it lightly should be esteemed a mark of insanity, signifying as little reasoning capacity respecting it as that possessed by the brute creation. I shall assume then that I have the interest and attention of every one of this large audience. I shall assume further that whatever our previous thoughts on the subject have been, we are all inquirers for the truth, and as such endeavoring to have our minds as free as possible from superstition and error. More than this, I trust that, living in this blessed land so highly favored of God, and having some acquaintance with His blessed book, the Bible, we have learned to appreciate it as a divine revelation, able to make us wise in the wisdom which cometh from above. My hope, dear friends, is that the growing spirit of skepticism has not seriously attacked our faith in this blessed book. We are well aware however, that today the intellectual world, under the lead of so-called higher critics, is rushing madly onward into infidelity, into disbelief of the Bible as an inspired revelation from God. True, this infidelity is not the foul-mouthed kind of Tom Paine or Robert Ingersoll, but it is all the more forceful in its undermining of Christian faith, because its advocates include some of the brightest members of the Christian ministry and nearly all the professors in nearly all of the colleges and seminaries of all denominations. I hope, nevertheless, that but few of this audience have gone so far. For all others, I trust that this lecture will mean a fresh establishment of your faith in the Bible as the inspired word of God as superior to all other teachers and teachings on the subject it discusses. I shall hope that as this afternoon I shall present to you the Bible teaching of "Where are the Dead?" you will see that this blessed book has been maligned and misrepresented even by its friends, and that rightly understood, reasonably interpreted, it presents the only tolerable view on our subject.

DOCTRINES OF DEMONS

The apostle calls our attention to the fact that the heathen in his day labored under the delusion of "doctrines of demons." (1 Tim. 4:1) We know what these doctrines were, for they are still prominent throughout heathendom. Plato, one of the philosophers whose teachings were widely accepted at that time and which were set aside by the apostle as vain philosophies, the wisdom of men as compared with the wisdom of God, was the originator of the theory of human immortality.—(Col. 2:8) He claimed that man received a spark of divine quality from the gods which could never be extinguished, and hence his portion must be to live on and on throughout all eternity. Building upon this assumption, he pictured a future condition* while others were remanded to various discomforts of mind and body. The Grecians took hold of Plato's theories, and they being the most intelligent people of that time aside from the Jews' theory, starting before Christianity, spread this worldly wisdom or theory wherever their literature went in all parts of the world, amongst the most intelligent. It is not surprising, therefore, that it not only tintured the views of the heathen, but also to some extent those of the Jews though comparative few, known as the Essenes. These in accepting Plato's philosophy really ceased to be Jews in the religious sense. This Platonic theory, starting before Christianity, was in many respects its competitor, until gradually in various parts the Christian faith became tintured with it.

We wish you to notice how this theory is responsible for the world-wide opinion that a human life once begun can never be extinguished. With this theory the people of the east supported their view of transmigration of souls claiming that a human soul is separate from a human body, and that when the latter dies the soul passes out and in due time will be born again in another body perhaps again as man, or as a woman or as a dog or a donkey or an elephant or a mouse. The labors, the privations, the difficulties of all lower animals are thus looked forward to by those poor people as being their own future state. No wonder their faces, indexing their heart conditions are woeful and sad. Others of the heathen have beliefs near to those entertained by man in Christendom that the tortures of the life they cannot get rid of will be with fire or ice or other torments at the hands of demons.

THE VIEWS OF CHRISTENDOM

Accepting the recognized fact that Christendom leads the world in thought today, we notice that the philosophy instituted by Plato--not by Moses, not by the prophets of Israel, not by Jesus, not by the apostles of Jesus--has taken a firm hold upon Christian faith, and left its terrible impress upon nearly every item thereof. Practically all of the larger denominations of Christendom hold to the Platonic theory, though the majority are quite unaware of the origin of the doctrine, many of them supposing that it is the Bible teaching--that it is supported by every writer on the holy scriptures. Quite the contrary of this is true, however, and, as we shall shortly show, the testimony of the scriptures is radically in opposition to this theory from first to last, and without the exception of a single writer or a single text.

As the oldest of the denominations, Catholicism should be heard first as to its views on the subject where are the dead? Its Answer--is that it ignores the heathen theory of the transmigration of souls, but it holds to that feature of Plato's philosophy which declares that the human soul is immortal that a human existence once having started can never cease hence, that the twenty thousand millions of Adam's race who have died are not really dead, but more alive than ever before, and that notwithstanding the appearance of death they have been experiencing joy or sorrow, pleasure or pain. In Answer--to our more particular inquiries they tell us that the dead are in one of three places: (1) A very few saintly ones, they claim, went to heaven directly at death; (2) a comparatively small number who died outside the Roman Catholic faith, in willful opposition thereto and hence called heretics, have since their death been enduring a hell of torture which will be never ending; (3) the great mass all others than those enumerated above they claim to go to purgatory. Their claim is that nearly all of the heathen go there because they were not counted worthy of the blessings of knowledge before they died, and because on the other hand they had done nothing to merit the eternal torture of hell or the eternal peace of heaven. To purgatory they consign practically all the members of their own church also including bishops, archbishops, cardinals and popes.

Dante, the great Catholic poet, who died in a monastery, gives the Roman Catholic view of purgatory. The artist Dore, also a good Catholic, used his remarkable skill in the illustration of Dante's Epic. We advise you all to notice, in some public library or book store, this remarkable work Dante's Inferno, illustrated by Dore. The artist has faithfully depicted the descriptions of the teacher, and his work would surely touch the most calloused heart with sympathy. Every conceivable form of torture is depicted, from roasting to boiling to being frozen and mangled —horrible, terrible. No wonder our dear Catholic friends and neighbors, as they place these pictures before their mental vision as their prospect after death, have not only sad countenances but a terrible fear of death and thereafter. Neither should any think that these Catholic doctrines of the past have in any degree changed at the present time. In this very day Catholics have tracts for their children which describe in vivid language the most excruciating tortures awaiting those who in any sense or degree are disrespectful or disobedient to the priests and the teachings of the Catholic church. One of these brought to our attention recently was published in Ireland, and described a little girl who had done wrong and whose fate after death was to be obliged to live in a room whose floor was red-hot. In solemn language the tract exhorted other little boys and girls to love and serve God lest such a fate should await them. It is not imaginable that any human being could love a God who would provide such tortures.

It is no wonder, then, that Catholics make no pretensions to a love or hope held out to these that any good deeds of theirs will be credited up and serve to shorten the period of their sentence to suffering, the period of their stay in purgatory, the period of their deliverance to heaven. This doctrine of life in purgatory is the basis for the many exhortations from Catholic pulpits and Catholic books that faithfulness be manifested by penances and masses. A certain number of attendances at church in the Lenten season constitutes a penance to which is attached a blessing and the remission of so many years of purgatorial suffering. Those who have money are exhorted to set apart a good portion of it to defray the expenses of masses for their own soul or for those of others. The calculation seems to be that all the penances and all the masses imaginable would still leave long years or decades or centuries to be suffered before deliverance to heaven. And this rule is applied indiscriminately to rich and poor alike, high and low. As an illustration, when Pope Pius IX died masses were said for the repose of his soul throughout the Roman Catholic churches of the world. Likewise when Pope Leo XIII died the same command for masses for the repose of his soul went forth and was executed in all Catholic churches. This implied the belief that these men, while the highest functionaries of that church, were not sufficiently holy or pure or good to be admitted to heaven; for surely those gaining access to heaven have no need of masses for the repose of their souls. The expression, “repose of the soul,” implies the tortures of that soul in purgatory, and supplication and endeavor to have God remit a measure of those sufferings and shorten the period of the tribulations.

We are not making light of these matters; we are merely stating them, and that not because they are unknown, but because they are not realized and appreciated. All Catholics then, we believe, will assent to our declaration that their faith is that the great mass of mankind are now in purgatory, a comparatively small number in eternal torment, which they call hell, and a small number comparatively in heaven. It should be remembered, however, that on a papal jubilee it is the custom for the pope to exercise a power he claims is his, of setting free from purgatory certain thousands of its inmates who have not fulfilled all of their term of punishment, though it is to be supposed that it is not his intention to admit them to heaven insufficiently purged.

PROTESTANT CHRISTIAN VIEWS

Protestants claim to be much in advance of Roman Catholics in respect to their religious faith. They think Catholics ignorant, superstitious and deluded. What shall we say then if we find that the Protestant view on the question of our discourse is much more unreasonable than that of Catholics? We at least would be obliged to say that they have no room for boasting.

Protestant creeds, almost without exception, agree to the Platonic theory that no human being can die that when they seem to die they really become more alive that same instant than they ever were before. We ask, Where then do they go? They reply that they cannot tolerate the Roman Catholic view of purgatory, that they have looked into the Bible sufficiently to find that there is no such teaching in the scriptures. They tell us, therefore, that they believe that there are just two places for the dead, heaven or hell. We inquire of them, Who go to heaven? They answer, the saintly, the holy, the pure in heart, the little flock, the elect, those who walk in the footsteps of Jesus. We inquire respecting the rest and hear the Protestants (to their credit, be it said) balk at the teaching of their creeds, even while they affirm them, and declare that all not begotten again of the Holy Spirit, all not sanctified in Christ Jesus, all not saints, go to hell. We inquire the kind of hell they have gone to, and get various replies. Some assert that it is a place of literal fire and excruciating pains at the hands of fire-proof demons, and that this will be the fate of all who enter there to all eternity, without any hope of escape. Others, without being able to give particularly the reason, tell us that in their great wisdom they agree with all the foregoing except as to the kind of punishment, which they conclude must be a mental anguish or suffering. But lest we should think of them as being tender-hearted, they hasten to add that this suffering will really be more intense, "worse" than that of the literal fire believed in by others. The whole race, we are told, was started on the broad road for this eternal torment by Father Adam's disobedience, and in consequence of that we are all born in sin, shapen in iniquity. Those there because of divine mercy and aid extended them to overcome the world, the flesh and the adversary.

COME LET US REASON

In the Bible the Lord appeals to our reason saying, “Come, let us reason together.” (Isa. 1:18) He does not intimate that we should reason without Him and without His Word, but He does distinctly imply that His Word should be reasoned upon, should be considered by our minds. Whoever possesses any measure of reasoning faculty must conclude that the Catholic view of our question, Where are the dead? is in some respects worse than the heathen, and that the Protestant view of the matter is still worse, and that none of these views is Godlike, but all of them condemn themselves as being devilish. Reasoning power on religious subjects seems to be a scarce commodity. Many Christian people seem to understand the invitation to reason with God to mean that He wishes them to tell Him just what are their preferences, and if they remain obdurate, holding to their preferences, He will finally give in and say that their wills shall be done in heaven and in earth. Let none of us make this mistake. Let us on the other hand remember the greatness of God His wisdom, justice, love and power. Let us remember our own insignificance and lack of knowledge. Then, in harmony with the Master’s precepts, let us become as little children, anxious to be and to do, in harmony with the divine plan, as God has revealed it. So doing, dear friends, each one of us is assured of the divine blessing — assured of a growth in grace, in knowledge, in love, toward God and toward our fellows.

Let us begin with our text. It declares that David is dead, hence that he is not alive in any sense. It declares that he is not in heaven, and we are not bound to accept either the Catholic or Protestant view that he is in a hell of eternal torment. What does the inspired Apostle Peter say respecting David’s present whereabouts. He says in our text, “His sepulchre is with us.” It could be his sepulchre only in the sense that he was still in it, that it still represented him. If he had become a new existence elsewhere that sepulchre in no sense of the word would be his. We are using the apostle’s words in the very sense in which he himself used them. Saint Peter had just quoted from the Psalms, “Thou wilt not leave my soul in hell” (Hebrew, sheol; Greek, hades). He points out that David spake not these words concerning himself, respecting his own soul but that Christ’s soul would not be left in hell. The apostle’s argument is that Christ’s soul would not be left in hell. The apostle’s argument is that David’s soul is still in hell, but that Christ’s soul was delivered from hell —raised from the tomb, from the state of death on the third day after His crucifixion.

CHRIST’S SOUL DELIVERED FROM HELL

Here, dear friends, we have a declaration sure enough that the dead go to hell not to purgatory. But it is a declaration furthermore that the Prophet David and Christ Jesus himself went to hell that the latter had been delivered from hell but the former was still there. Had we the time it would be an easy matter to bring evidence from the entire scriptures proving that all who die, both good and bad, go to hell; and that the only means by which they can be delivered from sheol, hades, is through a resurrection of the dead. This scriptural presentation not only differs from the heathen view but differs also from the Catholic and Protestant views. And with the ordinary idea of hell before our minds, it would seem that both good and bad should go down to sheol, to hades.

But wait a moment, dear friends, let us not too hastily decide that the Bible is unreasonable in its presentations. Let us not prove or test it by human theories. The poet has truly said: "God is his own interpreter, and He will make it plain."

Investigation shows that our difficulty arises from attaching a wrong meaning to these scriptural terms sheol and hades (hell). The unreasonable view of the fire-and-torment hell which we all received with so much credulity came from the "dark ages," not from the Bible. "Dante's Inferno" is as different from the hell of scriptures as darkness is from sunlight. We must not carry forward the demonology of the "dark ages" and attach it to our interpretations of the Bible. If we do we shall be quite confused. We should remember too, that these lurid pictures of the "dark ages" were painted by the very class of men who, with a devilish spirit, burned one another at the stake or tortured one another with the rack, the thumbscrew or other devilish inventions. We do not approve the moral character of those men, and we should not expect their doctrinal teachings to be much superior to themselves, nor much in harmony with divine truth and revelation. Let us then examine hell from the scriptural standpoint.

As is well known, our Bible was not originally written in the English language, but the Old Testament was written in Hebrew and the New Testament in Greek--ours is but a translation. Going to the Old Testament in the Hebrew we find it contains more than twice as many mentions of hell, "sheol," as does the English translation. In the English the word occurs thirty-one times, in the Hebrew, sixty-six times. How has this Hebrew word sheol been translated in our English Bibles? We Answer--that the thirty-one times the word hell occurs all come from this word sheol, that it occurs twice more in our common version where it is rendered "pit," and that it occurs thirty-three times more in our common version and is rendered "grave." Furthermore, in two of the places where it is rendered hell in our common version, it is interpreted by the marginal reading to read, "Hebrew, the grave." The effect, dear friends, is as every Hebrew scholar knows, that the word sheol is never used to refer to a place of fire or of torture. In every instance, whether used literally or figuratively, it refers to a death state. Furthermore, as we have already stated, both good and bad are reputed to go thither. David went to sheol, our Lord Jesus went to sheol according to the scriptures. We might quote you from the words of the patriarch David, also from the various other prophets, how they all expected to go to sheol to the tomb, the state of death. Not only so, but they assure us also that Christ redeemed us and the world from sheol. For instance, we read in the prophecy of Hosea, “I will ransom them from sheol; O, death, I will be thy plague; O, sheol, I will be thy destruction.” —Hos. 12:14. Furthermore, we have the scriptural declaration respecting sheol that it contains no fire, no suffering. We read, “Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in sheol, whither thou goest.” Eccl. 9:10. In other words we should be actively engaged in doing some good according to our talents and opportunities, because we are all hastening to sheol to the tomb to death, and there is no wisdom nor device nor knowledge there; we can neither help nor hinder, do good nor do harm, when we have reached the “land of forgetfulness.” Psa. 88:12. Realizing this should make us all the more diligent in the present life.

REDEMPTION FROM SHEOL AND ITS DESTRUCTION

We have already seen that through the prophet the Lord declared that He would redeem our souls from sheol and that sheol should be destroyed. What is meant by this? We Answer--that father Adam by his disobedience involved himself and all of the race in what the scriptures designate a “curse,” or penalty. Not an eternal torment penalty, but a death penalty. Not roasting thou shalt roast, but “Dying thou shalt die,” was the divine statement of Adam’s penalty; and “thou shalt eat bread until thou return to the dust from which thou wast taken. For dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return.” It does not read, “unto eternal torture thou shalt be remanded.” God has explained the matter expressly enough, but our poor heads were befogged with the doctrines of devils handed down from the “dark ages” often by very good and well-intentioned people, amongst others our parents. Hear the apostle’s statement of the same matter, and let us notice how clearly it corroborates the Old Testament pronouncement. He says: “As by one man’s disobedience sin entered the world, and death as a result of sin; and thus death passed upon all men, because all men are sinners.” Rom. 5:12. How plain that is! Not a word about eternal torment as the penalty for our sins inherited from father Adam. Quite to the contrary, it was a death penalty, a just, reasonable penalty. God, who gave the opportunity for life eternal, had the full right, the full power, to terminate that life when used contrary to His divine injunction.

Had it not been for God's mercy the infidel's view of the matter would have been true that a man's death is the same as that of the brute beast that there would be no beyond, no future. But while telling us this (Eccl. 3:20) the Lord graciously informs us that He has found a redeemer for Adam and his race. The scriptures point us to Jesus and the work that He accomplished on our behalf; He died the Just for the unjust, that He might reconcile us to God. (1 Pet. 3:18) As we all came under death conditions through father Adam, so when Jesus by his death paid Adam's penalty it was accounted as a sufficiency of price for the sins of the whole world. Thus the apostle declares that Jesus "gave himself a ransom for all" and "tasted death for every man." (1 Tim. 2:6; Heb. 2:9) Mark well that he does not say that he tasted eternal torment for every man. Eternal torment was not the penalty; the Bible has it right; death is the penalty and it is upon the whole race. But the whole race has been redeemed, and therefore when God's due time shall arrive a blessing of resurrection, of awakening from death shall come to every member of our race. It is true that sheol shall be destroyed that is, that there will be no longer a tomb or death condition, for all will be taken out of that condition and awakened from the sleep of death.

HADES TO BE DESTROYED

The equivalent of the Hebrew word "sheol" as we have already stated is the Greek word "hades" which is found in the New Testament written in Greek. In proof of this take our context and note the words of Saint Peter that he quoted from Psa. 16:10—"Thou wilt not leave my soul in hades" (v. 31). In a word, the Old Testament says that Jesus went to sheol, and that His soul was not left there, but raised from the dead, while the New Testament declares these things of hades. What we are saying is new to the majority of the so-called laity, but not at all new to the educated of the clergy, who all know, if they would admit it, that sheol and hades contain no thought of fire or torment or trouble, but merely represent the state or condition of death, as we would express the same by the word "tomb."

This great underworld of the dead, the tomb, sheol, has many cities of the dead called cemeteries, but according to the scriptural symbolization it is a great prison house. In it are estimated twenty thousand millions who have died. They are called in the scriptures "prisoners of hope," because the Lord has promised that ultimately the great prison house shall be broken up and all these prisoners shall be released, brought back to consciousness again under better conditions than now prevail. This assurance of resurrection the apostle tells us is "both for the just and the unjust." Not that all will have the same degree of blessing when they come forth from the tomb in the millennial morning, for the scriptures declare that some shall come forth to the life resurrection and others to the judgment resurrection to be subject to disciplines, corrections, that if rightly received will help them up, up, out of their degradation and back to a condition in which God will be pleased to permit them to live everlastingly.

The scriptures are very clear in declaring that all this hope of a resurrection is based upon the fact that Christ died for the sins of the world, and that without his death there could be no resurrection the prisoners would all remain in the great prison house. Indeed, they would not be said to be in a prison-house at all were it not for the divine provision for their re-awakening. Harken to the prophets telling of this coming blessing upon the prisoners. Speaking of Christ and His work during the millennial age He declares that the Lord shall "say to the prisoners, 'Go forth' to them that are in darkness, 'Show yourselves. '" (Isa. 49:9) Their coming forth will be that they may manifest their real sentiments either for righteousness or for unrighteousness when they will have a full, complete opportunity for choice. Those who choose righteousness will thereby be choosing eternal life, according to God's provision, and they that will choose unrighteousness will be choosing the second death, extinction, from which there will be no hope of recovery ever. "Christ dieth no more," (Rom. 6:9) there will be no resurrection from the second death. All are reduced from the first or Adamic death because Christ took Adam's place and bought the whole race, with a view to giving each member of the race an individual opportunity for running to God's favor. Mark again the prophet's declaration (Isa. 61:1) where Christ's mission is declared to be to "bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound."

How beautiful the picture! Twenty thousand million of prisoners, slaves of sin! The great Deliverer has paid their penalty by going into death Himself on their behalf. Because of His faith-fulness He was rewarded with life on a still higher plane, and has thus become the Author of salvation to all of them that will obey Him. (Heb. 5:9) A few have the hearing ears in the present time, and theirs is the great privilege of hearing the Redeemer's voice and becoming His faithful Bride, who, by suffering with Him, that they may in the millennial period, with their Lord and Master, pour out upon the whole human creation the divine blessing of forgiveness, restitution, reconciliation. Notice further that Jesus applied this same figure to Himself, quoting this very passage in the synagogue at Capernaum. We are all witnesses that He did not open any prison doors of any kind at His first advent, except as He in a figurative sense, through the awakening of Lazarus and a few others, showed forth His coming glory and gave His final message to the church, "I am He that liveth, and was dead; and behold, I am alive forevermore; and have the keys of death and hades” Ah, yes! the keys are in good hands; they are rightfully His who has bought all the prisoners. In due time He will use the key and bring all forth from the great prison house, that under the blessed conditions of His kingdom they may all come to a knowledge of the truth and, if they will, by obedience, come back into harmony with God and possess eternal life or acting otherwise die the second death.

HELL IN THE REVISED VERSION BIBLE

There is an excuse for the rendering of the words sheol and hades by the English word hell. In old English literature we find that the words hell and pit and grave were used interchangeably, and that while grave and pit maintained their original significance, the word hell has gradually changed, until now by that word is generally understood a place of torment. In old English a farmer writing to his friend says, “I intend to hell my house this fall, and we have already helled 150 bushels of potatoes.” What does he mean? Simple and plain enough! He means that he is about to thatch his house with straw, covering it over, burying it after the old style almost down to the ground. He means that he has pitted or put away for winter and spring use the potatoes, which will keep better thus than otherwise. So, then the translators of our Bible are not to be blamed for the indiscriminate translation referred to.

But how about the revised version? says one. Ah! we answer, the revisers were educated men, who knew well the significance of hell, hades who knew that in no sense of the word did they refer to a place of torment, but that they do signify the death state. How then did they translate these words sheol and hades? We reply that they were too honest to translate them with the word hell, but not honest enough to give the English reader the truth on the subject, and hence they gave no translation at all, but merely introduced the Hebrew word sheol in the Old Testament and the Greek word hades in the New Testament without translating them. The public, thoroughly deluded on the subject, at once declared that their course was one of leniency, and that sheol and hades were just as hot as when translated hell. The fact is, dear friends, as we have already stated, that there was no fire connected with either of these words in any proper interpretation of them.

ALL THAT ARE IN THEIR GRAVES

We have set before you the scriptural presentation on this subject. Where are the dead? It may be disappointing to some of your minds as you think of the saintly ones of your friends and relatives. But they hardly have been very many. On the contrary, the great mass of your friends and those who have died have given no evidence of being Spirit-begotten, pure in heart, saintly. Hence, if there be a measure of disappointment on the one hand there is a corresponding measure of relief on the other. However, no matter what our friends may have been, I hope you and I are amongst those who desire to know the truth and to whom the Lord had promised they "shall know the truth and the truth shall make them free." Let us be free then from these awful dogmas of the past, free to love God, free to believe His Word, free to trust in and understand how Jesus tasted death for every man, free to believe that He who redeemed will restore, free to believe that the resurrection of the dead is the salvation which God has provided, and that "in death there is no remembrance of thee," as the prophet has declared. (Psa. 6:5) So believing, dear friends, we will find the Bible gradually opening before us as a new book. I have not time on this occasion to go into every detail of this, but it will stand the utmost investigation. I have provided for you at the close of this service in the hands of the ushers some free pamphlets treating on this subject of hell exhaustively, taking up every passage from Genesis to Revelation and everything so far as we could think of that might be misunderstood on the subject, that your faith in God as a gracious being, wise and loving, and in the Bible as a revelation of Himself, may be strengthened substantially, and that you will no longer be carried about by the false doctrines which have so greatly bewildered us all in the past.

In concluding this testimony as to where are the dead, I give as a further witness our dear Redeemer. When at the tomb of Lazarus He cried, Lazarus, come forth." He did not say, Lazarus, come up from hell, from torment, from purgatory, nor did He say, Lazarus, come down from glory, from heaven. He addressed the tomb. He said, Come forth. It was the same with the others whom He awakened; He gave no intimation that He was interrupting either a season of torment or a season of joy, but He did give just such intimation as would belong to an awakening from a deep sleep of death, a sleep so perfect, so complete, that the last thought of the mind in dying will be the first thought of the same mind upon its restoration in the awakening morning of the millennial age.

We remind you again of our dear Redeemer's words, speaking of the resurrection. He not only said, "I am the resurrection and the life," but He also declared, "The hour is coming in the which all that are in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of Man and shall come forth." (John 11:25; 5:28) Those of you who are Christians will not doubt that the Redeemer knew where are the dead. And in this scripture which we have just quoted it distinctly says that they are in their graves, not in purgatory, not in a hell of torment, not in heaven; they are in the tomb, in the death state, and from the death state He will call them forth in the resurrection morning. What more could we ask than this positive statement? Who dares to contradict Him who spake as never man spake? What theologian would have the temerity? Note how complete is the harmony between His statement and that of our text. St. Peter, one of the chiefest apostles, declares that David was still in his sepulchre, had not ascended into heaven; Jesus Himself declares, "No man hath ascended into heaven"; and again, "All who are in their graves shall come forth." The next verse tells that in the coming forth there shall be two classes, the one perfect in life, glory, honor and immortality; the other still imperfect and to receive chastisements, judgments, disciplines, with a view to their ultimate attaining a full resurrection out of sin and death conditions, if they will. With these clearer thoughts on this important subject, dear friends, I trust that you and I will more and more seek to make our calling and election sure, that we may have a blessed part in the first resurrection, of which it is declared, "Blessed and holy are all they that have a part in the first resurrection; on such the second death hath no power; but they shall be kings and priests unto God and reign with Him a thousand years." (Rev. 20:6)

OPENING OF THE NEW BROOKLYN TABERNACLE

Formerly Plymouth Bethel 13, 15, 17 Hicks Street, near Fulton Ferry

Although the weather was not specially favorable, a large audience assembled for the Opening Sunday Service of the New Brooklyn Tabernacle. Its large electric roof-sign offered a cheerful welcome and is very conspicuous from the Bridge. Its central feature is a ten feet long cross, whose center is studded with ruby lights. The Auditorium, with a capacity of 850, was crowded. The large congregation, while waiting for the opening hour, gave special attention to the numerous Scripture texts which embellish the panels on each side. They are assuredly works of art done by a master hand, specially imported for this job. Their soft, beautiful tints, united to their comforting sentiments, seemed to bring rest and comfort to many faces, while some were radiant with joyful peace.

Before the discourse the speaker read

AN OPEN LETTER To the MINISTERS and BIBLE STUDENTS of Greater New York City

Christian Brethren, Ambassadors for Christ and Students of God's Words —

We greet you one and all in the Master's name! Coming to your City to make it our home and the centre of our future activities in Gospel work, we deem it both a duty and privilege to declare to you the loyalty of myself and associates to the Cross of Christ and to give you a brief outline of our Christian endeavors. In God's providence we have become possessors of the historic "Plymouth Bethel" of Hicks St., near Fulton Ferry, which, after remodeling, we have given a new name, "Brooklyn Tabernacle." We believe that it will serve our purpose excellently as our headquarters. Preaching services will be held in its auditorium every Sunday afternoon, commencing tomorrow. Also special services will be held from time to time in the surrounding cities and neighborhoods for there are about twenty ministers of ability connected with our Society's work here. These all give their services free of charge either for meetings or funerals and are at your call for service.

The Lower floor of "Plymouth Bethel" (hereafter the "Brooklyn Tabernacle") will serve us as a Bible and Tract repository. The Tracts you will be welcome to, free, and the Bibles at cost prices. We will also conduct there a "Bible Correspondence School," for the answering of theological queries, and assisting, in general, to a clear understanding of the Bible by God's people, and those who are not God's people, but who are "feeling after him, if haply they might find him." In a word, we come to do all the good in our power along spiritual lines to all who will accept our assistance or cooperation, free of charge. Already this correspondence feature brings us hundreds of letters daily, inquiring for Tracts and helps in Bible study in various languages. The work is supported by the voluntary contributions of those who have already been assisted, so that money matters never obtrude.

WITH MALICE TOWARD NONE AND CHARITY FOR ALL

Some may inquire, "What do you teach and preach?" We reply that "We preach not ourselves, but Christ and him crucified." Ours is the old Gospel voiced by the angels who proclaimed our Redeemer's birth—"Behold we bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be unto all people." It will be seen, then, that ours is not the Gospel of the Higher Critics and Evolutionists. We cheerfully accord these friends of a modern Gospel their liberty to believe as they think proper; but our feet are firmly planted upon the Bible as the only Divine revelation of the will and plan of our Creator. This, however, does not mean that we believe that the Bible teaches all that our well-meaning forefathers of the Dark Ages supposed it to teach. We find that they burned one another at the stake for disbelieving things which the Bible does not teach, and for believing things which the Bible does teach.

The growing skepticism regarding God and the Bible, we find, is generally the outgrowth of a misunderstanding of the Bible's teaching respecting "hell." No sane man can be blamed for rejecting the old theory that God first made a roasting "hell" and then made a race, knowing that all would spend an awful eternity there, except the few who would hear of Christ and become saints. This blasphemy against our Creator's Holy Name needs to be rebuked.

The people need to be taught what the educated clergy and laity already know, that the only Hebrew word translated "hell" is "sheol," and its Greek equivalent of the New Testament "hades," and that neither word signifies a place of torment, but the tomb, the grave, the state of unconsciousness in which both good and bad must remain until the resurrection at the second coming of the Redeemer. Our literature has helped thousands along this very line as we go into details of explanation of the parables and dark sayings and symbolisms of the Bible, which other Bible teachers have not the time for, with their pastoral and other cares.

In a word, the work of our Society is conducted on the belief that the Bible is divinely inspired, and that we are now living in the wonderful day mentioned by the Prophets, when "the wise shall understand" and receive "meat in due season" from God's wonderful Book. By the "wise," of course, is meant those "wise toward God," and not the "worldly-wise."

If our understanding of the Bible's teaching is correct, we are on the threshold of the Millennium; and this fact explains not only the progress of invention and natural science, but also the finishing of the mystery respecting God's gracious purposes for our race foretold in the Bible in symbols and types. However, our expectation of the Millennium is along different lines than some might suppose. We find no Scriptures to teach that the world will be converted by our commendable missionary or other efforts. To us it teaches that it will follow the second coming of our Redeemer to gather his "elect" Church (the saints out of all denominations) that they, "changed" to spirit nature, may be the teachers and guides and helpers of the remainder of the race, to uplift all who will respond from sin and death to perfection and everlasting life on earth, which will then become Paradise restored.

Statistics agree that the Millennium is not coming by the conversion of the heathen, for there are twice as many today as there were a century ago, notwithstanding our efforts. On the contrary we must agree that the signs of the times presage the near approach of the great "time of trouble," such as never was since there was a nation, by which the Scriptures assure us Messiah's Kingdom will be ushered in, to "bless all the families of the earth."

Perhaps we should explain that we do not recognize as biblical the terms "clergy" and "laity," nor the titles "Reverend," "Doctor of Divinity," and such like now in vogue. This, however, does not lead us to disfellowship those who differ. We use the Scriptural terms "evangelist," "pastor," "teacher," "elder," "deacon," etc., and recognize that all of God's consecrated people are ministers that is, servants each authorized to serve his Brethren as his talents may permit and as the Brethren may desire. As for "ordination," we cannot accept as Scriptural the theory of "Apostolic Succession," and that special power or authority comes from man to man. We hold that the anointing of the Holy Spirit gives the power and the authority to understand and explain the Scriptures.

So then, praying with all saints "Thy Kingdom come and thy will be done on earth as in heaven," my associates and myself crave to be acknowledged "Brethren," by all of you who, with us, have renounced sin and accepted divine forgiveness, through the merits of our Redeemer's sacrifice, and who, on the strength of this justification, have fulfilled Romans 12:1.

Your brother and servant in Christ,

C. T. RUSSELL

THE HOUSE OF GOD AND THE GATE OF HEAVEN

"This is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of Heaven Bethel: I will make there an altar unto God, who answered me in the day of my distress, and was with me in the way which I went." Gen. 28:17; 35:1-3

It is very customary in our days to speak of buildings such as this in which we are meting as churches, but this is contrary to the Scriptural usage and, we believe, has its disadvantages. The word church, as Scripturally used, signifies a congregation of the Lord's people, and has no reference whatever to the place in which they meet. Wherever two or three meet in faith in the name of their Lord and Redeemer, he declares that he is in their midst; and the Apostle assures us that they would constitute an

Ecclesia, a Church, a Congregation of the Lord. Thus in this city and elsewhere there are numerous congregations or ecclesias of God's people; yet as a whole, there is only one Church or company, in the sense that all Christians are brethren, and One is their Lord, Head, Master, even Christ.

In speaking of this meeting house as Brooklyn Tabernacle we have in mind the thought of the Apostle when he suggested that the Church in glory will constitute the Temple of the Living God, but that the Church on this side of the veil still in the flesh was typified by Israel's tabernacle of the wilderness. So, dear friends, let us more and more have this same thought, namely that our present condition as the Church of Christ, with all of its blessings and mercies, is merely a temporary one, merely a foreshadowing of the blessings we hope to share when the gathering of the "Elect" shall have been completed, when the last member of the "Elect," the Bride of Christ, shall have finished his trials and testings and been accepted and counted worthy of a share with the Bridegroom in the heavenly glory, honor and immortality, and in the glorious work of the Millennium the uplifting of the world of mankind.

Under another figure each member of the Church of Christ is a living stone taken from the quarry of humanity by the call of God. Each consecrated one is receiving the chiseling, tooling and polishing necessary to fit and prepare him for his place in the glorious Temple beyond the veil. Like Solomon's temple, its type, it will come together in the resurrection morning in an orderly, quiet manner. "Without the sound of an hammer." Then, beyond the veil, the Capstone, Jesus, shall be brought on and the glory of the Lord shall fill the Temple. Thenceforth the Tabernacle condition will be no more. The New Dispensation will be ushered in and the Kingdom of God's dear Son, through which all the families of the earth shall be blessed with a knowledge of the Lord, will be inaugurated. "To him every knee must bow and every tongue confess."

BETHEL, THE HOUSE OF GOD

But, following our text, we remind you that this building is still more widely known as Plymouth-Bethel. Forty years ago that renowned, noble hearted man, Henry Ward Beecher, dedicated this House, giving it the name Bethel. As you all know that name signifies God's House Beth being the Hebrew for house, and El for God. Let us never lose sight of the significance of this name, for the thought of it will bring a blessing to us every time we assemble. Yea, more than this, it will bring a blessing to the hundreds of thousands who read weekly these Plymouth-Bethel sermons. Although but few of them can assemble with us in the letter to join in worship, many of them write to me that they are with us in heart and fellowship with the Father and with the Son and through the Holy Spirit, and that they, too, are hoping that the present tabernacling of God's Church in the flesh will ere long give place to the Temple condition of glory, honor and immortality.

I remind you of the origin of the word Bethel; that when Jacob, the grandson of Abraham, fled from home from the anger of his brother Esau, he slept the first night of his journey in a certain place with a stone for his pillow. Towards morning he had a dream of unusual significance, which he accepted as a vision from the Lord the Lord confirming that thought. He dreamed that he saw a ladder erected upon the earth and reaching to heaven. Ascending and descending upon the ladder he beheld holy angels, and, at the farther end, the Lord himself, who spoke to him saying, "I am the Lord God of Abraham thy father, and the God of Isaac. . . . I am with thee and will keep thee in all places whither thou goest, and will bring thee again into this land; for I will not leave thee until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of. And Jacob awaked out of his sleep (greatly awed), and he said, Surely the Lord is in this place.... This is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven." (Gen. 28:13-17) Then he set up the stone which he had used for a pillow, as a memorial altar to the Lord, and poured some olive oil upon it, representing its consecration. He then vowed faithfulness to the Lord. Evidently the incident made a lasting impression upon his mind and upon the nation of Israel after him.

THE MEANING OF THE VISION

Our Lord Jesus gave us the key to that vision, showing that he himself is the Ladder of communication between heaven and earth, between God and men. The angels ascending and descending represent the intimacy of communion between God and mankind which shall ultimately be established. The interests of humanity will come before the Lord, and the blessing of the Lord will come down upon mankind, and thus will be fulfilled eventually the glorious promise, the oath-bound Covenant, which God made with Father Abraham, saying, "In thy Seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." That Ladder of Communication is already established so far as a certain class of humanity is concerned. But they are but a "little flock."

The communication between Christ is complete, as between the heavenly Father and those who have been accepted as the true Israel spiritual Israel, typified by Jacob. What blessings come to these while still in the wilderness journey! What fellowship they are privileged to have with the Father through the Son! "Their angels do always have access to the face of my Father." And the blessings of the Lord come direct to them; new every morning, fresh every evening! “All things work together for good to them” as New Creatures in Christ, whatever may be their trials and difficulties according to the flesh. But alas! how few of these have the eye of faith, which discerns in Jesus this link with heaven, which “satisfies their longings as nothing else could do!” The majority of Christian people know but little of it. They have heard of Jesus and the redemption accomplished and the blessing provided; but busied by the cares of this life and the deceitfulness of riches (sought whether gained or not), they are restrained. Their eyes are held to earth. They see not the vision for themselves, and when others tell of it, they can but faintly realize it, and consider it mostly an idle take. Here again we see exemplified the statement of the Scriptures, “The secret of the Lord is with them that fear (reverence) him; and he will show them his Covenant.” Psa. 25:14

This was Jacob’s attitude. He had heard of God’s great covenant made with his grandfather. He appreciated it greatly and discerned that his brother Esau did not appreciate it. Jacob bought it of his brother at the latter’s own estimation of its value; then fled, not because Esau valued the promise, but because with it went the elder son’s portion of earthly goods, which Esau coveted, and which he feared Jacob would claim, but which the latter very willingly resigned forever. Jacob, as thus preferring the things promised of the Lord to the earthly things, typified or represented the Church, the Christ, the Israel of God.

WILDERNESS IN GOD’S MERCY

But there is still a larger view to be had of the significance of the typical ladder, which Jacob saw reaching from earth to heaven. That ladder, while primarily it represented Jesus, represented also the Elect Church, which God is now selecting from mankind. The Scriptural declarations, that consecrated believers are branches in the Vine and members of the Body of Christ, are not meaningless statements, “For God gave Jesus to be the Head over the Church, which is his body.” In this larger sense, that Jesus was the original Vine and that during this Gospel Age branches have enlarged that Vine, Jesus is the Ladder, and his consecrated saints of this age are members of it also rungs of the ladder, we might say. The Ladder, in this larger sense, has been in process of development throughout this Gospel Age, and is nearly completed.

It represents The Christ, the Mediator of the New Covenant between God and mankind. We are to recognize in the Scriptures this wideness in God’s mercy, like the wideness of the sea. We are to discern that our Lord Jesus who during this age has done a special work for believers, will, during the age to follow this, do a broader work for the world of mankind, with his Church in association. All the blessings of God, promised originally to Abraham and confirmed to Isaac and to Jacob with an oath, appertained not only to the "Seed of Abraham," but also to "All the families of the earth," which will be blessed through Abraham's Seed during the Millennium.

That ladder of the vision was Abraham's seed and the angels traversing it represented the Divine blessing coming to all the families of the earth through the Millennial Kingdom. And here we have it again stated that the Elect Church, the "little flock," the Royal Priesthood, the one hundred and forty-four thousand, who have their Father's name in their foreheads, are members of that Seed of Abraham, members of the Ladder, Christ. Remember the Apostle's words, "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's Seed, and heirs according to the promise."

These are divinely called, chosen, and prepared for participation in God's great work of blessing all the families of the earth. In this connection let us remember that while the Scriptures clearly differentiate between the Church and the world, showing a heavenly calling and reward for the one and an earthly reward and restitution for the other, they most positively declare that the redemption work includes both. We quote. "He (Christ) is the propitiation (satisfaction) for our sins: and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world." 1 John 2:2

REARING THE BETHEL ALTAR

Our text tells us of the time, years after his vision at Bethel, when Jacob had returned. It tells us of the fulfillment of his vows. He had declared that if God would bless him, he would be his faithful servant, and return and build an altar there. The Lord did bless him and then, in our text, reminds him of his vow, and Jacob built the altar.

Likewise, dear friends, the same Lord has greatly blessed us in forgiving our sins through the merit of the sacrifice of Christ. He has given us the vision of the blessings and mercies which are ours through the Lamb of God, because we are his. Many of us vowed, consecrated to the Lord, asking his help. He has granted us that assistance, and now, with further maturity of Christian character, we have a still higher appreciation of the vision granted us than ever before. The Lord calls us from grace to grace, from knowledge to knowledge, from one step of obedience to another, from one spiritual attainment and joy to another. And so by his grace we realize ourselves again at Bethel, the house of God, the gate of heaven. Have we reared our altars here? Have we kept our vows to the Lord to the fullest extent? Can we not draw still nearer to this gate of heaven and have a still further blessing? We believe, dear friends, that this is our privilege day by day and that it is implied in the Lord's words, "Draw nigh unto me, and I will draw nigh unto you." We are, I trust, each of us and all of us, growing in grace, and growing in knowledge, and growing in love toward God and toward all others, as they are in harmony with him even toward our enemies.

PUT AWAY IDOLS

Let us each apply to himself the words of Jacob to his household: Search if ye have any idols and put them away. If money is an idol; if honor of men is your idol; if your family is your idol; if your children are your idols; if you idolize yourself whatever idol or idols you may find yourself secretly worshiping, put these away and be clean; having on clean garments, come near to the Lord, to the House of God, to the very presence of Jehovah. Do this not merely for the present hour, but establish your self in your devotion of time, talents, influence, money, self, all that you have, all that you are, to the Lord's cause and service. See if he will not pour out a blessing more than you will be able to contain, a blessing which will overflow upon each other and upon your family, friends and others, in kindness, gentleness, meekness, patience fruits of the Holy Spirit.

The word "heaven" signifies higher. Thus God and angels are heavenly beings and the elect Church will be also a heavenly class in some respects "like unto the angels." In other respects they will be still higher than angels, "partakers of the divine nature" (2 Pet. 1:4) the highest or most heavenly nature of all. "The gate of heaven" thus means the way to that divine nature. How precious this thought to all who have heard the "heavenly calling" and are striving to "make their calling and their election sure." Truly "no man cometh unto the Father but by me" by Christ the living way or ladder. Let us not dream of another than this, "the only way."

But the word heaven will have another meaning to mankind by and by, during the Millennium. Then it will stand for the higher in the sense of the holier and nobler, because God's Word tells us that "restitution" to human perfection is the blessing which is to be offered to all of Adam's race, then. The entire earth, as well as the entire race (if obedient) is to be lifted from the present low condition of sin and death to the higher (heavenly) condition of perfection. Acts 3:19-21

This is the essence of the word resurrection, to raise up again to a condition from which the race fell. For many this will mean (1) awakening from the tomb and (2) restitution or uplifting to all that was lost by Adam's sin, all that was redeemed by Christ's sacrifice. The offer of "change" of nature is the special offer of this age and will soon close.

But, as now Christ is the ladder by which the “called” the “elect” may now obtain the greatest of all heavenly favors, so by and by he and his Kingdom of Heaven will be the way by which mankind in general may be uplifted to the higher plane from which man fell by disobedience.

THERE HE SPAKE WITH US

The thought centering in the name Bethel seems to be the fact that God spoke to Jacob there. He spoke to him first by the vision, then declared himself the God of Abraham and Isaac and Jacob, who would fulfil the original Covenant of blessing the world through Abraham’s seed. We read, “God went up from him in the place where he spake with him.” Again, “Jacob set us a pillar in the place where he spake with him, and he called the name of the place where God spake with him Bethel.” The Lord through the Prophet Hosea (12:4, 5) emphasizes the same thought: “He found him in Bethel, and there he spake with us, even the Lord God of hosts.”

How appropriate the name Bethel then, to a meeting place of God’s people the place where he speaks with us, the place where we receive his Word of warning or rebuke or encouragement or promise; the place where we respond with our vows of consecration to be his faithful people, the place where we get the celestial vision of the interest of Almighty God in us and our affairs and messengers and messages which go and come through the merit of our dear Redeemer’s sacrifice. Is it any wonder, as the Apostle suggests, that “They that feared (reverenced) the Lord, spake often one to another.” (Mal. 3:16) Is it any wonder, as the Apostle suggests, that we should “not forsake the assembling of ourselves together; and so much the more as we see the day approaching”? Heb. 10:25

And when we cannot all assemble personally, is it not a comfort to us that we can unite in heart and find the Bethel of our God and hear his Word at any time and place? What a blessing we have in this respect in this our day of the printing press! The message of the Lord from Plymouth-Bethel is going out to all quarters of the world, and many who cannot assemble themselves with others of God’s dear people are thus being refreshed and comforted, and being made able to look up in vision at the glorious Ladder Jesus and the Father, and to hear the message and assurances, and to realize the loving care in providing for all of our needs, especially the spiritual needs as New Creatures in Christ!

But whether we hear with the natural ear, or whether we read with the natural eye, let us remember that it is only in proportion as we have good and honest hearts that we are rightly benefited; whether from the reading of the Scriptures, or hearing of them read, or from thee reading of the sermons or hearing them.

Concerning this our dear Redeemer prayed for us, "Sanctify them through thy Truth; thy Word is Truth" John 17:17.

People's Pulpit Vol. 1 No. 3, April, 1909

FORGIVABLE AND UNPARDONABLE SINS

In the preceding pages we have briefly shown the extreme penalty for willful sin. Adam's penalty, which involved his entire race, was of this sort; and only as the result of Christ's death as our ransom from the penalty of that willful sin is any forgiveness of it or subsequent sins possible.

Forgivable sins are those which result from weaknesses incurred through that one Adamic sin which Christ settled once for all. They are such as are not willful, but are committed through ignorance or weaknesses of the flesh. God stands pledged to forgive all such sins upon our repentance, in the name and merit of Christ's sacrifice.

Unpardonable sins, sins which cannot be forgiven, are such as are willfully done. As the penalty of the first willful sin was death extinction of being so death is the penalty of every willful sin against full knowledge and ability to choose and to do the right. This is called Second Death, in distinction from the former or Adamic penalty, from which Christ's ransom sacrifice will release all mankind.

The "sin unto (second) death," for the forgiveness of which the Apostle declares it is useless to pray (1 John 5:16), is not only a willful sin, but a sin against clear knowledge; a sin for which no adequate excuse can be found. Because it is a sin against clear knowledge, or enlightenment in holiness, it is called the "sin against the holy Spirit" (Matt. 12:31, 32), for which there is no forgiveness.

But there are other partly willful sins, which are, therefore, partly unpardonable. In such the temptations within and without (all of which are directly or indirectly results of the fall) have a share the will consenting under the pressure of the temptation or because of the weakness. The Lord alone knows how to properly estimate our responsibilities and guilt in such cases. But to the true child of God there is but one proper course to take repentance and an appeal for mercy in the name and merit of Christ, the great sacrifice for sin. The Lord will forgive such a penitent, in the sense of restoring him to his favor; but he will be made to suffer "stripes" (Luke 12:47, 48) for the sin, in proportion as God sees it to have been willfully committed.

Not infrequently a conscientious person realizes that he has committed sin, and that it had some willfulness in it. He properly feels condemned, guilty before God; realizing his own guilt and forgetting the fountain for sin and uncleanness, opened by God for our weak, fallen race, he falls into a state of sadness, believing that he has committed the sin unto death. Such wander in deserts drear, until they find the cleansing fountain. Let such remember, however, that the very facts of their sorrow for sin and their desire to return to divine favor are proofs that they have not committed the sin unto death; for the Apostle declares that those who have committed sin of this sort cannot be renewed unto repentance. (Heb. 6:6) Penitents, then, may always feel confident that their sins were in part, at least, results of the fall, and hence not unto death, but requiring forgiveness and stripes.

FUTURE RETRIBUTION SURE

While the Scriptures teach that the present Gospel Age is the Church's Judgment Day or period of trial, and that the world's Judgment-day or time of trial will be the Millennial age, it is, nevertheless, a reasonable question to ask To what extent will those who are not of the consecrated Church be held responsible in the Millennial age for their misdeeds of cruelty, dishonesty and immorality of the present time? And to what extent will those of the same class then be rewarded for present efforts to live moral and benevolent lives?

These are important questions, especially to the world; and well would it be for them if they could realize their importance, and profit thereby. They are important also to the Church, because of our interest in the world, and because of our desire to understand and teach correctly our Father's plans.

We have learned that the sacrifice of Christ secures for all mankind, however vile, an awakening from death, and the privilege of thereafter coming to perfection, and, if they will, of living forever. "There shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and the unjust." (Acts 24:15) The object of their being again brought into existence will be to give them a favorable opportunity to secure everlasting life, on the conditions which God requires obedience to his righteous will. We have no intimation whatever in the Scriptures that, when awakened, the moral condition of men will have changed; but we have much, in both reason and revelation, to show that as they went into death weak and depraved, so they will come out of it. As there is "no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave" (Eccl. 9:10), they will have learned nothing; and since they were sinners and unworthy of life and divine favor when they died, they will still be unworthy; and as they have received neither full rewards nor full punishments for the deeds of the present life, it is evident that just such a time of awakening as God has promised during the Millennium is necessary for rewarding, and punishing, and giving to all mankind the opportunity for eternal life secured by Christ's great ransom sacrifice.

While, strictly speaking, the world is not now on trial that is, the present is not the time for its full and complete trial, yet men are not now, nor have they ever been, entirely without light and ability, for the use of which they are accountable. In the darkest days of the world's history, and in the deepest degradation of savage life, there has always been at least a measure of the light of conscience pointing more or less directly to righteousness and virtue. That the deeds of the present life have much to do with the future, Paul taught very clearly when, before Felix, he reasoned of justice and self-government, in view of the judgment to come, so that Felix trembled. Acts 24:25, Diaglott translation.

A JUST JUDGE FAIR TRIAL

The varied circumstances and opportunities of men, in this and past ages, indicate that a just judgment will recognize differences in the degree of individual responsibility, which will also necessitate differences in the Lord's future dealings with them. And this reasonable deduction we find clearly confirmed by the Scriptures. The Judge has been, and still is, taking minute cognizance of men's actions and words (Prov. 5:21), although they have been entirely unaware of it; and he declares that "every idle ("pernicious," injurious or malicious) word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment" (Matt. 12:36); and that even a cup of cold water, given to one of his little ones, because he is Christ's, shall in nowise lose its reward. (Matt. 10:42) The context shows that the "pernicious" words to which Jesus referred were words of willful and malicious opposition spoken against manifest light. (Matt. 12:24, 31, 32) He also affirmed that it would be more tolerable for Tyre, Sidon and Sodom in the day of judgment than for Chorazin, Bethsaida and Capernaum, which had misimproved greater advantages of light and opportunity. Matt. 11:20-24

In the very nature of things, we can see that the punishments of that age will be in proportion to past guilt. Every sin indulged, and every evil propensity cultivated, hardens the heart and makes the way back to purity and virtue more difficult. Consequently, sins willfully indulged now, will require punishment and discipline in the age to come; and the more deeply the soul is dyed in willing sin the more severe will be the measures required to correct it. As a wise parent would punish a wayward child, so Christ will punish the wicked for their good.

If professed Christians would be honest with themselves and true to God, they would soon learn that "their fear toward God is taught by the precepts of men." (Isa. 29:13) If all would decide to let God be true though it should prove every man a liar (Rom. 3:4), and show all human creeds to be imperfect and misleading, there would be a great creed-smashing work done very shortly.

Then the Bible would be studied and appreciated as never before; and its testimony that the wages of sin is death (extinction) would be recognized as a “just recompense of reward.”

BOSTON'S RELIGIOUS REVIVAL SURELY A BLESSING

News of the Boston revival of religious interest has spread far and wide. Lovers of God and lovers of humanity must be deeply interested in a movement which has taken so great a hold of so large a number of intelligent people. To the thoughtful it shows what should never have been disputed, namely that notwithstanding the fact that we are a fallen race, “Prone to sin as the sparks to fly upward,” nevertheless there is still remaining in us something of the character of our Creator, in whose image our father Adam was made. The fall affected some of us from the one standpoint and some from another; but left us, as a whole, in that undone condition from which we cannot extricate ourselves, because it is a part of our human nature. As the Scriptures declare, “We were born in sin and shapen in iniquity, in sin did our mothers conceive us.” If every trace of the Divine likeness had been obliterated from our hearts and heads, there would be nothing left upon which truth and grace might operate. We are glad that we have been forced to vacate the thought of “total depravity,” once inculcated as the essence of our orthodoxy. The fact that we are not “totally depraved” is the mainspring of hope and endeavor on behalf of mankind on the part of God and those who have enlisted on his side in the warfare against Sin and Satan.

Possibly the revival preaching did not include as much of a reference to Christ crucified as some of us could have wished; but it certainly did not ignore this basic feature of salvation. In any event, to have awakened thinking minds to the fact that the things of eternity are worthy of more time and thought and endeavor than the things of this present life this alone is a great achievement, and the engineers of the revival movement deserve considerable credit from this standpoint alone.

But already we hear protests from various quarters to the effect that revival influences are not permanent; that those thus reached almost as quickly fall away, and that it is more difficult than ever to reach them again. But admitting that this has been the general record of revivals, we hold that it is no reason why we should complain and sit idly by and watch the slipping and sliding away of those who for a time at least have taken a stand for righteousness, for God, for manhood, for Christ. Rather, Christian people should take such steps as will assist these multitudes who have indicated their desire to henceforth walk in the ways of righteousness. Our Christian knowledge should be put at their disposal, that they might thus be enabled to stand.

STONY GROUND, THORNY GROUND, GOOD GROUND

Our Lord, the great Teacher, gives us the key to the situation. In the parable of the sower he explains to us that men's hearts have much to do with their reception of the Truth. It is not enough that we have seed and ground and that the seed be properly planted. The ground must be of the proper kind and, if certain elements be lacking, these should be supplied, or weeds eradicated, in order to have the proper yield.

Without controverting the thought that our Lord referred to different classes of hearts and intended to show by this parable that some of them could not possibly be expected to bring forth the fruitage desired in this Gospel Age, we may safely apply the parable to Boston and vicinity, as though all those reached by the revival belong to the stony ground, the thorny ground and the good ground classes of the parable. Those of shallow soil must, perforce, wither away, because they have not a sufficiency of depth of character to bring forth the fruitage of this Gospel Age. Those now called by Divine grace, who will "make their calling and election sure", must be "able to stand" trials and persecutions. Such as cannot endure these are in the parable represented as stony-ground hearers, who at first rejoice, but because of their shallowness the Truth perishes with them as they are exposed to trials and persecutions on its account. The thorny ground is rich and might bring forth as largely as any of the good ground thirty, sixty or a hundred fold but the thorns are there and must be combated, must be uprooted. These thorns, as our Lord explains, do not represent gambling, intoxication, and various atrocious wrongs, but rather, as he explained, they symbolize in the parable the cares of the present life and the deceitfulness of riches. Matt. 13:22

HOW WE MAY ASSIST NEW CONVERTS

The new convert needs instruction in the Word of God in the hopes and promises therein set forth. As St. Peter declares, God has "given unto us exceeding great and precious promises, that we might become partakers of the Divine nature and escape the corruption that is in the world through selfish desire." We urge, therefore, upon all God's people, ministers and laymen, that they seek to indoctrinate the new converts not with sectarianism, which has proved unsatisfactory to everybody, almost to the degree of nausea, but with the doctrine (teaching) of Christ, the doctrine of the Apostles and Prophets the doctrine of the Bible pure and simple. To the extent that we give them these unadulterated, we communicate to them "The power of God unto salvation," able to keep them from falling.

Accordingly we should introduce them to “Studies in the Scriptures,” that they may thus be fortified, prepared, for the assaults of the world, the flesh and the Adversary, which are sure to come upon them. We must show them what the Apostle refers to as “The prize of our high calling in Christ.” We must explain to them the glorious privilege that is ours, of becoming members of the “elect” Church the “Bride, the Lamb’s Wife.” (Rev. 21:9) We must tell them of the glorious Kingdom in which our Lord promised that his faithful should share, saying, “To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne” (Rev. 3:21), and “Fear not, little flock, it is your Father’s good pleasure to give you the Kingdom.” We must get them to pray for this Kingdom as our Lord taught us, “Pray ye, thy Kingdom come, thy will be done in earth, as it is done in heaven.” Matt. 6:10

To the extent that we can get these doctrines fed into the minds and hearts of new converts we will be successful in supplying them with a weed destroyer that will kill the seeds of the thorns and thistles of earthly ambitions and pleasures, because only as those ambitions perish can “the good seed of the Kingdom” flourish, and the heart be fully enlisted in the things of the Kingdom the “things not seen as yet.” Only those who obtain the opening of the eyes of their understanding to the wonderful truths of the Divine Word can have the right appreciation of the “length and breadth and height and depth of the love of God, which passeth all understanding.” (Eph. 3:19) And only such can appreciate “the things which the natural eye hath not seen and the ear hath not heard, the things which God hath in reservation for them that love him.”

These love God more than they love houses or lands or parents or children or anything more than they love themselves so that they are willing to lay down their lives in his service. To so many as we shall be able to communicate these glorious hopes and promises to these we may be sure the blessings of the revival will not be temporary, but permanent, glorious!

BREAD FOR THE HUNGRY

We must hope that some of those who have been induced by this revival to turn over a “new leaf” are really “hungering and thirsting for righteousness”; for only to such is the promise, “They shall be filled.” To these hungry ones food must be supplied or they will become faint by the way, if, indeed, they do not perish. The Apostle suggests that they need first “The sincere milk of the Word, that they may grow thereby.” This milk of the Truth consists of the first doctrines of Christ; how that we were all sinners, born such, inheriting imperfection, mental, moral and physical, under father Adam’s death sentence. (Rom. 5:12) They must realize the meaning of this alienation from the Father, the unfitness for the heavenly Kingdom, the need of the Savior to die on our behalf as our Redeemer, and that through the merit of his sacrifice we are permitted to return to Divine fellowship. They must learn that this is what the Apostle calls justification by faith a heavenly harmony with God, based upon a sinless will, however imperfectly we may be able to control our mortal flesh. We may rest in the assurance that in the Father's sight the blood of Jesus Christ, His Son, cleanseth us from all sin.

After digesting this milk and rejoicing in the reconciliation to the Father, the new beginners were invited to take another step to consecrate themselves their wills, minds, bodies, time, influence, money, talents, to God, to Christ, to the service of the Truth and righteousness. Properly enough such a sacrifice calls for a reason. Why should we do this? What is to be gained? The reply is that during this Gospel Age the heavenly Father is seeking a "little flock" of the same character likeness as His Son, our Redeemer, to be his joint-heirs, his co-laborers, in the heavenly Kingdom. If in the service of righteousness with their Master they now suffer with Him, they will be accounted worthy during His Millennial Kingdom to reign with Him, to sit with Him in His throne. (Rev. 3:21) These truths are meat indeed that the world knows not of. Feasting on these, babes in Christ very speedily become strong in the Lord and in the power of His might and in the use of His Word. Is it not what all true Christians need? It surely is!

CHRIST AN EXTREMIST

Of course, many will call this suggestion an extreme one and intimate that saintship is not to be expected nor attempted. But are they not mistaken? Is not the call of the entire Gospel Age to saintship? Were not the early Church called saints? Did not our dear Redeemer pray, "Sanctify them through thy Truth. Thy Word is Truth." Seeing the height of this calling to the Divine nature is it any wonder that the standard of fitness would be a high one?

Could we expect that God would accept any but the pure in heart in intention, in endeavor to membership in the Royal Priesthood? Many who read these lines have already on their book shelves "Studies in the Scriptures" ("The Divine Plan of the Ages"). We urge the reading of these and proffer to those too poor to pay for the cloth-bound book a copy in magazine form, free, in response to a postal-card request and promise to read it.

Peoples Pulpit, May 6, 1910

PASTOR RUSSELL AT ROME

We, dear friends, are living in a day in which the leading minds of the world are rejecting the Bible and its message in all the great colleges of the world; yea, in the theological seminaries also, the Bible is classed as antique. Professed faith in the Bible, as the inspired Word of God, today calls forth sneers of ridicule and the comment that such believers are “unlearned.” But, my hearers, I am before you today to contend that it is not the “Gospel of Christ” that is being rejected by the intelligence of the world, but another Gospel that came, not from Christ, neither from the Apostles, neither is it taught in the Bible. I am here to claim, and to endeavor to prove that the Bible is eminently logical, thoroughly reasonable, and that the message it bears to those who have “ears to hear,” is the most wonderful message that could possibly be presented to human heads and hearts.

We are not here to claim a new revelation, making void the Word of God through Jesus and the Apostles; we are not here to twist and turn their words to make them appear to mean what they do not say. We are here to show that the Bible taken in its simplicity, and allowed to interpret itself, is the most wonderful book in the world, and that the Divine Plan of Salvation therein set forth is soul-satisfying and, as the Scriptures declare, sufficient, “that the man of God may be thoroughly furnished unto every good word and work.”

THEORIES OF THE “DARK AGES”

We are not here, my friends, to set forth any sectarian views of the Scriptures, nor to advocate a new theology. By no means; we have already too many theologies; we have already too many sects or divisions of Christ! We want no more! Christendom is awakening to the fact that the various conflicting creeds cast discredit on the Bible. The creeds of Christendom universally discredit each other by their interpretations, and universally they discredit the Bible, which would be surely a most ridiculous book, if it taught all the various conflicting dogmas.

However, I should not be misunderstood as making an attack upon any creed, or upon the adherents of any creed. Rather, I suggest that we may well look with sympathy upon all the various creeds and sects, realizing the God’s people have been in Babylonish confusion for now many centuries. Did not the Apostle tell that a great falling away would come? (2 Thess. 2:3.) Should we then be surprised if we find his words have come true, that for fifteen hundred years the Church of Christ has been deeply entangled with errors and superstitions, which make void the Gospel of Christ? Let us not then stop to find fault with our forefathers, and to upbraid them; let us rather, so far as possible, assume their honesty, their sincerity. Let us take the Bible standpoint, and realize that the difficulty has been the power of our Adversary, and Devil, and that he has deluded and ensnared, not only the heathen world, but to a considerable extent Christendom.

Mark St. Paul's words, "The god of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the glorious light of Divine goodness should shine into their hears" (2 Cor. 4:4). The intimation is that our great Adversary, Satan, is interested in deceiving mankind, respecting the glorious character of our God, and his wonderful Plan of Salvation through Christ. Satan uses as his tools the very best of humanity that he can bring under his control, and nothing is more evident than that he has completely deluded the heathen world with what the Apostle terms, "doctrines of devils." Not only so, but to the extent that he was able to do so, he has evidently worked mischief with the various reformations and creeds of Christendom. Thank God that he did not gain entire control of any of these! Thank God that there is a center or nucleus of truth in each of these creeds, and around that kernel of truth, germinating power may be felt in every denomination, but the Adversary has wrapped these creeds with layer after layer of mistranslation and misinterpretation.

In the light of our day, many are able to discern more clearly than did our forefathers, the monstrous and God-dishonoring fallacies of the creeds, and, aroused to disgust, they have rejected the irrational dogmas; but they have frequently rejected also the central truth, which that dogma, to a certain degree, misrepresented. Thus we are in the day of the rejection of the creeds by the people of all denominations, Catholic and Protestant, and equally we are in the day of Bible rejection, because it is assumed that the Bible, having been studied by the formulators of these creeds, must be in accord with these, and hence, must be responsible for the unreasonable teachings, and must be rejected when these are rejected.

Some of us ran away with the doctrine of "election," thinking it the whole Gospel of Christ; whereas, our fragment was incomplete, unsatisfactory, and misrepresented the Gospel, when taken alone. Others grasped the doctrine of "free grace," and ran away with that, claiming that it was the entire Gospel ignoring the Scriptures which referred to "election," etc. These made a similar mistake, and similarly misrepresented the Gospel of Christ in its wholeness, its solidarity. Others grasped those Scriptures which assure us of a universal opportunity for salvation, and interpreted them to mean that all mankind will attain eternal salvation, regardless of their wills and co-operation. Others found difficulty in harmonizing the relationship between the heavenly Father, the heavenly Son, and the holy Spirit, and this contention led to Unitarianism on the one hand, and to Trinitarianism on the other. Others of us caught the doctrine of “baptism,” and made of it the entire Gospel, and thus did violence to the lengths, and breadths, and heights, and depths of the true message the true Gospel, of which St. Paul in our text declares that he was not ashamed.

Noting the logical mind of St. Paul, who can doubt that he would be ashamed, as we ourselves are, of the fragmentary presentations of the various creeds which more or less oppose and contradict each other? We may be sure that what the Apostle would endorse, as the “Gospel of Christ,” we need not be ashamed of. Hence our determination should be to search the Scriptures, and find that one reasonable message of the Divine Plan which centers in Jesus our Redeemer.

THINGS AT WHICH WE GAGGED

Men and women do not find it difficult to believe in a wise, just, loving and powerful Creator; just such a God our hearts and heads tell us we should expect; just such a God rational people find no difficulty in worshipping. Indeed, while some of us in the past may have believed in the “total depravity” of the race, may we not realize that notwithstanding the fall, there is still in the human mind and heart something which has “longings infinite,” something which cries out for the living God, and which commands our reverence and worship, in proportion as he is recognized?

Spiritually we gagged at the suggestion that a God of all wisdom, love, justice and power ever created our race with the foreknowledge and foreordination that practically all of these thousands of millions must suffer either purgatorial torture for several centuries, as our Catholic friends present the matter, or at the still more irrational theory of us Protestants that eternal torture is to be the fate of all except the elect few, the saints, who now follow in the footsteps of Jesus a course contrary to the world and all the tendencies of life around us. Well may we gag, and the sooner we reject and eject this entire mass of un-Scriptural dogmas, the better. As a whole it comes to us from our honest, but unenlightened forefathers, who verily thought they did God service in torturing one another, even to the extent of burning one another at the stake, because of little differences along the lines of these “doctrines of devils” (1 Tim. 4:1).

The rich spiritual food and the strong faith, which we, dear friends, as Bible students, should desire and seek for, are to be found only in the Bible itself. We should not spurn suggestions from one another, but we should receive such suggestions tentatively, and the Word of God should be searched, so that our faith should not stand in the teachings of men, but in the power of God, as set forth in the Word of God. From this quarter only can we expect information respecting of which St. Paul was not ashamed. That Gospel has two distinct features. Primarily it relates to the world of mankind, and instead of telling us that either centuries of purgatorial suffering, or an eternity of torture awaits the world, its message is that, in God's due time, a great blessing awaits the world through the glorified Christ, and as a result of the sacrifice which he finished at Calvary.

This great blessing will not be universal salvation, but it will be a universal opportunity for salvation. It will not be a salvation in ignorance and heathen superstition, but a salvation from such conditions, with full opportunity to return to the image and likeness of God, lost in Adam, and redeemed by our Savior. This is the same Gospel that was heralded by the angels on the night of our Lord's birth in the words, "Behold we bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be unto all people, for unto you is born this day in the City of David a Savior (Life-Giver), which is Christ the Lord" (Luke 2:10). This version of the Gospel, a good message, and for all mankind, corresponds exactly with the first statement of the Gospel made by God to Father Abraham, saying: "In thy Seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed" (Gen. 12:2,3).

Nor should this surprise us that a loving and gracious Creator, who knew the end from the beginning, created the human race with the full foreknowledge that Father Adam would be disobedient, and that his life would be forfeited, and that all his children would share in his mental, moral, and physical decline, even unto death! Why should it seem strange that this God, this All-Wise Creator should plan an opportunity for the complete recovery from the effects of sin and death for all mankind? Why have we allowed our minds to refuse the message sent to us through the angels respecting the "good tidings of great joy to all people"? Why have we allowed the Adversary to make us think for one moment that our God, instead of being gracious, loving, and kind, and helpful to his creatures, has, on the contrary, made provision for their eternal misery? Why have we allowed ourselves to believe from this standpoint that our Creator was the greatest demon of all demons not only that he has power, but that he chooses to use that power for the eternal torture of his creatures, who were not even given a choice as respects their creation?

Ah, my dear friends, with tears and in sack-cloth, we should confess to our blindness in the past respecting the true character of God. Humble should we beg forgiveness for having misrepresented the Holy One of Israel. But he knows that we did this in ignorance, and he is both gracious and generous to forgive us our trespasses, and to cleanse us from all iniquity according to his gracious arrangement for us, which centers in Christ Jesus our Lord.

WHY THE LONG DELAY

Some, perhaps, would answer, Surely, if the “Cross of Christ” means the blessing of all the families of the earth, the fact would have been demonstrated somehow during the nineteen centuries since. The fact that only a comparatively small number have accepted Christ and been blessed is therefore the ground for the belief that God is merely seeking out of the world an “elect” “little flock.” Surely, if he had been seeking to convert the world, he could and would have made much more progress in that direction than has been made, in all this time.

We reply that this is no argument whatever. The same God delayed to send his Son, delayed the sacrifice on Calvary for more than four thousand years after sin had entered the world. And yet, according to the Scriptures, the merit of the sacrifice of Christ is not merely intended to bring blessing to those who have lived since Calvary, but also to all nations, kindreds, peoples and tongues from the day of Adam to the end of the Age.

According to the Scriptures, the death sentence was pronounced against Father Adam, and all of his children have shared in the blighting effect of that sentence through heredity. Not only has our race been growing weaker, mentally, morally, and physically, but by the thousands of millions, they have dropped into the tomb, the great prison-house of death, from which there is no escape, except by and through the Son of God. His sacrifice for the sins of the whole world secures to him the right to the control of Adam and his race. This control, the Scriptures assure us, Christ will assume and exercise during his Millennial reign. During that thousand years all the families of the earth will be blessed, as promised.

Meantime, in the grave (sheol, hades, the hell of the Bible), where the “dead know not anything,” they merely wait, or as the Scriptures declare, they “sleep in the dust of the earth.” The Redeemer’s authority over them is beautifully symbolized in his own words, “I am he that was dead, and behold, I am alive forevermore, and have the keys of death and of the grave”. (Rev. 1:18) He will exercise his keys of authority and deliver all of the prisoners from the power of the tomb, and additionally from all the weaknesses and imperfections incidental to the sentence. He will bring the willing and obedient back to full human perfection, and to all that was lost in Adam and redeemed by Jesus. This, we declare, according to the Scriptures, is the Gospel in its primary sense a message of “good tidings of great joy which shall be unto all people,” that in the “Seed of Abraham, all the families of the earth shall be blessed” not only the living at the time of the establishment of the Kingdom, but all that are in their graves who shall come forth, “every man in his own order.”

As I beheld in your city the great amphitheater which once witnessed the terrible sufferings of some of God’s faithful ones in the past; and again, as I viewed the room once used as a torture-chamber, in the days of the Inquisition, I said, Thank God for the blessings of light and liberty, which belong to our day, and yet I reflected that even though they be different in form, there must needs be “fiery trials” for every true child of God, for it is the will of God that all should be thoroughly tested, as respects reverence, loyalty, and devotion to principle, that they may be counted worthy of a share with Immanuel in the glories of his Empire.

Peoples’s Pulpit, July 16, 1910

GEHENNA FIRE A FIGURE OF SPEECH

Toronto, Canada, July 16. Pastor Russell delivered three addresses here under the auspices of the International Bible Students Association. By request two of his addresses were more particularly to the Hebrews on “Zionism in Prophecy.” Another was specially to Bible Students, and it we report. His text was, “Where their worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched.” (Mark 9:44. The speaker said:—

There are other and much more beautiful topics than the one I have chosen for this occasion. Nevertheless, “Handsome is that handsome does.” This text has stood in the way of God’s people for centuries, and still continues in the way of many of them. To such it proves the Almighty Creator to be a most unkind one, a most un-Fatherly one, view the matter as we will. Some say, lovelessly, and illogically, that God provided from before the foundation of the world a great gehenna of fire, torture, suffering, and that all mankind were doomed on account of father Adam’s transgression, but that through Jesus’ death arrangement was made by which the small number who walk in His footsteps in the “narrow way” may escape this awful eternity.

Others say, not so; God is love, and these unquenchable fires and immortal worms are matters of necessity which His love cannot overcome, because, by some slip of unwisdom in the beginning, or by some lack of power since, the Almighty is unable to do better than to save the mere handful and to allow the great mass of mankind to suffer endless torture in the fire that never shall be quenched, and where the worm will never die.

THE GREAT TEACHER MISUNDERSTOOD

These words from the lips of our Master, the Great Teacher, have been grievously misunderstood. The teaching of our Protestant childhood was to the effect that only the saintly elect would go to heaven and that others would not only lose heaven, but gain an eternal life in torment. Thus our text was understood to portray what practically the whole world of mankind would be compelled to endure.

This hell was pictured to our childhood minds from outside the Bible as heated to a white heat. If we expressed wonder or surprise that any creature could endure such conditions so long the Answer--was that God would exercise his omnipotent power to make us fire-proof and pain-sensitive.

Some theologians of the Thomas and Kemp's school of thought went so far as to picture the poor creatures in their sufferings and to show that the heat would form a kind of an asbestos covering which would shield them from a measure of its intensity. But those deluded theologians proceeded to explain that these outer coverings would crack and shell off every little while, leaving the poor victim freshly tender that his suffering might be the more intense.

Of course, these theologians of the past had their difficulty in dealing with the worms. They could imagine devils who would oversee the torture as being made immune to pain by the chief torturer, the Almighty God. But just how to imagine the worms getting along in so great a heat and how they would in any wise increase the torture of the poor sufferers was to many a perplexity. But patient thoughtfulness along these cruel and devilish lines enabled some to formulate the theory that the worms would be fiery ones, living in fire, delighting in fire worms that would bore through the incrustations and add still further to the horrible sufferings of the world of mankind.

WAS THIS WHAT JESUS MEANT

Did the Great Teacher intend that such conclusions should be drawn from His language? And did He stop short of the description from reasons of sympathy or modesty or shame? Is this the general teaching of God's Word or has a great and terrible mistake been made? And have we mistaken a figure of speech and treated it as literal? we erred. We misunderstood.

The Great Teacher who rebuked His disciples, James and John, when they desired to call fire from heaven upon the City of Samaria, because the people thereof refused to sell them food for the Master the sympathetic One who said to them, "Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of; the Son of man came not to destroy men's lives, but to save them" could that Son of man in any wise intend to tell us that our great Heavenly Father had less of the spirit of love and righteousness than the two impetuous disciples?

Did He mean to intimate that while the disciples might impetuously have been willing to destroy the earthly life of the Samaritans, the Heavenly Father, would treat practically all mankind ten million times worse than that and use Divine Power to all eternity to perpetuate the sufferings of His earthly creatures, which His own Word declares were born in sin, shapen in iniquity, in sin did their mothers conceive them earthly creatures, too, whose environment was unfavorable and whose Adversary, the Devil, God neither destroyed nor bound?

“GEHINNOM”—“ GEHENNA” HELL

As we have heretofore seen, the only Hebrew word translated hell, from Genesis to Malachi, is sheol, which is indiscriminately translated grave, pit and hell in our Common Version of the English Bible the greater number of times grave —its proper translation. Its Greek equivalent in the New Testament, we have seen, is hades, which likewise is indiscriminately translated grave and hell, but should always be rendered grave. We repeat again that no scholar in the world will claim that there is the slightest thought of life or suffering or joy connected with these words.

The Scriptures distinctly declare that “there is neither wisdom, nor device, nor knowledge in sheol ” to which all, both good and bad, go at death, and where they remain until the resurrection. In the New Testament the word tartarus occurs once only and is mistranslated hell, whereas it should be rendered our earth’s atmosphere. It has no reference to humanity in any way, but to the fallen angels. The Apostle says that as a punishment “God cast them down to tartarus ” and they are “reserved in chains of darkness until the judgment of the great Day.”

But today we will examine the fourth and last word translated hell in our common English Bible. This word in the Greek is Gehenna. It occurs but twelve times, as follows: Matt. 5:22, 29, 30; 10:28; 18:9; 23:15, 33; Mark 9:43, 45, 47; Luke 12:5; James 3:6. One of the occurrences is in connection with our text today. The question is To what does this word gehenna refer? Is it a name for Purgatory? Or a name for a still worse place of unending torture, as our Protestant creeds declare? We answer. No. It is a figure of speech used to symbolize the Second Death the death from which there will be no resurrection, no resuscitation the everlasting destruction mentioned by St. Paul, and of which St. Peter says that they which experience it perish like the brute beast (2 Thess. 1:9; 2 Pet. 2:12.) This is very plainly stated in Rev. 20:14, where of this “lake of fire” it is declared, “this is the Second Death.”

THE VALLEY OF HINNOM--TOPHET

The Greek word gehenna is the synonym for the Hebrew word Gehinnom, which means "The Valley of Hinnom." This valley is repeatedly mentioned in the Bible. It was owned by a family named Hinnom. The first reference to it is in Josh. 15:8. Looking at any Bible map of the city of Jerusalem, the valley will be seen to the southwest of the city wall. At a time when the Israelites became sadly involved in idolatry, this valley was used as a sacred place. An image of the heathen god, Moloch made of brass, and hollow, was erected. It was so constructed that the chair, which was a part of the image, constituted a furnace fired from the rear, and the head of the image was the top of a flue.

The image held out its arms as though to receive something and, heated red hot by the fire, was a receptacle in which deluded Israelites placed their children as sacrifices, while trumpets were blown, drums beaten and the people shouted, stifling the cries of the tortured infants (2 Kin. 23:10, 17.) When the good King Josiah came to the throne all this idolatry was abolished and the proper worship of God in the temple was resumed. Then, lest the people should ever again resort to such atrocious customs, the valley was desecrated. It became a valley of abomination. It was used as a dumping place for the filth of Jerusalem. Dead dogs and dead cats were thrown there, and it is claimed that some of the vile criminals, after execution, were thrown therein instead of being given burial to typically illustrate that there is no future life for such obnoxious beings that they will be refuse.

The valley of Hinnom is now filled up and an orchard grows there; but originally it was quite deep. The carcasses of animals were thrown there intended for destruction, the worms feeding upon them. No one sought to hinder the worms from making a complete destruction. In the bottom of the valley fires were kindled for the consumption of the waste debris, and brimstone was added that the fumes of it might destroy any germs of disease. No one thought of quenching that fire; it was one that was desired. This was the gehenna of our Lord's day. He uses it in a figurative or pictorial sense as illustrating the Second Death, which will be the portion of all willful sinners. He used it also symbolically, in connection with other symbols, in the book of Revelation, where as already seen He explains it to mean the Second Death.

The worms of that valley were no more immortal than any other worms or maggots and the fires enkindled there are not burning now. This expression, "Where their worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched," merely signifies that the destruction of the class represented would be complete, that nothing would interfere to save them from destruction. Adamic death will be destroyed, as the Scriptures declare. Christ died that He might have the rightful authority to destroy Adamic death and uplift all of Adam's race who will accept His favor back to all that was lost in Adam, and redeemed at Calvary. But the Second Death is a friend to God and to all who love righteousness, since it will utterly and forever destroy such as have love or sympathy for sin and refuse to be obedient to the Divine will after full enlightenment.

THE ANTITYPICAL “GEHENNA”

As the earthly Jerusalem was a figure of the Jerusalem from above, the heavenly Jerusalem, the Kingdom of God that is to be established in all the earth, so gehenna and its “fire” and “worms” prefigured the destruction of the Second Death upon every willful sinner, during or shortly after the termination of Christ’s Mediatorial Kingdom and reign and the delivery of the Kingdom back to God, with righteousness full established.

As the New Jerusalem will not be a literal city, with literal streets of gold and gates of pearls and walls of jewels, neither the valley of Hinnom nor the lake of fire outside the city of Jerusalem will be literal both are symbolical. The one represents harmony with God, the Divine blessing and everlasting life; the other represents destruction, the Second Death.

Fire is never used as a symbol of preservation, far from it. It is always a symbol of destruction. The addition of brimstone intensifies the figure, because burning brimstone is one of the most deadly influences known in the world. It is not only deadly to humanity and the larger animals but also to insects and microbes and everything that has life.

AN OLD TESTAMENT REFERENCE

This same lesson of the destruction of wilful transgressors, as represented in the destructiveness of the valley of Hinnom (Gehenna), is furnished by the Prophet Isa. (66:22-24.) A familiar sight in Isaiah’s day was the literal valley of Hinnom, used as a figure by the Holy Spirit speaking through him pointing to the antitype and telling of the New Heavens and New Earth the new religious and secular organizations of mankind which will be accomplished by Messiah’s reign and that then evil doers shall not escape but shall be completely, utterly destroyed. “They shall go forth and look upon the carcasses of the men who have transgressed against Me, for their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched; and they shall be an abhorrence unto all flesh.” Nothing is said about looking at living beings suffering torture, nor is this the thought. God never approved of torture, but always condemned it. A carcass is a dead body.

How glad we should be to realize that God’s great Plan will not include a great torture chamber containing countless myriads of His creatures but, as the Scriptures declare, “Every creature in heaven and in earth and under the earth will be heard saying, Praise and glory and honor and dominion and might be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne and unto the Lamb forever.”

LET HONESTY AND TRUTH PREVAIL

Having demonstrated that neither the Bible nor reason offers the slightest support to the doctrine that eternal torment is the penalty for sin, we note the fact that the various church creeds, and confessions, and hymn books, and theological treatises, are its only supports; and that under the increasing light of our day, and the consequent emancipation of reason, belief in this horrible, fiendish doctrine of the Dark Ages is fast dying out. But alas! this is not because Christian people generally are zealous for the truth of God’s Word and for His character, and willing to destroy their grim creed-idols. Ah no! they still bow before their admitted falsities; they still pledge themselves to their defense, and spend time and money for their support, though at heart ashamed of them, and privately denying them.

The general influence of all this is to cause the honest-hearted of the world to despise Christianity and the Bible; and to make hypocrites and semi-infidels of nominal Christians. Because the nominal church clings to this old blasphemy, and falsely presents its own error as the teaching of the Bible, the Word of God, though still nominally revered, is being practically repudiated. Thus the Bible, the great anchor of truth and liberty, is being cut loose from by the very ones who, if not deceived regarding its teachings, would be held and blessed by it.

The general effect, not far distant, will be, first open infidelity, then anarchy. For much, very much of this, lukewarm Christians, both in pulpits and pews, who know better, are responsible. Many such are willing to compromise the truth, to slander God’s character, and to stultify and deceive themselves, for the sake of peace, or ease, or present earthly advantage. And any minister, who by uttering a word for an unpopular truth, will risk the loss of his stipend and his reputation for being “established” in the bog of error, is considered a bold man, even though he ignominiously withhold his name from his published protests.

If professed Christians would be honest with themselves and true to God, they would soon learn that “their fear toward God is taught by the precepts of men” (Isa. 29:13.) If all would decide to let God be true, though it should prove every man a liar (Rom. 3:4) and show all human creeds to be imperfect and misleading, there would be a great creed-smashing work done very shortly. Then the Bible would be studied and appreciated as never before; and its testimony that the wages of sin is death (extinction), would be recognized as a “just recompense of reward.”

FEAR THE BANE OF HUMANITY

Brooklyn, N. Y., Jan. 1 Pastor Russell of Brooklyn Tabernacle, addressed a large congregation in the Brooklyn Academy of Music this afternoon on the importance of good courage for the New Year, from the following text: "Fear not, for I have redeemed thee; I have called thee by thy name; thou art mine." Isa. 43:1

Fear is a great calamity. It is closely related to all the sorrows of life, closely linked to all the crimes of the world. One of the blessings of true Christianity is the release it gives from fear. But alas! true Christianity, true Christian faith, and the present rewards of these are not very common even in Christendom.

Few know the meaning of the Master's words, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Few appreciate the assurance, "If the Son shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed." Matt. 11:28; John 8:36.

Fear has its foundation in sin. We may be sure that the angels in heaven know no fear. After Adam had disobeyed the Divine command in Eden, he feared his Maker and hid from him. Similarly, fear affects all of Adam's posterity, because of the general realization that "all are sinners." God and his righteousness are, figuratively, light, and the sinner and his sins are, figuratively, darkness. There is no compromise the darkness hateth (opposeth) the light, the light scattereth the darkness. Love and reverence go hand in hand, but love and fear are opposite; we cannot love that which we fear, we do not fear that which we love.

FEAR, WORRY, SICKNESS

Hope, pride and ambition encourage the business man and the laborer, the king and the peasant, the housewife and the maid, the leaders of the social set, and the patient mother. Nevertheless, all of these have a drag-anchor of fear, which in the stress of life produces worry; worry produces indigestion; indigestion produces insomnia and nervousness, which lead on to every form of disease and unhappiness. To the extent, therefore, that fear is removed, health and happiness are encouraged and aided.

All physicians recognize the fact that fear is closely related to disease. Hence the wise physician always counsels cheerful surroundings for the sick, cheerful conversation, diversion of the mind, the avoidance of thought along worrisome lines the rest cure, etc.

It may be asked, Why is it that the Master's cure is little considered today? Why are so few pointed to Christ, the Great Physician, for the rest and peace and comfort and joy which he promised to his followers eighteen centuries ago? Have his words proven untrue? Are His professed followers amongst the most anxious and troubled and overcharged and sick and sorrowing and fearful of our poor, groaning creation? We must concede the inference. We must admit that the four hundred millions of professed Christians are much more unhappy, much more fearful, much more nervous, peevish and sickly than the twelve hundred millions outside of Christendom.

The explanation of this peculiar situation is that Christendom is not Christian; that the name Christendom is a misnomer! Christ's Kingdom does not prevail amongst the civilized one-fourth of humanity. For centuries now Christendom has deceived itself, and has seriously misrepresented Christ, his teachings and his promised Kingdom of Righteousness for which still we are praying, "Thy Kingdom come, thy will be done on earth." Our standing armies, prepared to destroy each other, and our dreadnaught navies, prepared to blow each other to atoms, and our submarines and our flying machines, our great cannons and torpedoes all prove the mistake of calling human civilization, Christ's Kingdom.

Similarly, the worry, fear, strife, nervousness, etc., of Christendom all prove that the Great Teacher's antidote for fear and worry has not been taken by the masses of Christendom. We hold that the Good Physician's remedy for sin, corroding care, worry, fear, is just as effective today as it was eighteen and a half centuries ago; we hold that the real difficulty is that his prescription has not been faithfully followed. We urge that those who now have "an ear to hear" His message should accept it faithfully, and that they should not accept at the hands of anybody another prescription said to be "just as good." We should make sure that we get the remedy which bears the indorsement of the Lord's Word, and which has the seal of "the precious blood."

THE MASTER'S TEACHINGS PERVERTED

During the Dark Ages superstitious fear was encouraged, all will concede. The attempt was made to drive humanity to God. Atrocious doctrines were promulgated in the name of God, Christ and His Apostles. St. Paul denominates these, "doctrines of demons." (1 Tim. 4:1) These, primarily, taught a purgatory, to be mitigated by prayers and masses. Under the impulse of fear, millions accepted Christ and professed discipleship, in total ignorance of his real teachings, and yet were no more his followers than when they were heathen. Later on the Adversary partially side tracked the Reformation movement by leading zealous people to renounce purgatory as unscriptural and to accept in its stead, for the world at large, eternal torment a still more unscriptural proposition a still more God-dishonoring doctrine of demons.

Fortunately for ourselves, we Protestants do not take our own doctrine seriously. However much all Protestant creeds assert that only baptized saints will reach heaven, and, contrariwise, that all the unsaintly will suffer eternal torture; nevertheless, not one in a hundred believes this. The most saintly, the most conscientious of them are troubled by their fears, tormented by their sympathies, perplexed to understand God's dealings, hindered from having the peace and joy which the Master promised his followers. The less conscientious of them stifle conscience to their own injury, gradually losing faith in the Word of God because of this error. They thus escape some of the torments of fear, but they do not attain the love, joy, contentment and peace which the Master promised his faithful ones.

UNRELIABLE SUBTERFUGES HARMFUL

There is only the one Divine remedy for this harmful fear. That remedy is associated with the Gospel of Christ; but there are numerous subterfuges. Some drown their fears, disappointments and sorrows with alcohol or various narcotics. Some seek to drown them with sensuous pleasures, some with business activity, some with church activity, some with "devil-may-care" unreason. Of late a considerable degree of subterfuge success has come along the lines of deceit denying the existence of sin, denying the facts of pain and sorrow and death, and, contrariwise, affirming that everything is good, regardless of the untruthfulness of this proposition.

The result of this self-deception indeed relieves from a considerable measure of fear. To this extent it proves a solace and satisfaction, but it is a subterfuge and not the true remedy. As a proposition its influence upon the mind, upon all the reasoning faculties, is injurious. The twisting of reason necessary to this philosophy which calls black white, and pain pleasure, and sin righteousness, is destructive of sound reasoning ability. The habit of perversion necessary to the calling of bad good, and wrong right, not only injures the mind, but, in attempting to sustain itself from the Scriptures, perverts the entire Word of God. With reason perverted and the Scriptures perverted, the true message of the Scriptures cannot be enjoyed. Unless fear be measurably eliminated, the proper faith, hope, joy and spirit of a sound mind are impossible.

DIVINE ANTIDOTE FOR FEAR

God's message, through the Law and the Prophets, to Israel, as interpreted by Jesus and His Apostles, gives us the true antidote for fear. It does not deny sin, sickness, sorrow, death; it denies no fact, but it does hold out a remedy for all of these, an antidote,

“the balm of Gilead.” Moreover, it informs us that this antidote can be received only through the co-operation of our heads and hearts.

It informs us that this healing is obtainable by only a comparatively few at this time, but, eventually, the Divine blessings, world-wide, shall operate toward all humanity as fully as have the penalties of sin. It applies now (in full degree) only to such as have the hearing ear, the eye of faith and the appreciative, responsive heart. Others may obtain a measure only of this consolation. The Great Teacher gave us the key to this deliverance from fear, saying, “Ye shall know the Truth, and the Truth shall make you free. If the Son shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed,” John 8:32,36.

The first step toward having the Truth make us free is to have the coating of ignorance and superstition removed, and this is a different matter. For instance, the Catholic superstition of purgatory and the Protestant superstition of eternal torment, for practically all mankind, have been so thoroughly riveted upon their faithful that to break their bonds and get free is a difficult task. Only those who hunger and thirst after the Lord and his righteousness are in any likelihood of ever being properly freed.

Others getting free from one error are merely steered by the Adversary into another as bad or worse. God seeketh not these at the present time; He will deal with them by and by under Messiah’s glorious Kingdom, when Satan shall be bound. Now, as the Apostle declares, “God seeketh such to worship Him as worship him in spirit and truth;” “The secret of the Lord is with them that reverence him and he will show them his Covenant” he will set them free now from the bondage of superstition and fear and by and by, in the “First Resurrection,” he will free them from the body of corruption.

In other words, at the present time, all humanity may receive a blessing of heart consolation in proportion as they can come to the knowledge of Divine Truth, and each will be helped to the knowledge of the Truth in proportion to his hunger and thirst after righteousness his honesty of soul. The dishonest-hearted are not worthy of being set free from fear. Liberty and freedom from fear for these would not be favorable to them nor to others under present conditions.

MYSTERY OF THE GOSPEL AGE

To attain the highest blessing which God has to offer at the present time certain difficult requirements must be complied with. Sin must be repented of heartily, and, so far as possible, restitution must be made, which means that sin must be forsaken to the extent of ability. Faith must then recognize the “Lamb of God, which taketh away the sins of the world” that the sacrifice for sins was necessary, and that God himself provided it in the death of Jesus. Faith and knowledge must go further and not only see and acknowledge the death of the Redeemer, but also that God raised him from the dead and highly exalted him to spirit-being again, to the intent that eventually he may accomplish for all mankind the wonderful blessings foretold in the Law and the Prophets.

Additionally, to such will be revealed the great “Mystery” of this Gospel Age, lasting from the death of Jesus to the manifestation of Messiah in power and great glory as Michael the “god-like One” (Dan. 12:1). The Mystery is that Jesus is the Head, Chief, Lord, over the Church which is His Body, and that the “Body” members will eventually be glorified with the Head on the spirit plane, and that then Head and Body will constitute the great Messiah whose spiritual reign of a thousand years will result in the blessing and uplifting of mankind.

THE SENTIMENT OF OUR TEXT

To properly understand our text and, indeed, to understand the Bible as a whole, it is necessary to discern that God has foreordained two Israels the earthly and the heavenly. Both are precious, both are “elect,” both are to be used of the Lord during Messiah’s Kingdom reign the one on the heavenly plane and the other on the earthly. A mistake has been made by some in recognizing the earthly Israel and not recognizing the heavenly or spiritual Israel. Others have made the mistake of recognizing the heavenly or spiritual Israel and not recognizing the earthly Israel. The promise of God is to be sure to both the seeds of Abraham to that which is according to the promise, the oath the Spiritual Seed and also to that which is, according to the Law, the natural seed." Rom. 4:16

The Spiritual Seed must be developed first, because the blessing will proceed from the Heavenly Seed to the earthly seed, then from the earthly seed to all nations. The blessing upon all nations will consist of the opportunity that will be offered them of becoming members of the earthly seed which, ultimately, as the sands of the seashore, will include the saved of all nations all found worthy of everlasting life. “I have constituted thee a father of many nations.” Rom. 4:17

PRINCES IN ALL THE EARTH

All who will come into this blessed experience of relationship to God are described in our text," Fear not, for I have redeemed thee; I have called thee by thy name; thou art mine." The faithful few of this Gospel Age, who have passed through the deep waters of tribulation and walked through fiery trials, have not only come off uninjured, but have been blessed; yea, and will be abundantly blessed in the rewards of the coming Kingdom. They have naught to fear.

Similarly Natural Israel as a people was specially favored from the days of Abraham down to the rejection of Messiah particularly the saintly few of that people whose sure reward will be their privilege of being made Princes in all the earth by the great King of Glory. Psa. 95:16

Even during the Gospel Age when the nation of Israel, "Jacob" has been obliged to pass through trying experiences, "waters of affliction" and "fiery trials," the Lord has not forsaken them. He has kept them together as a people. He has not permitted them to be destroyed by their enemies. Their persistency for thirty-five centuries is of itself a miracle of Divine supervision. Without afflictions they would have disappeared as a distinct people.

As the Gospel Age (for the selection of Spiritual Israel) draws to a close, the voice of God is calling natural Israel and pointing them to the Land of Promise and reviving their hearts with the messages of their Prophets.

All are to share God's blessings eventually, and then all may be without fear. Now is the time for those who know their God, to fear not. Now, those whose eyes of faith and understanding can discern God's stately stepplings among the children of men in the directing of the Divine Program may fearlessly rejoice. Now is the time for those to be of good courage; to fear not; to overcome the world; to be valiant for righteousness and truth. Their blessings of the Lord will be in proportion to their faithfulness and courage. There is no other route to the true rest and peace to which Jesus invites. And there never can be a better time than now to accept the Lord's offer. "Come unto Me!"

TRY THE SPIRITS WHETHER THEY BE OF GOD

"Beloved, believe not every spirit, but prove the spirits, whether they be of God; because many false teachers have gone out into the world." 1 John 4:1

Middletown, Conn., Jan. 17 Pastor Russell gave two discourses today in this city to large audiences. We report one of these from the text above. The speaker said:

On last Sunday we considered the question, "Are the Dead Alive?" Our examination was from the standpoint of the bible and, we trust, was convincing. We showed the reasonableness of the Bible proposition that Death is the wages of Sin, that God in mercy redeemed us, with a view to the resurrection of the dead, and that the hope of mankind, therefore, now lies entirely in the carrying out of that Divine Program. Today let us examine the only thing in the world which claims to be of demonstrable proof that the dead are not dead, but, on the contrary, are more alive than when they commingled with us in daily life. Spiritism, and Occultism in general, claims to prove this side of the proposition; claims that our senses are all deceived and that the Bible is in error with its doctrine that the dead are dead and cannot live without a resurrection from the dead. In our day, these boasted proofs are being published throughout the civilized world, some of them supported by the names of the world's bright lights. Professors in Colleges, Doctors of Divinity, and the Knighted scientists of Great Britain. Backed by this formidable intellectual array, it is no wonder that Spiritism and psychic research are receiving greater attention than ever before. To our understanding of the Scriptures, dear friends, they teach that in the few remaining years of the present dispensation, before the ushering in of the Millennial epoch, these Spiritualistic or psychic forces are to play a very prominent part indeed, in bringing about the great time of trouble, which, as a dark cloud, will immediately precede the Dawn of the Millennial morning.

We have no wish to give the impression that the Apostle meant, by the words of our text, that you and I should investigate Spiritism, and specially prove or test the character and tendencies of the beings or spirits, whom they claim to represent. Quite to the contrary. We believe that the Apostle meant that the Lord's people should test, try the doctrines, test them, prove them, because false teachers with false doctrines would invade the world. The Apostle was quite correct. As we have already seen, false Doctrines spread over the entire Church for a time, producing the epoch known as the Dark Ages, from which God's people of the various denominations, Catholic and Protestant, have been gradually emerging during the past four hundred years.

Nevertheless our text is not inappropriate to our topic, because Spiritism, Occultism, is a doctrine, and hence, as a whole, is to be proved or tried, to be weighed in the balance of reason and Scripture, and to be either accepted as true, or rejected as error. There is no middle ground, These things are either of God, or of the Adversary. It is our desire at this time to set before you conclusive evidence that Spiritism is of the Adversary, and, with its variations of Occultism, Hypnotism, Mesmerism, New Thought, Christian Science, etc., is the work of Satan, deluding the world of mankind, and leading them into the most woeful snares imaginable.

SPIRITISM IS DEMONISM

Personally I have no direct acquaintance with Spiritism, have never been in a seance, nor witnessed any manifestations of any kind. Moreover I shall endeavor always to avoid such matters, believing this to be my duty, according to the Scriptures, and I shall, by God's help, steadfastly resist every inducement made to exercise my curiosity and to draw me into investigation. And this is my advice to you all, the reason for which you will the better understand as I proceed. I am aware that Spiritualistic tricks and frauds have been exposed; nevertheless I am convinced that there is a superhuman power connected with Spiritism, Occultism, etc. Not only does the Bible so instruct us, but, through personal acquaintance with mediums and the obsessed whom I helped to convince of the Satanic origin of their controls, I have a considerable insight into the work and the claims, the methods and the influences, connected with Spiritism. When claiming that Spiritism is demonism, let me not be misunderstood to say that mediums are demons, nor that they are willingly and knowingly co-operating with them. On the contrary, conceding the trick and fraud silent, I believe that there are honest mediums, who believe all that they represent and as thoroughly as possible.

All Spiritists of experience, those who are mediums and those who are not, will freely admit that some of the spirits who operate through these mediums are devilish. This does not mean that they recognize them (as I do) as the fallen angels, of whom we are told much in the Scriptures, but that they merely recognize that some of the advice, communicated, is vicious, devilish. While admitting this, they hasten to assure us that this is not true of all the spirits; that some of them are pure, honest, reliable. They even tell us that some of the spirits exhort their deluded victims to pray more, to be more holy, etc. But we reply that this is merely a part of the general deception scheme of Satan and his associates. Really, they are all bad, or, as the Apostle says, “wicked spirits.”

THE FALLEN ANGELS DEMONS

“What can any of us know about the fallen angels?” some one may inquire. I reply: We can know what God has been pleased to reveal on the subject in his Word, for “these things are written for our admonition (our instruction), upon whom the end of the world (ages) are come.” (1 Cor. 10:11) The Apostle Peter tells us of these fallen angels, who now masquerade as our dead friends and claim that they are more alive than they ever were. They have intimate knowledge of all the affairs of mankind, as well as ability to read our very thoughts, hence have no difficulty whatever impersonating the dead, and especially in the form, clothing, and with all the peculiarities by which they were known, as these particulars are registered in the memories of their friends.

St. Peter, in his second Epistle (1:12), says, “I will not be negligent to put you always in remembrance of these things,” and then adds (2:4), “God spared not the angels that sinned, but cast them down to hell, (Tartarus, our earth’s atmosphere), and delivered them into chains of darkness, to be reserved unto the judgment” in future trial or testing and final decision of their case. St. Jude also brings these fallen angels, or spirit beings, to our attention, saying, “The angels which kept not their first estate, but left their own habitation, he (God) hath reserved in everlasting chains under darkness until the judgment (trial, testing) of the great day” (verse 6) until the end of this Age, the lapping time between this Age and the Millennial Age. but the chains of darkness were imposed only until the end of this Age, until their day of judgment or trial. The intimation would seem to be that then they would be permitted in some manner to free themselves from those chains and to come out more into the open, and to do their work more in the light. This time, according to the Scriptures, we understand to be now upon us. In full harmony with this is the fact that Spiritism is now claiming to be able to work wonders in the light and claiming, too, that shortly the spirits will be free from all restrictions of darkness. How great will be the temptations of that time to humanity, deluded, as the majority are, with the thought that their dead friends are alive! The Scriptures intimate that the testing along these lines in the near future will be simply awful!

Let us go back now to the days of Noah, and ascertain what we may in the Scriptures respecting these fallen angels; in what manner they left their first habitation and came under Divine displeasure and sentence of restraint. In Genesis (6:1-4) we have the account of the fall of those angels into sin. In olden times, before God’s people had been provided with the Bible as a revelation of the Divine will, God not infrequently used the holy angels as messengers of communication between himself and mankind. On such occasions the angels did not open human eyes to perceive their spirit glory, but materialized, assumed human bodies of flesh and bones, and wore clothing, and appeared as men. As an illustration note the records of how angels appeared to Abraham as traveling strangers. He knew them not, but entertained them hospitably. Before they left he ascertained their real nature; that they were not men at all, but had merely appeared in human form, so as to communicate to him certain facts respecting the child that God had promised him long before and respecting the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah, and the deliverance of Lot. We read, “And they did eat and talk with Abraham.” They had a substantial dinner of veal stew, according to the record. This narrative was confirmed by St. Paul, who says to us, “Be not forgetful to entertain strangers; for thereby some (Abraham, for instance) have entertained angels unawares.” Heb. 13:2

The Scriptural intimation is that during the period of 1654 years, which began with the expulsion of our first parents from Eden, and which ended with the flood, God permitted all of the holy angels to have unrestricted, such an intercourse with humanity. The purpose of this was evidently two-fold:

(1) God would permit the angels to see to what extent their influence would help to preserve humanity from degradation, or to uplift men out of sinful ways, that thus it might never in the future be claimed that the work of Christ in redeeming the world could have been done other than by him and by his Kingdom and its work. And thus the angels could never say that the work of Christ was unnecessary and that they (the angels) could have accomplished the work, had they been given the opportunity. They were given the earliest opportunity, under the most favorable conditions, before depravity had so seriously undone the race. They failed.

(2) Furthermore it was the Divine purpose that all of the angels should experience a test as respects their loyalty to the Divine will, that thus the loyal ones might be manifested, and also the disloyal at heart. The test had its effect and, following it, the disloyal ones were condemned to chains of darkness and disfellowship from God and the righteous.

The first estate of all the angels was one of harmony with God as spirit beings. But the fallen angels are those who, seeing sin working in humanity, preferred sin and sensuality. Privileged to materialize and mingle with humans, they preferred that condition to the angelic, which was their first estate. They preferred it because they desired to revel in sensuality. They were seduced by sin. And so the record reads, "There were giants in the earth in those days; and also after that, when the sons of God (angels) saw, looked upon the daughters of men that they were beautiful and they took to themselves as wives such as they chose, when the sons of God came in unto the daughters of men they bare children to them; the same became mighty men, which were of old, giants and men of renown." (Gen. 6:1-4) How long this sinful riot continued we are not informed, but evidently it was long enough to give a full opportunity for every angel of God to believe that Divine power could not deal with the situation and thus was furnished an opportunity and test to all. The time was long enough for the progeny of those angels to become "giants, men of renown." Moreover the intimation is that there was serious conflict between the progeny of the angels and the Adamic stock and that the whole earth was filled with violence and wickedness, so that "Every imagination of men's hearts was only evil continually." That terrible arraignment or condemnation, judgment, prior to the flood, the Scriptures imply will be duplicated in our day, not many years hence in the closing of this age and will be followed not with a flood of waters, but with a cataclysm of symbolic fire, a "great time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation."

God's determination was that the entire population of the world should be blotted out by a flood of waters. Those of purely Adamic stock, redeemed, will be recovered in the Resurrection, and, through Christ, have full opportunity of returning to harmony with God, and to recover all that was lost through Adam's sin. But for the progeny of the angels, unauthorized by the Almighty, no provision has been made. Their death in the flood was exactly the same as that of the brute beast that perished there.

Notice God's particularity that Noah and his family, who should be saved in the Ark and begin the human race afresh in the earth, should have no admixture of the angelic stock must be purely Adamic. We read, "Now Noah was perfect in his generation." Neither himself nor his parents were generated by the angels, but were purely of Adamic stock, likewise all of his family. The intimation seems to be that there were remarkably few families like Noah's perfect in their generations. The contamination had been great, widespread.

FALLEN ANGELS, BARRED FROM THE PRIVILEGES OF MATERIALIZATION, SEEK OTHER INTERCOURSE

No longer having the same fellowship with humanity after the flood, the fallen angels, cut off from Divine fellowship and service, found diversion in seeking other communication with mankind. Had they represented themselves as demons, mankind would have been on guard against them, so they deceived by announcing themselves to be deceased relatives, etc., of those with whom they sought intercourse. We have little history along these lines, except of a negative character, furnished in the Bible. It records that God forbade his Covenanted people, the Israelites, to have anything to do with these fallen angels, who were known as witches, wizards, necromancers, soothsayers, etc. The Law of Israel was that all mediums pretending to communicate between the living and the dead should surely be put to death. God thus warned his people and protected them against conditions which prevailed much more generally amongst the heathen. These fallen angels, after arousing the curiosity of humanity, enticed them into more and more familiarity and befogged their judgments with lies, which were given the greater credence because supposed to come direct from deceased friends, who were supposed to have full knowledge. The result was that gradually the evil spirits conquered the wills of their subjects and obsessed them, and used their bodies as instead of the power of materialization. And the will once broken down, more than one of these evil spirits could gain entrance, suggest thoughts, etc., which had the effect of crazing the individual, giving him thoughts quite in conflict with each other.

Clairvoyant power is the impression on the mind of what the fallen angel sees. Clairaudient power is the communication by sounds inaudible to others upon the drum of the ear by fallen spirits. These evil spirits often play pranks with their victims, inciting them to do things which they would not of themselves sometimes to steal; sometimes to murder; and sometimes to suicide. Many physicians recognize the fact that amongst the insane they have two classes to deal with, the one organically deranged, and the other, not organically deranged, but obsessed of evil spirits.

THE CASTING OUT OF DEMONS

We remind you of the Gospel narrative of how Jesus, and the disciples under his commission, frequently cast out these demons from those obsessed by them. Evidently this was one of the most distressing ailments amongst the Jews in our Lord's time notwithstanding the fact that they were warned against the medium and all supposed intercourse with the dead. Indeed, the casting out of demons was one of the principal miracles performed by Jesus and his Apostles, and one of the special marks of Divine power corroborating his ministry. Let us refresh our memory respecting the narrative. There came to Jesus "Certain women which had been healed of evil spirits and infirmities, Mary called Magdalene, out of whom went seven devils." (Luke 8:2) Remember also that these demons were called unclean, doubtless because their general influence upon humanity is towards sensuality, uncleanness of thought and word and deed. We read in Luke 4:33-34, respecting one of these who was a Church attendant, "And in the synagogue there was a man, which had a spirit of an unclean devil; and he cried out with a loud voice, saying, "What have we to do with thee, thou Jesus of Nazareth? Art thou come to destroy us (before the time?)"

These demons were not in some far-off place of torture, but were prowling around amongst mankind, seeking, whom they might ensnare. They evidently understood full well, too, that their end would be destruction that "the wages of sin is death." They seemed to know that the due time of their test was still some time in the future. The Apostles, after being sent out two and two, returned from their ministry praising God and declaring, "In thy name we have cast out demons." In Matt. 8:16 we read, "When the even was come, they brought unto him many that were possessed of devils and he cast out the spirits with his word." Further along we read (verse 28), "There met him two possessed with devils, coming forth out of the tombs, exceeding fierce, so that no man might pass by that way." And, again, in verses 29 and 31, "And behold, they cried out, saying, What have we to do with thee, thou Son of God? Art thou come hither to torment us before the time? "And the devils besought him, saying, "If thou cast us out, suffer us to go away into the herd of swine." Jesus permitted this, and the entire herd of swine was crazed by the demoniacal influence and ran violently down a steep place into the sea and were drowned.

Remember St. Paul's experience, and how, on one occasion, a young woman possessed of an evil spirit followed him and Silas, saying, "These be the servants of the Most High God, which show unto us the way of eternal life." On the third day St. Paul turned and rebuked the evil spirit and commanded it to come out of the woman, and thus caused a great commotion, because the woman had been a source of gain to her managers, on account of her fortune telling and the considerable sums of money paid therefore. We advise all Bible students to give this matter more particular attention than heretofore to note particularly what the Scriptures say on the subject, that they everywhere acknowledge the evil spirits and their uncleanness and that they continually strive to intrude upon humanity and accomplish their desires by breaking down the human will, the Divinely intended barrier.

These spirit beings championed Satan's original lie, which declares that the wages of Sin is not death; that when men seem to die, they are more alive than before. This error has been fastened upon the whole world of mankind and now, in the trial time that is before us, it constitutes a base of operation, which gives these fallen spirits a wonderful influence. Added to this they have recently been introducing as a great blessing and aid to humanity, Hypnotism, by which, through the assistance of these fallen spirits, one human being gains the control over the mind, the will, of another, on the score of mental, moral or physical assistance out of vice and disease.

Doctors and preachers are more and more using this power, not realizing what it is and that the motive behind it is the breaking down of the human will, so as to give the fallen spirits the easier access, and the greater control of the people. What this ultimately will mean to mankind is terrible to contemplate, for the Scriptures clearly indicate that, while God has, for a considerable time, shielded mankind from this debasing influence, He will bring to pass his act, his strange act in the end of this age, by releasing the restraints upon the demons and allowing an illustration of their fiendish power, as a test of themselves peradventure some of them may have repented, and as a lesson to angels and men of the length to which depravity would go, if not restrained of God. But, thank God, this reign of evil will not last long. Upon the wreck and ruin, Messiah's Kingdom will be established and demoniacal power will be forever destroyed, and Satan himself will be bound for a thousand years and shortly after, be destroyed.

WHAT IS MAN? HUMAN OR DIVINE? ANIMAL OR SPIRIT?

BIBLE ANSWER--REASONABLE

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 22, 1911 Pastor Russell addressed large assemblages twice here today in his usual fresh attractive and instructive style. One address was on "The Great Hereafter" the other which we report, was from the text, "What is Man?" Psa. 8:4

Notwithstanding all that the Bible has to say respecting the nature of man few subjects seem to be more misunderstood. Science declares man to be an animal of the highest type or order. In this, which declares of our first parents, science is in absolute agreement with the Scriptures, "The first man was of the earth, earthy." (1 Cor. 15:47) Our text agrees with this, declaring that man was made a little lower than the angels angels being the lowest form of spirit beings, man the highest type of earth beings. A particular account of man's creation is given, and when we examine it we find it in full agreement with what we have seen to be the teachings of other parts of the Scriptures. That account declares that God formed man of the dust of the earth, and it tells us that after man's transgression had brought him under the Divine condemnation of death, his Creator said to him, "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return."

WHENCE CAME OUR CONFUSION?

In view of these facts, which we now have clearly before our minds, how strange it seems that most of the civilized world denies all and declares to the contrary that man is a spirit being, and that his death is merely an evolutionary step by which he passes on to his real nature as a spirit. This is supposed to be very scientific, because many, presumably wise and scientific people, thus assert themselves. However, according to these same people such an evolution, from human nature to spirit nature at death, instead of being a desirable progression or evolution, is a decided disadvantage, because, as they tell us, the majority of those thus graduated from flesh conditions to spirit conditions will find themselves tortured, either purgatorially or eternally. It would seem, if this be true, that this at least, to the majority, would be a step of devolution rather than one of evolution.

But upon what are these "scientific" and learned assumptions based? Who will vouch for the change said to take place at death? Who will prove to us that a man in dying becomes a spirit being of a higher order than human?

There is no such proof; the wish is parent to the thought. Yet why should men wish to be spirit beings at death, if they believe, as the creeds declare, that tortures await them in the spirit land await nine hundred and ninety-nine out of every thousand? Ah, here again humanity does not believe its own creeds. The devilish suggestions are allowed to remain in the creeds, unbelieved by the intelligent, to affright the unintelligent. But, alas! these misrepresentations are really blasphemies against our Creator, which misrepresent his Wisdom, Justice, Love and Power. And these blasphemous thoughts are accredited to the Bible, with the result that it is disbelieved and its great Author doubted or denied and thousands of the intelligent of our race are agnostics.

ONE VOICE ONLY ANSWERS

Spiritism speaks up to assert that it, and it alone, can furnish proof that man, of the earth earthy, is after death a spirit. It furnishes us mediums at whose instance tables are tipped and rappings are heard and other evidences are given of unseen power; and these unseen powers, we are told, are the spirits of dead men seeking to prove to humans that they are not dead, but that in the moment of death they were transformed into spirit.

And now our scientific men are taking up the subject. They decline to be identified with Spiritism and designate their findings Psychic Phenomena. Mediums and their demonstrations have been subjected to every imaginable scientific test to demonstrate that the results are not fraudulent that there is really a spirit power, an invisible power which can do and has done remarkable things beyond the power of humanity. Accepting these investigations as scientific, and accepting the results as scientific proof that there is a spirit power or force which can and has operated in conjunction with human affairs and especially through mediums, what does this prove? What scientific fact have we here to evidence that these spirit powers have anything to do with our friends who have died?

LYING SPIRITS, SAYS ST. PAUL

These spirits operate through mediums sometimes in trance, sometimes answering by written notes from “nowhere,” sometimes mechanically grasping the hand of the writing-medium and using it without her volition; sometimes by rappings and sometimes by ouija-boards, declaring themselves truthful, sincere, honest, desirous of assisting humanity, etc.

But does this prove, scientifically, that they are honest, that they are true? Ask any spiritualist! He will tell you, at very most, that he believes some of them are honest, or will tell you sorrowfully that some of them have lied to him time and again; and if he be an advanced and experienced Spiritualist he will tell that at times some of these evil spirits have made all manner of vile suggestions to him. But he will tell also that at first it was not so; instead he was at first told that he should pray more and read the Scriptures more. Afterwards he was jeered at and mocked and told that the Scriptures were nonsense and that although here is a God the inquirer is too renegade to hope for any blessing from God.

We have neglected our Bibles too much; we have trusted too much to worldly wisdom. The Bible alone gives the solution of the matter. It alone tells us respecting these spirits; that they are not humans and never were; that they are the fallen angels.

A MAN'S A MAN FOR A' THAT

The Bible is thoroughly consistent with itself; from first to last it maintains that man is an earthly being. According to the Greek and the Hebrew of the Bible he is an animal soul or animal being in contradistinction to a spirit soul or spirit being. "Man that is born of woman is of few days and full of trouble; Man dieth and wasteth away, and where is he? He shall not awake nor be raised out of his sleep until the heavens be no more" until the present order of things shall have passed away. (Job 14:1-12)

Again we read respecting the death sentence and man's hope of recovery out of death by a resurrection, "Thou turnest man to destruction: thou sayest return ye children of men;" "Cease ye from man, whose spirit (breath of life) is in his nostrils" (Psa. 90:3; Isa. 2:22); "If a man die, shall he live again? All the days of mine appointed time will I await until my (resurrection) change come. Thou shalt call and I will Answer--thee (awakening from the sleep of death), for thou wilt have desire unto the work of thy hands;" "There shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and of the unjust." (Job 14:14-15; Acts 24:15)

They are dead, they are not alive as spirit nor in any other sense. They will be dead until God's time for the resurrection of the dead. Resurrection of the living would be unnecessary, and if death brought to man a change to a higher plane of existence as a spirit being, then the resurrection of the dead would not be set before humanity as a blessed hope, for rather it would be a punishment, even to the holy.

WHENCE CAME THE ERROR

It seems probable that this serious error, which has had so much to do with the world's theological confusion, came about through the misunderstanding of the Bible teachings respecting the Church the application of things said concerning the Church to the world, to whom they did not apply. Bible students are coming more and more to see, in the light which one passage of Scripture throws upon another, that the Church is a distinctive class, separate from the angels and the world of mankind in general.

The Divine plan revealed in the Scriptures sets forth one salvation for the Church on the spirit plane. It reveals to us two classes who will be blessed on that spirit plane. It shows us that one of these classes was typified in the priesthood of natural Israel and that the other class was typified in the Levites who assisted the priests as servants. The remainder of the tribes of Israel represented, typically, the entire world of mankind who will ultimately be saved, not to a heavenly state or condition, but as men to a restored earthly condition.

It will be remembered that the Priests and Levites had no inheritance in the land, thus typically showing that they represented that portion of humanity which, by God's grace, will obtain a heavenly inheritance and experience a change from human to spirit nature.

As the Levites and Priests represented the first-born of Israel saved at the Passover, so those who will attain a resurrection to the spirit plane are Scripturally designated "the church of the first-born," and again, "the first-fruits unto God of his creatures." The elect of this Gospel Age are not, therefore, all who are to be saved, but merely all who are to be saved to the spirit plane. With the completion of the elect Church and her glorification with our Lord in his resurrection, the "first resurrection," (Phil. 3:10; Rev. 20:6) the Kingdom will be established for which we pray.

BEGOTTEN TO A NEW NATURE

Very long ago the distinction between these two salvations was lost sight of the heavenly calling for the Church and the Restitution for the World. (Heb. 3:1; Acts 3:19-21) The Old Testament refers exclusively to the earthly and the fact that the New Testament tells almost exclusively of the heavenly and its promises was overlooked. Thenceforth no difference was recognized between the consecrated Church and mankind in general, and the words of the Apostle, addressed to the Church class only, were applied to all.

For instance, in first Corinthians, the 15th. chapter, St. Paul discusses the general fact of death reigning through Adam and of the provision, through Christ, of a resurrection of the dead. Then he proceeds to speak specially of the Church class, saying, "this is the resurrection of the dead." The (emphatic) resurrection signifies the special or First-resurrection class, and the dead similarly marks the special class of dead ones the saintly dead, the Church of Christ, begotten of the holy Spirit to a new nature, the heavenly nature.

Not noticing this, commentators and people in general have applied these words to humanity in general and understand them to teach that all that are sown in corruption will be raised in incorruption; that all who die in weakness will be raised in power; that all who die animal bodies will be raised spiritual bodies. But the Apostle is endeavoring to impress a very different lesson, namely, that the Church is a special class and will have a special resurrection to spirit conditions which the world will never know anything about, experimentally.

The Bible shows this had we but noticed it: The Apostle says, "God giveth to every seed its own body;" that is to say, if we sow wheat we expect to reap wheat; if we sow oats we expect oats. The Apostle's argument is that none need expect to be of the wheat class, the spirit class, unless they are of that class when sown in death. In other words, he would have them understand that a natural man, an animal man, in the resurrection will be an animal man, but those who accept the Divine offer of this Gospel Age, to become new creatures in Christ Jesus, begotten by the holy Spirit these will not come forth in the resurrection human beings, but, being in full harmony with the begetting of the spirit which they have received, will in the resurrection be born of the spirit.

THE HIDDEN MYSTERY REVEALED

Up to the time of Christ no promise of a change of nature from human to spirit had been received by any member of our race. The Lord Jesus himself became the Captain and Forerunner of "the Church, which is His Body," and which, during this Gospel Age, has been walking in his steps of self-sacrifice. The special privilege of this Gospel Age is the sacrifice of the earthly nature in order to the attainment of the heavenly nature.

This was an incomprehensible matter to those to whom it was preached at first. No Jew had ever thought of anything higher than the human plane and divine service on the human plane. But the message of the Gospel was a call or invitation to the heavenly nature and heavenly service as the Bride of Christ and his Joint-heir in glory. Of this call St. Paul says that it is a "mystery that was hidden from past ages and dispensations, but that it is now revealed unto the saints." (Col. 1:26) It was not proper that any but the saints should fully appreciate and comprehend this: "To you it is given to know the things of the Kingdom, but to outsiders these things are spoken in parables and dark sayings that they might not understand." (Mark 4:11-12)

This Mystery was, therefore, never understood by many because the saints were never many, and later, when sainthood was at a discount and when nominal Christians became numerous and influential and made the creeds, it was but natural that the Mystery should become more or less befogged. But instead of going back to preach human restitution to the human plane in a world-wide Eden, the misinformed theologians hung their own hopes and the hopes of the world upon the heavenly assurances just where they did not belong.

Thus it was that, despite our five senses and every plain statement of the Bible, it has become the prevalent belief that humanity is of spirit nature and not earthly, human; that dying is but getting him either to Heaven, Purgatory or Hell. With this confusion the danger all along theological lines has become great, so that practically every doctrine of the Church is more or less confused thereby. This is the secret, this is the reason why the Bible is misunderstood and being cast aside with the creeds of the Dark Ages as no longer worthy of consideration, while the bulk of Churchianity rushes madly toward the ditch of “Higher Criticism, Evolution, Agnosticism” with little faith in a personal God and no definite hope.

SEEK YE THE OLD PATHS

It is time, my dear hearers, that we seek the old paths, the Bible paths and that we seek them intelligently and reverently and honestly. There has been much searching of the Bible to find proofs of what we believe and to entrench ourselves in errors handed to us from the past by well-meaning but deceived forefathers. It is time for us to be honest and to search that we may know God’s message to us through his inspired prophets and his Son and the Apostles.

It will not do to say that doctrines are unnecessary. The Bible puts faith, proper faith, at the very foundation of Christian character. “We believe and therefore speak.”

Let us do this, let us not be content until we know exactly what the Bible teaches concerning “What is man” and respecting the hope, man’s restitution, and respecting the high calling, the heavenly calling of the Church. When we begin to see these matters clearly the entire Bible shines as never before, our faith becomes strong as never before. And then, if we are honest, our love for God and our zeal for his service must also increase proportionately.

*Hope of our hearts! O Lord, appear,
Thou glorious Star of Day!
Shine forth and chase the dreary night,
With all our fears, away.*

PRINCE LUCIFER OF OLD NOW PRINCE OF DEMONS

Pastor Russell Finds Much In The Bible On Satan's Past, Present And Future

Washington, D. C., Jan. 29 Pastor Russell addressed large audiences twice today in Convention Hall and also in Masonic Temple. He had close attention from a very intelligent congregation. We report his address on Satan, the rebel angel!

Doubtless many of the audience were surprised when told that Satan is not in some far-off place stoking fires and torturing human or other victims, but that he is present amongst men, an invisible angel of evil, ably supported in his work as an adversary of God by legions of other fallen angels, of whom he is a master—"Prince of demons," either because of belonging to a higher rank or grade than the ordinary angel. It was a surprise to many to learn that Satan, so far from being ill favored is beautiful, according to the Scriptures, and that he is supervising the work directly and through the fallen angels, his servants, to mislead and to deceive humanity putting light for darkness and darkness for light, error for truth, etc.

Pastor Russell's text was taken from Rom. 16:20, "The God of peace shall bruise Satan under your feet shortly." He said:

The time was not long ago when intelligent people made light of everything in the Scriptures respecting invisible spirit beings, good and bad the messengers of God and the messengers of Satan. This, however, can no longer be done. Under the increasing light of the New Dispensation man himself today can do things which but a short time ago would have been considered impossible. Can we not speak with our friends over hundreds of miles with a telephone and recognize each other's voices? Yet there is no pipe, no tube to convey the sounds and nothing, seemingly, carries it over the wire. We speak into a hole in the wall and our friends hundreds of miles away hear audibly. Still more marvelous is wireless telegraphy and wireless telephony. If man can accomplish these things what cannot the Almighty accomplish? Who can deny the possibility of invisible presence of spirit beings and yet admit the possibility of wireless telegraphy? We are safe, dear friends, in guiding our judgments directly by the Word of God and reasoning inside and not outside of its boundaries.

The Bible, and it alone, explains certain phenomena and all of the Bible explanations, although written, some of them centuries apart, are in most perfect accord. Thus in Genesis the Bible tells us respecting Satan's deflection, and the book of Revelation, written more than three thousand years later, tells us of his binding for a thousand years, of Messiah's reign and Satan's ultimate destruction. Isaiah and Ezekiel tell us of his being at one time in full harmony with God and that then he was the "covering cherub," glorious, grand, beautiful, and that his name was Lucifer, which signifies the Morning Star.

All of the angelic heavenly hosts are termed stars, bright ones, but Lucifer, being of a higher order, was styled the Morning Star, the brightest Star. It was at that time, while in Divine favor that Satan permitted the lodgment in his mind of a disloyal thought respecting his Creator. He thought of how, indirectly, by being in higher responsibility, he could work some wonders and do some things better than the Almighty. He craved the opportunity to make a demonstration of what he could do. But the Scriptures declare that first of all he said this merely in his heart and uttered it not. "He said in his heart, I will ascend into heaven, I will exalt my throne above the stars of God (still farther above his angelic associates) I will be as the Most High" a ruler.

THE OPPORTUNE TIME CAME

Never had there been sin in heaven. Satan was the first of all its inhabitants to cherish, to entertain a rebellious thought and to bring it to a consummation. He held the thought in abeyance until the opportunity afforded, and God himself afforded the opportunity, with full knowledge of the consequences, and with the desire that this test of the entire heavenly host, and of a human race as well, should be effected because God seeketh not the worship of constraint, but "seeketh such for worshippers as worship him in spirit and in truth," voluntarily, joyfully.

It was when Satan beheld our first parents, in the image and likeness of God, yet not spirit but flesh, earthly, that he perceived the opportunity of gaining the coveted power for an empire, separate from that of Jehovah. In the first pair the Adversary beheld a new thing, a creature of god like qualities and possessed of the power to propagate his own species. Satan realized that the conquest of this pair and the bringing of them into subjection to himself would signify the capture of a world full of people eventually that the enslavement of the parents would signify the enslavement eventually of the race.

SATAN'S METHODS WERE SUCCESSFUL

We cannot deny that Satan's plans were logical and that he has carried them out with great success so that the Scriptures declare him "the Prince of this world" (John 14:30); and again, "the god of this world." (2 Cor. 4:4) Nevertheless, his victory was not so great a one as he doubtless expected it to be. No doubt he expected that he was capturing an immortal race. Quite probably he believed the falsehood he told mother Eve, when he contradicted the Word of God that sin, that disobedience in eating the forbidden fruit, would bring upon them the penalty of death, “dying thou shalt die.”

Satan’s charge was that God had misrepresented the facts for the purpose of holding his creatures in mental slavery to himself; that he did not wish them to be wise, therefore he forbade the eating of this particular kind of fruit and declared the penalty of death for the transgression of his law. “I, Satan, assure you that you need not be afraid of the fruit; I assure you that it will do you good, and that you will not surely die from the eating of it.” Alas! Mother Eve believed the Adversary and disbelieved her God, and then enticed her husband, still thinking, no doubt, that she would not die and that the serpent had told her the truth and that God had been the deceiver. St. Paul tells us that father Adam knew better and ate the fruit, knowing that it would cause his death, willing thus to disobey in order to maintain the fellowship of his wife, whose life, he realized, was already forfeited.

When the Divine sentence began to go into execution; when our first parents were driven out of Eden to battle with the thorns and thistles until they should return to the dust, no doubt Satan was disappointed. He had rather be the prince of a noble, living family of angels or of humans than the emperor of a weak and dying race. However, from that day to the present time he has been fighting upon the same line; he has been contending with mankind that the Word of God is false when it declares that “the wages of sin is death,” and that “the soul that sinneth it shall die.” From that day to this he has been using this falsehood to the injury of our race, and surely he has succeeded wonderfully.

Today, not only in heathen lands, but amongst the most civilized, it is freely believed (and by many Christians considered Scriptural to believe the nonsense that a dead man is more alive than before he died. People of good, sound reasoning faculties on ordinary subjects seem to “be hoodooed” by this falsehood of Satan, “ye shall not surely die.” So true is this, that it seems not inconsistent to them to say, that a man hit over the head with a stick and knocked senseless, knows nothing, but a man, hit over the head harder and killed, knows everything.

THE FALLEN ANGELS

It was sometime after the fall of Satan and the fall of man that the Lord permitted the great test to come upon the angels of heaven, under which test a host of them fell into sin, disobedience, etc., and since then are known in the Scriptures as the fallen angels and as devils more properly demons. Two weeks from today, D. V., we will consider their temptation and sin and penalty and whether or not there be any hope. Suffice it to say now that these fallen angels, demons, are under Satan as their great Prince and that they have been his active agents in long centuries of deceiving mankind and opposing the Divine Program.

It would have been as easy as not for God to have blotted out of existence entirely both Satan and the fallen angels, and man also, and to have completed another creation, angelic and human. But such was not the Divine Program. God's ways are not as man's ways, but higher as the heavens are higher than the earth. Isa. 55:9

SATAN THE GREAT MURDERER

No less an authority than our great Lord and Redeemer tells us that Satan was a murderer and a liar. He declares that he was a murderer from the beginning and abode not in the truth; when he speaketh a lie he speaketh of his own, for he is the father of lies. (John 8:44) It is well that we keep this Divine testimony in our minds. It is well that we note just what the first great lie was, namely, Satan's misrepresentation, saying, "Ye shall not surely die." It is important that we notice this, because so thoroughly has Satan accomplished his deceptive work that practically everybody, heathen and civilized, accepts Satan's version of the matter and discredits the Almighty's.

Let us note also that Satan is a murderer; that he murdered Father Adam and Mother Eve, and that his lie is still murdering our race under the just laws of heredity. The error of believing Satan instead of God has gotten many into the confused situation of disclaiming that God proposed that man should live forever on earth in a Paradise, and, as his family would increase and continue in harmony with his divine regulations, the boundaries of his Paradise would be enlarged and be a Paradise filled with the knowledge of God, and the home of a perfect humanity, in accord with God, privileged to maintain everlasting life here. But, says this theory, by Satan's lie and our first parents' fall, we die, and by dying become more alive, and some of us go to heaven and the mass to some eternal, fiery hell, of which we have no knowledge and for which there is no Scripture proof.

But let God be true and let us see how and wherein Satan lied when he contradicted our Maker, and let us see also how our race was not sent to heaven or to a hell of torment, but was murdered, killed, put to death—"The wages of sin is death." Rom. 6:23

THE GIFT OF GOD IS ETERNAL LIFE

(Romans 6:23)

God, while permitting Satan and sin and depravity and death to take their course, has not been idle. He has had, and still has, a great plan for human salvation a plan for recovering man from sin and from death and from all of his fallen conditions, a plan of restitution to human uplift, a plan by which the Seed of the woman shall yet, figuratively, crush the Serpent's head, or undo Satan's great original misdeed recover man from his murdered condition and from his fallen estate to all that he had at first, plus the knowledge and experiences of the present life and plus the experience, incidental to his uplift, during the reign of Messiah, for which we pray, "Thy kingdom come."

The Scriptures clearly show us that all of this recovery is to be accomplished through the merit of Jesus' sacrifice—"the just for the unjust." That the work has not yet begun is evident. We are still living under the law of sin and death. The Messianic Kingdom must come in power and great glory and be established, the Scriptures tell us, in a great time of trouble. Then the earth will be made to blossom as the rose, and the wilderness and the solitary places will be made glad, and all mankind will receive Divine blessing and opportunity to return to Divine favor and eternal life as human beings. And the willfully disobedient and negligent of those opportunities will die the Second Death, from which there will be no recovery, no resurrection, no hope.

THE SAINTS SHALL JUDGE THE WORLD

(1 Corinthians 6:2)

These great blessings of restitution, for which Israel and the whole world are waiting, cannot be brought about until first the special salvation of a special class, the salvation of the very elect not to human nature, but to a heavenly nature, as the Bride of Christ shall be accomplished. The selecting of these has progressed for nearly nineteen centuries and, apparently, is about complete. The Divine blessing and work then to be inaugurated will be restitution to earthly nature and perfection—"to the Jew first."

SATAN SERVES THE SAINTS

During all these centuries, while Satan has been the Prince or ruler amongst the children of this world, and while he has blinded them with his sophistries and falsehoods, he has also done another work for the saintly few now being called to the heavenly places. For these he has, so to speak, turned a polishing grindstone to prepare them for the riches of the heavenly glory as new creatures, as heirs of God and joint-heirs with Jesus Christ their Lord. Quite unwittingly, we may be sure, he has served the Creator's purposes and helped to prepare, through trials, this class for the glorious things which God has in reservation for those that love him.

In Divine dealings, God's wisdom, foreseeing the end, is able to use the wrath of men and of the fallen angels and of Satan to praise him and to work out blessings to his elect Church, and the remainder, which does not thus work, he can and does restrain.

Hence the Divine promise that “all things shall work together for good to those that love God, to the called ones according to his purpose.”

SATAN AS AN ANGEL OF LIGHT

St. Paul declares of Satan, “We are not ignorant of his devices” and he tells us that Satan and his servants transform themselves into servants of righteousness, etc. We see this principle in operation as we read Church history.

3H462

Satan, all through this Age, has sought to pervert Christian hopes and distort Christian doctrines by presenting counterfeits of Bible truths. Thus, for instance, the Scriptures tell us that eventually the Church, “a little flock,” will be associated with Messiah in his Kingdom of glory to reign a thousand years. It was Satan’s method to counterfeit this hope, to suggest to men the establishment of an earthly Kingdom with an earthly little flock, an earthly glory, an earthly reign. This was set forth as the fulfillment of the second Psalm.

And when later on some of Satan’s dupes began to get free from some of his snares, he became their leader in an opposite direction, called them reformers and led them to claim that all the civilized kingdoms of the earth are the kingdoms of Christ. This is the status of affairs today. The world in general believes that Christ’s Kingdom has come, even though they are still praying, “Thy Kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven.” Satan has led them away from careful attention to making their own calling and election sure by Christian character development, into the various reform movements of the world, whose trial time has not yet come. Thus Christians of all denominations have been bewildered, confused by the artful wiles of our enemy.

Now, however, as the morning of the New Dispensation dawns, our eyes of understanding are opening. We perceive that our Adversary has but a short time until he must be bound for a thousand years; that the Messianic Kingdom must prevail that all the families of the earth may be blessed through the Seed of Abraham. Finally, at the close of that reign of righteousness, the Scriptures declare that Satan shall be destroyed.

The Church is the Body of Christ, of Messiah. Hence the Apostle’s words of our text apply to the church in glory—“the God of peace shall bruise Satan under your feet shortly.”

PASTOR RUSSELL REFUTES CHARGES

Brooklyn, N. Y., February 2
Editor National Labor Tribune:

I crave a few inches of your space in correction of a news item widely circulated from Washington, D. C., January 29, stating that a Street Evangelist charges me with “exciting the people” by preaching that “Christ will come in A. D. 1915, and accomplish the destruction of the world.”

This “Street Preacher” got himself mixed up with my theology. It is true that he sent me a kind invitation to share twenty minutes of my time in explaining to the audience how he misunderstood my presentations before he had heard them. It is true that he has requested a public debate with me at the next Baptist Convention in June or at the Christian Endeavor Convention in July. but I did not believe that the gentleman was authorized to speak for either of the Conventions; consequently I gave him no heed. As I was announcing the closing hymn the gentleman attempted an interruption.

But it appears that after my meeting was dismissed, the interrupter, who calls himself an evangelist, undertook to explain to a bevy of reporters Pastor Russell’s “errors” (as published in your Journal.) He declares that all over the country I was preaching the second coming of Christ in 1915 and scaring people, as Wm. Miller did years ago. I do not blame the reporters, for how could they know how foolishly the man was talking?

I wish to deny, as positively as language will permit, that I said a single thing concerning the year 1915 last Sunday. Nor have I ever preached such things; nor do I believe them now. So far from teaching that Christ will come and the world be burned up in 1915, as Wm. Miller taught of an earlier date, my teaching is that the world will never be burned up, but as the Bible declares, “The earth abideth forever.” Ecc. 1:4

If “Evangelist” represents any Protestant or Catholic bodies, as he intimates, his creed surely recites the burning up of the world at the Second Advent of Christ. Many ministers in all denominations teach that Christ may come at any moment, and that the moment of His coming will be the end of the world! A few saintly ones, they say, will be saved; but all the remainder will be overwhelmed by fire that will fall upon them from heaven. It is one of their stock arguments intended to excite the people. I wonder if “Evangelist” has not so preached?

It is because my interpretations of the Scriptures are so very different on this particular point that many Christian people are being awakened to a fresh study of the Bible. I am in communication with Bible classes all over the world. Many persons are being reclaimed from infidelity by the Message which has nothing of excitement in it, but which shows the Bible in its true light, as the most common-sense book in the world.

NO JEWISH STATE BEFORE

What I have said respecting 1915 is that, in my understanding, there ends the treading down of the Jews by the Gentiles a period of 2520 years from the time the crown was taken from Judah's last King of the house of David Zedekiah, B. C. 606. Israel's restoration to Palestine as a nation will, Biblically, mark the beginning of the Messianic reign of righteousness, which will last a thousand years. Luke 21:24

Mr. Editor, "Evangelist," either intentionally or unintentionally, most thoroughly misrepresented the views I teach from the Scriptures that Messiah, as the King of

Glory, is not a man and will not be visible to men that his Empire will be spiritual, and powerful.

Those Scriptures which alarm "Evangelist" and others, as representing the burning up of the world, I understand to refer to a great time of trouble with which this Age will terminate, and the New Era be inaugurated. Those who read my sermons and books could not be deceived by "Evangelist." Yet thousands of other people may have been. So I thank you for this opportunity for explanation.

*Respectfully,
C. T. Russell*

GOD LOVES YOU

Brooklyn, N. Y., February 5 Brooklyn Academy of Music was crowded today to hear Pastor Russell on God's mindfulness of man from the text, "What is Man, that thou art mindful of Him?" (Psa. 8:4) The large audience listened with intense interest, so that a pin drop could have been heard. The speaker said:

For two weeks our City has been in the throes of a "Revival of Religion." Hundreds of ministers have placed themselves and their congregations under the leadership of Dr. Chapman and Mr. Alexander, the famous singer, for the purpose of reviving religion; for the purpose of rescuing human souls from eternal torment, as the proposition is generally understood. Business men have subscribed large sums of money for this noble work of rescue, reasoning that if thousands of dollars are spent in fire-fighting apparatus for the protection of human life for a few years, the services of Messrs. Chapman and Alexander will be cheap if they carry away twenty-five thousand dollars for a month's work, provided the results show a goodly number rescued from eternal torment.

We sympathize with some of these large-hearted and open-handed business men who give their money for so laudable an object. Yet we cannot think that many, nay not even a majority, of those who contributed this sum have done so conscientiously. We cannot think that one-half of them believe in the teaching of eternal torture, nor can we think that more than one-tenth of them believe that a practical conversion is signified by a response to an invitation which implies a preference for heavenly bliss rather than for eternal anguish. However, it is for those who pay the money to exercise their own consciences in this matter, and it is none of our business what they decide.

We sympathize also with the hundreds of Pastors of this city who have joined in this movement, which they hope will increase their congregations and church revenues, but these Pastors know in reality that the Bible does not teach eternal torment, and they have discarded the Bible anyway in favor of Higher Critical-Infidelity. Theirs is an unhappy and stultified position.

We sympathize still more with the poor people whose education along spiritual lines is almost wholly neglected, and who live in constant fear of the God who loves them and in dreadful misunderstanding of the Bible, which he has given them. Between the imperfections of the translation and the coloring of prejudice and the twist of misunderstanding of some parables and symbols they are helpless in the presence of educated men who inferentially teach what they do not themselves believe. Alas! poor, "common people!" that you should be betrayed by those in whom you repose confidence and whom you unwittingly pay for keeping you in the dark by taking from you the key of knowledge. "My people perish for lack of knowledge." Hosea 4:6

SYMPATHIZES STILL MORE WITH GOD

But still more we sympathize with God, whose name is dishonored, whose Justice, Mercy, Wisdom, Love and Power are traduced, nay, vilified. We say to ourself, How wonderful the patience of God, which for centuries has endured blasphemous misrepresentations of his good character and Divine Plan of the Ages! Well does he tell us that as the heavens are higher than the earth, so his plans and methods in respect to our salvation are higher than ours not lower. Well does he tell us that human fear toward him is taught by the precepts of men, not according to his Word. (Isa. 29:13) We can see reasons why the Lord has kept silence toward the heathen, but we are perplexed that judgments have so long delayed to come upon those who, knowing better, still slander the great and holy name and misrepresent the Divine purposes.

What would a chief shepherd do to an under-shepherd found misleading the sheep, guiding them into poisonous pastures? We believe that he would take the sheep from him, even though he allowed him still to shepherd the goats. And it is quite our thought that such a judgment impends over Christendom and that all shepherds, false to their trust, will be dismissed ignominiously, and that very soon!

Is it urged that we should do evil in order to obtain good results, that we should misrepresent the Divine character in order to get people to join the Church? Is it urged that some may, as a result of this evangelistic movement, lead a more orderly and decent life hereafter as citizens, and that we should be willing to join in traducing our Creator, in order to obtain this result? We answer, No, a thousand times, No! In our judgment the perversions of the Truth, the dishonoring of our Maker, the instilling of misconception into the minds of the people, is an awful cost to pay, even if the results should be a hundred times as great as promised. Well did Jesus say, Ye compass sea and land to make a proselyte and when he is made he is two-fold more a child of destruction than he was before. (Matt. 23:15) The conversions achieved by misrepresentations of God instill a poison into the heart difficult to eradicate, impervious to the Truth.

It grieves me to be obliged conscientiously thus to characterize a movement which has, at least, an outward appearance of godliness. It will attract to me the venom of those whose hypocrisies I criticize. It is not the money that they will collect that grieves me, for those who give it honestly, thinking thus to serve the Lord, will surely be blessed by him. It is the hypocrisy of the thing, the misrepresentation of their own belief and unbelief and the slander against the holy name of the Creator and the further bamboozling and throwing of dust into the eyes of the common people this awakens, and should awaken, righteous indignation. And the more others do not speak, the more I must speak in denunciation and in warning to the people to search the Scriptures and become undeceived.

HEARKEN NOW TO OUR TEXT

The teachings of all of the creeds of the "Dark Ages" which have come down to us, although they contain many good things, are so befogged with misrepresentations of God as to be a stench to our nostrils and a menace to our spiritual health. They picture to us a God either reckless and careless of the future interests of his human creatures, or else as powerless to aid any but the few. They picture to us millions going down to torture during the four thousand years before Jesus came into the world to seek and to save that which was lost. They picture to us that since his coming only a handful, comparatively, of the human family have become his disciples, footstep followers, “Meet for the inheritance of the saints in light.” All the others, according to our Protestant creeds, Calvinistic and Arminian, have gone down to eternal torture. From this standpoint it is that Dr. Chapman and Mr. Alexander are the heroes of the hour, saving a few more whom God would have otherwise neglected, or, as some might say, saving them in spite of Divine foreordination to the contrary.

But what say the Scriptures? Does the Bible substantiate such theories?

Nay, nay! In harmony with our text, the entire Bible reveals to us a God as infinite in his Wisdom and Power as in his Justice and Love. Our text tells us that he is mindful of his creatures humanity. He was mindful in the very beginning when he created man and foreknew his fall. Away back there he foretold that “the seed of the woman should ultimately bruise the Serpent’s head.” Away back there he indicated his Divine purpose, in due time, to redeem man from destruction (not from eternal torment, for none were sentenced to torment). The skins which covered the nakedness of our first parents cost the lives of animals, and thus God typically prophesied “better sacrifices” for the perfect covering of man’s sin and shame. In God’s dealings with the nation of Israel, he gave numerous types foreshadowing the later blessings, following “the better sacrifices” of the antitypical Atonement Day blessing all the families of the earth.

God was mindful of man’s interests all that time (for over forty-two centuries), even though, during that long period, nothing was actually accomplished. The salvation was purposed, was planned, was assured, but must be waited for until God’s due time.

RECONCILIATION BY “BETTER SACRIFICES”

When Jesus appeared the world was still in sin even the one little nation of Israel was still under Divine condemnation because of sin because their typical sacrifices were insufficient and merely foreshadows of “the better sacrifices” which God was mindful later to bring to pass.

Those “better sacrifices” are not yet completed, though nearly so, we believe. They consist of “the Man Christ Jesus who gave himself a Ransom for all” and also of the faithful few whom he has accepted as his disciples and who are walking in his steps, “presenting their bodies living sacrifices, holy and acceptable to God,” through their Redeemer. Rom. 12:1

God is still mindful of humanity. He has not forgotten his responsibilities as a Creator. The theory that God shirks his responsibility and allows the ninety thousand who die daily to drop into eternal torment because of carelessness or indifference on our part is not true is not Scriptural.

God affirms his own responsibility for every feature of his Plan. He declares, "My Word that is gone forth out of my mouth shall not return unto me void; it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it." (Isa. 55:11) Hence we should understand that God sent no message to convert the world during the first forty-one hundred and fifty years after Adam's creation, because he did not will the world to be converted. He had no message for the world. His time had not come. St. Paul refers to this, saying, "The times of that ignorance God winked at: (took no notice of). But now, since the death of Jesus, the Just for the unjust, and the opening up of possibilities for a future life through a resurrection, God commands all men everywhere to repent. And all who become disciples of Jesus are privileged to be ambassadors for God, to convey to all who have the hearing ear a message of God's mercy to bind up the broken-hearted, to declare the acceptable year and the opening of the prison doors.

But the work in the present time is restricted. Not all could possibly be blessed now and the elect must have an ear to hear and must be "drawn of the Father" and must walk in the Master's footsteps and thus become copies of God's dear Son. This is the only work thus far, and it is not to the world, but to the few who have the hearing ear and who leave the world to become followers of Jesus.

THE HIGH CALLING IN CHRIST

The Bible declares that now God is sending forth a "high calling in Christ." Those called during this Gospel Age are called to walk in Jesus' footsteps as saints, "presenting their bodies living sacrifices," suffering with their Master and for his cause. The promise to all these is that, if faithful, they shall share with the great Redeemer his Messianic Throne which is yet to bless the world. To this Bride-class the Redeemer will be the Bridegroom, Lord and Head. Sharing his sufferings they shall share his exaltation to the divine nature and its glory, honor and immortality. And these shall participate in the glorious Messianic work soon to begin.

"LET GOD BE TRUE" OTHERS LIARS

If evangelists and others would preach this "narrow way" of the Gospel of Christ, how we would rejoice with them, and how soon would the true knowledge of God's love spread over the world and appeal to the hearts of all! How gladly we would have them join us in this message and in the further message that God's Plan in the next Age will reach Adam and all of his posterity—"every man," just and unjust living and dead! They should be told of the “Times of Restitution” that are nearing. They should be advised that if they neglected the “high calling,” the “election” now in progress, they will, nevertheless, have responsibility and be liable for stripes or punishments, in proportion as they know right from wrong and willfully do the wrong. What we are objecting to is that poor humanity should be frightened and our gracious God be dishonored by the fallacies of the “dark ages.”

What we plead for is that the educated ministers and laymen should cease to do evil, cease to misrepresent and traduce our gracious Creator. We warn them that he will not hold guiltless those who take his name in vain will not hold guiltless those who atrociously malign his name.

THE GREAT REVIVAL COMING

As for methods for the calling of the “elect” in this Age, we urge that neither we nor others are wise enough to improve upon the methods and practices of Jesus and the Apostles. We urge that any deviation from their Gospel of “good tidings of great joy for all people” must be injurious. We urge that we of today should preach as St. Peter did at Pentecost, not only of the “high calling” of the Church, but also of the world’s blessing—“Times of Restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began.” Acts 3:19-23

We urge that such a general presentation of Divine Justice would appeal to all true hearts and heads in the present time much better than any “expediency” preaching and prepare all mankind the better for the future as well as for the present life.

The great revival of religion will come to the world immediately following the great time of trouble with which this Gospel Age is shortly to end. Then, under the blessing of Messiah’s Empire, all the ignorance and superstition and misrepresentation of God and of his Plan will flee away before the presence of the Sun of Righteousness, which will illuminate the world.

Then will come God’s time for blessing the world. His Kingdom, established in the world with power and great glory, will rule it with a rod of iron, compelling prompt obedience to the Divine Law, both in letter and in spirit. The obedient will be helped upward and will progress step by step to perfection, while the rebellious, after proper testing and provings, “will be destroyed from amongst the people” in the “Second Death.”

Why should we not tell the people plainly, that there is a special salvation now in progress and that a common or general one will follow for the non-elect? Why not explain to them the great reward of the present time joint-heirship with Messiah in the Kingdom for which we pray, “Thy Kingdom come; thy will be done on earth as in heaven?” Why not explain to the world that restitution is the portion of all who do not choose to sacrifice; but that, according to their present course, upward or downward, will be their standing, future more or less disapproved and requiring more or less of chastisements or stripes, difficulties, for their extrication, for their uplifting?

Much better could we understand the giving of money to tell mankind the Truth and to glorify the name of our God and our Redeemer. But we are totally at a loss to comprehend the attitude of those who give time and money for a little outward show and the grievous inward injury to the many through a misrepresentation of their Creator and his Word!

To the out-of-Church millions whom I address through the newspapers weekly I suggest that the power of the Truth is love, and that faithfulness to our Lord and to his Message in the Bible are the two greatest privileges that could possibly come to any of us, and that we should each and all unite hearts and voices in "showing forth the praises of him who has called us out of darkness into his marvellous light." Thus we may be of help to other wanderers seeking "the Way, the Truth and the Life." "The Love of God constraineth us." 2 Cor. 5:14

THOUSANDS OF DEMONS INFEST EARTH'S ATMOSPHERE

"Giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of demons" (1 Tim. 4:1) "spirits in high positions" (Eph. 6:12) "The heathen sacrifice to devils and not to God" (1 Cor. 10:20)

The Bible's teaching that the earth's atmosphere is infested with evil spirits is now very generally disbelieved. As a result of the disbelief thousands of well-meaning people are being the more easily entrapped by these evil spirits. The blight is both physical and moral. The usual method of procedure is to arouse curiosity. While the quest for knowledge proceeds, an influence much like that of hypnotism affects the investigator, impelling him forward to further investigation. Sometimes the curiosity is attracted through the outer senses, at spiritualistic seances, with ouija boards, etc. At other times it is by spirit rappings. Again, it may be by whisperings in the ear, inaudible to others. At other times the messages come through trance mediums.

In every instance these communications purport to come from dead human beings. This of itself gives to the communication a special charm to many. They feel honored in being sought out by the dead and in being able to communicate with them. They are curious for information respecting the hereafter. They forget that they have been taught from infancy that the holy dead are far off in heaven, and that the unholy dead are far off in torment.

THEY TEACH FALSE DOCTRINES

How fully this is forgotten is shown by a letter which we received on the first day of this month from a Catholic lady. In it she tells how she first obtained clairvoyant powers the gift of hearing what others could not hear. This, in turn, permitted her to communicate with the evil spirits, the fallen angels. These, representing themselves to her as inmates of purgatory, came to her for help. They solicited her prayers and were progressing to get her more and more under their control. Just in time she was rescued through reading our writings on the subject. Since then she has exercised her will and her prayers against having any fellowship whatever with these fallen angels. Gradually she is becoming more and more enlightened in the Truth of God's Word.

Not infrequently do these spirits personate the Heavenly Father and Christ, urge more prayer, accuse of sin, recommend the reading of the Scriptures, etc. This appears to be with a view to gaining the confidence, the relaxing of the will. Later on dishonorable suggestions are made. The Bible is scorned, prayer is laughed at. If, then, the subject takes fright and seeks to break the hypnotic chain, the evil spirits laugh at him, swear at him, and sometimes tell him that they will shortly have him fully in their power to roast him forever. If he attempts to pray, they intrude and interrupt and tell him that God would not hear him now, that he has gone too far, etc.

With some the matter goes so far that the human will is broken down completely and the spirits obsess them and use their bodies foolishly sometimes viciously, sometimes insanely, until, finally, they are pronounced dangerous and committed to asylums. We do not claim that all the insane are obsessed of evil spirits, but so far as we can judge, nearly one-half of the inmates in asylums are obsessed by demons, who live in them while they are mastering their wills.

PREPARED FOR THESE DELUSIONS

God, through His Word, has forewarned His people against these delusions. In permitting many, nevertheless, to fall into these traps, He is merely teaching a great lesson; the terrible results of disobedience, of neglect of God's Word, are not eternal. The Divine arrangement is that ultimately the entire human family shall be released from the bonds of sin and death, ignorance and superstition, and all have full opportunity for coming into full harmony with God. The present lesson will illustrate the necessity for searching the Scriptures and obeying God's voice therein.

SEDUCING SPIRITS DOCTRINES OF DEVILS

St. Paul, in describing our day, declares one of its prominent signs to be that many will now give heed to these seducing spirits, whose teachings and practices lead away from God. St. Paul intimates also that by these misleading spirits many will come to hold doctrines of demons, or devilish doctrines. It is a sad commentary upon our wonderful day of enlightenment that the most enlightened people should hold the most awful doctrine respecting the hereafter.

A doctrine of demons it most surely is which tells, to the dishonor of God's name, that nine hundred and ninety-nine out of every thousand of humanity are to be eternally tortured, either because of Divine incompetence to make better arrangements for them, or because God willed and foreordained it so before creation. This doctrine of demons has enslaved many honorable people who would themselves scorn to make such a plan of the ages as they attribute to God.

Thank God, the time is not far distant when these seducing spirits will be completely bound, restrained, and deceive humanity thus no more. But the deception has so long prevailed that poor humanity is thoroughly under its control. The falsehood leading up to all this error is Satan's first lie to our parents in Eden. There, contradicting the words of God, he said, "Ye shall not surely die." Ever since, for six thousand years, he has worked along this line, and all the fallen angels with him. His message is, "Ye shall not surely die" you do not surely die; when men seem to die, they become more alive than before they died."

On account of these errors, that dead men are alive, Satan and the fallen angels, contrary to the teachings of the Bible, have instilled into the whole world, nonsensical, heathen superstitions respecting heaven, purgatory and hell. The Catholics pray for those who go to Purgatory, to help them out. Protestants do not so pray, believing that the saintly few go direct to heaven and all of the unsaintly go as directly to eternal torture.

If this great lie wherewith Satan first seduced Mother Eve and murdered our race could be fully eliminated from our minds and our creeds, it would mean a religious revolution to both Catholics and Protestants back to the Bible and away from the domination and seduction of the lying spirits, the fallen angels, who personate humanity.

THE FALLEN ANGELS LUSTFUL

So far as we can learn from those who have once been spirit mediums, the trend of Spiritism is toward unchastity, impurity. And this agrees well with the Scriptural declaration relative to the sin through which these fallen angels first became reprobate.

St. Jude (6) and St. Peter (2 Pet. 2:4), tell us briefly of the fall of the angels that "they left their own habitation and kept not their first estate.” Both Apostles mention the circumstance in connection with human lasciviousness. The story of the fall of the angels is given us briefly in Gen. 6:1-4. After man’s fall into sin God permitted the holy angels to have communication with humanity. And because human eyes cannot see spirit beings, God permitted the angels to materialize. For instance, we note the case of the angels who visited Abraham on the plains of Mamre and for whom he prepared a veal dinner. We read that, materialized, these angels were like men, and taken by Abraham to be men, while they ate and talked with him. It was subsequently that Abraham learned that they were really heavenly visitants.

So it was with all the angels before the flood. They were permitted to materialize and to appear in every sense of the word as men. The record shows that the angels became lustful. We read, “The sons of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair and took unto themselves wives of such as they chose.” The angels, with superior powers and superior knowledge to man’s, acted as the masters of men, who were practically obliged to do their bidding. The result is stated in few words. The children of this mis-alliance, we are told, were giants as compared with the ordinary members of our race. And not only were they giants physically, but also intellectually—“ They were men of renown.”
Poor

humanity could not compete with this race. The result was that strife and contention and lustful, sinful practices abounded in all the earth until God declared that every imagination of the thoughts of man’s heart was only evil continually.

God had foreknown all this, and a canopy of waters, which then surrounded the earth, similar to Saturn’s rings now, was held in readiness to cause a flood, that sinful men and the human offspring of the angels might be destroyed. Only Noah and his family were found worthy of preservation to be the new start of humanity this side of the flood. The declaration of the Scriptures respecting Noah’s family is, “Now Noah was perfect in his generation.” He was properly generated or born so were his children. There was no strain or admixture of the angelic stock in that family. The plain information is that the remainder of humanity were so degraded by the seductions of those fallen angels that they were not fit to live. The entire race had become corrupt.

ANGELS RESTRAINED--CHAINS OF DARKNESS

Of course, the fallen angels were not destroyed in the flood, for they not only had the power to materialize, but also the power to dematerialize. It was at that time, however, that all of the fallen angels were put under restraints not permitted again to materialize, the limitation lasting "until the Judgment of the great Day."

Their chains are not physical, to confine them to a certain place in Tartarus the earth's atmosphere. They may roam at will, but are chained, or restrained from materializing. The intimation of the Scriptures seems to be that, with the ending of this Gospel Age, just prior to the inauguration of the New dispensation, these evil spirits may be allowed to break their chains and manifest themselves as men, in connection with the great trouble time incidental to the change of Dispensation.

Separated from God and the holy angels, and unable to assume human bodies, the sinful angels have probably had terrible experiences during the past forty-four hundred years. True happiness is not to be expected amongst those alienated from God. Anger, malice, hatred, strife, "works of the devil," the Apostle says, are not compatible with the love, joy and peace which belong alone to a condition of holiness. Under such circumstances we cannot wonder that these fallen angels would seek association with humanity. Being under the control of Satan as a chief or prince of devils, they have followed his course and propagated his original falsehood—"Ye shall not surely die." They have conjured to men's minds the hell of the heathen, the hell and Purgatory of the Catholics, and, worst of all, our Protestant misconception of awful and unending torture for all except the saintly few.

These doctrines of demons have increased the gulf between God and humanity and have made the Bible, the Message of God's love, a book of terrors not to be loved, merely to be endured or kept as a fetish to secure possibly a cooler place in purgatory. We may safely say that all the false doctrines of Christendom, represented in all of the creeds of the "Dark Ages," are doctrines of demons. Our minds became defiled our hymn-books, our creeds, everything.

Thank God that the light of the New Dispensation is now bringing to us the beginning of blessing release from some of our darkness. The seeing of the true wage of sin that it is death and not eternal torment is one of the most important features connected with our enlightenment. When we learn that the dead are really dead and, as the bible declares, will not know anything until the resurrection, then we begin to see the beauty of God's Plan the need of Christ's death, the need of His second coming; the need of His Kingdom; the need of a resurrection; the need of an opportunity for all mankind to come to a clear knowledge of the great Truth of redemption through the precious blood and the opportunity then, by God's grace, of attaining eternal life either during this Gospel Age, as New Creatures, spirit beings like unto the angels, or in the New Dispensation, during the more general salvation of the world to human perfection in an earthly Paradise.

JESUS CAST OUT DEVILS

Our great Redeemer manifested His power by casting out demons from those who had become obsessed. And we read further that He commissioned His Apostles to heal all manner of diseases and to cast out unclean spirits. We are told that they did this and numerous instances, in illustration, are given us. One man was obsessed by a legion of these spirits. No wonder the poor fellow was crazy. But after they were cast out he was clothed and in his right mind and became a disciple (Luke 8:26-36).

St. Paul and Silas had an experience with an obsessed young woman who practiced soothsaying, fortune-telling, by the power of the evil spirit which obsessed her. As the evil spirits recognized Jesus and cried, "We know Thee, who Thou art, Jesus," so this spirit knew the Apostles and, through the young woman's lips, cried after them, "These be the servants of the Most High God, which show to us the way to obtain eternal life" (Acts 16:16-18).

Neither Jesus nor the Apostles were willing to accept demon testimony and commanded the evil spirits to come out of their victims.

SCIENTISTS BEING ENTRAPPED

The Scriptures indicate that there will be a wonderful activity amongst the fallen angels in the close of this Gospel Age. The Master declared that the deceptions would be such that, if it were possible, the "very elect" would be deceived. But that will not be possible, because Divine providence stands engaged to protect the elect. The Ninety-First Psalm, which gives a picture of the closing of this Age and its sundry trials and tests, declares that God will give His messengers a charge concerning the feet members of the body of Christ in all their ways lest a foot should be dashed against a stone of stumbling (Psa. 91:12).

If our understanding of the Scriptures be correct, we need not be surprised if the fallen angels may again seemingly gain a victory over the Divine restraints and materialize in broad daylight--personating not only the dead, but also at times personating the living. Spiritists and mediums are claiming such things as already beginning and likely to be accomplished on a grand scale shortly. Should it come it will inaugurate a terrible time of trouble such as had not been since the flood. God's people, while resting confidently and at ease under Divine supervision, should be on the alert to resist everything akin to Spiritism, Occultism, Hypnotism, and to warn their friends respecting these things.

Numerous scientific men are being entrapped by these lying spirits whose doings and powers they are investigating under the name of Psychic Phenomena.

Thank God we are nearing the time when Satan shall be bound and when every evil influence shall be restrained. Not only will there be a full cleansing from a physical obsession, but a still greater cleansing and freeing from the doctrines of demons.

OLD FASHIONED REVIVAL WANTED IN WALL STREET

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL'S APPEAL CONSIDERED BY PASTOR RUSSELL BISHOP CANDLER FREELY QUOTED

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 19 Pastor Russell of Brooklyn Tabernacle gave two interesting discourses here to large and appreciative audiences. We report one of these from the following text: "Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people." Prov. 14:34. The speaker said:

Many besides myself surely were astonished to read the following extract from the Wall Street Journal, under the caption, "What America Needs:"

"What America needs more than railway extension and western irrigation, and a bigger wheat crop, and a merchant marine, and a new navy, is a revival of piety, the kind father and mother used to have piety that counted it good business to stop for daily family prayers before breakfast, right in the middle of harvest; that quit field work a half hour earlier Thursday night, so as to get the chores done and go to prayer meeting. That's what we need now to clean the country of filth, of graft, and of greed, petty and big, of worship of fine houses and big lands, and high office and grand social functions."

This reached the eye of Bishop Candler, whose comment is so appropriate that I cannot do better than quote it here:

"This editor is right in calling us back to more earnest forms of life than all these things involved. He wants religion in the home; he calls for lives of prayer; he insists that we need the most earnest type of religion to save the country from moral wreck. And he is right. but can we get that sort of religion under the spur of the motive to which he appeals? Hardly.

“We cannot get a revival of religion by seeking a revival of religion. Nowhere in God’s Word are men admonished to seek religion or to seek a revival of religion. They are always urged to seek God. All the revivals of religion which have blessed the world in the history of the past have come when men have undertaken to seek God. None have ever come otherwise. We cannot deify even a revival of religion. God must be the supreme object of our love and desire.

MEN CALLED PREACHERS HAVE EXPLAINED THE WORD OF GOD

“Herein is our trouble We have lost God. Men called preachers have explained away the Word of God, making it no longer a sure word of prophecy, but an antique for the critics to analyze and discuss. The moral law has been lowered. The ten commandments have been reckoned as a piece of Mosaic plagiarism applicable to the moral needs of ancient nomads in the wilderness, but have no more than a qualified bearing on the life of today. The Sermon on the Mount has been treated as ‘An iridescent dream.’

“The Lordship of Jesus Christ has been denied, while treacherous compliments have been poured out upon his name, as that of a great teacher and a noble martyr. His teachings have been defied or set aside wherever they have stood in the way of a rampant worldliness or an insurgent rationalism. The outcome of it all is that multiplied thousands have lost all knowledge of God in their souls. To all intents and purposes God is dead to them. They take no account of His will in any of their plans and doings, but live as if there were no God. They are atheists without taking the trouble to declare formally the atheism which they have inwardly accepted.

“The people must now be called to seek God. He is a real, living Person, and He will be found of those who sincerely seek Him. But He must be sought as the supreme need of the lives of men. He must be sought for His own sake. He will not be found of men who seek Him simply to remedy a bad commercial situation, or to cure social and political ills. He will not consent to be used as a sort of celestial and omniscient chief-of-police to help us suppress grafting and stealing and licentiousness.

“It is quite true that if all the people turned to God they would be turned away from every evil thing. But they will never turn to God until they feel that the worst disaster in life is that one should fail to know our Heavenly Father. They must be made to feel the sorrowfulness of the orphanage of the soul until, like the prodigal of the parable, they begin to say each within himself, ‘I will arise to go to my Father.’

“We have had already too great a disposition to try to use God for all sorts of social ameliorations, moral reforms, and political renovations. It is time now we sought Him for Himself alone. It is time we began to cry with the Psalmist, 'Whom have I in heaven but Thee, and there is none upon earth that I desire beside Thee. ' Then indeed we shall find Him, when our hearts pant for Him, as the hart panteth after the water-brooks."

DIFFICULTIES IN THE WAY, SAYS PASTOR RUSSELL

The words of the Wall Street Journal respecting the need of the old-time religion are along proper lines. The Bishop sees clearly what I also have so frequently pointed out, namely, that the so-called New Theology, Higher Criticism and Evolution theory have so undermined faith that it would be folly to look for a return of the pious earnestness of the past, which was built upon a living faith, even though it was not the pure faith, "once delivered unto the saints." (Jude 3)

We do not admit that none today are pious; that none are what St. Paul styled "sanctified in Christ Jesus" (1 Cor. 1:2). We claim that there are as honest, as upright, as loyal children of God today as ever lived in the world. But they are few. The vast majority, under the false teaching mentioned by the Bishop, have utterly lost the "faith once delivered to the saints." The great majority of professed Christians are drifting. Long ago they gave up the creeds of the "dark ages," and, believing that the Bible taught the same things as the creeds, it also is being abandoned as too absurd for present-day intelligence. Higher Criticism (another name for infidelity and opposition to the Bible) Evolution, Christian Science, Theosophy, and Atheism have swallowed up the majority of the intellectuals of the Churches, and the mediocre masses are rapidly following them into the outer darkness of unbelief and godlessness.

It is impossible for an honest man who has lost his faith in God, and in the Bible as the Word of God, to take a real heart-interest in prayer-meetings, in Bible study and in attempted holy living. He finds nothing substantial for his faith to rest upon. He scorns to be a hypocrite. Hence the old time religious life is not to be generally expected.

MODERN REVIVALS UNSATISFACTORY

Modern revival methods (slangy talk, clownish actions and a pretense that rising to one's feet in a public assembly means Christian reformation and spirit-begetting) is too foolish for thinking people of the class represented by the Editor of the Wall Street Journal. It is not for us to say that absolutely nothing is accomplished, and that all fall away who, under excitement, stand up to be prayed for, or to indicate that they prefer to spend eternity in bliss rather than in torture. We do, however, mean to say, that such persons are bewildered, if no worse, and a year after, we fear, are as bad or worse than the year before. This is because they are not really converted because they have no real foundation for faith given them, and have no faith to put upon such a foundation. They are not even what St. Paul styles “Babes in Christ” (1 Cor. 3:1), for only the spirit-begotten belong to that class.

WHAT IS REALLY NEEDED

The revival really needed should not be looked for nor expected amongst worldly people. They have nothing of Christianity to revive. It should begin with Christians who have not yet lost all their faith in God and in the Bible. These should become awakened to the fact that spirituality and faith are at a low ebb. Their prayers should ascend to God, and their Bible should be studied as never before. They should make use of present-day helps in their Bible study and become fervent and revived of spirit through a better understanding of the Scriptures. They must see that the Bible was not properly represented in the creeds of the past; that it is in direct opposition to many of the doctrines of the past which have justly become repulsive to intelligent minds.

When once they get the proper focus on God’s Word, one passage illuminating another, their faith in God and in the Bible will become a living one, a moving one, and, with this spirit, faith and works will come Christian zeal, fervency of spirit in the service of the Lord. With these in turn will come activities in helping one another, activities in family worship, in Bible classes, in prayer and testimony meetings, etc. Then, as the Master said, they will let their light shine and the worldly will see and be influenced by these living epistles, known and read of all. (2 Cor. 3:2)

MOST IMPORTANT POINT

It is useless for any to attempt to believe, or to attempt to teach others that God is great, and just, and loving, while at the same time teaching that He prepared, before the foundation of the world, an immense torture chamber in which thousands of millions would be forced to spend eternity. How our forefathers could believe this and yet believe somehow or other that God is Love we do not understand. It was their faith in God’s Love, and not their faith in eternal torment, which constituted the power of God working in them for good and which offset the errors of their creeds to a large degree. But no one of today who is at all awake can any longer think of worshipping a God inferior to himself. A God unjust and unloving, or unkind and powerless, can no longer be worshiped in spirit and in Truth.

What the World needs, and what first of all the Church needs, is to get doctrinally straight in respect to the Almighty’s character, and in respect to His purposes for His human creatures. As soon as that condition of mind shall have been reached there will be no need to pray or ask for revivals of religion they will follow irresistibly.

But what do we see opposing any such desirable denouncement? We see two hundred thousand Protestant ministers and Sunday-School superintendents working against such desirable results. We see about two-thirds of them advocating Higher Criticism Infidelity and one-third of them striving to hold the people in ignorance respecting the teachings of the Bible concerning man's future seeking, by inference at least, to uphold the atrocious doctrines of devils foisted upon God's people by the great Adversary during the "dark ages." It is a sad picture. Has it no silver lining?

THE CLOUD'S SILVER LINING

There are still a saintly few in the world who are not bowing their knee to Baal, not worshipping the golden calf of mammon, but wandering, not seeking to prove that they are descendants of monkeys, not seeking to figure God out of creation and to say that nature is God. In this time, when others are going into outer darkness, these children of God, feeding upon His Word, are being blessed and refreshed in spirit as never before. To them God's Word is shining more brightly as the days go by; the rough places are becoming smooth and the dark places clear. To them the glory of the Divine character is being revealed. The secret of the Lord is with them. He is showing them His Covenant and making them to understand many of the deep things of His Word, which the natural eye has not seen, nor the natural ear heard, neither have these things entered into the heart of the natural man things which he hath in reservation for them that love Him.

These are now seeing the Kingdom blessing, in proportion as they respond to the blessed privileges of this time. As the Restitution work will progress, and they obediently rise from their degradation, their shame and contempt will gradually disappear, and eventually perfection of human nature may be attained in an earth also attaining perfection, as the Garden of the Lord.

ERROR LOSING ITS POWER

Intelligent people no longer believe the God-dishonoring doctrine of eternal torture, nor even the doctrine of purgatorial suffering. Having lost these, they are doubting every religious teaching. What they need is to see the Bible's presentations. They should see the "high calling" now extended to the faithful, saintly few and should sit down and count the cost before undertaking so great a contract as to become members of the Royal Priesthood.

If they do not accept this, the only call now extended, they should have in mind that there is a general Law of Retribution operating expressed in the terms, "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." They should understand clearly that every thought and word and act of theirs will have to do with their future conduct and affect them more or less favorably in the resurrection, when Messiah's Kingdom will provide to every man a full, gracious opportunity of Restitution to human perfection in a world-wide Eden.

To the Kingdom of Messiah belongs the promise, "Righteousness exalteth a nation." His will be a reign of righteousness, and, by Divine direction, will have control of the whole world for the uplifting of all mankind redeemed by the precious blood of Calvary. At present, in every kingdom under heaven we see exemplified the latter part of our text, "Sin is a disgrace to any people" to the whole world. Let us accept the direction of God's Word and set our faces toward righteousness with greater zeal than ever to attain Divine favor, either by the "high calling" of this present time or by the blessed Restitution times soon to be ushered in. (Acts 3:19-23)

These are now seeing that the Kingdom for which He taught us to pray is not a myth; these are seeing that it did not come at Pentecost, nor when Papacy was established, nor with the establishment of any of the sects of Christendom. Consequently they are now praying from the heart, "Thy Kingdom come," and waiting for the glorious Messiah, promised to begin His great work of blessing natural Israel and through Israel all the families of the earth (Acts 15:14-17; Acts 3:19-23)

These see that the Kingdom of God's dear Son is to be one of "power and great glory;" that before it, in a time of trouble, every other religion and influence will crumble to dust; that Satan shall be bound, and for a thousand years the most blessed influence favorable to righteousness will be brought to bear upon mankind.

CHURCH AND WORLD STANDARDS

During the "dark ages" the fact that the Church is a specially called, chosen, faithful class (and only "a little flock"), was seen and preached to some extent. But that this lofty Church standard was difficult of application to the world, and the world's hope, and under a different standard, was not seen. It clarifies our minds greatly when we recognize that the elect few are intended by God to be the world's instructors and helpers by and by, when the world will be granted an opportunity of rescue from sin and death not to heavenly conditions, but to earthly Restitution of all that was lost by Adam's transgression and Redeemed by the Great Sacrifice of Calvary. (John 3:16; Isa. 35)

After learning that the hell to which the world goes in death is the grave, and that it is an unconscious condition, a "sleep," the next lesson is the resurrection of the dead—" Many that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake,...some to shame and lasting contempt." (Dan. 12:2) Mankind fell asleep with experiences only with unrighteousness and very indistinct glimpses of holiness and saintship. When awakened they will recognize the glory, honor and immortality of the saintly Bride of Christ and be recipients of her loving care and blessing, in proportion as they respond to the blessed privileges of that time. As the Restitution work will progress, and they obediently rise from their degradation, their shame and contempt will gradually disappear, and eventually perfection of human nature may be attained in an earth also attaining perfection, as the Garden of the Lord.

WHY JESUS REFUSED TO PRAY

Election and non-election viewed from a new standpoint.
Pastor Russell on God's times and seasons.

Fall River, Mass., Feb. 26 Pastor Russell preached twice here today. He had fine audiences and excellent attention. We quote one of his instructive discourses from the text, "I pray not for the world, but for those whom Thou hast given me." (John 17:9) He said:

When, years ago, I believed that an eternity of torture awaited all who do not accept God's "call" of the present time, I had great difficulty with this text. I asked, Is it possible that our Redeemer was selectively unjust in his dealings with our race? Can it be true that the Heavenly Father merely calls and draws a predestinated few to himself and to everlasting bliss? Can it be true, as our catechisms recite, that God and Jesus "passed by" the great mass of mankind without drawing them, without calling them, without giving them the hearing ear, without opening the eyes of their understandings? Can it be that all these blind and deaf, unsought, undrawn, uncalled and unprayed for by the Savior are going down to eternal torment? My heart answered, No! But my brain was confused by the errors, the misinterpretations of the Bible, which I had received.

JOHN WESLEY'S "FREE GRACE"

Trained in the Doctrine of Election and Predestination I, like hosts of others, felt somehow that Brother Wesley's teaching of Free Grace was more noble, more God-like, than Brother Calvin's teaching respecting Election and Predestination.

Nevertheless, when I reasoned on the subject I said, Can I think of the Omniscient God preparing a great place of sufficient size to hold the entire human family and outfitted with every devilish appliance for their torture, and yet being ignorant of the conditions under which they would be born? Can I think that he did not know that we would be born in sin and shapen in iniquity? Can I think that he did not know of the present reign of Satan, Sin and Death and that it would last for six thousand years and injuriously affect our entire race?

Brother Wesley's theory of God's Love and good intentions of his endeavor to save everybody seems inconsistent when contrasted with his teaching that only a saintly few reach eternal bliss and that the thousands of millions must spend eternity in torture. Thus I was once confused, as millions are still confused today, in respect to the Divine Character as exemplified in the Divine Plan of the Ages. So far as I can see, Brother Calvin had a wise and powerful God such as I could admire and reverence. If he had only been kind and loving instead of diabolical. And Brother Wesley had a kind and loving God such as I could admire and worship, if he had only had the wisdom and power of Calvin's theory.

So long as we have such confusion in our minds faith and hope and love and trust shake upon the foundations of our reason. We recognize that we know nothing of the future of ourselves; that we are wholly dependent upon Divine Revelation. But we cannot expect that our Creator would give us a Revelation which to sanctified minds would appear Satanic instead of Divine. We must remember that our Creator invites us to reason, saying, "Come, let us reason together; though your sins be as scarlet they shall be white as snow." Surely a right understanding of the Divine Revelation, the Bible, should be a reasonable one to a sanctified mind.

Hearken to the Word of the Lord: Their fear toward me is not of me, but is taught by the precepts of men! Isa. 29:13

Hearken again: "As the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my methods higher than your methods and my plans higher than your plans." (Isa. 55:9) And so we find, my dear friends God's Word is true. His Character is glorious. Only the mist and smoke of the "dark ages" have confused things for us and mystified matters and darkened the eyes of our understanding.

PREDESTINATION OF THE BIBLE

Now as the six thousand years have passed and we have entered upon the Sabbath Seventh Thousand we are beginning to realize that it marks a New Dispensation that the night is passed; that the dawn is upon us. The wonderful inventions of our day along earthly lines are in full harmony with the clear light now shining upon God's Word, making its dark places bright and its rough places smooth and enabling us to remove the stumbling stones from the "pathway of the just, which shineth more and more unto the perfect day."

Now we can see why Jesus did not pray for the world. It was because the world was not in any danger of a fiery hell. More than that, it was because God's time for dealing with the world had not yet come. The world, however, is to be dealt with by the great Redeemer. After He shall have set up His Kingdom in power and great glory; after He shall have bound Satan for a thousand years that he might deceive the people no more, the glorious Savior, Messiah, will cause a general enlightenment of mankind and a full opportunity for all, rich and poor, great and small, to rise up from dust and ashes and the grave to the full perfection of human nature. The Sun of Righteousness will arise with healing in his beams, blessing and restoring mankind, healing their disease, mental, moral and physical, and causing the knowledge of the Lord to fill the whole earth. No longer will any need to say to his neighbor or his brother, "Know thou the Lord, for all shall know Him, from the least to the greatest." And only the willfully wicked and disobedient will be cut off from life in the Second Death not torture; but as St. Paul declares, "They shall be punished with everlasting destruction."

We see, then, that our Lord's reason for not praying for the world was that He knew the Father's Plan that the world was not to be dealt with during this Age, but during the next, the Kingdom Age. The Master prayed for His own, for the class which He has been selecting during the past nineteen hundred years. These are variously called "the elect," "the disciples," "His followers," "members of His Body," a "Royal Priesthood," the "Bride," "The Lamb's Wife," the "little flock," to whom it is the Father's good pleasure to give the Kingdom.

ELECT TO BLESS NON-ELECT

Seeing, then, that there is a difference between God's provision for the world to be dispensed in the next Age, and his provision for the Church to be given now, we ask, What is the difference between these? The Answer--is that the world's salvation is to be to human nature and an earthly Paradise world-wide; while the elect class is a special one called of God, chosen in Christ and faithful in adversity and, by the Lord's grace, is to have a heavenly nature, like unto that of the angels, but superior. Theirs is a "heavenly calling," a "high calling." They are to be like their Lord and Redeemer and Head and Bridegroom, Jesus, in His glorified state, “far above angels and principalities and powers and every name that is named.”

Is this an arbitrary election? Does God arbitrarily draw and call one above another? Yes. He thus selected the Jewish nation to be His peculiar nation not, however, to the detriment or injury of other nations. He thus called Isaac instead of Ishmael, and Jacob instead of Esau to be the progenitors of His chosen nation Israel, whom He foreknew as a people and predestinated to a certain service. But this selection worked no injury to either Ishmael or Esau. Similarly during this Gospel Age God chooses from the world a certain class and grants them the hearing ear and the seeing eye and He passes by others and gives them not this special favor. This, however, is not to be to the disadvantage of the others non-elect, unchosen, uncalled.

ACCORDING TO HIS PURPOSE

St. Paul speaks of the Church as “called according to His purpose.” He even tells us what the purpose is, namely, that in Ages to come He might show forth the exceeding riches of His grace in His loving kindness toward us in Christ Jesus. (Eph. 2:7) Toward this specially called class God will to all eternity manifest special favor. But we are not to suppose that there is no reason for this selection and favor. There is a reason. It is because of certain intrinsic qualities or characteristics possessed by this class which God is now selecting. They will all be “saints.” They will all love the Lord more than they love houses or lands, parents or children, self or any creature. They will possess the fruits and graces of the holy Spirit. They will all be copies of God’s dear Son, Jesus.

Indeed this is God’s particular predestination. St. Paul tells us that He foreknew that He would provide His only-begotten Son to be the Savior of mankind and the Head over the Church, and He foreknew that He would have a Church, a Royal Priesthood under the great High Priest, as members of His body. God foreknew also the kind of a Message He would send forth and that it would be attractive only to a certain class possessed of a love for righteousness. These only would hear His call. These only would have the eyes of their understanding specially opened, because these alone would accept of His assurances and make a full consecration to His service. Such He would beget of His holy Spirit, and such, in due time, would be born of the Spirit in the resurrection and enter into the fellowship and companionship and kingly joys of their Master.

It is of this special class that the Apostle declares, “Whom God did foreknow, these He also did predestinate to be conformed to the likeness (image) of His Son.” (Rom. 8:29) That is to say, God’s predestination was not only that He would have a Church, but, additionally, that the terms or conditions of fellowship in that Church should be that each one would become Christ-like. Surely this is a good predestination, with which no one could find fault. Whether we shall gain a place with the “elect” on the heavenly plane, or a place with the non-elect world in restitution to earthly nature, we cannot do otherwise than recognize the justice of God in so deciding, that none but the saintly copies of their Lord could be members of the elect Church and joint-heirs with Him in His Kingdom.

“True and righteous are Thy ways, Lord God Almighty! Who shall not come and worship before Thee when Thy righteous acts are made manifest?” Truly it is written of this great King of glory, Head and members, Bridegroom and Bride, “Unto Him every knee shall bow and every tongue confess, to the glory of God.”

“ASK OF ME AND I WILL GIVE”

Although our Lord did not pray for the world, He will yet pray for them, and His prayer will be answered. The promise reads, “Ask of Me and I will give Thee the heathen for an inheritance and the uttermost parts of the earth for a possession” (Psa. 2:8). Jesus did not make this request on the night of His crucifixion because it was not the Father’s time to Answer--that prayer. Appropriately He waited, and while gathering the “elect” from every nation, people, kindred and tongue, the Scriptures declare that He is seated at the Father’s right hand of glory expecting or waiting for the time to come when the Kingdom under the whole heavens shall be delivered to Him by the Father. This will be done at the end of this Gospel Age, when the saintly Body of Christ shall have been completed. Then “He shall take unto Himself His great power and reign.”

A great time of trouble will follow. The plowshare of sorrow will make ready the hearts of mankind for the great blessings which Messiah will then be ready to bestow, because that will be the due time. St. Paul tells us that Messiah’s reign will be a victorious one! “He must reign until He shall have put all enemies under His feet (in full subjection); the last enemy that shall be destroyed is death.” Then, after a thousand years, after having accomplished the purpose of the Father in the uplifting of all the willing and obedient of mankind to earthly perfection, the great Prophet, Priest, Mediator and King of Glory, will at the end of the thousand years’ reign deliver up the Kingdom to God the Father, that God may be all in all (1 Cor. 15:28).

While Satan will be bound at the beginning of Messiah’s reign and every form of unrighteousness will be rooted out, nevertheless, the raising of mankind up out of sin and degradation to perfection will be a gradual work. As the regenerating influences operate in mankind, they will become more and more alive, less and less dead until at the end of the Messianic reign Adamic death will be no more; it shall have been fully destroyed by the raising of mankind completely out of it; the last enemy that shall be destroyed is death Adamic death.

The Second Death will never be destroyed, but will be everlasting. It is not an enemy to God and His righteousness, but a valuable servant to destroy everything willfully and intelligently out of accord with the Divine Government righteousness.

I PRAY FOR THEM

All who are seeking to walk in the footsteps of Jesus, all who have taken up their cross to follow Him, may well rejoice in that feature of His prayer which says, I pray for those whom Thou hast given Me that they may all be one, as Thou, Father, and I are one, that the world may believe that Thou hast sent Me (John 17:20, 21). The oneness of God's people is not represented in the various sects and parties of the present time. It is represented in the fact that all the consecrated followers of the Redeemer are individually united to Him as the Head and united to each other as members of His Body. "The Lord knoweth them that are His." Shortly, through the power of the First Resurrection, all these shall be perfected on the spirit plane and constitute the Kingdom for which we pray, "Thy Kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." As a result of that Kingdom's coming the world will all be brought to the point of believing in Jesus and shall all have the opportunity of obtaining through Him the gift of God, eternal life.

Our Lord's solicitude was not merely for the Apostles and earliest members of the Church whom the Father gave Him in the special sense, as His personal companions and helpers in the founding of the Church; He prayed on, saying, Neither pray I for these alone, but for all those also who shall believe on Me through their Word. The Master's words outlined to us the Divine Program. And Jesus Himself began to declare the Gospel and brought life and immortality to light. He commissioned His twelve Apostles, St. Paul taking the place of Judas, to speak in His Name and as His special mouthpieces. Whatever they should declare to be binding on earth would be binding in the sight of God in Heaven. Whatever they should loose and declare to be non-essential on earth, we may know would be so by Divine decree (Matt. 16:19).

In a word, the Apostles and the Prophets alone are to be considered the special guides and standard-bearers for the Church of Christ. We are to believe on Him through their word and not through the word of councils or synods or presbyteries. Each individual of the Church has his personal responsibility. This is in harmony with our Lord's declaration, "My sheep know My Voice and they follow Me; a stranger will they not follow, but will flee from a stranger.” It behooves us today to hearken back to the words of Jesus as He personally uttered them and as He personally sent them to us through His chosen twelve.

Soon the Master’s prayer for His disciples will have fulfillment. They will be one with Him beyond the veil, sharers of His glory and Kingdom. Then will come the time when the world will believe. The knowledge of the Lord will fill the earth and all the blinding and stumbling influences of the present will be at an end. The Savior will not need to pray for the world then, but instead, will exercise His power on their behalf, overthrowing evil and uplifting every good principle and all who love righteousness and destroying those who would corrupt the earth.

MORE DEAD FLIES IN THE PRECIOUS OINTMENT

Not long ago I pointed out that the last twelve verses of St. Mark’s Gospel in our Common Version are spurious so recognized by all scholars, because these verses are not to be found in any of the oldest Greek manuscripts and were evidently added to the Word of God in the seventh century or later. Moreover, we gave proofs of the untruthfulness of this addition. Is it true that whoever believes the Gospel of Christ may handle serpents with impunity and may drink deadly poison without harm? Surely not. It is nothing short of a sin for those who know better to acknowledge these verses and to use them to bolster up theories of Divine Healing. It is as much a crime to add to the Word of God as to take away from it.

Today I invite attention to some other dead flies, some other additions to God’s Word, which have had much to do with twisting the theology once delivered to the saints. Take, for instance, the closing words of the Lord’s Prayer:

THINE IS THE KINGDOM AND POWER AND GLORY

These words, if uttered by our Lord, should be found in the old Greek MSS. But they are not found therein. They are, therefore, to be rejected as additions made by people centuries after Matthew’s Gospel was written. These words were introduced when the faith of the Church respecting the Kingdom of Messiah was changed or changing from what it was originally. All through the New Testament the second Coming of Christ in power and glory to establish His Kingdom and to glorify the church, His Bride, is set for the end of this Gospel Age. But as the time grew long a change of sentiment came into the Church. It became popular and rich. Its bishops were respected. Finally the theory prevailed that God did not intend to delay the establishment of the Kingdom until the Second Coming of Christ, but did intend to establish it in the hands of the Church during this Age and to use the church for the conquering of the world and the fulfilling of all the promises of the past.

In line with this the most prominent bishop of the time was recognized as Divinely appointed to represent Christ in the world and to reign over the nations in His stead and to bring about the Millennium, etc. This was the Bishop of Rome, who subsequently was styled the Pope and who claimed and was accorded the honorable title, "Vice-gerant of the Son of God." It is said that the equivalent of this title to this day is worn by the Pope on his tiara or three-crowned hat Vicarius Filii Dei.

Thus the change came in the general sentiment of the "Christian world." Messiah's Kingdom was no longer to be looked for as coming, but was to be recognized as here. The Pope, as Messiah's reigning representative, was to be acknowledged. All Kingdoms that were to honor and obey Messiah were commanded to honor and obey the Pope. The various prophecies which tell of Messiah's Kingdom glory were applied to the Pope, and are still so applied.

As Messiah was to ride forth conquering the world and "wound the heads over many peoples," so the Popes in succession sought to do, to fulfil these prophecies. As the inauguration of Messiah's Kingdom is promised to be in the midst of a time of great trouble, it was not thought improper that Papacy should cause great trouble in the world in its endeavor to establish itself as the Kingdom of Messiah. As whosoever would not receive Messiah was to be "destroyed from amongst the people," it was not considered wrong to destroy those who rejected and opposed the Papal Kingdom and to give them to the burning flame.

THY KINGDOM COME ON EARTH

The Lord's prayer was already in the Scriptures, and was known to many. It could not be eliminated. But some zealous person, fully believing that God's Kingdom had come, felt justified in amending the prayer to correspond to what he supposed were the facts. Hence the prayer which begins, "Thy Kingdom come," is made to end by saying, "Thy Kingdom has come in its glory and power," Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory forever!

3H474

If Papacy is the Kingdom of Messiah, it is certainly not what the Jews expected. It is certainly not what we expected. It is certainly not what the masses of mankind had any reason to expect, although it is so accepted by the majority of Christendom.

Although our protesting forefathers broke away from the Pope and denounced him as Anti-Christ and declared that he falsely sat in the place of Christ without authority, they, nevertheless, were imbued with the same error. They did not think to go back to the message of the Scriptures and to look for the Son of God to set up His Kingdom at His Second Advent and then to bless Israel and the world through His glorified Church. Instead they held to the Papal theory that God's Kingdom was set up and was conquering the world, and that thus the Messianic reign mentioned in the prophecy is being fulfilled. They hold that Christ Himself is the invisible King, but that the Pope is not authorized to represent him. Hence this spurious addition to the Word of God is as acceptable to Protestants as to Catholics; indeed more so, if we may judge by the fact that the Catholic Bible omits the spurious words, while the Protestant Bible quotes them.

We here remark that according to Protestant theory Messiah's Kingdom is represented in the civilized nations of the world, especially of Europe. These all claim to reign "by the grace of God," in which case, of course, wars and battles between them are conflicts between the various parts of Messiah's Kingdom. And present military preparations on land and sea portend a most sanguinary conflict between these "kingdoms of this world," which think themselves and are called by Christendom "kingdoms of God." (Remember, this is a sermon of seven years ago.)

How glad we are to see the Truth on this subject; that the Kingdom of God's dear Son has not yet been set up, in any sense of the word that it is still future. It cannot be set up until this Gospel Age ends and the "elect" saintly few of every nation Jew and Gentile shall be changed from earthly to heavenly nature by the First Resurrection, which will qualify them to be "kings and priests unto God and unto Christ and to reign with Him a thousand years." (Rev. 20:6)

It is well that all Bible students should mark this "fly" and extract it from the Precious Ointment, and notice how much sweeter and fresher the Lord's prayer is to them forever.

OH, WHAT A WHOPPER

Thomas Paine was an enemy to the Bible and to the Christian religion, but largely so, we believe, on account of his poor understanding of it. And his misunderstanding of the Bible was largely due to the false doctrines handed down from the "Dark Ages" purporting to be Biblical. Who cannot sympathize with the great infidel, Thomas Paine, who, when reading the last verse of St. John's Gospel, exclaimed, "O, what a whopper!" It reads, "And there are also many other things which Jesus did, the which, if they should be written every one, I suppose that even the world itself could not contain the books that should be written" (John 21:25).

Surely any one of reasoning mind should see the absurdity of such a statement. Surely all Christian ministers should have informed the Lord's sheep under their care respecting what is and what is not the Word of God, the Bible, as it was recognized by the Apostolic church and written down in the original Greek manuscripts. Why any Christian minister should assail me because I endeavor to do for the people what he had neglected to do, I cannot understand. I must leave it to the Lord to judge between us. I am informed that hundreds of ministers went to the Editors of the papers which publish my sermons weekly and endeavored to have them discontinue their publication.

But the Editors perceive that their readers are no longer under the bondage of the "Dark Ages," but have begun to think for themselves, and that many of them are hungering and thirsting for the Truth respecting the Bible the Christian's spiritual food and drink. To the claim that many read my sermons instead of going to Church the Answer--is, that Pastor Russell is preaching to the non-church-going ten millions who are in the majority and that it behooves the ministers to provide for their people the spiritual food for which they are famishing, if they would not lose them all.

ANOTHER BIG FLY

To the credit of such men as Luther, Calvin, Knox, Zwingli, Wesley and others, living prior to our day, we must explain that they had no opportunity for knowing of the spurious passages of the Scriptures. They, therefore, have no responsibility such as devolves upon ministers of our day who do, or should, know all about these matters. We cannot on this occasion make further investigation, take out more of these dead flies; but, the Lord willing, at some future time 1 John 5:7,8 will have our attention. It is worthy of it. It has caused the Ointment to stink and has confused the minds of many of God's dear saints by the way in which the error in this case has been interwoven with the Truth.

My hearers should bear distinctly in mind that what I am here presenting is not at all in line with the presentations of the Higher Critics. Their method is to read through the Scriptures and judge of them by their own keen intellectual powers, and thus to discriminate between which were written by the Prophets credited, and which were additions. Their Higher Criticism claims a keener scent or mental discernment than ordinary mortals enjoy, by which they know these things whether others can see them so or not.

I resent Higher Criticism and accept the Word of God in full. I reject nothing because of my own or other men's surmises, but merely go by the facts. If the oldest Greek MSS. do not contain certain passages of Scripture, how could they get into later manuscripts except as spurious additions?

Nor should I be considered as fault-finding with our common Version of the Bible. While it is not without its faults, it has so many excellent qualities and beautiful translations that I prefer it to any other, and generally use it. But I must not, I cannot, approve those portions of it which all orthodox scholars admit to be spurious.

3H475

We must not handle the Word of God deceitfully. If we do we must expect darkness instead of light, confusion instead of harmony.

OUR BIBLE'S TER-CENTENARY

Just three centuries ago (1611) our English Common Version Bible was published. This year its Ter-Centenary is celebrated. It is a grand book. It has done a grand work. The fact that it is not perfect must not condemn a work possessed of so many glorious qualities. It was the result of seven years' labor on the part of forty-seven persons learned in the languages and appointed by King James of England for its preparation. They labored to some disadvantage by reason of the command given them to follow an earlier translation styled, the Bishop's Bible, and to alter it as little as the original would allow. They were also instructed that if the Tyndale, Coverdale, Matthew, Cranmer or White-church translations and the Geneva Editors agreed better with the text, theirs should be accepted as instead of the Bishop's. The translation was, perhaps, the best that could be made at the time.

Published by kingly authority, it is now venerated by English and American Protestants as though it had come direct from the finger of God. This is a mistake. We are to worship God and to reverence His Word and to search as carefully as possible to have the precious Ointment provided by the spirit of the Truth free from all dead flies free from all human additions and mistranslations and superstitions of the "Dark Ages."

The basis for our Common Version was the Latin Vulgate, which was diligently revised and compared with the Greek MSS. of the time. But there were few Greek MSS. known at that time, whereas at the present time there are over 700. Three of these are quite ancient.

(1) The Sinaitic MSS. found in a convent on Mt. Sinai so recently as 1860. This is acknowledged to be the oldest Greek MS. known in the world. Its date is estimated to be about the year 331 A. D. This MS. is now in the possession of the Russian Government at St. Petersburg (in 1911).

(2) The Vatican MS. 1209, is credited with being next in age. It was found amongst MSS. in the Vatican Library and is still there and catalogued. The date of its writing is estimated to be about the year 350 A. D.

(3) The third of these oldest known Greek MSS. of the New Testament is styled the Alexandrine, because it was found in Alexandria, in Egypt. It is now in the British Museum, where any visitor can behold it in a glass case. It is supposed to have been written about A. D. 450. The readings of all three of these Greek MSS. can be secured and the variations between their readings and our Common Version are so simply arranged as to leave no excuse for ignorance on the part of Bible students.

A RESPONSIBLE AND SACRED TRUST

Professor Tishendorf, writing respecting these ancient Greek MSS., says:

“To treat such ancient authorities with neglect would be either unwarrantable arrogance or culpable negligence. Indeed, it would be a misunderstanding of Providence if, after all these documents had been preserved through all the dangers of fourteen or fifteen centuries and delivered safe into our hands, we were not ready to receive them with thankfulness as most valuable instruments for the elucidation of Truth.”

THE TRUTH IN THE LOVE OF IT

The Lord speaks of some who receive not the Truth in the love of it, and tells that they ultimately will be ensnared by the Adversary. Evidently heart-honesty is one of the most precious elements in the Divine sight. It is not sufficient that we should be Christians in name merely and with form and ceremony. It would not be sufficient in the Lord's sight that we should worship sect or party or even the Bible. It is the Divine Truth that we must reverence next to the Divine person.

It is not sufficient to have Bibles on our center tables merely, nor sufficient to carry them under our arms. We must “eat” the Word of God that is to say, we must, as spiritual children of God, feed upon His message. And this truly implies careful discrimination to discern between God's inspired Revelation and all human additions and admixtures. There is, therefore, a difference between reverencing and loving the Word of God and reverencing and loving a particular translation, errors and all.

“THY WORD IS TRUTH”

Our Master's prayer for all of His true disciples, or footstep followers, was and still is, “Sanctify them through Thy Truth; Thy Word is Truth.” Whoever would have the sanctifying influence of the Divine Word should so far as possible rid himself of every unsanctifying admixture of human tradition and interpolation. The true sanctification or setting apart of the heart to know and to do the Lord's will could not be content to accept with the sanctifying Truth defiling errors, chaff and nonsense.

If thousands are turning away from the Bible, there is a reason. It is not the pure Truth that drives them away, but the foreign admixture and the slanderous misinterpretations handed down to us by our well-meaning but deluded ancestors of several centuries ago. It is high time for all to manifest to God their love of the Truth by spending some of their time in studying it in learning its precious lessons and in telling forth its “good tidings of great joy to all people.”

RESURRECTION OF JESUS TO DIVINE GLORY

Pastor Russell preached in London Tabernacle today to a crowded house. His theme was the resurrected Lord, no longer a man, but ascended where He was before made partaker of the divine nature. His text was, “He was put to death in flesh, but quickened in spirit.” (1 Pet. 3:18) The speaker said:

In the past those of us who continued to believe in the resurrection of the dead held some inconsistent theories respecting the matter which served to make the resurrection doctrine the more absurd in the minds of those opposed. For instance, we claimed that the Logos, the Son of God, left the heavenly or spirit nature and, according to the scriptures, was made flesh, and that He was resurrected from the dead a human or fleshly being and ascended to heaven with a body of flesh. In the same breath we acknowledged that human nature is a little lower than the angelic; and thus, while still wishing to honor the Redeemer and to see wisdom and love in the Heavenly Father’s Plan, we assumed that the Savior, since His Ascension, has had a body inferior to that of the angels and out of harmony with His surroundings; and that this is to be to all eternity a part of the cost of human redemption.

How absurd! Do not the Scriptures particularly tell us that in His resurrection the Son was highly exalted by the Father, far above angels, principalities and powers and every name that is named? Do they not tell us that “flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God?” Do they not tell us that the elect Church, in order to be the Bride of Messiah and His associate in the heavenly Kingdom, must be “changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye,” in order that she may be made like Him, and because “flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom”? We have been too careless in our study of the Divine Word. On this subject, as upon others, we have assumed that our forefathers of the “Dark Ages” understood the matter thoroughly. We forgot that those who lost so much of the Holy Spirit that they could burn fellow-Christians at the stake were quite likely to be more or less confused on all questions. But “the path of the just is as a shining light, shining more and more unto the perfect day,” and it is now our privilege to learn the way of the Lord more perfectly, in the light now shining upon the Bible through the aid of our wonderful concordances and other Bible study helps.

BEGOTTEN OF THE SPIRIT--THEN BORN

Our difficulty on this subject arose from our failure to understand that human and spirit natures are distinct, and that God has provided two distinctly different salvations for mankind the salvation of this Age being exclusively Spiritual, while that of the next Age will be exclusively Human. We are not to think of these natures as blending, but, according to the Lord's Word, we are to view them as distinctly separate. Whoever is of the human nature is earthly, fleshly, whether perfect or degraded. Whoever is of the spirit nature is heavenly, whether perfect or degraded. Thus, when “the Logos was made flesh and dwelt among us,” He was human, though unblemished. And the fallen angels are still spirit beings, although cut off from Divine favor and fellowship. In other words, human nature is not an imperfect form of spirit nature, but a totally separate and distinct nature.

The Logos, the Only Begotten of the Father, “was made flesh” (John 1:14). He was not a spirit being incarcerated in a body of flesh and wearing it as a garment, or living in it as a house. He became like others of the race, except that “He was holy, harmless, separate from sinners,” while all others are sinners, imperfect. Like other men, the man Jesus was not a dual being a spirit being living in a human frame. He was merely human but perfect.

But the Redeemer became a dual being when He received the begetting of the Holy Spirit at the time of His baptism. Thenceforth for three and a half years, until His crucifixion, He was dual. The flesh was the same; but the spirit-begetting received from the Father constituted Him a new Ego, a new person. He not only thereafter had new hopes, based upon Divine promises, but He had a new mind or new will specially illuminated, quickened, enlightened by the Holy Spirit. From the time of His baptism His flesh (all that belonged to His human nature) was given up to die in the carrying out of the heavenly Father's purposes. Thenceforth the Spirit-begotten One waited merely for the accomplishment of His sacrifice according to the Father's will, and for a new body, a glorious spirit body, in the resurrection His completing or perfecting as a New Creature.

THREE AND ONE-HALF YEARS OUR LORD WAS A DUAL BEING

Hence, during the period of our Lord's ministry, for three and a half years, He was a dual personage. So far as form and organism were concerned He was a man, but so far as mind and purpose and interests were concerned He was changed a New Creature, a spirit being; earthly things had passed away. The

New Creature followed the instructions of the Divine Word and providences to the extent of mortifying the flesh surrendering it fully for the accomplishment in it of the Divine will, "The cup which My Father hath poured for Me shall I not drink it?"

The great Teacher Himself gives us the picture of a human birth as illustrating the experiences through which He passed and the similar experiences through which all of His faithful followers must pass in order to reach the plane of heavenly glory. This picture contains three distinctive views—(1) begetting; (2) quickening; (3) birth. These three steps were illustrated by our Lord's own experiences. He was begotten of the Holy Spirit at the time of His consecration at baptism. He was quickened or energized by that Holy Spirit after His 40 days' experience in the wilderness when He began His active service as "the Messenger of the Covenant," selecting His Bride, the Church.

When He finished His sacrifice at Calvary the man Jesus was dead, and the New Creature Jesus, spirit-begotten and quickened and developed, was 3 1/2 years old. According to the Divine Program He slept in hades, the tomb, and on the third day was born from the dead, raised up by Divine power as a New Creature, being given a spirit body of divine nature glory, honor, immortality; "Him hath God highly exalted." (Phil. 2:9) He did not lose His personality, His identity, and could therefore properly say, "I am He that liveth and was dead." (Rev. 1:18)

NOW THE LORD IS THAT SPIRIT (2 Cor. 3:17)

Thus was our Lord "put to death in flesh and quickened in spirit" made alive in spirit, a Spirit Being. True, He was also quickened by the Spirit. It was the Father's Spirit or Power which raised Him from the dead, as the Scriptures declare (Rom. 8:11). Indeed, as the Apostle reminds us, all the blessings of Divine Providence are of the Father. From Him cometh every good and every perfect gift.

He Who thus ascended up on high, the Prince of Glory and partaker of the divine nature, is the same Who first descended to the earthly nature, yea, Who was humbled even unto death, even the death of the cross and went to the tomb as the sinner's substitute or ransom-price. The 40 days which intervened between the Redeemer's resurrection and His Ascension taught two great lessons:

(1) That the crucified One was no longer held in the bonds of death, no longer a prisoner in the grave.

(2) They also taught that the Risen One was different in many respects from what He was before He died. No longer was He a man. No longer was He flesh. The body of flesh prepared for Him for the suffering of death had served its purpose. He needed it no longer. The Father had raised Him up to the plane of glory again. As a quickening spirit He was with the disciples during the 40 days, instructing them during the few moments of each of His seven to ten appearances. But He was teaching them equally when invisible to them. He noted their perplexities. His several appearances were in different forms as a gardener, as a traveler, as a purchaser of fish on the shore of Lake Tiberias, calling out, "Have you any fish?" and then, "Drop the net on the other side."

He "revealed" Himself to the disciples in various ways in connection with those materializations and then straightway He "vanished" out of their sight, to be present with them, unseen, for days. For identification He appeared on two occasions in a body bearing the marks of His crucifixion. During those 40 days the faithful Teacher established the faith of His followers in Himself as the glorified Messiah, their Heavenly Bridegroom, who would later come again and receive them unto Himself and at that time give to them also a similar resurrection "change," that they should be like Him, "see Him as He is" and not as He was, and share His glory because "flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God." (1 Cor. 15:50)

ABOVE THE BRIGHTNESS OF THE SUN

St. Paul, the last of the twelve Apostles to be called (to take the place of Judas), needed, as well as the others, to be able to witness to the resurrection of Jesus. Of this he tells us, saying, "He was seen of Cephas, then of the twelve; after that He was seen of above five hundred brethren at once; after that He was seen of James; then of all the Apostles; and, last of all, He was seen of me also, as of one prematurely born." (1 Cor. 15:5-8)

In the ordinary course of events St. Paul would not have seen the Lord until His resurrection, when he himself would come forth as a member of "the Church of the First-born." He therefore describes his view of Jesus on his way to Damascus as being like that of one born before the time. In other words, St. Paul saw the Lord as He is and not as He was. He saw the Lord of Glory, and not the man Jesus. The appearance was glorious indeed. In various parts of the Bible angels in their normal condition are pictured as bright-shining ones. Thus one of the Prophets fell as dead before an angel of the Lord, whose face shone as the sun. Thus John the revelator, granted a glimpse of the glorified Christ, fell as dead before Him. The effect of this great light above the brightness of the sun upon the eyes of Saul of Tarsus was destructive and a miracle was necessary for their repairment.

Thus the Lord identified Himself in glory with His former self, the man Jesus. These lessons of the Lord should not have gone unheeded. We should not have thought of the glorified Messiah as a man. The effect of the wrong thought has not only beclouded our appreciation of the Savior in glory, but has also confused many respecting His Second Advent. It is safe to say that even yet the majority of those who are expecting the Second Coming of the son of God and His establishment of His Messianic Throne are looking for Him as a glorified man, forgetting that He sacrificed Himself as a man, and that He took not back that sacrifice, but received exaltation to the more excellent glory than that which He had left to become our Redeemer.

These wrong expectations respecting Messiah's Kingdom have turned the hearts of many in a contrary direction. They have reasoned correctly that the establishment of an earthly Kingdom, with Christ the King in the flesh and His saints joint-heirs with Him in His Throne, also in the flesh, and with an earthly court would be a condition of things inferior to the present one and apparently very inadequate for the accomplishment of the great things which the Bible promises Messiah's Kingdom will secure.

The proper thought respecting the resurrection of our Lord and His present glory shows us clearly that His Kingdom, when it shall be established, will, indeed, be a heavenly Kingdom, a spiritual one. From this standpoint only can we see the force of the Apostle's contrast, when he pictures to us how Satan, ambitious and scheming to be the Emperor of the world, took the path of disobedience. He indeed gained his desire and is the "Prince of this world" over a sorry Empire, in which sin and death reign. On the other hand, the Apostle points us to the fact that our Redeemer, loyal to the Heavenly Father to the core, humbled Himself to take the human nature, to be crucified; and that therefore God has exalted Him and will give to Him the Kingdom now usurped by Satan, the Prince of this world.

Satan will be bound for the thousand years of Messiah's reign. The spiritual Prince of Darkness will be deposed and the spiritual Prince of Light and Truth, as the Father's honored Agent, will be inaugurated as King of kings and

Lord of lords. And "He must reign until He shall have put all enemies under His feet" the last enemy being death, Adamic death, the death introduced through the deceptive lie of "Satan, who was a murderer from the beginning and abode not in the Truth." (John 8:44)

St. Paul, according to the Greek text, institutes a comparison between Satan's course and that of the Logos. (Phil. 2:6) He there implies that Satan was ambitious and sought to grasp Divine prerogatives, but that the Logos "did not meditate a usurpation to be equal with God," but, on the contrary humbled Himself and made Himself of no reputation. Nevertheless, eventually, in the outworking of the Creator's great Program, the One Who humbled Himself will be the Exalted One, and the one who exalted himself will be abased. The Apostle urges the Church to follow the example of Jesus—"Humble yourselves, therefore, under the mighty hand of God, that He may exalt you in due time." (1 Pet. 5:6)

CHURCH OF THE FIRST-BORNS

As the Only-Begotten of the Father was begotten of the Holy Spirit at the time of His consecration, as an embryo New Creature, and as He was born of the Spirit or perfected as a New Creature in His resurrection, so also the Scriptures indicate must be the course along which the Church is to follow Him. None can be born of the Spirit unless first he has been begotten of the Spirit and quickened of the Spirit. It is through this spirit-begetting, quickening and birth that the "elect of God," called during this Age to a change of nature, are made New Creatures—"members of the Anointed One," the Christ, the Messiah, the Mediator between God and the world, under-kings, under-priests, under-judges, in association with their Lord, the Chief-Priest and Bridegroom.

In the present life the new nature is merely begun, and, as the Apostle declares, we have it as a treasure in earthen vessels in earthly bodies. He again declares that all the spirit-begotten ones are in a conflict in which it is required that they shall prove themselves "overcomers." Their special conflict is with their own flesh. The New Creature, the new will, must mortify the deeds of the flesh, the desires of the flesh. It must "fight a good fight" and demonstrate its loyalty to God and the principles of His righteousness. Otherwise it will not be accounted worthy or "meet for the inheritance of the saints in light." (Col. 1:12)

The First Resurrection, or Chief Resurrection, is to be that of the Church. It must be completed before the world's resurrection can begin. And concerning this First Resurrection it is stipulated that none can have share in it except the blessed and the holy. And for these a reward is promised, that they shall be priests unto God and shall reign with Christ a thousand years on the earth, over the earth, as earth's Spiritual Empire and Ruling Government, to put down sin and to uplift righteousness.

ASCENDED WHERE HE WAS BEFORE COMING TO EARTH

CHANGE NATURE IN RESURRECTION

Baltimore, Md., May 21, 1911 Pastor Russell, of the Brooklyn Tabernacle, preached here twice today to large and attentive audiences. We report one of his discourses from the text, "When He ascended up on high He led a multitude of captives." Eph. 4:8-10.

In this week occurs the anniversary of Jesus' ascension. In one sense of the word our Lord ascended (that is, from human nature and the tomb, to the divine nature and immortality at the time of His resurrection from the dead. He tarried, however, for forty days with the Apostles for their establishment and instruction He on the spirit plane, invisible to them, except when He manifested Himself by appearing miraculously in various forms to convince them that He was no longer deceased, and also that He was no longer confined to human conditions that His resurrection had made Him again a spirit being on the higher plane where He was before He took human nature for the suffering of death for the redemption of humanity.

Not alone by His words, but also by His conduct, our Lord taught His followers. They had not as yet been begotten of the Holy Spirit, and hence could not understand or appreciate spiritual things. They could therefore receive instruction only along natural lines. Jesus was raised from the dead a spirit being, far above angels, principalities and powers. Had He then gone directly to the Father without manifesting Himself to His disciples they would never have been able to understand the truth of the matter.

Hence their lessons were given them largely in pantomime corroborated by the Master's words, explaining that it was necessary that Messiah should die in order that He might redeem the world, and that it was also necessary that He ascend up on high and re-enter upon the spirit plane of existence, which He had before He came into the world in order that from that higher plane of being He might be the more capable of filling the great Office of Prophet, Priest, Mediator and King of the world.

FLESH AND BLOOD CANNOT INHERIT THE KINGDOM OF GOD

Not only, therefore, did Jesus manifest Himself during the forty days, some ten times, in various forms, but finally, at the conclusion of the forty days. He ascended in full view of His disciples. This was one way of telling them of His ascension, that He had gone to the Father, that they need not expect to see Him again as formerly.

We are not, however to suppose for a moment that Jesus ascended a fleshly or human being; we remember, on the contrary, that "flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God", and that "He was put to death in the flesh, but quickened in the spirit", and that thenceforth, as the Apostle declares, "The Lord is that "spirit". 2 Cor. 3:17.

SEEN BY SAUL OF TARSUS

The Apostles were to bear witness to the resurrection of Jesus; but Judas having lost his place and it having been given to St. Paul it was proper that the latter, as well as the rest of the Apostles, should be able to bear witness to Jesus' resurrection. Recounting those who had seen the Lord after His resurrection, in some of the various manifestations, St. Paul says, "Last of all He was seen of me also, as one born before the time."

Jesus appeared to St. Paul in the glorious brightness of His Spirit Being, "shining above the brightness of the sun at noonday." The sight caused injury to the eyes of the beholder. Such manifestation would have been inappropriate and unsatisfactory had the Redeemer so appeared to the eleven during the forty days. How could they have identified the glorious Personage, who shone above the brightness of the sun at noonday, as the Lord Jesus, whom they had known for years? How could they have been enabled to fully identify Him in His many different appearances with His former self their Friend, their Teacher? But to Saul of Tarsus, the revealing in fiery light, above the noonday glare, was very appropriate. It convinced him, in a manner that no human appearance in the flesh could have equaled, that Jesus was no longer a man and that He was no impostor. St. Paul's conversion was instantaneous. "Who art thou, Lord?" he asked. "I am Jesus, whom thou persecutest" still represented in My followers, of whom St. Stephen was one, whom you remember, and others of whom you have been hauling to prison.

It should not cause us to marvel that Jesus ascended as He declared, "up where He was before" (John 6:62). It should not surprise us that the Heavenly Father gave Him back all the glory and honor which He had before He came into the world with added glory. It should not surprise us, therefore, that the Apostle declares that He ascended, in dignity and station, far above angels, principalities and powers, and every name that is named! (Eph. 1:21). On the contrary, it would be both equitable and Godlike that the great Jehovah should highly honor His faithful, Only Begotten Son, the First and the Last, the Beginning and the Ending of the creation of God (Rev. 22:13). Could we for one moment suppose that our great Creator would allow His faithful Son, or any servant, to lay down life in Divine service, and to suffer loss as a consequence of His obedience? Is it not much more rational to believe, as the Scriptures declare, "Him hath God highly exalted"? Phil. 2:9.

THE ASCENDED ONE DESCENDED

Pastor Russell called attention to the Apostle's phraseology in the context that the Ascended One had previously descended, and that the ascending and descending were related as cause and effect. The One who ascended up on high completely filled the highest position in the great Divine Government of the Universe as Head of principalities and powers, angels and men next to the Father. Yet the Apostle warns us that we must identify the glorified One with the One who, in obedience to the Father's will, humbled Himself to come down from the heavenly nature and glory to the earthly station where He, as a Man, humbled Himself unto death, even unto the ignominious death of the cross.

The Apostle calls our attention to these two extremes the extreme of humiliation and the extreme of exaltation, both accomplished in the Son of God, the Logos, The Christ.

If some of us at one time in our reading of the Scriptures supposed that our Lord Jesus ascended to heaven in a physical condition, as a man, we entirely misunderstood the Scriptures He who was rich, as the Logos in glory, preserved His identity when He was made poor for our sakes, made flesh, that He might be our Redeemer. Similarly, that Redeemer preserves His identity now that He has been made rich again now that He has been received up to the Spirit Plane of glory, honor and immortality, the divine nature.

To suppose that Jesus went to heaven a man is to mistake the significance of His title, The Son of Man, which He maintains, as identifying Him with His great redemptive work as one of His many titles. To suppose that Jesus is a human being in heaven would be to suppose that He is still as when in the flesh, “a little lower than the angels”, whereas the Scriptures declare that He has ascended far higher, so that all the angels of God, as well as men, are commanded to worship Him. To suppose Jesus in heaven a human being would be to suppose Him out of all harmony with heavenly spirit conditions and surroundings.

Moreover, are we not told that the Church of Christ will be changed from the human to the spirit condition in the resurrection, and that this change will make the “elect of God” like their Redeemer, so that they may see Him as His is, not as He was that they may see Him in glory, honor and immortality, exaltation, and not as the humiliated One, who was made flesh that He might sacrifice His flesh on man’s behalf? When we so thought we forgot the Scriptural declaration that “flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God”, hence that all those called to be partakers of the divine nature and heavenly Kingdom with their Redeemer and Lord must be made like Him by the power of the First Resurrection.

DIFFICULTIES OF UNBELIEVERS

The Pastor declared that he had found worldly people very skeptical respecting the descent of the Logos, the Son of God, to earthly conditions; but that Christians seem to have more difficulty than the world in comprehending the return, the ascension of Jesus to the spirit plane and its excellent glory. Both points, however, are important, necessary, as the Apostle declares in the context. Whoever is unable to see that the Logos, the glorious Son of the Highest, humbled Himself, divested Himself of the Spirit Nature and took instead human nature, cannot see that Jesus was sinless. And those who cannot recognize that He was holy, harmless, undefiled and separate from the sinner race (Heb. 7:26), cannot believe in the sacrifice of Jesus as being a Ransom-price for Adam, to effect his release and that of his race from condemnation.

Pastor Russell went into considerable detail respecting the manner by which the Logos was transferred from heavenly conditions to earthly conditions, and how His purity, his perfection of organism, His freedom from sin was preserved, notwithstanding the fact that He was born of an earthly mother who was not free from the blemishes of Adam's race. He proffered his hearers free upon application a treatise entitled "The undefiled One," which he believes shows scientifically the process used of God by which the Logos was changed from the higher to the human nature, yet preserved immaculate.

The error of supposing that Jesus is still a man signifies the denial of His word, that He would ascend up where He was before, and the denial of the Apostle's teaching that He has been highly exalted to glory and distinction, the divine nature, instead of the human nature. This error, the Pastor declared, has led to other errors, one of which he cited, namely, the error made by many Christian people of expecting the second coming of Jesus in the flesh as a glorious man and not as a glorious Spirit, Partaker of the divine nature, and entirely dissociated from human nature.

Thinking of the Lord at His second advent as a glorified man, they associate Him with a material throne and an earthly court. This, in turn, leads other Christian people in an opposite direction. Realizing that such an earthly kingdom would be a step backward rather than a step forward, they deny the second coming of Messiah to establish the Kingdom so long promised.

The proper thought is that Jesus, in the flesh, accomplished the work which the Father had given Him to do, when He sacrificed His earthly life. The Father gloriously rewarded Him on the spirit plane. Now He is waiting for the gathering of His Church, His Bride, His Elect. These are to share in His resurrection to the divine nature and to sit with Him in His throne. Then the Kingdom of Messiah, so long promised will begin to bless the world, using as its earthly representatives, visible to men, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and all the Ancient Worthies mentioned in Heb. 11:38-40, through whom the blessing will extend to Natural Israel and to all the families of the earth. Acts 3:19-21.

A MULTITUDE OF CAPTIVES

Our text, in a figurative way, represents the ascension of Jesus from the earthly plane to the heavenly as the triumph of a great Conqueror. Sin had gained ascendancy over Adam and his race, and had brought mankind low to the dust, mentally, morally and physically. Moreover, this victory over man had been gained in a legal manner through one man's disobedience (Rom. 5:12). The Logos divested Himself of His glory on the spirit plane, was made flesh, fulfilled the demands of the Law, proved Himself competent to pay the sinner's Ransom-price, and gave himself a Ransom for all, "to be testified in due time" (I Tim. 2:6). Having finished His sacrificial work He was received again to the spirit nature with exceeding glory and to the right hand of the Majesty on high.

Thus the great conqueror is seen returning to the heavenly state, acclaimed by the Heavenly Host; and following Him far down the centuries, the prophetic view saw, first the Church, the "Royal Priesthood," "His brethren," "His Bride," delivered from the power of sin and death, through the merit of His blood. And these were but the first crop of a following host; they were "a kind of first-fruits to God of His creatures" rescued from sin and from death. Jas. 1:18; Rev. 14:4.

Later on, stretching down for a thousand years beyond the Church's deliverance, the prophetic pen foretells countless hosts of every nation, people, kindred and tongue, to be delivered from the power of sin and death through the merit of Him who died, "the Just for the unjust." Now the Savior of the Church, His Bride, He will shortly be the Savior of the world, its Great King, Great Teacher, Great Priest, Great Mediator.

Then will come the glorious consummation, when all who will have refused Divine grace shall have been destroyed in the Second Death then shall be heard every creature in heaven and on earth and under the earth saying, "Glory to God in the Highest." Thenceforth there shall be no more crying nor dying, for all the former things of sin and death shall have passed away.

TIMES OF RESTITUTION, WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN

At our Lord's First Advent the "acceptable time" began the time when God, having accepted the sacrifice of Christ Jesus, became willing through Him to accept the sacrifices of all who desire to become His disciples to take up their cross and follow Him through evil report and good report even unto death. The entire Gospel Age antitypes Israel's Day of Atonement, and the sacrifices of our Lord and the Church, His Body, are the "better sacrifices," foreshadowed by the bullock and the goat offered typically by the Jews. Heb. 9:19-23.

This is the acceptable year of the Lord which Jesus declared (Isa. 61:2; Luke 4:19), God's faithful people of this acceptable day are glad to be invited to "present their bodies living sacrifices, holy and acceptable unto God" (Rom. 12:1). In the end of this acceptable day will come the end of all opportunity to thus sacrifice the human nature and become joint-heirs with Christ and partakers of the heavenly nature.

Then will be introduced a new period styled, in the Scriptures, “Times (or Years) of Restitution.” The acceptable day for the Church’s sacrifice has lasted for nearly nineteen centuries. And we know how long the “times of Restitution” will last a thousand years. Rev. 20:4.

St. Peter tells us just when these “Restitution Times” will begin. They did not begin in his day. They have not begun yet. They will begin as a result of the Second Advent of Jesus, the Messiah, and the establishment of His Kingdom of righteousness. “Times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord and He shall send Jesus Christ, as before was preached unto you, whom the heavens must retain until the Times of Restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began.”

“For Moses verily said unto the fathers, A Prophet like unto me (of whom I am but a type or figure) shall the Lord your God raise up unto you from amongst your brethren, Him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever He shall speak unto you. And it shall come to pass that the soul that will not obey that Prophet shall be destroyed from amongst the people (Acts 3:19-23) in the Second Death.

FALSE CONCEPTS OF THE DIVINE WISDOM

Pastor Russell gave two public addresses here today, one of which we report. Many of Denver’s prominent religious people were conspicuous in the large audience. Profound impressions were undoubtedly made. Speaking from the text, “Holy, holy, holy Lord God Almighty, the whole earth shall be filled with Thy glory” (Rev. 4:8) the speaker said:

Shakespeare tells of some “Damned by faint praise” We grasp his statement as implying that a faint praise is more injurious than silence. But as we look to ourselves and the remainder of the reputed four hundred millions of Christendom and their united tribute of praise to the Almighty Creator we are forced to admit that with many He is given “faint praise,” while the vast majority positively blaspheme the Holy Name by most atrocious misrepresentations of the Divine character, which they claim to be His own revelation of a demoniacal plot for the eternal torture, in one way or another, of the thousands of millions brought into existence by His power and without their own consent.

There may be said to be three different theories prevalent in Christendom on the subject. They all have zealous, earnest, honest advocates. Each contradicts the other. Each claims to love God and to seek to serve and honor Him. Evidently, two at least of the three are wrong. It is our conviction that all three are in error. We believe that all three of them have fragments of the truth around which have crystallized distorting, slanderous, blasphemous errors. The upholders of these theories are so blinded and bewildered that they fail to discern that their praise and worship toward the Creator are defiled and converted into slanders and calumnies and blasphemies by their incrustations of falsehood.

THREE GENERAL VIEWS

All three of these view declare that the almighty, with full power to have done otherwise, so created humanity that a child once born into the world can never die he must live somewhere unceasingly either in pain or in pleasure. By what authority any make these declarations we have never ascertained.

Surely it is a gross slander upon a God of infinite Justice, Wisdom, Love and Power to claim that He ever entrusted to poor, fallen, human parents the power to bring into existence sin-blighted and sin-disposed human creatures such as we see our race to be, and then made the happiness of their eternity dependent upon a superhuman resistance of the evils of their environment and of their depraved constitutions! This blasphemy against the Holy Name is common to nearly every creed of Christendom.

Our Catholic friends tell us that by Divine arrangement terrible purgatorial experiences await practically every member of our race, in the hope that, if rightly exercised thereby, after centuries of torture, and eternity of bliss will be gained. Is not this also a blasphemy against the Holy Name? Who can deny it? Who would not shudder to have such an awful crime of evil design charged against himself or against his earthly parents? Who that is begotten of the Holy Spirit is not pained event to think of such a charge being made against his Heavenly Father, "the God of all grace"? Surely such a theory is blasphemous, horrible.

But we have grown so accustomed to this blasphemy that it fails to prick the majority to the heart as it should. With all of our development of human sympathy and care for the sick and even for our wounded enemies on the battlefield, and with our precautions of modern times against criminal negligence which might lead to the destruction of human life by conflagration with all of our fire apparatus and benevolent laws for the protection of the very humblest of our race, we have calmly and without protest charged against our great Creator, and indorsed it as our belief, either publicly or tacitly, that He would look upon a holocaust of millions with no fire brigade for their relief. Is not this blasphemy of the Holy Name?

WORSE AND WORSE PREDESTINATED

Is it any wonder that in early life our childish hearts were filled with fear rather than with love toward our Creator and toward His Revelation, the Bible? Is it any wonder that it required all kinds of fighting with our common sense to believe, as we were taught we should, that God lovingly predestinated that all the families of the earth should suffer eternally except a saintly handful because He was pleased to have it so! because He foreordained that it must be so! because He made a great place called hell before He made the earth, and made it large enough to hold the entire human family! because He created the fire-proof demons to inflict torture upon the poor unfortunates who were born in sin, shapen in iniquity, in sin conceived by their mothers, and many of them left without an opportunity of hearing of the “only name whereby they must be saved” and that He wisely and with devilish intention laid up fuel enough to last to all eternity for the torture of His helpless creatures!

And are not such evil thoughts and presentations respecting our great Creator blasphemy? If not, pray tell me what would be blasphemy? Most assuredly I can think of nothing that could possibly enter the human mind or pass the human lips more blasphemous than this doctrine. And yet those who bow down before this creed number some of the ablest and most intelligent, most enlightened and most benevolent of our depraved, fallen race. How is this? How comes it that we have been so blinded as respects our own conduct and misbelief? The Scriptures Answer—that Satan has deceived us: he has put light for darkness and darkness for light.

STILL ANOTHER BLASPHEMY

A considerable portion of thinking and Christian people will join with us in saying, Ah! surely Brother Calvin grievously erred and grievously misrepresented the God of Love when he taught the doctrine of the predestination of the wicked to eternal torture. Ah! say these Christian friends, our hearts rebel against that theory of Divine predestination. We claim that the Almighty is Love itself that He is sympathetic with His creatures and is using every effort to avert the great calamity of eternal torture.

Ah! my friends, is not this still another form of blasphemy? If some of us blasphemed the Holy Name in representing our Heavenly Father as merciless, loveless, have we not in another way blasphemed that same Holy Name in declaring that He lacks the power and the wisdom to do the good which His loving heart would prompt? Do we worship a stupid and impotent God, one who blundered in the creation of our race, and who, for six thousand years, has been striving to rectify that error and all the while has been allowing thousands of millions of His creatures whom He loves to go down to an eternity of torture? Alas! it would be nearly as easy to worship an all-powerful and loveless God as to worship an all-loving but unwise and impotent God who foolishly, sinfully, brought thousands of millions of intelligent beings into existence only to cause them to suffer an eternity of agony through His incompetence.

EARTH FULL OF GOD'S GLORY

Thank God! dear friends, for the glorious day in which we are living, with its electric light and other evidences that we are in the dawning of a New Age. Thank God! that in this day the electric lamp of truth is showing up the mistakes of these blasphemous errors which have so defiled all the precious truths of God's Book for years, for centuries. Thank God that our Bible is becoming a new Book to those whose eyes of understanding are opening to the lengths and breadths and heights and depths of the love of God which it declares!

Now we are seeing that "the wages of sin is death" not eternal torment not purgatory. Now we are seeing the Jesus met this death penalty as the Redeemer of our race from the power of the tomb. Now we are seeing that the salvation that God has promised will be brought to us at the second coming of Jesus and the establishment of His Mediatorial Kingdom for the blessing of all the families of the earth! Now we are seeing that the salvation provided is a resurrection of the dead not merely an awakening from the tomb, but a complete uplift out of sin and degradation to the full perfection of human nature in the earthly likeness of the Creator.

Now we are seeing that this great blessing has been set apart by the Almighty as the work of the great Sabbath Day of a thousand years, in which "the last enemy to be destroyed is death." Now we are seeing that the whole earth is to be reclaimed from the curse and made to blossom as Eden that the place of Jehovah's feet, His footstool, will be made glorious and in every way happyfying to all the willing and obedient, whom the great Messiah shall recover fully from sin and death. Now we are seeing that the intelligent rejectors of Divine Grace will not be tormented, but, as it is written, "All the wicked will God destroy."

THE CHURCH BEING SELECTED

Now we see that free grace and the glorious opportunity to human restitution will be ushered in with the Kingdom, but that preceding that glorious epoch God is making a selection of a saintly class to be the Bride of Christ—"the Lamb's Wife." This explains why the darkness has been so long permitted because God would test the "elect" by obliging them to walk by faith and not by sight He would test them by obliging them to endure hardship as good soldiers He would test them by requiring that they shall suffer for righteousness' sake and thus manifest their love of righteousness to a remarkable degree. Now we see that the faithful of these are to experience a change from earthly to heavenly conditions, in the First Resurrection, and that this change has its beginning in the Divine begetting of the Holy Spirit. Now we see that these, with the Redeemer, will constitute the Kingdom class which, invisible to men, will bind Satan for a thousand years and supplant his reign of darkness and sin by a reign of light and righteousness, helpful and uplifting to mankind.

“HOLY, HOLY, HOLY LORD GOD”

We come now to our text: It declares that the time is coming when the whole earth shall be full of God’s glory. Ah, glorious Day! Then the shadows of ignorance, superstition, misunderstanding and misrepresentation in respect to the Divine character will all flee before the light of the knowledge of the glory of God the appreciation of the Divine character as manifested in the Divine Plan for human salvation! Could this scripture ever be fulfilled, could the Divine character ever be appreciated by intelligent, honest, just and loving hearts, if in any corner of the Universe there were such orgies and tortures of His creatures as the creeds of the Darker Ages have set forth? Surely not! On the contrary, in this glorious Day will be fulfilled the scriptural prediction: “All in heaven and in earth and under the earth (everywhere) heard I saying, praise, glory, honor, dominion and might be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb forever!”

As we emerge from the darkness and praise the Lord in thought and word and deed, we thus “show forth the praises of Him who has called us out of darkness into His marvelous light.”

“INTO THE LIBERTY OF SONS OF GOD”

The Apostle Paul (Rom. 8:21) declares that the groaning creation shall be delivered from its bondage of corruption into the liberty of the Sons of God. The meaning of this is clear. The corruption came upon all through Adam; the deliverance from that corruption is to come to all through the second Adam. All are to be delivered from such bondage, however they may use the deliverance and the privileges of liberty. Those who use them rightly will come into harmony with the Redeemer and the Heavenly Kingdom and will be blessed eventually with the eternal life. Those who reject these liberties after they come to understand fully, and comprehend their lengths and breadths, will thus be choosing for themselves the Second Death.

The liberty of the Sons of God their freedom from corruption, death, is here distinctly shown. The angels are not subject to, not bound by, such corruption, such dying conditions. They, as sons of God, are free from corruption, from death. Adam in his original perfection was a son of God, as the Scriptures declare (Luke 3:38), but he lost his sonship for himself and for all of his race and received instead degradation and bondage to corruption. The hope for Adam and for his race, then, in Christ, is deliverance from the power of sin and death into the liberty proper to them as sons of God. The entire reign of Christ on the earth, as the Scriptures show us, will be devoted to this work of setting free the human family from the various bondages of ignorance, superstition, weakness, heredity, and bringing back all who will, by restitution processes, to the original image and likeness of God, and making them again human sons of God like unto Father Adam before he sinned, plus a large and valuable experience gained during the 6,000 years of the fall, and also through the 1,000 years of the raising up the Restitution Age, the Resurrection Age. Acts 3:19-21.

THE LIGHT SHINING MORE AND MORE

How glad we are that in this dawning time of the New Dispensation the light is shining upon the Divine Word as well as throughout the realm of nature! How glad we are that we no longer must think of the Church alone as the subject of salvation and the world as a whole the subject of condemnation and eternal torture! How just, how reasonable, how loving are the Divine arrangements! To see these things should draw our hearts near to the Lord in appreciative love, and we should worship with the greater devotion One whom we thus see worthy of praise and adoration.

We are not, however, to expect the world to be able to realize these things; it is not the Divine intention that they should grasp the Plan, as the Master said to the faithful disciple of old and still says to us—" To you it is given to know the mystery of the Kingdom of God, but to outsiders all these things are spoken in parables and dark sayings, that hearing they might hear and not understand." They will both hear and understand in due time, but now is the time for the calling out of the elect, "the perfecting of the saints," etc.

Let us whose ears and eyes have been blessed of the Lord respond with all gratitude and humility not merely with outward praise of our lips, but also with our hearts let us confess His loving kindness and tender mercy, and let this appreciation more and more sanctify our hearts and separate us from the world, its aims its selfishness, and let us fight a good fight against sin, especially in our own mortal bodies, because even though the imperfections of the flesh be not counted against this New Creation, begotten of the Spirit, nevertheless the fact that we possess the Spirit of the Lord should lead us more and more to desire that perfection which is most pleasing and acceptable to Him, and to strive, therefore, to the extent of our ability, not trusting to the attainment of that perfection, but relying upon the merit of that great Atonement Sacrifice.

LORD, WHO HATH BELIEVED OUR REPORT

8:00 P. M. Discourse by Brother Russell At Hackley Hall

The text that is in my mind for this occasion is found in the prophecy of Isaiah: "Lord, who hath believed our report, and unto whom is the arm of Jehovah revealed? Isa. 53:1

We might apply this text in some degree to the meeting this afternoon. We delivered a report. The word 'report' in this text signifies message, proclamation. For who hath believed the message proclamation of truth? Who has discerned the arm, the power of the Lord, as revealed in the Gospel, and God's great provision for man's needs? In the audience of somewhere near a thousand people, how many, we wonder, had a hearing ear, that they could hear? How many understood something of the length and the breadth and the height and the depth of the love of God, which passes all understanding? We might perhaps have been inclined to think, "How could anyone do otherwise than be impressed by the simplicity of God's message, and yet we remember that the Scriptures show us, and the facts prove to us that it has been so during the eighteen hundred years since the message of the Lord has been given, that it has been proclaimed here and there, and very few have believed the report. Look out all over the world today and see how few there are who believe the message of God in respect to his great plan. The great majority seem to be blinded by the adversary, the God of this world who blinds the minds of those who believe him not, lest the light of the goodness of God should shine into their hearts. The apostle's words imply that the great adversary is the one who is especially interested in beclouding the mind, and that God's truth is the special thing intended to enlighten the mind, and that not everybody is in condition of mind to be profited by this great light that would shine forth.

The question asked by the prophet implies that only a few would hear the report, would hear the message, would hear the Gospel, only a few would give heed to it. When we view the matter in the light of the eighteen centuries, and then think of how little faith there is today, we can well understand God's standpoint in speaking through the prophet and saying, "Who is it that has believed?" Practically nobody. We indeed see great churches, and sometimes fine buildings, and sometimes large congregations and yet if we would inquire for the faith once delivered to the Saints, if we inquire for an intelligent understanding of God's great plan, how few would you find who have that understanding, who have delivered the message, who have accepted it, and who are walking in the footsteps of Jesus.

Some might say to us, "Brother Russell that is a wrong view, why everybody believes the report. Here in this city, it is named after a saint, and there are other cities along the coast all named after saints practically, and all through the land are churches of various denominations, and they have all believed Jesus, they have all believed the report." But we cannot so think; we must agree with the Lord's message through the prophet to the effect that a very few have believed the message. Quite a good many have believed the mixed messages that have gone forth; the message, for instance, of our Catholic friends that if they belong to the Catholic church they will be pulled through purgatory and finally get to heaven. A considerable number believe that in some measure, but is that the message once delivered to the saints? We say not. It has a little of it, but very little not enough to call it good tidings of great joy. Then some others have believed our Presbyterian friends, that God is electing some, and they hope they belong to the elected company. But is that the full message, or is it only a little of the message? Surely the latter. It is only a little of the message and not the report of God's grace toward all mankind, and not merely toward the church. Who hath believed the message that God sent?

Then our Baptist friends also limit the matter, saying that it is by election, and then additionally it is by the water route after you have the election the election and the water route both. There are dear, good friends amongst the Baptists, but very few of them believe the message.

But we are not wishing to lay too much stress on these various features of the divine plan. Our thought would be that God very graciously has a message that even the poor and the ignorant in considerable degree can accept and lay hold on. Who hath believed the report not doctrinally, as theologians, but in a general way the message that all mankind have heard at least all of the civilized lands that had an opportunity of hearing the message that God is willing to forgive our sins, God is willing to receive us as his children, that God has made a way and he invites us to walk in it? Now put it in the very simplest form, an how many have believe that? Oh, says someone, "Why a great many believe that." I doubt it. Remember the Scriptures say, "With the heart man believes." What is it to believe this message of the narrow way, and the privilege of reconciliation with God, with the heart? I think that we will all agree that to believe that message with the heart would mean that it would thoroughly enter into us that we would believe it with all our minds and all our strength, to be thoroughly convinced by it, to have no doubt about it. If they believed the message of God's love and favor, and of reconciliation to him, and of becoming joint-heirs with Christ in the heavenly kingdom, would they not forsake everything that they might take up with that message? Can you imagine anybody in the world really believing that God would sentence our race to death not to put the worst construction on the sentence, but simply put it as the Bible does and that he did it justly, and then that he had also made a provision in Christ, our Lord, whereby we might return to his love and favor, and that he would receive us again as children, forgive all our trespasses, all our sins that are past and bring us back right into his own favor, and be our Father and we should be his children, and he would take care of all our interests, and all things would work together for good to us, and if we had passed through certain trials we should have his assistance, then by and by in only a little while, a few short years, he would take us to himself in the heavenly kingdom and make us associates with our Lord Jesus Christ on the spiritual plane who could believe this with the heart and not be exercised by it? Who could possibly say, "I do not care for that, I really believe it is so, but I do not think it worthy of any of my attention?" I think that very few would really believe that message, even in the very simplest form in which we could put it in the form that all people who have any knowledge whatever of the Gospel could understand it, even if they had a certain admixture of error even allowing for all of these errors of doctrine being mixed with the matter, to just know this simple fact that God is willing to receive us back as his children, to forgive us our sins, and care for us, and bring off eventually conquerors with Jesus whoever believes that with the heart would, I think, be sure to accept the terms, because they are so very favorable. Then the fact that so very few people do give their hearts to the Lord, or give their hearts to Jesus, and do give up all the little they have, proves that only a few believe. Others may believe with the head merely, a sort of general assent I think that Jesus died; I believe he was a good man; or, I believe he was the Lord or whatever it might be; but it is merely a head acceptance, and it does not enter into their hearts. With the heart man believeth unto salvation. That is the kind of believing that counts for something. When it goes down into their hearts, it goes right down into their hands also, and they want to use their hands for the Lord; it goes down into their feet, and they want to use their feet for the Lord; it goes down into their pocketbooks, and they want to use that for the Lord. And so it effects anything and everything they have; it affects all the affairs of life.

Now I am addressing those especially this evening who believe, who have made consecration, those who with the heart have believed. How precious is our possession, dear brothers and sisters? How precious is the Lord to us to us who believe with the heart he is precious. All the teachings of the Lord's great plan are revealed to this class. How favored we are that by God's grace we have heard, and that our hearts have been responsive, and that we have accepted the great proposition of the Lord to become his children! Now is the acceptable time in which God is willing to accept our little offering, and to let us count it in as a part of Jesus' sacrifice, that we may be sharers with him in the suffering of this present time in order that we may also be sharers with him in the glory that shall follow.

So I rejoice with you that we have heard the report, that we have heard the message, that to us the arm of the Lord, the power of the Lord, has been revealed not to the world; they do not know the power of God. You and I are only learning about it; we have only begun to see the arm of the Lord. The arm, you know, in symbol stands for power. God has revealed the power. Now the world has not seen the power, nor has the world seen the arm of the Lord. You and I see that the Lord is the arm that our heavenly Father puts down to grasp the poor human family and to lift it up. At one time we saw in a measure this matter, and saw that Jesus was the arm of Jehovah, but we thought he was only going to lift up the saintly people; and that was good; that was a glorious message; but now we have seen further, and we have believed further, and the message has gone out further, that the arm of Jehovah not merely will lift up the saintly few, but that saintly few will become a part of the arm of Jehovah, so to speak, and that arm of Jehovah shall during the thousand years of Christ's reign bless mankind and lift them up.

Now at the close of this little session of today our hearts, I trust, are going out to the Lord with gratitude for all the privileges we have enjoyed in connection with the service. Some of you here have been laboring to make a success of the meeting today, and I praise God on your behalf and rejoice with you that you had such a very enjoyable experience. You worked hard I am sure to bring such results for a weekly afternoon. And those of us who will go farther on will have you kindly in our remembrance as some who have been faithful to your opportunities. As I looked at the audience today it seemed to me I saw some that looked as though they were saintly people, and who had already believed God's report respecting his Son, and now let us hope they saw and heard a little more clearly today, and that henceforth they may, by reason of what they have heard be brought into further grace and nearer to the Lord. And those of you who remain here what an opportunity you will have to continue to witness of the Lord! And not merely witness by tongue, but remember there is one way in which we are all witnesses, whether we wish to be or not, and that is by our daily life our conduct, our work, our actions. Are we, then, living epistles of the Lord, known and read of all men? If so, as the apostle says, Let us walk circumspectly, carefully, looking around, guarding our thoughts and words and deeds, showing forth the praises of him who hath called us out of darkness into this marvelous light, commending the truth to others by the consistency of our lives and our faithfulness to the principles of righteousness. This is one of the witnesses we can all surely give, and one that I trust the dear friends residing here will find it their privilege to give. And others, knowing that you are advocating these things, and having heard what a high standard we believe God has established, namely a standard of sainthood, no doubt the people of this city will look at you still more careful with examination than ever before. They will say, "These are some of those who claim that only the saints at the present time are going to have everlasting glory, and heaven. I wonder if he is a saint; I wonder is she a saint." And so you will be put on exhibition, so to speak; you will be under scrutiny. How carefully then will you walk before the Lord? How careful will you be to show forth the praise of the great King? Then some of you may have other opportunities in your meetings to present the truth. How wise you should be as ambassadors for God to present it as of the Lord Jesus Christ. Remember what Jesus said on this subject, "Be ye wise as serpents and harmless as doves." As one of our good German sisters once expressed it a very forcible way, bringing it down to some language of our day, "The Lord says we should be as wise as snakes and harmless as pigeons." That gives the thought, dear friends. How wisely we want to use our opportunities! We are all, I believe, learning more and more everyday that wisdom is to be exercised in the presentation of the Lord's Word. I presume that every one of us who is a child of the Lord, and somewhat experienced in the truth, and who has endeavored to present it to others, has made certain mistakes, being too harsh, perhaps, or presenting the truth in a too rigid form, not sufficiently kindly in manner, with kindly words, and with consideration for others. We are to remember that those who catch fish never do so by beating the water with the fish rod; that drives the fish away. And so if we would be wise in this, fishers of men, it behooves us to consider how carefully we are to deal with those who are giving some attention to the truth., The truth is to be the bait, and we are to dangle the truth before them so as not to do them injury, not to do them harm, but to bless them and get them into the Gospel net, and to get them into better and fuller relationship to the Lord.

So then, my parting word to the dear friends of Santa Cruz is that we pray God for a continuance of his blessing, and we rejoice with you that we have had a blessing so far, that your efforts to praise the Lord have been blessed so far, and we ask on your behalf continued and increasing wisdom to show forth his praise, and to help those with whom we come in contact.

GOD IN THE HOME, THE WORLD'S NEED

Pastor C. T. Russell delivered two addresses here today to crowded and attentive audiences. We report one on "God in the Home," from the text, "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord" (Josh. 24:15). The Pastor Said:

Do not understand me to teach that the world's opportunity for life everlasting or death everlasting is now. "God hath appointed a day in which He will judge the world," grant the world a judgment or trial or test. That great day is future. It is the Day of Christ, a thousand years long. It will be a glorious opportunity. Present right doing and right thinking, or wrong doing and wrong thinking, will have much to do with the condition of every man and woman at that time. He or she will enter upon that Day of blessing and opportunity either from a higher or a lower standpoint proportionately as he or she has acted wisely and conscientiously in the present time.

But nothing that the world can do can interfere with God's great proposition, that a full opportunity for life or death eternal shall then come to every member of the race because Christ died for the ungodly. The only class to whom present life means life or death eternal is the Church. And by the Church I mean not church attendants nor outward professors, but those who have entered into a covenant with God through Christ and who have been made partakers of the Holy Spirit, tasting of the good Word of God and the powers of the Age to come. If these should fall away, the Apostle forewarns us, it would be impossible to renew them again unto repentance. And there will be no hope for them with the world, in the world's trial Day, because they have already enjoyed their share of the merit of Christ's death.

When, therefore, I speak of God and the home I am not having in mind a family composed exclusively of saints, who daily and hourly are following their great Redeemer's footsteps in self-denial, in sacrifice, in the "narrow way" which leads to "glory, honor and immortality" and association with the Redeemer in His glorious Kingdom which is to bless the world for a thousand years.

My thought is that the Bible teaches that there are many people of the world, who are reverential, kind, gentle and just to a very considerable degree, who are not saints; who have not presented their bodies living sacrifices to God; who are not, therefore, members of that exclusive "little flock" to whom it is the Father's good pleasure to give the Kingdom in joint-heirship with their Lord and Redeemer and Head. To this latter class our Master evidently referred when He said to His footstep followers, "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven." Matt. 5:16.

To live righteously, soberly and godly in this present world to the extent of one's ability is what everyone should do no less. To live a life of sacrifice to lay down our lives for the brethren, for the truth, in the service of the Lord, is another matter which justice does not require and which the Bible nowhere enjoins upon mankind. It is pointed out as a privilege to those who desire it, and glory, honor and immortality on the spirit plane is the reward attached to this invitation or High Calling. It is the selection of this special class of consecrated ones that is the particular order of the divine program at the present time.

SAINT AND SINNER INTERESTED

Having clearly defined what we do not mean to teach, let me now assert that, nevertheless, every sensible man and woman, saintly or not, must feel a deep interest in the welfare and moral progress of the human family, of which he forms a part. All, therefore, should rejoice in every movement and endeavor working to even temporary enlightenment, blessing and uplift amongst mankind. The many benevolent institutions of the civilized world attest this general thought. My only conflict with these humanitarian efforts is that they do not approach the subject of human betterment from what I consider to be the right standpoint. With nearly all of these efforts, more or less distinctly stated, are those God-dishonoring and love-opposing intimations of an alternative of torment, either purgatorial or eternal. This is the great blight which has worked and is working incalculable harm driving intelligent minds into opposition to the true God and the Bible, which is the revelation of His Wisdom, Justice, Love and Power.

The Bible freely tells us that many features of the Divine Plan are now hidden in mystery, but the last book of the Bible, which prophetically pictures the future, assures us that in God's due time "The mystery shall be finished, which He hath declared to His servants, the prophets" (Rev. 10:7). The same book assures us that in God's due time, when the mystery is cleared, "All nations shall come and worship before Thee, for Thy righteous acts have been made manifest" (Rev. 15:4). We are now living in the time when the "mystery" is ending and the righteous dealings of God, from the Scriptural standpoint, may be clearly seen.

But these revelations are not meant for the world in general now, but merely for "the elect," the "sanctified in Christ Jesus." "To you it is given to know the mysteries," to outsiders these things are spoken in parables and dark sayings (Matt. 13:11-13). But not until the elect shall be glorified and the Messianic Kingdom established will the “mystery” be made fully known to the world and every knee bow and every tongue confess. Hence, only those of a contrite heart may now see, now understand, the real character of God, His real purposes toward man, etc. Thus our Lord declares, “This is life eternal that they should know Thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom Thou hast sent.” John 17:3.

In a darker day than ours the theory, “to doubt is to be damned,” held such a power over many that they dared not use their reason. And thus a certain reverence for God was maintained in many homes a reverence, however, which surely would not be as highly appreciated by the Creator nor have as deep an influence upon the creature as would a faith moved by love and an intelligent appreciation of the Divine character, based upon an understanding of the Divine Plan of the Ages.

AN INUNDATION OF UNBELIEF

In our day the shackles of ignorance and superstition are breaking. Men, women and children are beginning to think for themselves. They no longer believe the fairy tales of other days; the dreadful hobgoblins and nightmares of the Dark Ages respecting purgatory and eternal torture are doubted by all, and by the great mass totally disbelieved. What have they now to attach them to the Almighty, since they have never been taught the love of God the lengths and breadths and heights and depths passing all human understanding? This is the world’s great need to know God as He really is, a Father, a Friend, a God of Love! And to thus know Him the people need to be taught how seriously they were mistaught in the past along the lines of hell and purgatory.

How could they ever truly love and worship a God of injustice and of hate One inferior to themselves One who knew, foreordained and prepared for their torture, before they were born? They must see that these things, taught by the creeds of the Dark Ages, are wholly at variance with the Bible, else they will never come back to the Bible nor be able to see its teachings in their true light. They must be taught that the sin and death, sorrow and trouble all around us are the wage or penalty of father Adam’s disobedience. They must learn that God proposes a blessing and uplifting which will be as world-wide as is the curse. They must learn that the foundation for this work was effected by the death of Jesus, the Just for the unjust. They must learn that God is now selecting a saintly class to be associates with the Redeemer in the work of uplifting and blessing Adam and his race; and that each will be held responsible and receive stripes in proportion to his knowledge and willful disobedience; and that the persistently rebellious will be destroyed “like natural brute beasts,” in the Second Death.

I HAVE LOST MY GOD

Not long since, in conversation with a young lady, she said with great concern, "I fear that I have lost my God." As a child of religious parents she had had helpful influences in her home, but in school she had come in contact with the general spirit of skepticism which, instead of repudiating the Bible, as did Ingersoll, Paine and Voltaire, merely smiles at any reference to a Divine revelation, a faith in God and a respect for His will. These teachers are as honest, we believe, as were Ingersoll, Paine and Voltaire; nor can we deny that they have the same right to their disbelief that we claim for our belief. We can, however, say with all sincerity that it is a great pity that the learned men of Christendom are nearly all infidels, in the sense of not believing in the Bible as a Divine revelation.

Many of them even deny that there is a personal God and ascribe everything to a great Nothing, which they designate Nature-god. Is it surprising, in view of the fact that these teachings are being promulgated in the universities and colleges and theological seminaries, in the high schools, and even to some extent in the common schools is it any wonder that the rising generation is losing its God? If it even be claimed that a bad thing is better lost than kept, we must dissent from their course. We must claim that the misconception of God can be destroyed only by the introduction to the heart and mind of the true God, whose glorious attributes of Justice, Wisdom, Love and Power will take the place of the malevolent misconceptions of the Dark Ages.

AWAKENED PARENTAL RESPONSIBILITY

It is high time that parents realize the true situation it is almost too late now. The seeds of unbelief, already sown in the minds of the rising generation, are being watered continually and are growing. All who love their families, all who love mankind in general, should awaken to the fact that a world that has lost its God must of necessity be an unhappy world. Platonic philosophy may for a time serve the purposes of the few, but surely cannot serve the masses of our race. A godless world will ere long mean a discontented world, an unhappy world and, by and by, a world of anarchy and strife. This is what our world-wide education is leading to. Few of our race can stand an education which recognizes no God, no revelation of Him, no responsibility to Him, and no hope of a future life which will be affected by the conduct of the present.

GOD IN THE HOME

We are not pleading for cant and rant. We are urging that in every home God be recognized to the extent of the opportunities and influence we enjoy. Parents have a special responsibility. Every father, in particular, as the head of his family, should recognize the Almighty Creator, and hold Him up to his family—"God First!" We need not urge upon God's consecrated people the privileges of prayer and the blessed influence which comes through prayer to the younger members of the family. This is one way of putting "God First." "In all thy ways acknowledge Him," or, as Joshua said: "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord."

Let us now step into your home and measure things there by the Golden Rule. As husbands, how do you treat your wives? As wives, how do you treat your husbands? Can you apply the Golden Rule to your words, to your conduct, to your demands of each other? Or do you act meanly, selfishly, taking advantage of each other, to the limit that the other will forbear? Do you deal with your children according to the lines of the Golden Rule? Are you an ideal parent, according to your own advanced standard of what a parent's duty should be to his children?

Do you remember that you have a responsibility for their training, a responsibility so far as your circumstances will permit, for their environment and happiness and education and general preparation for usefulness in life? Or are you indifferent to their interests, neglectful of your responsibilities? Do you recognize that your children have certain rights and that these increase as they near maturity, or are you forgetful of these, disposed to keep the children under the restraints of childhood, souring their dispositions and making them unhappy, until they resent the injustice and a family quarrel results?

As children, are you thoughtful of your parents, their welfare, their wishes, their happiness, as you would like your children to be thoughtful of yours? Do you remember the hours and weeks of feebleness and sickness and toil which you cost them in your infancy, and are you seeking to repay those kindnesses and seeking to make their last days the happiest of their lives? Are you observing the Golden Rule toward your parents?

How is it in your relationship to your brothers and sisters? When they borrow your things without leave, do you retaliate by borrowing theirs without leave, and thus keep up a continual fret and vexation of spirit in the family? Or do you practice the Golden Rule of justice and do nothing to your brother and sister, or their belongings, that you would not wish them to do to you or your things?

LOVE WORKETH NO ILL

All of the Lord's people are to love Him and the brethren; yea, even their enemies. However, let us now stop short of love and merely consider what the simple justice of the Golden Rule would imply in our conduct. How do our daily lives square with this Golden Rule of absolute justice, omitting love entirely?

If you are an employer, do you treat your employee in harmony with this rule and do unto him as you would have him do unto you, if your positions were reversed? If you are an employee, inquire of yourself, "Do I treat my employer and his business as I would have him treat me and my business, if our relationship were reversed?" Do you treat your butcher, your baker, your grocer, etc., as you would like to have them treat you, if your positions were reversed? Are you polite to them and not inclined to give them unnecessary trouble? Do you pay them promptly? Or if you are the tradesman, do you treat your customers as you would wish to have them treat you, if conditions were reversed? Do you charge them a reasonable price only? Do you give them proper weight and measure? Do you properly represent your goods to them, as you would have them represented to you? Are you a good neighbor? Do you see to it that your children are not a nuisance to others; that your chickens are not permitted to damage your neighbor's garden; that your dog is not a ferocious one, and that his bark does not keep the neighborhood awake? In a word, do you treat your neighbor justly, along the lines of the Golden Rule, doing unto him only as you would wish him to do to you?

He who is faithful in little things will be faithful in the greater ones. He who practices the Golden Rule during the six days of his contact with business will surely be faithful on the seventh, but faithfulness to the Golden Rule on the one day only will never win Divine approval.

DIVINE OMNISCIENCE AND ALMIGHTY POWER

"Whither Shall I Go From Thy Spirit! Or Wither Shall I Flee From Thy Presence! If I Ascend Up Into Heaven" Psa. 139:7, 8

Brooklyn, N. Y. -Pastor Russell took for his text the words of the Prophet David, "Whither shall I flee from Thy Presence? If I ascend up into heaven, Thou art there; if I make my bed in hell, behold, Thou art there." (Psa. 139:7,8). He said:

We are living in a day when money, pleasure and pain seem to be the assets of the masses. The Evolution theory and Higher Criticism of the Bible have fostered unbelief to such an extent that everything intangible is doubted. Beginning with the college professor and the majority of the educated ministers, this skepticism has embraced the wealthy, who are satiated with the blessings of prosperity. To these heaven and heavenly things seem vagaries as compared with present enjoyments and hopes. Not for a long time have these believed in and feared eternal torment. And their present attitude is one of doubt respecting everything connected with the Bible. They well know that outside of the Bible there is nothing but guesswork, and they prefer their own guesses to those of other people. Very many of them speak candidly and tell that they are agnostics, that they are uncertain and would like to be informed respecting the future.

THE WORLD'S NEED A GOD

The effect of all this loss of faith in an Almighty God is seen on every hand and is felt by many. One of the consequences is that the religious element of man's nature is becoming numb and the masses, rich and poor, are seeking a substitute in pleasure; as the Apostle's words foretold, they are "lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God." Additionally, many of the wealthy carry on a kind of brigandage along commercial lines. Desirous of imitating them, but unable so to do, others are filling the world with violence to an extent that is alarming to everybody. Were it not for our elaborate and costly police protection life and property would be far less secure in civilized lands than amongst the heathen. With all the protection afforded by telephone, telegraph, police, etc., our rulers and officials tell us that they are often bewildered in their attempts to preserve law and order.

Many learned men believe that there is no other God than Nature; and many of the unlearned are following their lead. They reason that Nature served them as both father and mother; that Nature is pitiless, unsympathetic, cruel. Indeed, this is one of their special arguments against a personal God, for they say that such a God would not permit the sufferings we witness on every hand, and the still more terrible sufferings which the creeds of Christendom have taught them are in store for all except the saintly few.

It is time that we return to the Bible proposition and see the truth of the statement, "The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God." Surely there is something wrong with the brain which, after noting the wonders of nature, seen in the surrounding worlds and systems and attested in all matters earthly, sees not an intelligent Creator! The wonderful adaptability of our own bodies tells of a wise Creator.

If we compare the human eye, adapted to its purposes and conditions, with the eye of a fish, adapted to its different conditions, and with the eye of a beetle, adapted to still different conditions, we see the most indubitable proofs of profoundest wisdom and superhuman skill. When we think of man's wonderful powers and of his great achievements in the world and then consider his inability to make a single living thing, from a microbe to an elephant, from a tiny seed to a tree, surely we should concede that the One who ordered nature in the production of these wonderful variations, and created man himself, must be an Almighty, Intelligent God. Surely "Day unto day uttereth speech and night unto night showeth knowledge" along these lines, to those who have the eyes of understanding to see. It is time that these great truths were being emphasized and that the boastful gentlemen who ignore them should have their true measure taken, regardless of how many titles may follow their names. The moderately educated as well as the illiterate need such a testimony to come from every pulpit. And if it does not soon come our civilization will be wrecked.

ALL-SEEING EYE NOT OMNIPRESENCE

“Thou, God seest me;” “The eye of the Lord is in every place.” These Scriptures give us the proper conception of the Almighty. As with the telescope, the microscope the telephone, etc., man can enlarge his range of vision and hearing, so by powers still more wonderful the Almighty is cognizant of all the affairs of the Universe. We grant that our feeble minds are unable to comprehend so great so universal an Intelligence.

We cannot know in what manner the angels, the spirit servants of God, are, as His eyes, in every place, to take cognizance of our affairs. We cannot know in what manner the electric or lightning flash serves as a Divine messenger. But we can believe that a Soul so Infinitely high above us possesses powers of information as far beyond our comprehension, as the telephone and wireless telegraphy and electric light are beyond the comprehension which our forefathers had of these things in their day. It is easier to believe that so great a Being as the One who formed man should have all wisdom and all power than to believe Him deficient of these. The Scriptural argument is a good one: “He that formed the eye, shall He not see? He that formed the ear, shall He not hear?”

GOD IN HEAVEN AND IN HELL

The creeds handed down to us from the dark past declare that God is everywhere present omnipresent. This is as unthinkable as it is foolish and unscriptural. Taking advantage of this error of “orthodoxy,” the Adversary has turned many away from a belief in a personal God. He who is everywhere is nowhere. The result is the absurd view which has taken hold on some otherwise intelligent people, to the effect that good and God are synonymous. Hence a log of wood that is good for something that can be made into something useful is said to have good in it, and, hence, to have God in it ditto, a piece of iron, a bed, a chair, a table. The folly grows into saying that God is everywhere and is in everything. Thus faith in a “god of nature and happen so” takes the place of faith in the God of the Bible, whose residence is in heaven, but whose intelligence and power extend throughout the Universe, in thousands of ways of which we are only learning through electricity, radio-activity, etc., besides angelic messengers that can come and go like the wind.

Our text, misunderstood, is supposed to teach Divine omnipresence, whereas it really teaches Divine omniscience and Almighty power. The Lord's presence, as represented in His intelligence and power, are everywhere. Nowhere could we go beyond His reach and beyond his knowledge. Were this thought thoroughly impressed upon every human mind, what a vast difference it would make in human conduct from that now seen in Wall Street, in banks, in palaces, in hovels, in saloons, in gambling houses everywhere.

But really the undermining of faith in the God of the Bible has been accomplished largely by the misrepresentation of the Bible's teaching. Our text for instance, is supposed to teach that God is in heaven with the saintly, rejoicing with them and enjoying their pleasure and that He also is in hell with the unsaintly, looking upon their sufferings and tortures and planning with devils for their everlasting continuance. Thinking minds are rejecting such nonsense, but, alas, they are rejecting the Bible, too, hence have no foundation for a better, truer faith.

Every educated minister knows that I tell the Truth to the common people when I say that the word hell in our text has not the slightest reference to a place of torture, or even of consciousness. Indeed, this is true of every occurrence of the word hell, from Genesis to Malachi. In every instance the translation is from the same Hebrew word, sheol, which signifies the grave, the tomb, and is thus most frequently translated.

I urge upon all ministers of education to join with me in explaining to the public the true meaning of the Hebrew word sheol and the Greek word hades. Whatever may have been their thought of expediency in the past, they should see that the mistaken views of the meaning of these words are undermining the faith of Christendom.

The Psalmist really said: "If I ascend up into the sky, Thou art there; if I make my bed in sheol (the grave), behold, Thou art there. . . . In the uttermost parts of the sea, even there shall Thy hand lead me and Thy right hand shall hold me." The thought is that the Divine Power is everywhere, that whether we live or die, nothing can separate us from God's Wisdom and Power and from the ultimate accomplishment of our rescue from the power of the grave, which God has purposed and has promised shall be done through the great Messiah. For His Kingdom we wait and pray.

IS THIS VIEW UNORTHODOX

The word orthodox signifies "correct in doctrine." I am ready to admit that my presentation is not the ordinary one, but I claim that it is correct, that it is the true doctrine of the Word of God. If so, it is orthodox, in the highest sense of that term, and everything to the contrary, being opposed to the standards of God's Word, must be unorthodox. Everything depends upon our standard. I stand for the Bible, its teaching, its doctrines, and therefore am orthodox. On the contrary, Higher Critics and Evolutionists and those who hold the creeds of the “Dark Ages,” contradictory to the Bible, are proportionately unorthodox heretical.

What Christendom needs today is a return to the Bible, an investigation of its teachings and, correspondingly, a rejection of all human creeds, which are admittedly more or less defective. Let us “stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free.” Let us accept the Bible as the only standard. Let us study it and understand it to the extent of our ability. Let us rejoice in every degree of harmony we all attain in the correct understanding of it. Let us fellowship as Christians all who acknowledge its Divine authenticity and who, in harmony with its presentation, are trusting in Jesus as their redeemer; and who, in acceptance of His invitation, have forsaken all to be His footstep followers.

These are the real Christians, with whatever sect or party they may have become identified, through the supposition that they were doing the will of God. These alone are the saints; these alone are running in the race course; these alone have the opportunity of making their “calling and election sure.” The masses, known as Christendom, are unchristian in every sense of the word. They are civilized heathen, in the sense that they do not recognize, any more than do the heathen, a personal God of glorious character, perfect in His Wisdom, Justice, Love and Power. They realize not His All-seeing Eye. And their general lives show their lack of this knowledge and this faith.

More than this (shall we say it?) the majority of professed church members, so far as we can understand their sentiments as privately expressed and publicly declared by the ministers of their choice, are no more Christians than are the Jews. They neither believe the Bible to be the Divine Revelation nor do they accept the Lord Jesus Christ as the world’s Redeemer from sin and death. Of course, therefore, they do not profess to consecrate their lives to sacrificially follow One in whose redemptive work they do not believe.

THE MYSTERY OF THE CROSS

Comparatively few of the hundreds of thousands of those who have named the name of Christ, and who have come under various denominational yokes, have any knowledge of the Mystery of the Cross of Christ, the Mystery of the Gospel, “The Mystery which hath been hid from ages and generations, but now is made manifest to His saints.” Col. 1:26.

Alas, the majority seem content to have merely a “name to live” and wish merely to be called Christians and to wear a jeweled cross. It is but the few of those who have tasted that the Lord is gracious and have felt an earnest desire to know and to do the Father's will at the cost of self-sacrifice. With the majority the intimation that a certain course in life is the "narrow way," the way of the Cross, is sufficient to turn them in an opposite direction; for, while they would like to share the heavenly glories and honors of the Lord, they are unwilling to be sharers in His ignominy, sufferings and death.

These, without relinquishing their desire for righteousness, are disinclined to go to such lengths as the Master and the Apostles taught and exemplified. Hence, they are not interested in the "deep things" of God's Word, but merely in the more superficial. In the language of the Scriptures, they are willing to say, "We will eat our own bread, and wear our own apparel; only let us be called by thy name, to take away our reproach." Isa. 4:1.

The Scriptures most distinctly teach that we are under the reign of the "Prince of this world," Satan, and that our Lord at His Second Coming in power and great glory will bind or restrain this strong one and overthrow his empire, which is not of Divine authorization, but built upon human weaknesses, ignorance and superstition. We are distinctly told that Satan shall be bound for that thousand years (the Millennium) that he may deceive the people no more until the thousand years shall be finished.

Surely, then, the Lord has used the great Adversary to assist in the accomplishing of the Divine purposes. Satan may have supposed that he was frustrating God's plans, but just as surely he was mistaken. The Divine Word is sure which declares, "My word that goeth forth out of My mouth shall not return unto Me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in that whereunto I sent it."

It is time that all who really believe in the Bible, who really believe that Jesus left the glory of the Father and humbled Himself even unto death, thus providing the redemptive price for the Church and for the world, should proclaim these facts clearly, positively. They should also declare, as do the Scriptures, the Second Coming of the Redeemer and the establishment of His Kingdom in Divine power and majesty, for the putting down of sin and the lifting up of mankind to glorious privileges of restitution with a just penalty against every form of sin, and the Second Death as the penalty for wilful, persistent disobedience.

SALVATION FREE TO ALL MANKIND

Although this is an after-season for Camp Meetings, Chautauqua and other gatherings here, the after-season Convention of the International Bible Students now in session outshines all the in-season Assemblies of many years. The program is an extensive one.

During the ten days of the Convention addresses will be given by sixty ministers and instructors of the Association. The teachings are inter-denominational, nonsectarian. Pastor Russell, of Brooklyn Tabernacle, and now also of London Tabernacle, is the President of the Association. His was the principal address of today. The auditorium was crowded. Probably in compliment to Met-hodists, Pastor Russell took for his text what he claimed was John Wesley's favorite—"And the Spirit and the Bride say, come; and whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely" (Rev. 22:17). He said:

WHAT WESLEY COULD NOT BELIEVE

Our Methodist friends who own this spacious Auditorium have generally forgotten the special teachings of Brother Wesley, which brought them to the front of his denomination at a time when Calvin's theory of the election of saints to glory and the predestination of all others to eternal torture was the basic thought of Protestantism. Brother Wesley's voice rang out clear and full—"I cannot believe that God predestinated to eternal torture the masses of mankind before they were born. I must believe that God is Love and that His love and His justice would give to every sinner a full opportunity for return to Divine favor and to everlasting life through Christ. Brother Calvin, indeed, has certain Scriptures difficult to apply, respecting election and the elect, but I have one Scripture at least which tells of a freedom of Divine grace. The "river of the water of life" is not declared to be for the elect but for "whosoever will." I take my stand upon that text."

Brother Wesley's battle cry—"God is Love and will surely give every member of Adam's race an opportunity for eternal life through Christ" has come ringing down to our day. And although Christians have become sick and tired of their endeavor to harmonize the doctrines of Election and Free Grace and are now trying to forget doctrines altogether, nevertheless John Wesley's theory has overwhelmed John Calvin's. The vast majority of Presbyterians, Baptists, Congregationalists, etc., professing Calvin's tenets, really believe Wesley's that God is Love and will surely give every member of our race a full opportunity for salvation, and that He predestinated none of them to eternal torture.

TRUTH IN BOTH THEORIES

There are elements of truth in both theories, as we now see: "The path of the just is as the shining light which shineth more and more unto the perfect day." We are nearing the perfect day, and hence should understand the Bible better than did our forefathers, who did not have the wonderful Bibles Christians now possess, with marginal references, concordances and other helps! Ability to read also is universal today. Oh, what manner of Bible students we should be! Many Christians, however discouraged by the inconsistencies and contradictions of the various creeds, Catholic and Protestant, have abandoned their creeds and abandoned their Bibles also, erroneously believing the latter to be the basis of the former. We must not share this mistake. While doing all in our power to remove all the creed fences which divide God's people into sects and parties, let us hold fast to the Bible, the most wonderful Book in the world! It is only beginning to be understood; its true light is shining today as never before. We are in the time mentioned by the Prophet, when the "wise shall understand." Dan. 12:10

Brother Calvin was right in part to the extent that he was in harmony with the Bible, which teaches us to strive to fulfil our Covenant with the Lord, that thus we may "make our calling and election sure." It does not teach the predestination which Calvin taught and which Wesley objected to the predestination of the wicked to an eternity of torture. The only predestination mentioned in the bible is connected with the Church, the saints. God predestinated that none could be of the Church class, the Bride class, except such as would become copies of His Son, the Redeemer. That predestination stands unalterable, but it has an effect upon others than the elect. It merely says that none except the saintly shall participate in the election. It says not one word about the fate of the non-elect. Read Romans 8:28-30 and you will see this for yourself. To this, the scriptural predestination, none can object. It is the unscriptural deductions which have caused us difficulty.

Brother Wesley was in exact accord with the Bible in his declaration that every member of our race must have a share in the grace of God in Christ. However, what Brother Wesley did not see was that the great Plan of the Ages is not confined to one century nor to one Age. He did not see that, while this Gospel Age is exclusively devoted to the selection of the Church class, invited to be "the Bride, the Lamb's Wife," there is a coming Age in which Christ and His glorified Bride will extend Divine mercy to the non-elect.

THE KEY TO THE MYSTERY

Is expressed in the Apostle's words, "in due time." Our great Creator need not be in haste. He has all eternity before Him. He allowed 4,000 years to pass before He sent His Son to redeem the world, and He has since taken nearly 2,000 years in the selection of our Lord's elect Bride. He has appointed an additional thousand in which Jesus and His Bride, the glorified Church, will establish a reign of righteousness in the earth for the overthrow of sin and the uplifting of the sinners. Socially? Yes. Physically? Yes. Morally? Yes. Intellectually? Yes. Out of sin and death? Yes! Back to harmony with God if they will? Yes! No freer grace is imaginable than that which the Almighty has provided through the Savior. Of it St. Paul declares, "God wills to have all men to be saved and to be brought to a knowledge of the Truth." To accomplish this He has appointed one Mediator, "who gave Himself a Ransom for all, to be testified in due time." 1 Tim. 2:4-6

The "due time" for the Gospel call dates from Pentecost. But it is not a call for the world, but for a special class, the Bride class, to walk sacrificially in the footsteps of Jesus and to gain the great reward of joint-heirship with Him in His Kingdom. The "due time" for this work will soon be at an end when the last probationary member of the Church shall have made his calling and election sure and when the "door into the marriage" shall shut. But the due time for the masses of mankind to hear of His grace and to respond thereto is still future, as Brother Wesley's favorite text will show us.

Before examining His text we will note the fact that three-fourths of the human family today are heathen in the most absolute sense of the word and many of the other fourth are heathen in a truthful sense. Why do they not see the grace of God in Christ? St. Paul answers, "Because the god of this world hath blinded their minds," because "darkness covers the earth and gross darkness the people." 2 Cor. 4:4; Isa. 60:2

But why does God not scatter the darkness and open all the blind eyes and unstop the deaf ears? We Answer--because, although He has promised to do these very things, His due time for their accomplishment is not yet come. He merely calls His elect during this dark time, requiring them to prove their worthiness by walking faithfully in the dark: "We walk by faith and not by sight."

With the completion of the elect Church at the coming of the Redeemer after the marriage, when she will be the Bride then both Bridegroom and Bride will shine forth in glory, scattering all the darkness, ignorance and superstition of the world. Satan, the Prince of Darkness, will be bound and every evil thing shall be restrained and the light of the knowledge of the glory of God shall fill the earth; all the blind eyes shall be opened and all the deaf ears shall be unstopped. What will be the result? God's Word answers, that then "every knee shall bow and every tongue confess to the glory of God."

BROTHER WESLEY'S PROOF TEXT

Brother Wesley's loving heart found and tightly grasped the declaration, "And the Spirit and the Bride say, Come; and let him that heareth say, Come; and let him that is athirst come; and whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely" (Rev. 22:17). this text, however, belongs to the coming age, to the time when Messiah shall reign: "For He must reign until He hath put all enemies under His feet" (1 Cor. 15:25-29). There is no Bride yet to say, "Come."

We are glad of this, glad that it is still possible for us to become members of that Bride class which must "make herself ready" for the marriage and be forever united to the Lord as His Bride at His second coming. Then by the marriage she will become the Redeemer's joint-heir to glory, honor and immortality in the Kingdom. Then she, in co-operation with the Spirit of the Lord, will say, "Come," to whomsoever wills to come of Adam's race. Everyone will say, "Come"; there will be a world-wide invitation. All the blind eyes shall be opened to see the waters of life; all the deaf ears shall be unstopped to hear of the gracious favor of God's love in Christ.

But as there is no Bride yet to say, "Come," neither is there any "river of the water of life" yet to invite them to. There will be no such river until after the establishment of the Kingdom for which the Master taught us to pray, "Thy Kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven." Jesus explains that in the present time His followers do not go to the rivers of the water of life to drink; but, on the contrary, he says, "The water that I shall give him will be in him, a well of water springing up unto everlasting life." John 4:14.

THE NEW JERUSALEM SYMBOL

The Church in her glorified condition after the "change" of the First Resurrection, after becoming the Bride, is symbolically represented as a city, as a government the capital of God's Kingdom, the New Jerusalem, which will then come to, or be established in the earth not a literal city, but, better, a symbolical one, of the Kingdom. It will be from under the Throne of that New Jerusalem, the Messianic Kingdom, that the "river of the water of life will flow, clear as crystal." On either bank of the symbolical river will be trees of life, whose leaves will be for the healing of the nations. Then will be their "due time" to come to a knowledge of the Truth that God loved them and did not predestinate them to eternal torture, nor to purgatorial suffering, but sent His Son to die for them to pay their death penalty and thus to make possible their restitution to Divine favor (Acts 3:19-21) and to all the earthly blessings, privileges and rights originally given to Father Adam lost by his disobedience and redeemed at Calvary.

My dear friends, here we have the grandest and broadest Free Grace possible to be imagined, in connection with our Heavenly Father and His great salvation provided in Christ. As every creature shares in Father Adam's imperfection and dying condition so each will share in the merit of Christ's righteousness and sacrificial death; it shall be "testified to all in due time." There will be stripes, lessons, instructions, but they will all be corrective with a view to the reformation and the regeneration of Adam and his race as human beings not as spirit beings, not as angels; Adam and his race never were such. Only the Church has been begotten of the Holy Spirit to a spirit nature; only the Church will share in the resurrection to spirit conditions and be thus "like unto the angels."

THIS IS NOT UNIVERSALISM

These two salvations, now of the elect, and during Messiah's reign of the non-elect, do not imply a universal salvation of our race, but merely a universal opportunity for everlasting life. The Scriptures most clearly teach a Second Death, like the first death, except that none will be redeemed from the Second Death, and none will be resurrected from it. It therefore will be, as St. Paul declares, an "everlasting destruction" (2 Thess. 1:9). As Peter declares, the willful sinners against light and knowledge will perish, "like natural brute beasts."

The lessons from these great truths of the bible are powerful. They make plain to us that none can hope to be of the heavenly class, of the Bride of Christ, except such as enter the "strait gate" and narrow way the saints, the faithful unto death. They teach us also, in harmony with other Scriptures, that those who now either see not and hear not, or who see and hear imperfectly, will miss this great "prize of our high calling." Nevertheless for these, heathen and others, God has provided more than they could have thought or asked an opportunity for obtaining human perfection and a world-wide Eden Paradise restored. It teaches, also, that every misstep, every failure to do our best, is costly both to the world and to ourselves. To whatever extent the world demeans and degrades itself, it will have, in proportion, difficulty and stripes in connection with the possibilities and opportunities of recovery during Messiah's Kingdom. Let us herald wide the story of the grace of God in Christ for every creature; let us show the love of God to all who have eyes and ears of appreciation. There is no greater influence for righteousness than this The love of God and the love of Christ constraineth us (2 Cor. 5:14). And in proportion as mankind receive the same their constraints toward righteousness increase. Thus, with clearer light upon our Father's Word, it is time for us all to cast aside the things of darkness and sectarianism which so long have separated the people of God from each other.

THE GREAT LESSON OF THIS

The lesson to the church is gratitude, loyalty, faithfulness to Him who called her out of darkness to the high calling of joint-heirship with the Redeemer. "The Bride, the Lamb's Wife," is to make herself ready by putting on the fruits and graces of the Holy Spirit and being renewed and transformed.

The lesson to the world yet is only to those who, to some extent, hear it that God is Love, that His mercy has provided a great opportunity for restitution that is nigh at hand; and further, the lesson is that every good and every evil deed will make their impression upon human character and have to do with the stripes, corrections, etc., of the future. Misimproved opportunities in the present life, violations of conscience, etc., will bring their reasonable retribution in the life to come and make the ascent more tedious and the more difficult.

I trust that true Christian unity upon the basis of Divine Truth expressed in the Bible will be the key-note of this Convention to its very close. I trust that every soul in attendance may be so warmed and cheered and vivified by the Truth and its spirit that, going to his home, the blessing may be extended in overflowing measure.

THE SUPREMACY OF GOD'S KINGDOM

The International Bible Students Association has been holding a Convention here for more than a week; many able speakers have been heard. Higher Criticism is at a discount amongst these Bible students. They claim that the internal harmonies of the Bible attest its Divine authenticity. Amongst these earnest students are many who at one time were infidels. They profess greater faith than ever in the Bible as the result of reading Pastor Russell's books, to which many of them were led through his sermons.

Pastor Russell was the principal speaker at the Convention today. He is being entertained some distance from the Park, at the Weber mansion. Hundreds visit him every evening. Pastor Russell spoke twice today in the large Auditorium. He delivered one of his discourses from the text, "In the last days the Mountain of the Lord's House shall be established in the top of the mountains,... and all people shall flow unto it" (Isa. 2:2). He said in part:

Our text tells of great events in the “last days.” It would be a mistake, however, to suppose that these words imply the end of time or the end of the world, in the ordinary sense. The Bible declares that “the earth abideth forever,” and it tells of the wonderful blessings of Restitution, when the Lord’s footstool shall blossom as the rose Paradise restored. All this is to come in the “last days.”

THE SEVEN DAYS OF THE WEEK TYPICAL

The Jews understood that the seven days of the week, six of labor and the seventh of rest, were typical of seven greater days of a thousand years each. In harmony with this thought, some of them tell us that we are living in the Friday night of the world’s history which means that the great Sabbath of Rest is about to begin the thousand years of Messiah’s reign (the Jewish day beginning in the evening).

The New Testament writers seem to have had the same thought. Thus our Lord declared, “My Word shall judge you in the Last Day.” Similarly, Martha declared her faith in the resurrection of her brother, saying, “I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection, at the Last Day” the Millennial Day, the Day of Christ the great Day which will witness the overthrow of sin and death and the uplifting of humanity. Of that Great Day we read, “In His Day shall the righteous flourish, and evil-doers shall be cut off.” This Seventh Day is frequently spoken of as “that Day,” as indicating the time when Divine power will no longer permit the reign of sin amongst men, but Messiah’s Kingdom will actively intervene. The overthrow of Satan, sin and all unrighteousness will then take place. It is during this Day the Messiah will put down all things opposed to righteousness: “The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death.”

Throughout that glorious Day the resurrection process will be in operation; mankind will be rising out of its meanness, sin, sickness and death, back to all that was lost in Eden, and redeemed by way of the Cross. In the end of these days, or “after these days,” of the reign of sin, God promises to make a New Covenant with the House of Israel and with the House of Judah, through which they shall be uplifted; and the blessing will flow from them to all nations (Jer. 31:31). It will be after these days also the “God will pour out His Spirit upon all flesh,” as says the Prophet Joel (Joel 2:28).

Our text is to be considered from this standpoint. In the end of these days, in the promised Day of Messiah, the Mountain of the Lord’s House shall be established, fixed, in the very top of the mountains above all other kingdoms. This is in full accord with the entire tenor of the Scriptures. A mountain symbolizes a kingdom; and, as the Prophet declares, God’s Kingdom will be the highest Mountain; it will be over the top of all other kingdoms. It will be established or fixed permanently above all others.

Messiah, the great King, with His Elect Bride and Associate with Him, will exercise His Divine power, Satan shall be bound for a Thousand years, and sin will no longer be permitted. From the invisible plane of glory and majesty, justice will be executed in the earth; every good word, thought and deed will be rewarded, and every evil thought, word and deed will be punished swiftly surely. Perhaps paralysis of the tongue will be the means by which evil speaking false words and deceptions will be punished. Perhaps paralysis of the arm or fingers will be the means employed to stop other crime. Certain it is that “Nothing shall hurt or destroy in all God’s Holy Kingdom” thus established.

How speedily the world will then learn righteousness! Now it doubts the very existence of God, and declares that if He exists He pays little or no heed to wrong-doers. “Now the wicked flourish; yea, they that tempt God are even exalted,” as the Scriptures declare. But the New Day will change all this. Messiah “will lay righteousness to the Line and Justice to the Plummet, and the hail (Truth) shall sweep away the refuge of lies, misrepresentations, misunderstandings” (Isa. 28:17-18). “The blind shall see out of obscurity, and the deaf ears shall be unstopped;” “The knowledge of the glory of the Lord shall fill the whole earth,” until “None shall need say to his neighbor, ‘Know the Lord,’ for all shall know Him.”

GRAVITATION REVERSED

The present tendency is to gravitate downward, but our text tells of a reversal of this order. All nations shall then flow or gravitate upward toward the righteous Kingdom of Messiah: “Many people shall say, ‘Let us go up’.” The Kingdom, in its original establishment, will be Israelitish Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and all the Prophets will be made Princes in all the earth. Psa. 45:16.

The Jews, naturally, will rally to their standard and begin to recognize the fulfillment of the prophecies of old. Other nationalities will begin slowly to realize the import of the great, New Jewish Dispensation. Their ideas and ideals will be antagonistic for a time. Gradually they will see the Restitution blessings coming to Israel, in harmony with the Divine arrangements of the Kingdom. Then, as our context declares, “Many people will say, Come, let us go up to the Mountain of the Lord, to the House of the God of Jacob; He will teach us (as well as the Jews) His ways and we [as well as they] will learn to walk in His paths.”

Both Spiritual and Natural Israel are in the picture. Mt. Zion is the higher, the Spiritual Jerusalem; the lower, the earthly. The law shall go forth from Mt. Zion [Spiritual Zion, the Messiah Head and Body Bridegroom and Bride] while the word of the Lord the directing and instructing] will go forth from Jerusalem [the Patriarchal Princes, who will represent the Kingdom].

JUDGING AMONG THE GENTILES

The context tells us that the new King, Messiah, will judge amongst the nations amongst all the peoples. It will be a general judgment first, an individual one subsequently. The national judgments will mean calamities upon the nations. The demonstrations of the great dreadnoughts and great armies will prove that they are not to be the peacemakers of earth. On the contrary, those trusting in these devices will suffer most severely. All must learn the lesson that Messiah's Kingdom comes not by human might nor power, but is the Lord's institution, in His own appointed time.

The lesson will be so thoroughly learned in that Day of Trouble that war will forever cease. The Prophet David tells us that the mighty army of the Lord, through Messiah's Kingdom, will work havoc with present institutions. Then "He will make wars to cease unto the ends of the earth." Our context tells us that thereafter "They shall beat their swords into plow-shares and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." Even boys' brigades, etc., thereafter will be at a discount. Human energy and activity will find better employment in conquering self, sin-sickness and death.

HIDING IN THE ROCKS

The description here given by the Prophet Isaiah of the Day with which this Gospel Age will end, the great Day when Messiah's Kingdom begins, agrees very closely with a description of the same given in the book of Revelation. Isaiah tells us that idolatry to gold and silver shall be brought to an end, and the great trouble of that Day will cause many to hide themselves in the rocks for fear of the Lord and for the glory of His Majesty (Isa. 2:10, 11). "The lofty looks of man shall be humbled, and their haughtiness shall be bowed down and the Lord alone shall be exalted in that Day." Vs. 9-11.

The idols He shall utterly abolish, and those who worship them "shall go into the rocks and into the caves of the earth, for fear of the Lord and for the glory of His Majesty, when He ariseth to shake terribly the earth." Vs. 18-21.

The same picture is set before us in Rev. 6:15-17. Here the great ones of earth are represented calling upon the mountain to fall on them and to hide them from the presence of the Lord. The thought is to fall over us, hide us, protect us. The Prophet Malachi asks, "Who shall abide in the great Day of the Lord?" "Who shall be able to stand?"

Let us construct a picture before our minds. Let us suppose the vast oceans, constituting three-fourths of the earth's surface, to represent the masses of mankind unsettled, unattached, without property, with little hope or prospect, with illimitable longings, but no power to satisfy them—"without God and without hope in the world." Let us consider the land behind and before us to represent society, fixed, established, desirous of peace, having something which it does not wish to lose, which it does not wish the "sea" class to wash away.

As in the sea we find shallows and mighty depths, so on the land we find low places, higher places and mountain peaks, and each of these represents a certain degree of prosperity or adversity. The mountain heights would represent the princes of society, merchant princes, bankers, as well as political powers. As from time immemorial there has been a conflict between the land and the sea, the latter, in storms, violently attacking the former and seeking to capture it, so between the two classes here represented the "Sea" class, helpless and without property, is envious of the "earth" class, those who, under the present order, seize and possess the chief blessings.

The mountains, the rocks of society [social institutions, lodges, financial institutions, capitalists, combinations, national treaties, etc.], will all fail in that great Day of trial and judging and testing; the shaking and overthrow of every human institution is in full accord with the Divine requirements of Justice, Righteousness.

WHO SHALL THEN STAND

My dear hearers, where is your treasure? Where is your security? This long-foretold Day of the Lord is nigh. The great Time of Trouble impends, a time "such as was not since there was a nation (Dan. 12:1). If our treasures are upon the earth and our confidence rests in human organizations, the time is near when we may be crawling into these holes, these social and financial protective arrangements, calling upon them to cover us, protect us, but there will be no protection possible. The Apostle declares respecting that Day that everything that can be shaken will be shaken everything that is not in full alignment with the Divine standards will go down. In the language of the Scripture, we should set our affections on things above, not on earthly things. The Master counsels further, "Lay up for yourselves treasure in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves cannot steal.

If we have been careless in this matter in the past, it is high time for us to invest what little we have of time, influence, talent and money in the service of the King of King laying up treasure in heaven, in promoting the interests of the great Kingdom wherein we trust, and of which we hope soon to be members.

We are not counseling foolishness the throwing away of money, of time and influence. On the contrary, we counsel the spirit of a sound mind, that every hour, every talent, every penny be used, not as our own, but as the Lord's; not according to our selfish desires, but according to the Divine will, so far as we are able to understand it; that we may glorify God in our bodies and spirits which are His.

Every talent we possess is that much of our stewardship, of which we must shortly give account. The Lord's servants, the consecrated, Spirit-Begotten, will be called to account before the great Day of trouble upon the world.

Jesus said, "Watch ye, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all those things coming upon the earth, and to stand before the Son of Man." Our watching is in respect to our talents, our faithfulness in their use.

There will, indeed, be some of God's people who will pass through the trouble with the world. Those who are too fearful of the weight of the cross will bury their talent in the earth. They will fail to have their portion with the Lord and His saintly few in the Kingdom, and instead, will have their portion with the hypocrites in the great trouble of that Day.

THE CATASTROPHE CANNOT BE AVERTED

It is impossible for us, or for any one, to avert the great catastrophe which is surely bearing down upon the world. The Lord's people are to have nothing whatever to do with bringing about the great catastrophe, any more than had the Prophets, whose words we are using. It is for us to make our own "calling and election sure," and as far as possible to send out the Divine Message in no uncertain tones to all of God's people, that each and all may be found faithful in the use of their pounds and talents retrieving each possible loss of opportunities, or, as the Apostle says "Redeeming the time, because the days are evil" and unfavorable.

Our day witnesses the world gone pleasure mad—"Lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God." The spirit of the world surrounds us, threatens to engulf us and destroy our spirituality. There never was a greater need than now for the soldiers of the cross to arise and "put on the whole armor of God," to "watch and pray," and fight a good fight against their own weaknesses and against the darts and snares of the Adversary.

Many dear Christians realize that we are living in strange times, but do not realize that we are in the transition period between the reign of sin, sickness and death, and the reign of Messiah's

Kingdom of righteousness and light. Let each one whose eyes of understanding have opened to a better appreciation of God's great Book be on the alert to "show forth the praises of Him who hath called us out of darkness into His marvelous light."

LIGHT SHED ON A GREAT MYSTERY

Pastor Russell delivered two addresses here under the auspices of the International Bible Students Association Local Branch. We report the one in which he discussed the permission of evil by the Almighty. He took no specific text although as usual he quoted freely from the Bible throughout his discourse. He said in part:

The question of the Ages is Why did the Almighty, originally, permit Evil Sin? And why has an Omnipotent Ruler such as He, for more than sixty centuries, permitted Satan to continue his reign of sin and Death? Leaving out entirely the unscriptural theory so prevalent, respecting a purgatory of centuries, or a torment everlasting, and considering merely the trials suffering, sorrow and pain of humanity during the present life, how shall we account for their permission by an All-Powerful Creator, who knew the end from the beginning?

Why does He permit injustice, unrighteousness, headaches, heartaches, etc.? Why does He not deal with humanity graciously, kindly, lovingly, as a Father as He deals with the angelic sons of God? Is it just or loving on the part of our Creator to bring forth millions of his creatures under these admittedly unfavorable conditions beset by weaknesses and sinwardness from their birth and surrounded by others similarly weak, and beset by Satan and his minions wicked spirits? Is it just that we should thus be in an unequal fight subjected to weaknesses and dying and imperfect conditions on account of the sin of our first parents and then, on the same account, be in danger of an eternity of torture with nine hundred and ninety-nine chances out of a thousand against us?

Our question is surely too deep for any human philosophy, and those who reject the Bible as of Divine inspiration may as well abandon all hope of an answer. God Himself, and none other, could tell us of His own secrets why He did as He did. Truly we read, "The secret of the Lord is with them that reverence Him; and He will show them His Covenant" (Psa. 25:14.)

The light now shining upon the Word of God show us that the Divine purpose in connection with mankind is a progressive one, embracing Ages and Dispensations. If we ignore these, we are thereby blinded to the true Answer--to our question. Accepting these, it is the privilege of Bible students today to see the light in God's Word to see matters from the Divine standpoint, to understand the "Mystery of God, hidden from Ages and from generations, and now made known unto His saints," namely, that in the Ages to come, all the trials and difficulties, all the sorrows and tears of the past, will be more than compensated for, and proved to be a part of the great Divine Program which will work out to the glory of God and the enlightenment and blessing of angels and men.

MAN'S PRIMARY LESSON

First of all, God chooses to have children possessed of a quality like His own freedom of will. He therefore not only created man perfect in mind and body, but He gave to him a will, the power of choice liberty to choose one course or another. God foresaw that giving man this liberty of will would lead to the seduction of Mother Eve, and to the disobedience of Father Adam, through his love for his wife. Adam's preference was to die with her rather than to live in harmony with God without her; for if he should disobey he would come under the sentence of death. Although Adam and the angels were perfect, they had not a perfect knowledge of their Creator, of His Love, His Wisdom, His Justice, His Power.

God, therefore, without interfering with Adam's liberty, permitted the great calamity of death to come upon him and his race. From the very beginning God premeditated the entire Plan of Salvation, as He has since been working it out; and He will completely accomplish the same ultimately through Messiah's Kingdom. The great lesson which will eventually come both to angels and men will show forth Divine Wisdom, Justice, Love and Power, fully coordinated. In no other way that we can imagine could this great Revelation of the Divine character be so well made. However, in order to comprehend this great Program, it is necessary that we follow strictly the Scriptural teachings, and avoid wholly the nonsense of our creeds, manufactured during the Dark Ages. We must see that "the wages of sin" is not eternal torment, nor purgatory but death.

God allowed this reign of sin and death from Adam until Moses without so much as making an offer of terms of reconciliation and peace. Then an offer was made to the nation of Israel, and to no other nation. The offer of Israel's Law Covenant was, "He that doeth these things shall live." God, of course, knew that Israel could not keep perfectly the condition of that great and wonderful Law. The offer served as a lesson to that nation respecting the impossibility of any man's keeping the perfect Law; and the same lesson comes to us of this Gospel Dispensation. We see that what the Jew could not do we cannot do; where he failed we would fail.

Thus through the Law Covenant God taught a great lesson to Israel and to the Church; and He will ultimately teach the same lesson to the world and to angels proving that by the deeds of the Law no fallen flesh could be recovered and re-instated in Divine favor. Four thousand years passed from man's creation, and death reigned from Moses to Christ as thoroughly as it had previously reigned from Adam to Moses. The Law Covenant did not stop the reign of sin and death. Something more than a Law is necessary. The Divine Program demands recovery from sin and death, and the Divine Program purposes this recovery.

Nearly nineteen centuries have passed since the first advent of our Lord, and still the reign of sin and death is in progress more than ever. The increase of knowledge has brought increase of sin; increase of population has brought increase of death; until today the world is in a terrible condition of mental, moral and physical dilapidation, and ninety thousand go into the tomb every twenty-four hours.

But a Remedy is in sight. It was foretold through the Prophets, but it began to operate in Jesus. His miraculous birth, His faithfulness and consecration and exaltation to the right hand of the Majesty on High, are all essential to man's recovery essential to the overthrow of this reign of sin and death over our race.

We see still further developments and preparations. The Scriptures inform us that it is the Divine purpose to have a multitudinous Messiah of which the glorious Jesus is the Head and the Church the Body.

We perceive that God for nearly nineteen centuries has been calling and drawing a special class of mankind to constitute His Elect, the Bride Class, to be joint-heirs with His Son in the Kingdom of Glory which will finally vanquish sin and Satan and deliver the willing and obedient of mankind into the full liberty of the children of God freedom from sin and death, and into the enjoyment of life everlasting and Divine favor.

THE DARK AND NARROW PATH

This special class is required to walk by faith and not by sight to walk in the "narrow way" of self-denial and opposition to the world, the flesh and the Adversary, in the footsteps of Jesus. Ignorance, selfishness, sin, death, all go to make up the deplorable condition in the world and to constitute the way a narrow one in which this Elect class is required to walk, in order to demonstrate their full loyalty and obedience to the will of God even unto death. Evidently no such narrow way could have existed had God not permitted evil sin. Evidently, therefore, this Elect class could not be developed and tested except by the Divine permission of sin. The very essence of their character development is associated with the Divine promise that "all things shall work together for good to those who love God, to the called ones according to His purpose.”

It seemed wise to our Heavenly Father that our Lord Jesus should learn obedience through sufferings and be tested in respect to His willingness to endure suffering for righteousness' sake. How appropriate it is that the same Father should make similar arrangements for all of the Church, whom He will receive from amongst the race of Adam to be members of the Royal Priesthood under Jesus, the High Priest of our order.

We see a necessity for this, not only as respects our own testing and a thorough proof of our own heart-loyalty to the Lord, but additionally we see a wisdom on God's part in thus preparing a priesthood of the future. A priest, as recognized amongst the Jews, was not merely one who offered sacrifices, although every priest was of necessity a sacrificer. The special mission of the priestly tribe amongst the other tribes was that of instructing, helping, healing, teaching. And so God is preparing a Royal Priesthood for the Messianic Age to bless, to heal, to teach, to uplift all the willing and obedient.

The royalty of the priesthood signifies that it will no longer be a sacrificing class, for all sacrificing will be at an end. It will be a glorious class, royal, of the divine nature, and representatives with our Lord Jesus of the Divine power. As priests who will have to do with judging and chastening, healing and helping humanity, how much sympathy do we suppose that these Royal Priests should have? Are they not to be on the Divine plane of glory, “Members of the Body” of Messiah?

SIN'S LESSON TO HUMANITY

Humanity is learning a great lesson through the permission of sin. Present experiences teach the lesson that “the way of the transgressor is hard;” “The wages of sin is death;” “The soul that sinneth it shall die.”

The exceeding sinfulness of sin is thus being demonstrated to humanity. Few profit by the lesson in the present life, and these are chiefly such as are called to the heavenly calling. The great majority of mankind learn to know sin, evil, only. Even God's provision for the future of mankind is obscured from the masses. “The god of this world hath blinded the minds of them that believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of God's goodness should shine into their hearts.”

But with the dawning of the New Dispensation of Messiah's Kingdom, the true light of the knowledge of the glory of God's character will shine everywhere. “All the blind eyes shall be opened and all the deaf ears shall be unstopped.” Messiah's gracious reign, the manifestation of Divine mercy, will be for the very purpose of uplifting these poor, fallen members of our race the masses. During the thousand years of Messiah's Kingdom, the whole world will have full opportunity for learning the great desirability of righteousness, as now, for a few years, they have the opportunity of learning the undesirability of sin.

By the close of the Mediatorial reign what wonderful lessons respecting God and evil mankind will have learned. Then will come their final testing. After full knowledge of both good and evil, Which will they choose? God urges all to choose the right and its reward of life eternal. Nevertheless, He will not coerce; He will allow each individual to take his choice, to mark out his own course, whether in harmony with or contrary to the Divine arrangements. Such, however, as come to the point of loving righteousness and hating iniquity, shall be accounted worthy of a place in the glorious Kingdom of Messiah.

THE LESSON OF THE ANGELS

God's dealings with humanity constitute a great object lesson to the angels. They perceive the inflexibility of Divine Justice the decree of God. "Dying thou shalt die" has been unflinchingly executed against Adam and his race for six thousand years. They perceived, further, the Love of God, which passeth all understanding. They perceive the Divine provision that the Son of God should die, the Just for the unjust, to bring mankind back to full harmony with the Creator. They see the breath of the Divine character exemplified in the great reward given to our Lord Jesus Christ for His obedience to the Father's will, even unto death an exaltation to the divine nature, honor and immortality.

They perceive, too, a still greater manifestation of Divine goodness, in God's invitation to the Church to become joint-heirs with Christ in His glory, honor and immortality, on conditions of obedience and walking in the Master's footsteps to the extent of their ability. Who could have dreamed of such "Love Divine, all love excelling," which stooped down, not only to redeem the race, but also to invite some of the member thereof to these exceeding great and precious things which "God hath in reservation for them that love Him."

Next in order the world will receive Divine mercy, extended through Jesus, by the Father's arrangement, to Adam and every member of his race, no matter how degraded, no matter how mean. The redeeming blood has been shed, "The Just for the Unjust," for the sins of the whole world.

DIVINE POWER AND WISDOM

While Divine power is manifested in all the realms of nature and creation, a still greater Divine Power was manifested in the resurrection of our Lord Jesus from the dead, after He had been deceased three days. But even the power manifested in our Lord's resurrection seems small in comparison to the further works of resurrection which the Scriptures assure us our dear Lord's death insures. It will be a still more miraculous work to resurrect the Church to glory, honor and immortality, after many of them have been in the power of death for centuries.

And still more stupendous is the resurrection work which God proposes for the world of mankind thousands of millions to be awakened, and restored to the same conditions they formerly enjoyed conditions, however, of imperfection, from which they will be gradually released and uplifted by Messiah.

This resurrection work for the world, which will be gradually carried forward during that thousand years, will all be accomplished by the Father's power, through the Messiah, the Mediator of the New Covenant. It will be a continuous miracle of awakening and uplifting the race.

DIVINE WISDOM YET TO BE SEEN

Not until the close of the reign of Messiah and the complete uplift from sin and death of all of Adam's race willing to return to Divine favor, will the Wisdom of God be manifested in its full, clear light. Already some may see, partially, obscurely, some of God's Wisdom, but the majority are still inquiring, Why was evil permitted? These have not yet seen the Divine Wisdom in connection with the permission of evil. Ultimately this shall be clearly seen by the saints, by the Angels and by the world of mankind. Well does the Revelator exclaim:—

Who shall not glorify "Thee, O Lord! when Thy righteous dealings are made manifest!" "All nation which Thou hast made shall come and worship before Thee!" (Rev. 15:4.) As now, "Day unto day uttereth speech and night unto night showeth knowledge, and there is no place where the voice is not heard" the voice of Nature, acclaiming her God so, eventually, "Every creature in heaven and earth and under the earth shall be heard saying: "Praise, glory, honor, dominion and might be unto Him that sitteth upon the Throne, and unto the Lamb forever." All this will be the result of God's permission of sin of His permission of the reign of evil, sin, death. The key is found in the Plan of the Ages showing the work which each Age is to accomplish, and the grand climax, eventually, of evil.

BUT ONE CHURCH OF THE LIVING GOD

Pastor Russell preached in Brooklyn's largest and finest Auditorium, which was crowded to hear his discourse on "Which is the True Church?" It may not be strictly true to say that every person in the large audience went home fully satisfied that he had located the one true Church to which the Bible continually refers. It is not too much to assert, however, that the vast majority of those who heard were both pleased and convinced. Not really great man is without his enemies, but it may surely be said that Pastor Russell is gaining many friends throughout the Christian world every week through the widespread reports of his sermons. The text for the occasion was, "The Church of the First-borns, whose names are written in heaven." Heb. 12:23.

CHURCH OF CHRIST ONE NOT MANY

He adverted to the Scriptural records which refer to the Church of Christ as one, not as many. Pastor Russell declared that in this matter the Church of Rome and the Church of England hold aloof from many Protestant denominations. They claim that to recognize them as churches would be unscriptural, since there is but one Church of the Living God. The various Protestant denominations started out with similar views, similar theories, though today they have abandoned them. The Church of England formed an organization separate from that of Rome, believing that the former had been the one true Church but had departed from the faith, and that it was the duty of the faithful to recognize her as Babylon, confusion.

The claim to be the true Church they applied to themselves. Similarly, Presbyterians, Methodists, Congregationalists, Adventists, Disciples, etc., have withdrawn, and many of these originally claimed to be the one true, loyal, faithful Church of Christ. Today, however, the pendulum has swung to the other side. Moreover, the narrowness of the past is rapidly giving way. All are learning that to be a Christian means more than merely to be immersed; more than merely to be sprinkled; more than merely to believe in the doctrine of Election; more than merely to believe in the doctrine of Free Grace; more than to believe in the doctrine of Transubstantiation or Consubstantiation. With this enlargement of mind Christians are indeed in danger of losing sight of the fact that the True Church is the custodian of “the faith once delivered to the saints” with acknowledges “one Lord, one Faith, one Baptism, one God and Father of all, and one Church of the living God.”

ONE CHURCH IN MANY CHURCHES

The key to the situation is found in our Lord’s words: “Not all that say unto Me Lord, Lord, shall enter into the Kingdom of heaven;” not all who call themselves Christians, with one denominational tag or another, are members of the one Church, the Church of the First-borns, mentioned in our text. As good, rich, milk is sometimes called cream, so all the members of Christian denominations are sometimes call Christians in a complimentary sense, because not unsympathetic with true Christian principles. Nevertheless, only those in all denominations who have conformed to the conditions required of Christian discipleship, the saintly ones, constitute the True Church—“The Church of the First-born, whose names are written in heaven.”

If we had a box of sawdust and scattered through it a paper of tacks until the latter were quite hidden from view, surrounded and covered in the sawdust, we know that we could take a magnet and, by passing it to and fro amongst the sawdust, the magnet would attract to itself every tack. The tacks of this illustration represent a small class of humanity, zealous at heart for God and righteousness. The magnet represents the Gospel invitation which is now passed up and down, hither and thither throughout the civilized world, and to some extent, into the heathen world.

When we convince our hearers that the non-elect of this Age are not doomed to eternal torment, but will have a blessing of inferior degree to that of “the elect,” the effect should be to right our minds and to cause us to think carefully and critically of the stringent terms of discipleship which the Bible lays down as conditions for membership in the one true Church.

Heretofore, with the false thought in mind that all except the Church would be eternally tormented, we have all shrunk from making any reasonable application of the Scriptural texts regarding saintship, discipleship, the becoming members of the Church of the First-born. This was partly because of fear of ourselves, lest we might not come up to the standard of saintship, but especially was it because of our realization that the great mass of humanity in Christendom, as well as in heathen lands, came far short of the terms of discipleship laid down in God’s Word. Today the matter comes close home to us all, for we realize that many who were very near and dear to us have died outside of the nominal church, and far outside the special line of conditions which marked the Church of the First-born.

Amongst other texts cited by the Pastor as showing the exclusive and high standard of the elect Church, we note the following. "If any man will be My disciple, let him take up his cross and follow me; and where I am there shall My disciples be also;" "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with Me in My Throne;" "Strait is the gate and narrow is the way that leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it" (Luke 9:23; Matt. 7:14); "Let us lay aside every weight and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race set before us" (Heb. 12:1): "If these things be in you and abound (the graces of the Holy Spirit) they will make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord, for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting Kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." 2 Pet. 1:8, 11.

LOOKING THROUGH THE TYPE

St. Paul informs us that all the various features of the Jewish Law were types of still higher, still better things. In our text the expression, "Church of the First-born," has reference to a type instituted in the very beginning of Israel's history, when God brought that people, by the hand of Moses, the Mediator of the Law Covenant, out of the land of Egypt. To this type the Apostle refers in his expression, "The Church of the First-born." The entire nation of Israel, twelve tribes, God had separated from the other nations to represent those who would be a blessing to all other nations, under the Abrahamic Covenant. God's oath to Abraham was: "In thy Seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed."

Pharaoh, King of Egypt, was holding back the nation from going into Palestine, the Land of Promise. One chastisement after another failed to move him to submission until finally an intense calamity availed. The tenth plague was the smiting of the first-born of Egypt, while the Israelites were protected, thus showing Divine interest in and care over Israel. Their first-born were miraculously preserved to represent in type the Church of the First-born. The true Church of Christ are not all that will be saved, in the Divine Program, but merely, as St. James says, "These are a kind of first-fruits unto God of His creatures" (Jas. 1:18; Rev. 14:4.) The after-fruits will come in due time, under the further development of the Divine Plan of the Ages as the result of Messiah's reign of a thousand years.

Some time after their deliverance from Egypt, by Divine direction, the first-borns of all the families and tribes of Israel were exchange, person by person, for the one tribe of Levi. The Levites thereafter represented the first-borns of the Church they alone represented the first-borns of Israel passed over in that night. Subsequently the tribe of Levi became the instructor of the nation in religious matters and from them was chosen one family for the Priesthood Aaron and his sons.

The Scriptural picture is plain. In the antitype we are still in the night of passing over. Soon the Morning of the New Dispensation, under Messiah's reign, will begin, and all desirous of serving God and having His blessings will be delivered from the oppressing power of Satan and his hosts, typified by Pharaoh and his army. God intends to deliver the whole world from Satan's power. Satan shall be bound for a thousand years, during Messiah's reign, and is ultimately to be destroyed, and the people of God all who desire to worship the Lord and to enter into the glorious Land of Promise will be led forth. The first-born of these is the Church of this Gospel Age, which will be associated with Christ in His heavenly Kingdom—"the Church of the First-born, whose names are written in heaven."

PRIESTS AND LEVITES ANTI-TYPICAL

The entire tribe of Levi was especially consecrated to the Lord, and especially separate from the other tribes and was given no inheritance in the land. Thus the entire Church of Christ are begotten of the Holy Spirit to a superior, heavenly nature; they will have no inheritance with mankind in general in the earthly blessings restitution to human perfection and participation in the blessings of the world-wide Eden to be. The promise under which they are now being developed is a heavenly, spiritual one. Their change will be a glorious one from earthly nature to a heavenly nature they will all be like Christ. "They will neither marry nor be given in marriage, but will (in this) be like unto the angels; neither can they die any more."

But as from amongst those first-borns of Israel the family of Aaron was selected to be the priests, so from this Church of the First-borns God shows us that He is selecting a Royal Priesthood a "little flock." Aaron and his sons were few in comparison to all the tribe of Levi, so only a saintly few expect to attain to glory, honor and immortality with Christ. These are referred to in the Scriptures as "members of the Body of Christ," even as the under-priests, Aaron's son's, in the type, were members of Aaron. Under another beautiful figure this Priestly few are styled the "Bride of Christ," and His joint heirs in His Kingdom and work.

CHOSEN TO BLESS THE PEOPLE

As these Levites, including the priests, were elected, or selected, for the purpose of being the instructors of Israel, so we perceive the Scriptures to teach that the Church of the First-born, when glorified, will be associated with Messiah in His great work of blessing and instructing all the people all the families of the earth. The knowledge of the Lord at that time will be made known to all mankind; all the blind eyes shall be opened and all the deaf ears shall be unstopped. All the Levite class will share in the work of blessing, which the Lord for so many centuries has declared through the mouth of all the holy Prophets.

The merit of the death of Jesus, the Just for the unjust, when applied on behalf of the whole world, will be efficacious for the canceling of the sins of the world, and their full reconciliation to the Father. It will be Divine mercy, however, which will prevent mankind from being at once turned over directly to the Father, as soon as the satisfaction for their sins shall have been tendered and accepted at the close of this Age of dealing with the Church. Instead a New Law Covenant will be sealed and made operative with Israel, and under that new Covenant the whole world will be privileged to come into relationship with Messiah and the blessings of His Kingdom, which will represent to them Divine mercy, power and opportunity for returning to human perfection and an everlasting, earthly home or, rejecting this grace, they will die the Second Death, from which there will be no recovery.

The effect of the New Covenant will be to bring the willing and obedient of all the people of earth fully back into harmony with God; and this, attained at the end of Messiah's reign of a thousand years, will prepare the way for the surrender of everything to the Heavenly Father, that He may be all in all, and that the world thereafter may be dealt with as perfect beings, along the lines of absolute justice and without any further need of a Mediator or other merciful provisions.

THE PITH OF THE ARGUMENT

This is the pith of St. Paul's argument in our text and context. He points us down to the consummation of this

3H500

Age to the time when the Church of the First-born shall be completed on the plane of glory to the time when Israel and the world of mankind will reach the place where God will introduce the New Covenant, typified in the Law Covenant. As the latter was introduced by the shaking of Sinai, in a general time of darkness, thus, the Apostle intimates, the New Covenant is about to be inaugurated, in the end of this Age, by a time of most awful trouble, of which that at Sinai was merely a symbolic picture or type. God's voice then shook the earth, but in the antitype He will shake everything that can be shaken. Things which are absolutely just, true and righteous will remain unshaken, and we, the Church of the First-born, the antitypical Priesthood, will receive a Kingdom which cannot be shaken.

THE TRUE CHURCH'S GLORY

In the past we failed to see who would be member of the true Church because our eyes of understanding were beclouded by error. Similarly, we have failed to see the grandeur, the honor and blessing which God has promised shall be the portion of the one true Church, the "little flock." We mixed heavenly things with earthly things. We confounded the blessing of Restitution to human perfection and an earthly Eden with the spiritual blessing. We appropriated to ourselves the promises made to the faithful of Israel, that they should "build houses and inhabit them, and plant vineyards and eat the fruit of them, and should long enjoy the work of their hands." In general we were confused.

Now as we come to see God's great Plan and the different features of the same, we are able to discriminate and to apply properly the Scriptures relating to each class. The Royal Priesthood are to be joint-heirs with the Redeemer, partakers of the divine nature and sharers of their Lord's glory, honor and immortality (Rom. 2:7.) The larger company, symbolized by all the Levites, aside from the family of Aaron, are to be the honored servants of the Royal Priesthood; and the world of mankind are to have the glorious opportunities and blessings of earthly restitution.

Only the consecrated and spirit-begotten can have any share in the selection and salvation now in progress, and these must all be tested as to loyalty to God, to the Truth, and to the spirit of righteousness and the spirit of love. The "little flock," the priestly few who are to share the divine nature, will be composed of such as have demonstrated their loyalty to the Lord most satisfactorily. They will be copies of His dear Son, their Redeemer and Lord. This is the one, true Church. To membership in it is our "high calling". The spirit which every member of it must have is the Holy Spirit. The faith acceptance by each member in it is "the faith once delivered unto the saints;" the baptism to which every member of it must voluntarily submit is the baptism into Christ's death. "If we be dead with Him we shall also live with Him."

LOST PARADISE TO BE RESTORED

Pastor Russell made some startling statements in connection with his discourse on the Blood Atonement. He chose for his text the words, "For the life of the flesh is in the blood, and I have given it to you upon the altar to make an Atonement for your souls." (Lev. 17: 11). He said:

All the trend of religious scholarship in recent years is away from the Bible and in line with the Evolution theory. The Bible sets forth that the first man was created perfect, in the image and likeness of his Creator, and that when on trial for life or death everlasting he was disobedient, and came under the sentence of death; and that all trouble, all sin and sorrow, pain and death, for the past six thousand years, is the penalty, the result, of that fall from obedience and harmony with God. The Bible teaches the necessity for an Atonement for sin, and this lesson was shown in the typical sacrifices of bullocks and goats, which Israelites for centuries commemorated, especially upon their Atonement Day, at the beginning of each year.

THE BIBLE AND EVOLUTION OPPOSED

Evolution claims that man started as a cousin to the monkey, and that instead of falling into sin and death, an evolution process has been bringing him up, up to his present high elevation. This theory, having no place for sin or a fall, finds, of course, no place or need for a recovery, through a Redeemer, a Savior. The two theories are absolutely opposed. Whoever believes the Darwinian theory cannot, logically, be a Christian. Whoever is a Christian cannot, logically, hold to the Darwin theory. And yet the pulpits of Christendom are well stocked with Higher Critics and Evolutionists, and all of our colleges and theological seminaries are graduating others, all antagonistic to the Bible and its presentations. For years the fight has been conducted on the quiet. The unbelievers hold the best and most influential pulpits and professorships in Christendom, and insidiously, craftily, undermine the faith of those who are paying them their salaries.

It is time that the battle between truth and error should come out into the open, because the majority of those who are being misled do not realize the situation until their faith is entirely undermined-until their minds are so entrenched in error that the verities of God's Word, including the words of Jesus and the Apostles, have passed with them into the list of absurdities, amongst these, the stories of Jonah and the whale, Noah and the flood, etc., endorsed by Jesus and the Apostles.

HIGHER CRITICISM MEANS HIGHER INFIDELITY

Today every college, every theological seminary throughout the whole civilized world, is teaching what is commonly known as Higher Criticism of the Bible -- though the proper name for it would be higher infidelity -- infidelity amongst the higher ones of all Christendom.

3H501

These Higher Critics are doing the same work exactly that Thomas Paine and Robert Ingersoll did, only that they are carrying on their work on a higher plane-appealing not to the gross and the vile, but to the refined, intelligent and truth seeking. As a result their influence is a thousand fold more injurious. Those to whom Paine and Ingersoll appealed were very rarely Christians at all; hence they destroyed very little faith-they merely made their unbelief more rank and foul.

But these Higher Critic infidels of this "evil day" are making use of all the vast machinery of Christendom in all denominations, especially through theological seminaries, to undermine and overthrow the faith of all who have named the name of Christ, great and small, rich and poor, cultured and ignorant. It is being done systematically, too, craftily, deceitfully, in a manner that the masses of the people would scarcely credit. It is safe to say that fully four out of five who graduate from theological seminaries of all denominations are Higher Critic infidels, who are instructed that their main business is to promote morality amongst the people, especially to build up Churchanity, particularly their own denomination, and to gradually, stealthily, craftily wean the people from the faith of the Bible to their higher critical dogmas. And they are succeeding most wonderfully. A "pestilence" is the only figure of speech which really fits to this pernicious influence.

"OUT OF THINE OWN MOUTH WILL I JUDGE THEE"

Said the Lord, and in harmony with this we find that in the Lord's providence these Higher Critics are gradually more and more telling on themselves. But the nominal Christian is quite obtuse, and many of the true Christians, as the Apostle explains, are merely "babes in Christ," unable to use the strong meat of the Word, and capable only of enjoying or using the "milk of the Word," and incapable of using its strong meat. Hence the open declaration of these wolves in sheeps clothing, who masquerade as sheep, are not taken seriously. If the sheep are startled by the words, they are soothed again by the thought that this is our kind minister, polished in manner and well educated, and he surely would not lead us astray, he surely would not deceive us. If he had ceased to believe the Bible and become an infidel he surely would have left the pulpit. Poor innocents!

BLOOD ATONEMENT FOR SIN

Our text refers to a blood-atonement for sin. The Law Covenant required the death of a bullock and a goat, but the repetition of these sacrifices every year indicated that no cancellation was effected thereby -- merely a typical covering of sin for a year. The Law required an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, a man's life for a man's life, which implies that a perfect man must of necessity die in order to be the Redeemer of Adam and the race which shared his condemnation. The bullock of the sin-offering, therefore, was merely a type of a better sacrifice. The true sacrifice was provided in the death of the Man Christ Jesus. He was a man and yet not a sinful man because, although born of a woman, His life was from above. Had He received his life from an earthly father, He would have been a blemished, imperfect, sinful man, and as such could not have paid the ransom-price for another. For this cause One was chosen to be the Redeemer who was "holy, harmless, undefiled and separate from sinners." And all this because of His miraculous conception.

As in the type the blood of the bullock was used to make a typical atonement for a year, so in the antitype the blood of Jesus is efficacious to make atonement for the sins of the whole world. In the type an earthly priest offered the blood, in an earthly tabernacle; in the antitype, He who became the Sin-Offering, begotten of the Holy Spirit, at the time of His consecration, was therefore recognized as the great Antitypical High Priest. After His resurrection He ascended on high, "to appear in the presence of God for us'-for the Church-first; and when the Church shall be completed, He will appear for the world. He will seal the New Covenant for Israel, applicable to all the families of the earth, through Israel. Then, as the great Mediator of that New Covenant (Jer. 31:31), He will, for a thousand years, reign as King of the earth, the Antitype of Melchisedeck Priest upon His throne-a Royal Priest, possessed of the necessary power to put down sin and to uplift humanity and perform the function of instructing and blessing mankind.

TO REGAIN PARADISE LOST

The Paradise lost when Adam sinned was a miniature one. It is to be restored and to be world-wide in extent. "God will make His earthly footstool glorious." He has promised to make His footstool glorious -- "He formed it not in vain, He formed it to be inhabited." -- Isa. 60:13, 66:1, 45:18.

As the earthly Eden it will be inhabited by its master, man; the restored earth would be naught without its master restored. And this is the Divine provision, that as by man came death, sin, sorrow, pain, trouble, by a man also shall come the resurrection of the dead, the uplifting of Adam's race, mentally, morally, physically, to human perfection, happiness and everlasting life. Earth's blessings will be for all except two classes: (1) Those who love sin and hate righteousness, after having been brought to a full knowledge of both good and evil, will have no further Divine favor, but will die the Second Death. (2) The others who will not get human perfection and earth's blessings will be a spiritual class, a saintly class who God is now selecting from among mankind to be His co-laborers with Christ in the uplifting and restitution of humanity.

Unquestionably, the Almighty could have arranged a plan for dealing with humanity differently -- He could have put a different penalty upon Father Adam. The present arrangement was made so as to display (1) Divine Justice, (2) Divine Love, (3) Divine Power, (4) Divine Wisdom. Man's fall and degradation under the death sentence witnessed to men and to angels the downward tendency of sin and Divine justice in man's condemnation. Divine Love is manifested in the work of redemption. Divine Power will be manifested, during the reign of Messiah, in the uplifting of humanity from sin and death-the resurrection of the dead. Divine Wisdom will finally be seen by all when the great work of reconciliation shall have been effected.

THE LIFE IS IN THE BLOOD

We have always known that in a very important sense the life of every creature is in its blood, as our text declares. But we are continually finding that the Bible contains such a superhuman wisdom that many of its statements grow in importance as our knowledge increases. Our test is no exception to this rule. The latest findings of science are to the effect that life and nature are more particularly represented in the blood than in any other manner.

If the theory of Evolution seemed supported by Mr. Darwin's careful interbreeding of his pigeons, we are not to forget the difficulty he encountered in maintaining his fancy breeds. The constant tendency appeared to be to turn back to the original stock. We are now informed that this is a rule, a law of nature, which applies both to animal and vegetable life. We are informed that all such breedings return to their original species in the third and fourth generation. It is even pointed out now that diseases of the blood proceed no further than the third or fourth generation, and this most fortunately, otherwise the physical health of humanity might be much more impaired than it is.

Is not this a direct corroboration of that Bible statement which some of us once thought so ungracious-God's declaration that He would "visit the sins of the fathers upon the children, unto the third and fourth generation?" (Ex. 20:5.) It now appears that, instead of being a mark of Divine disfavor, it is a mark of Divine mercy that hereditary taint in the blood is limited to the third or fourth generation.

A celebrated physician and scientist, Dr. William Hanna Thomson, promulgating this theory, said:"Professor George H. F. Nuttall, of the University of Cambridge, took up the subject and has so extended its application that a single drop of blood from an animal now suffices, not only to show by its own peculiar chemical reaction what animal it comes from, but also how nearly related an animal is by his blood to other animals. It begins, therefore, to look as if the whole classification of zoology might have to be re-arranged according to these blood tests. Thus a drop of blood from a walrus shows no relation to a drop of whales's blood, or the blood of any other cetacean, such as seals or porpoises, which, like the walrus, are mammals that have taken to the sea."

We may be sure that those who hold fast to the teachings of the Bible will come out on the right side of the argument in the long run. The endeavor of world-wise men to get away from God's book has led many of them to extremes of thought and of statement, which some day will be fully rectified to their shame, said Pastor Russell. The Bible foretells this, saying, "The wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid." (Isa. 29:14.) St. Paul refers to science, falsely so-called, which will ultimately be proven entirely wrong.

COMPLETE SIN-ATONEMENT

For nearly six thousand years the reign of sin and death has prevailed. It is nearly two thousand years since the Redeemer came to give His life as man's redemption price, yet still the reign of sin and death continues. It is not because the blood of Christ was insufficient to satisfy the claims of justice for the sins of the world, but because, before the merit of the blood of Christ could be given to Adam and his race, it must have a previous use. That use has been in the progress for the past eighteen centuries, during which it has been the basis of the Church's Justification by faith.

There is a difference between the Church's faith justification of this Age, and the world's actual justification, to be accomplished in the next Age. The world will actually get restitution to human life and its privileges, earthly dominion, etc. All that Adam had and lost, all that Jesus redeemed, will be given to Adam and his race to have and to hold as theirs forever.

But, meantime, the merit of Christ's blood or sacrifice is used in the interest of "the Church of the First-born." The earthly, natural rights will not be given to the Church, for she is to have "some better thing" -- a heavenly inheritance with her Lord and a participation in His spirit nature. The Redeemer's merit is imputed to the Church, to cover the imperfection and weakness of each one called and drawn of the Father to membership in the Bride of Christ. The difference between a gift and an imputation is manifest-an imputation signifies merely a loan, an assistance. Thus the merit of Christ, imputed to those who would become His Elect Church, covers their blemishes so that they may present their bodies living sacrifices, holy and acceptable to God; as footstep followers of Jesus -- as participants with Him in His spirit nature and in an attainment of the heavenly nature.

Thus it will be seen that since the entire world lost life and all its privileges through the disobedience of Adam, all of these may be fully recovered from their inherited disaster, through the Redeemer, because His life was given-figuratively. His blood was shed -- "the just for the unjust," as the great Sin-Atonement for the world.

ATONEMENT FOR THE SOUL

In our text the word soul is a synonym for person or being. Father Adam was a human soul, a human being, so also his children. He alone, however, had a standing before justice. He alone was perfect, he alone was on trial, and through his disobedience and fall his children are involved. Jesus was, originally, a spirit being, personality or soul, the Logos. He became a partaker of flesh and blood; He was not, previously, a human soul, hence it was that it was necessary for Him to lay aside the glory of His higher nature or order of being and become a human soul, "that He, by the grace of God might taste death for every man." (Heb. 2:9.) He gave his blood, His life, a Ransom for all, and thus we see the fulfillment of our text, the exhibition of Divine favor and love with the resultant blessing to the world, during Messiah's reign, and the blessing and exaltation of the Church, which must precede.

FALSE THEORIES OF DIVINE PLAN

London Tabernacles, Lancaster Gate, W., was crowded to hear Pastor Russell. He spoke of mistaken notions respecting the end of the world. He assured his audience that "the earth abideth forever," and claimed errors were built upon misinterpretations of the Scriptures. We report him on Rev. 10:6, 7 as follows.

Our text, with other Scriptural statements respecting the end of the world (for instance. St. Peter's statement, "The heavens being on fire shall be dissolved"), have led Christians in general to accept the theory that God has decreed that shortly, or at some time, our earth is to be burned. The early Church expected and prayed for the second coming of Messiah, to establish the Kingdom of righteousness, to overthrow sin and to release mankind from its bondage and weakness and from the power of death, and thus to bless the whole earth, restoring all things to the glorious condition represented in miniature in Eden: man in perfection, with a Paradise home. Acts 3:19-21.

But as centuries passed without the manifestation of Messiah's Kingdom, those expectations yielded to another suggestion, namely, that Jesus had not meant what had been understood, but meant that the Church should convert the world, under His supervision, during a period of a thousand years, and that then He would come and give their work His stamp of approval and wind things up by taking all the saintly to heaven, setting fire to the earth to entirely consume it.

CATHOLICS AND PROTESTANTS MUCH CONFUSED

Both Catholics and Protestants have been operating in harmony with this erroneous thought. Catholics claim that the Kingdom of Messiah was set up long ago and that the popes and cardinals are representatives of Jesus and the Church. They claim that the Pope is Christ's Vice-gerent that is to say, He reigns instead of Christ, as His representative. They claim that "the thousand years" is already in the past, since 1799, and that we are now in the "little season" mentioned in Rev. 20:3, in which Satan was to be loosed, at the close of the thousand years.

Many of them understand that Protestantism in general, and, particularly, Socialism and Free Masonry, are organizations of Satan, which will soon be destroyed in the burning up of the world.

Protestants are also much confused on the subject. They claim that we are in the reign of Messiah, but they are not sure when it began or when it will end. Before Luther's day the Catholic view prevailed, but according to Luther's preaching the Papal claims were false, and later the Papal system was branded as Anti-christ. Since then Protestants are in confusion. Some recognize the Church of England and its kingly head as God's Kingdom in the earth, but they admit that it has not yet conquered the earth, nor is God's will done as in heaven, even in the British Isles. The Church of Russia makes a similiar claim to being the Kingdom of God, and honors the Pope as the reigning representative of Messiah. Emperor William of Germany also has on his coins the legend that he is reigning "by the grace of God" that his kingdom is a part of Messiah's Kingdom.

But all these theories Catholics and Protestants are now ignoring. In the light of our day none dare preach such theories. With present-day enlightenment it seems foolish to declare that the various kingdoms of Europe are Messiah's Kingdom, and that they are establishing a reign of righteousness. The costly preparations of war made by these very nations discredit entirely the claim that they are parts of Messiah's great Kingdom of righteousness and peace.

All denominations engaged in missionary work are professing the thought that soon the world will be converted; that the second coming of Christ will then take place, and then will come the consummation, and the burning of the world. How strange, how illogical! The heathen, according to reliable government statistics, are twice as numerous today as they were a century ago. Six hundred millions there were then; there are twelve hundred millions now. How long would it require, at this rate, to convert the world? And if the heathen were converted to the same condition of civilization enjoyed in Europe and America, could we claim then that God's will was done on earth as it is done in heaven? Assuredly not.

Thank God, the second coming of Messiah will not delay until the world is converted and God's will fully done and the plan of salvation ended. Quite to the contrary. His coming is for the very purpose of bringing all things into subjection to the Father's will. He comes that He may reign as King of kings and Lord of lords, in association with His Church. He will not reign through a representative or vice-gerent, but personally, and "unto Him every knee shall bow and every tongue confess" to the glory of God. In His day the righteous shall flourish, and the evil-doers shall be cut off. The faithful Church, sharing in her Lord's resurrection, the First Resurrection, to glory, honor and immortality, will be His associate kings and priests, to reign for a thousand years. (Rev. 20:6.)

FIRE SYMBOLICAL OF DESTRUCTION

Let us examine some texts which seem to teach that our earth will be destroyed by fire, and note that they are symbolical. "Fire" is frequently used in the Scripture as a symbol of destruction. Thus the Church is exhorted to mortify or kill the fleshly nature, and is told that the fiery trials of life will assist them in this work. The opposition of enemies is to be destroyed by works of mercy and kindness, which, figuratively, will be "coals of fire upon their heads." St. Peter mentions special trials and tribulations coming upon the Church, designed to purify her purge out and destroy the dross. He says: "Think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you." 1 Pet. 4:12.

St. Paul refers to special trials upon the Church in the end of the Gospel Age, which will consume false doctrines, human traditions, etc., and all false faith, but which will leave unscathed the true Faith and true characters. He says: "If any man build upon this foundation gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, stubble, every man's work shall be made manifest, for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is. If any man's work abide which he hath built thereupon, he shall receive a reward. If any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss; but he himself shall be saved, yet so as by fire." 1 Cor. 3:12-15.

These various Scriptures do not prove that the world could not be destroyed by fire in a literal way, but they do prove that "fire" is very frequently mentioned in the Bible in a figurative or symbolical manner. We might multiply the instances: "Our God is a consuming fire" as regards everything contrary to righteousness; the symbolical "lake of fire," in the book of Revelation, is explained to signify the Second Death, utter destruction, without hope of recovery.

WORLD BURNING UNSCRIPTURAL

The supposition that the earth will be destroyed by fire, either soon or ever, would be contrary to the statement that “the earth abideth forever,” and the declaration that God formed it not in vain, but formed it to be inhabited. (Isa. 14:18.) One of the very strong passages which seems to teach that the earth will be devoured by fire is found in Zeph. 3:8: “Wait ye upon Me, saith the Lord, until that Day that I rise up to the prey, for My determination is to gather the nations, that I may assemble the kingdoms, to pour all My fierce anger; for the whole earth shall be devoured with the fire of My jealousy” anger.

That the fire of God’s anger which will come upon the world will not destroy the physical earth, with all its inhabitants, but will destroy the evil of present institutions, is shown by the succeeding sentence, which declares. “Then will I turn to the people a pure Message, that they may all call Him with one consent.” If the fire of this text were literal, the earth and its people would be no more, but as symbolical fire it is perceived that it is a burning against unrighteousness, iniquity, sin, the overthrow of all institutions of evil, and the awakening of mankind and preparing them to hear the Voice of God, the language of the Truth, the Divine Message.

What we have seen prepares us for the somewhat more difficult statement of St. Peter: “The Day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night, in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat; the earth also, and the works that are therein, shall be burned up.... The heavens, being on fire, shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat. Nevertheless we, according to His promise, look for a New Heavens and a New Earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness.” (2 Pet. 3:10-13.) To harmonize these words of St. Peter with other Bible statements, we must consider the “fire” here mentioned to be symbolical. Not only the earth is to be consumed, but the heavens also. The “heavens” will take fire first and be dissolved.

What heavens shall we suppose are here referred to? not the literal, starry heavens, nor even our atmospheric heavens, nor yet the heaven of Divine Presence and glory. The church system, the ecclesiastical powers, are symbolically referred to as the “heavens,” at the present time supervising and over-ruling the temporal and social arrangements which are represented by the “earth.” The “earth” represents organized society, as in contrast with the “sea” which symbolically represents disorganized society, the uncivilized and all who are rebellious against governments. When the “heavens” (ecclesiastical powers) of the present time shall be “dissolved,” it will be with a great noise, with great confusion, commotion. Ecclesiastical institutions of the present time are in a very troubled condition, though they are in no danger of immediate collapse. The principal outcry is that few attend church services, and that the collections are small.

St. Peter's words indicate a crisis in ecclesiastical affairs still future. The Scriptures show us that a great Federation is seemingly bringing Ecclesiasticism into greater power than it has exercised in years. Other intimations of Scripture lead us to expect that that federative organization will attempt a rigid control of the world through affiliation with political and civil power, and that a considerable measure of success will lead to intoxication on the subject and an attempt to take away the liberties of the people entirely, the result of which will be a great explosion, or a great "earthquake," in the symbolical language of Scripture. It will be then that the heavens will take fire and be consumed with a great noise, commotion, disaster, etc. And the commotion will include the social order. The elements will melt with the intensity of the heat, the strife, which will then be engendered. The elements of society are those mutual advantages and assistances of good people, upon which the stability of government rests.

The Bible clearly intimates that the condition of affairs symbolized by the melting of society and the disintegrating of its elements in the great heat of strife at that time will be the result of superstition and fear. The end will be anarchy, or as the Bible declares, "Every man's hand will be against his neighbor." Selfishness will be the predominating, ruling principle.

THE SYMBOLIC FIRE USEFUL

The question arises, Why should God permit the fall of our Christian systems, which certainly have done much that is morally assistful to the world? And why should He permit the overthrow of the present order of things, which certainly is much more advantageous than anarchy and disorder? The Bible Answer--is that God is not forcing this issue, but is merely allowing mankind to work out these results. The trouble and disaster will come as the natural result of ignoring the principles of Divine Law. Ecclesiasticism is unauthorized to claim that it is God's Kingdom, invested with Divine power and authority to rule the world. This fallacious claim and the attempt to enforce it will bring upon it the "fire" which will consume.

The world, neglectful of the Golden Rule, and obeying the false standard that "might makes right," will overthrow society by precipitating a conflict between the two great parties the capitalists, trusts, kings and princes on the one hand, and labor unions and the masses on the other hand. Each will feel that a death struggle has arrived and that the battle must be fought. Each will feel unwarrantedly self-confident of victory. According to the Bible, the result will be the complete wreck of our present society, symbolically pictured as “fire.”

But the Lord through the Prophet Zephaniah points out that, following this time of “fire” and trouble, will come a blessing to the earth. So also He declares through St. Peter, that following the symbolic fire, will come “a New Heaven” and a new earthly condition, the basic principle of which will be righteousness; and the Prophet Zephaniah says that then God’s Message, in its purity, shall reach the people. Both statements are true. On the ruins of our present civilization, when mankind will be sick at heart with the failure of what they had considered to be the Brain Age, they will look to the Lord, to whom they should have looked sooner. They will perceive the coming reign of righteousness and will say, “Lo this is our God, we have waited for Him and He will deliver us.” (Isa. 25:9.) Then the Prophet declares, “The desire of all nations shall come.” (Hag. 2:7.)

All nations are desiring blessing, prosperity, and God desires that all shall have these very favors, and they will be obtainable through Messiah’s Kingdom. Then the blessing of mankind will begin. The Messianic Kingdom, invisible but All-Powerful, will be thoroughly manifest in its dealings and its righteous judgments will have control. The blessing will come through Israel, extending to and including “all the families of the earth.”

How grand the thought that the New Heavens will be the new ecclesiastical powers the glorified Church Christ and His Bride in glory and power. The New Earth mentioned by the Apostle will be the new organization of human society, along the lines of righteousness the Golden Age.

We have not forgotten our text. What we have said is in line with it. It requires the addition of one word to make its meaning clear. The Mystery of God, which has been kept secret from the foundation of the world, shall be finished, completed, no longer a mystery. “And the angel sware... that the time should be no longer (delayed.)” (Rev. 10:6, 7.) This has no reference to the end of time. Time can never end. Other Scriptures show that we are living very near the finish, the completion of the Church, which is the “Mystery.” (Eph. 3:3-6; 5:32.) With the completion of the Church (the “Mystery”) will begin the fulfillment of all the glorious promises of the Bible respecting the lifting of the curse from the earth, and the Divine blessing upon all earthly things.

GOD'S STANDARDS TO BE UPRAISED

Pastor Russell spoke here twice to large audiences. We report one of his discourses which treated on the difference between human and Divine standards of measurement. He said in part:—

When we were children the days were longer and years seemed interminable. The holidays of the year stood out very seldom to recur. Gradually all this changed as we reached the zenith of our energy. Now the days chase each other and we marvel at the brevity of life. How God regards time we might not know if He had not revealed the matter in His Word. As we read, "A thousand years in Thy sight are but as yesterday," and "A day with the Lord is as a thousands years." Our minds assent it must be so! And God's people are blessed in proportion as they are able to take the Divine viewpoint of life and all of its affairs.—

From the Divine standpoint, then, we see that the six thousand years of earth's history, from Adam's day until now, are merely the work-day portion of a great week whose Seventh Day or Sabbath of a thousand years is "the day of Christ," "the last day," "the day of judgment" or trial for the world; the day in which "every knee shall bow and every tongue confess to the glory of God;" the day in which "the righteous shall flourish and the evil-doers shall be cut off in the Second Death;" the day during which God will "pour out His Spirit upon all flesh," as He now grants it to His servants and handmaidens.

In the Divinely arranged custom of the Jews the new day began at sunset. Thus we are in the evening or beginning of the great Seventh Day of the Divine Week the day which means so much of blessing, uplifting, privilege, opportunity of Divine favor to our race through Messiah's glorious Kingdom, which throughout this Seventh Day will reign "from sea to sea and from the river to the ends of the earth," putting down everything contrary to the Divine standards and uplifting the world of mankind (bought with the precious blood at Calvary) from sin, meanness, degradation and the tomb up, up, up, step by step to human perfection in a world-wide Eden. The unwilling, resisting Divine favors and privileges, shall be destroyed in the Second Death.

"Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work, but the Seventh is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God. In it thou shalt not do any work." Whoever reads carefully, intelligently, the pages of history, must be struck with the energy which has been manifested by our race and is still being manifested. The pyramids and the ruins of ancient cities, and civilization, all tell us of the ceaseless struggle of humanity against the adverse conditions prevailing in the earth, including the strife against sickness and death, and, by a few, a noble fight against sin and further degradation.

Well does the Prophet express the truth of our observation, saying, "We have not wrought any deliverance in the earth." (Isa. 26:18.) A few have gained fabulous riches, name of fame, place or power, but the majority during all this period have gone down in the strife to the tomb, slain by the great associated monarchies which the Bible declares are now reigning Sin and Death.

And even the comparatively few who have gained eminence and whose victories are most loudly extolled in human history have fallen also--many of them in the very prime of life all of them in comparative childhood. Why is it that a man should not live for a hundred years when we have the Divine assurance that even under the Divine sentence Father Adam resisted death for 930 years so vigorous was his constitution?

WEARIED CHILDREN FALL ASLEEP

From the Divine standpoint the children of Adam, born in sin, shapen in iniquity, of a few days and full of trouble, fall asleep in death like children wearied in their play; albeit it is a play grim with tragedy, in which each actor performs his part most realistically.

From the Divine standpoint human ambition and strife and energy are accomplishing a useful purpose, even though their efforts are usually selfish and often brutish. The lessons now being learned by Adam's children will not all be lost. The greater mellowness of heart and broader views of the majority of those who have thus battled selfishly for even fifty years suggest that, as a whole, our race might do better work in a second century than in the first. Moreover, the Scriptures indicate that the great drama of sin, selfishness and passion being enacted by humanity is furnishing a lesson to angelic hosts respecting the exceeding sinfulness of sin its downward tendency its bitter fruit and the hopelessness of any to escape therefrom except by the Divine assistance.

NEXT THE LESSON OF GOOD

The forbidden fruit of Eden was from the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. Doubtless the Creator would eventually have given a full knowledge of both good and evil to our first parents. They were merely forbidden an immediate plunge into knowledge to their own disadvantage. Craving knowledge before its due time, Mother Eve disobeyed her Maker and enticed her husband also into disobedience. The result has been that instead of learning the philosophy of good at first and of evil later, they and their race have been precipitated into lessons respecting evil first, with the knowledge of good to come later.

The holy angels, who have never transgressed the Divine Law, have continually the lesson of good and an appreciation of the Divine character, the principles of righteousness, etc. Their lessons in respect to evil they are gaining by observation instead of by experience the way recommended to our first parents by the Creator, but in their ignorance rejected.

But God foreknew the course which His human children would take under the influence of temptation; He foreknew that they would fall into sin and therefore would experience its penalty, sorrow, pain and death. While His eye has pitied His poor creatures for six thousand years, nevertheless He has allowed His great original Plan of the Ages to move along slowly to a grand climax the Plan which He purposed in Himself from before the foundation of the world.

That climax in human affairs, we believe, is near at hand. It marks a great change in Dispensation. The six thousand years, the reign of sin and death, are to be completed by a terrible time of trouble which might not improperly be termed the natural result of human selfishness (sin) operating under the influence of the great principles of the New Dispensation now being ushered in. Selfishness, as represented in the accumulated financial power and energy called trusts and combines, is about to come into conflict with selfishness (sin), represented in the combining forces of humanity, labor unions, etc. The head-on collision which thinking people foresee, and which the Scriptures graphically portray, will give to society an earthquake shock; more than this, the graphic picture is of a world-conflagration which will involve the heavens, or ecclesiastical powers, as well as the earth, or social system, and the mountains, or kingdoms of the world. The picture would be too terrible to paint, and useless as well, were it not for the silver lining to the cloud.

The awful shock which God's people are warned to avoid so far as possible by following peace and benevolence will merely prepare the way for the glorious blessings of the great Seventh Day, in which man will rest from his own schemes and endeavors and come fully under the control of the great King, Messiah, whose rule of righteousness for human uplift has been prophetically pictured for centuries.

THE PICTURE IN RETROSPECT

Still looking from Divine standpoint at the six great thousand-year days in which sin and death have reigned, we perceive that one effect has been as foretold to Mother Eve, "I will greatly multiply thy sorrows and thy conception." We perceive that our race has multiplied much more rapidly than it would have done had it remained perfect as at first, for the first children, even in the days following the fall, were frequently born when the father was an hundred years old.

We have already referred to the lesson respecting the sinfulness of sin which comes to all mankind most fully, most consciously to those favored by contact with the people of God who have received the Divine Revelation. The enlightened ones have been but a small portion of the whole. After two thousand years of the reign of sin and death God foretold in an obscure manner the blessing He intended to bring subsequently to the race: To Abraham He said, All the families of the earth I will bless through thee and through thy Seed. That message, followed in Israel by the giving of the Law Covenant, has been the Light of the world. For eighteen centuries it was the only light of hope, of prospect. Then, in partial fulfillment of that promise, same Jesus, the first practical expression of Divine love and pity for our race. No longer would God content Himself merely with promises. He would now begin the—

WORK OF HUMAN RESCUE

But if any hoped that world-wide blessings would immediately spring up as the result of Jesus' work, he was mistaken. On the contrary, Jesus Himself was combated by the Prince of darkness and his deluded subjects. And the same principle has obtained for nearly two thousand years all followers of Jesus have been obliged to take up their cross and suffer for righteousness, for godliness, in the midst of a crooked and perverse people, amongst whom they have shone as lights and whom, to some extent, they have assisted in enlightening, civilizing, etc.

Thus the six days of the week, so far as light, truth, knowledge of God is concerned, have all been dark days. The lights which God provided in His followers have been as candles set upon candlesticks. They have indeed reprov'd the darkness, but they have been powerless to scatter it. Nor did God so intend. His declaration through the Prophet is, "Weeping may endure for the night, but joy cometh in the morning." (Psa. 30:5.) Again, "Darkness covers the earth, gross darkness the people;" but "the Sun of Righteousness shall arise with healing in His beams." Isa. 60:2; Mal. 4:2.

This promised Sun of Righteousness which is to scatter the darkness of earth, we are told distinctly, consists of Jesus and those who have walked in His footsteps throughout this Gospel Age. These, approved of the Father, will be glorified beyond the veil by a resurrection to glory, honor and immortality. Then speedily these will “shine forth as the Sun in the Kingdom of their Father.” (Matt. 23:43.) This will mean the ushering in of the great Seventh Day Messiah’s Day.

GOD HAS NOT NEGLECTED US

From this Divine viewpoint God is not slack concerning His promises. Only six days of the week have yet passed. The glorious Seventh Day in which the great Mediator between God and men will assume His Kingdom powers is just at hand. Instead of thinking that God is neglecting and forgetting to fulfill the Messianic promises, we should with the eyes of faith realize that He is working all things according to the counsel of His own will. We should consider the matter from the standpoint that God has exercised great patience with humanity in not blotting out the race; He has been long-suffering. An this assures us that the Unchangeable One would prefer that none of His creatures should perish in death, but rather that all, if they would, might turn unto Him and live. Ezek. 33:11.

The great opportunity for the masses of our race to turn to the Lord and attain everlasting life will be after the darkness shall have passed, when the Sun of Righteousness shall be shining forth; after the Highway of Holliness shall have taken the place of the Broad Road to destruction; after Messiah, the great King, shall have dethroned Satan, the Prince of darkness, from the world’s control; after the Prince of Peace shall have established peace upon a proper basis. Who cannot sing heartily with the poet:

*“A thousand years, earth’s coming glory,
‘Tis the glad day so long foretold,
‘Tis the glad morn of Zion’s glory,
Prophets foresaw in times of old!”*

WAITING FOR THE MOTHER

Our race was generated by Father Adam as well as condemned to death through his disobedience. What the race needs is another father or life-giver, and this is exactly what the word Savior signifies Life-Giver, Father. The Redeemer, at the cost of His own life, became the purchaser of Adam and his race with a view to their resuscitation, their resurrection from sin and from death. Is not one of the Redeemer’s titles “The Everlasting Father” the Father who gives everlasting life. Unquestionably He has not yet fulfilled this glorious office of Life-Giver to Adam’s race; He will fulfil it, however—“in His Day.”

Speaking to His faithful disciples, His followers in the narrow way, Jesus promised them, “In the regeneration ye shall sit upon twelve thrones.” (Matt. 19:28) That regeneration period corresponds exactly to St. Peter’s “times of restitution,” or years of restoration (Acts 3:19), and both of these periods agree to the general teachings of Scripture respecting a resurrection at the last day Messiah's day the thousand years of regeneration, resurrection restitution, which will afford Adam and his race fullest opportunities for attaining perfection of human nature in an Edenic world-wide Paradise.

The Lord through the Prophet assures us of the wonderful success which will attend the establishment of the New Empire of earth, the dominion of the Prince of Light, which will supersede the dominion of the Prince of darkness, when Satan shall be bound for a thousand years, that he may deceive the peoples no more. Thus it is written, "He shall lay righteousness to the line and justice to the plummet and the hail (Truth) shall sweep away the refuge of lies." (Isa. 28:17)

But why the delay, do you ask? Ah, we answer, God did not permit Adam to begin the establishment of his race until first He gave him Eve as his bride, his wife. The word needed not merely a life-giver but a mother, a care-taker, a helpmate.

Similarly in the Divine arrangement God has provided that the restitution time, the world's uplifting period, the regeneration epoch for mankind, shall not begin until first the true Church, the "little flock," the Bride of Christ, shall be completed and be united or married to the Heavenly Bridegroom beyond the veil made partaker with Him of glory, honor and immortality the divine nature.

Thus, my dearly beloved, the great Plan of Ages, timed by Infinite Wisdom, has delayed long enough to permit you and me and all of God's Spirit-begotten children to make our calling and our election sure to a share with our Redeemer in His glorious work. How glad we are that the door of opportunity to this "high calling" still stands open and that the Heavenly Father and the Kingly Redeemer are beckoning us to share the things which eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, but which are reserved for us and for all who love Him sincerely more than they love houses or lands, parents or children or self.

SANER VIEWS ABOUT BAPTISM

Pastor Russell spoke twice to large audiences. We report one of his discourses which treat upon the subject of Baptism:

Church History shows that the damnation theories grew by degrees. First came the theory that every child of Adam was born damned to eternal torture at the hands of fire-proof devils, and that the only escape was through baptism. But it was claimed that baptism cancelled only previous sins and not subsequent ones; hence it was the custom in Constantine's time to put off baptism until as near the hour of death as possible. Tertullian is credited with supporting this view.

Later came St. Augustine, advancing the theory that only the Church would be saved and that baptism was for the purpose of induction into the Church. Naturally it followed that if infants died without being admitted into the Church they would go to eternal torture. As a result of this teaching infant baptism sprang into great popularity, which is still maintained. At first the infants were immersed in water, but later, under the belief that all bishops were successors of the apostles and equal in authority, Church Councils took the place of the Word of God. They not only sanctioned infant baptism, which is not even mentioned in the Bible, but additionally claimed that immersion was unnecessary and that a few drops of water would induct the aged or the babe into the Church and constitute an insurance against a hell of eternal torture. This theory still persists to perhaps a greater degree than many would imagine. Luther and his coadjutors protested against some of the doctrines of the Church of Rome, but accepted without protest infant baptism, sprinkling, etc., as necessary to preservation from everlasting torment.

UNBAPTIZED INFANTS IN TORTURE

Someone suggests, "Ah! we practice infant sprinkling, but it is merely a `christening. ' We have no thought whatever that the gracious Heavenly Father or His adorable Son, our Redeemer, would consign an infant to torture, even if it died without being christened." Do not be too sure, my brother. Superstitions die hard. I know of a white-haired bishop in the Episcopal Church who was appalled at the very suggestion that his infant grandchild might be safe in the arms of Jesus without having been `christened."

Not only so, but these superstitions of a darker day are forcefully impressed upon the "common people" by some of the clergy. Let me tell you of two cases:

(1.) A Lutheran couple in Pennsylvania had some unpleasantness with their pastor respecting Church dues. This caused them to absent themselves from Church service for several months. Meantime their babe became sick. The father humbled himself to go to his pastor to tell him of his distress and his fear that the child might die and of his desire to have it baptized. Imagine the anguish of the deluded parent when the pastor refused and told him that the child would go to hell and that this was his desert as a parent because of failure to keep in touch with his Church.

(2.) The other case was that of a Catholic couple in Wisconsin. Their two little girls died of diphtheria within a few hours of each other. When the parish priest was sent for he declined to come and refused permission to have the children buried in “holy ground.” The explanation given to the astonished parent was that they had neglected their duty toward the children, that they had not been baptized into the Church and consequently were lost.

To a friend the bereaved father declared that he wanted to have nothing whatever to do with so unjust a God who would consign his little, innocent children to eternal torture merely because of his sin, his neglect, in not having a few drops of water sprinkled in their faces by the priest! The friend had been reading my “Studies in the Scriptures” and explained to the bereaved father that Church creeds and theories are very different from the plain and simple teachings of the Bible. He showed him that his little ones were merely “asleep in Jesus” waiting for the glorious resurrection blessings of restitution, to be brought to mankind at the second coming of Jesus, after the completion of the elect Church and their change to heavenly glory. Could you wonder that that Catholic, a saloon-keeper, received a new ray of hope and that it had a transforming influence upon his life?

THE CHRISTIAN DISCIPLES' ERROR

Pastor Russell examined the doctrine of immersion as set forth by the Christian or Disciple denomination. He had not an unkind word to say respecting the people of this denomination, but he did dissect their doctrines, laying bare what he considered to be their inconsistencies, falsities.

Criticizing the immersion theory of the Christian-Disciples he declared that the texts used by this denomination as proofs that baptism is for the remission of sins were never applied to any except Jews. The Jews were in Covenant-relationship with God through the Mosaic Law. If they got into sin it was proper for them to repent, return to God and use water symbolically, indicating return from sin. All Jews in full harmony with the Law Covenant in Jesus' day were transferred from Moses to Christ. Only those who had committed special sins were called upon to wash away those sins symbolically in water.

Others living consistent lives as “Israelites indeed” were never instructed to be baptized or to wash away their sins. Amongst the Apostles, Pastor Russell said, there is no record of any of them having been immersed in water for the remission of sins, except St. Paul, and he only because he had persecuted the Church of Christ. The baptism into Christ announced for Gentile converts is wholly different, he declared, from the Jewish baptism for the remission of sins. An illustration of this, he said, is found in Acts 18:24, 25, where Apollos had baptized certain Gentiles of Ephesus with John's baptism for the remission of sins. St. Paul afterward declared this incorrect and directed them to be immersed again not for the remission of sins, but for induction into the Body of Christ, which is the Church. (Acts 19:1-6.)

But the chief point which Pastor Russell made against the Christian-Disciple theory, that Baptism is for the remission of sins, was that it naturally dis-fellowships all Christians who have not been immersed. The logic of this theory, he declared, would find few supporters in the Christian-Disciple denomination. The logic of it is this. If immersion is necessary for an adult in order that his sins may be remitted or washed away, it would logically follow that all adults not immersed are yet in their sins unforgiven. And this signifies, according to this theory, that, if they die thus they must suffer the penalty of their sins, which penalty, they say, is eternal torture.

BAPTIST THEORY IN ERROR

Next the Baptist theory of Baptism was dealt with. It was complimented as being more nearly in line with the Scriptures than any theory of Baptism held in the world. And yet, said the speaker, remarkably few Baptists today could or do stand by their theory, if put to the test. Nevertheless, in theory and practice, the great mass of Baptists declare that immersion is a necessary incidental to admission to the "Church of the Living God, whose names are written in heaven!"

In full keeping with this, in nine out of every ten Baptist Churches the world over, only immersed Christians are ever invited to the communion table to participate in the Lord's Supper. Why? Because they claim that only immersed persons belong to the true Church and that the communion service is exclusively for the Church.

If we ask them what are the advantages claimed for membership in the Church, they reply Salvation! What is the antithesis or opposite of salvation? we ask. They Answer--Lost! What do you mean by lost? we inquire. The reply is, To be banished from God and suffer everlasting torture.

So then, theoretically, our Baptist friends deliver to the unimmersed the same blood-curdling theory handed out by Christian-Disciples that Catholics, Lutherans, Presbyterians, Methodists, Congregationalists, etc., are enroute for eternal torture. The difference between the two theories is that the Disciples say that this awful fate impends upon the masses of Christendom, as well as upon heathendom, because their sins have not been forgiven, while the Baptists say, No, not for that cause, for Jesus died for all, but because they have not taken the necessary steps to get into the Church.

“TIMES OF SUCH IGNORANCE”

St. Paul tells us of certain times of ignorance which “God winked at” or disregarded. We believe that the Almighty graciously overlooked such inconsistencies in the theories of some of His children and charged them not with the responsibility of so terribly maligning the Divine Character and misrepresenting the Divine Word. But now our God is opening the eyes of our understanding and there is no longer excuse for any to believe such monstrous theories, nor excuse to still profess to believe them after they have been repudiated by the heart.

The true view of Baptism is one which cannot be controverted. It is consistent with itself and with every Bible statement. It recognizes every consecrated child of God of every denomination, or outside of all denominations. It inducts the saintly Baptist, saintly Disciple, saintly Catholic, Episcopalian, Lutheran, Congregationalist, Methodist, etc., into membership in the one Church of the Living God, whose names are written in heaven."

What Baptism can this be? We reply that it is the one mentioned by St. Paul, in a text which we have all read and quoted time and again: “So many of you as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into His death.” (Rom. 6:3.) The mistake we have all made in the past is in applying the Apostle’s words to water baptism. The Apostle said not a word about water baptism, but mentioned specifically the Baptism into Christ, into “the Body of Christ, which is the Church.”

The thought is that God has ordained the gathering of the elect Church during the Gospel Age. The Head of this Church was received up into glory eighteen centuries ago, and since Pentecost one and another of the true footstep followers of Jesus have been accepted of God through His merit and counted as “members of the Body of Christ, which is the Church.” First, Jewish believers were transferred from Moses into Christ.

Next the Message was extended to the Gentiles. But these could not pass from Moses into Christ because they were not in Moses, never having come under the Law Covenant arrangement. Hence, these could come into Christ only by direct baptism. All baptized into Jesus Christ occupy a specially preferred relationship to God and, if faithful to the end, will be received to glory, honor and immortality on the spirit of heavenly plane. But there is not a word of Scripture to say that the world, which misses this glorious exaltation, will on this account suffer eternal torture. They will lose the great prize, however.

WATER BAPTISM NOT THE DOOR INTO THE TRUE CHURCH

Our Baptist friends will agree to the above statement. They will say, Yes, that is what we mean, only, in order to be in Christ, we Baptists claim, water immersion is necessary.

We are glad to have their plain, candid statement and to meet the issue squarely. That is the Baptist mistake supposing that water baptism inducts anybody into membership in the true Church. They may indeed make water immersion the door into the Baptist Church, but this does not make it the door into “the Church of the Living God.” St. Paul defines the Baptism by which any Gentile may come into membership in the Body of Christ. Note his words again: “So many of you as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into His death.” Our Baptist friends think of this as though it read “were baptized in water.” This is their mistake as before stated.

But the question arises, Just what is meant by these words, “Baptized into His death?” Was His death in any way different from the death of others? Most decidedly it was! Our race die as sinners, children of wrath, under Divine sentence of death. But Jesus was not a sinner and hence was not under Divine sentence of death. He was “holy, harmless, undefiled and separate from sinners,” undefiled from Adamic death. His death was a sacrificial one a surrender of an unimpaired life. Those, therefore, who would become His footstep followers and be baptized into His death, must participate with Him in a sacrificial death. The Scriptures explain that this would be impossible except as those footstep followers should be cleansed and made acceptable sacrifices through the merit of Jesus, because “by nature we were all children of wrath even as others.”

Death was the real meaning of our Lord’s baptism. John the Immerser knew that Jesus was not a sinner, knew that He had no sins to wash away, and at first he declined to immerse Him. And he did so only after Jesus had assured him that it was right and that the matter had a deeper significance. “Suffer it to be so.”

OUR LORD’S BAPTISM FINISHED AT CALVARY

Our Lord for three and a half years was carrying out the consecration vow which in Jordan He symbolized baptism into death. Day by day He became more deeply immersed into death. That real immersion into death was finished on Calvary. In harmony with this the day before His death Jesus said, “I have a baptism to be baptized with, and how am I straitened until it be accomplished.” The next day it was accomplished, when He cried, “It is finished!” His baptism into death was finished.

The same thought the Master gave to His followers, saying to two who desired places on His right and His left in the Kingdom: "Ye know not what ye ask!" You do not know what it requires to secure exaltation to the Kingdom. Are you able, are you willing to drink of my cup of sorrow, self-denial, etc.? Are you willing "to be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with" the baptism into death? When the disciples replied that they were willing, the Master assured them that He would attend to the rest. The terms of discipleship have not changed.

Just a word further respecting water baptism. It has its place, not in keeping any out of eternal torment, nor in getting them into eternal glory; but it is a symbol, a beautiful picture in one act. It is a testimony to all believers that the consecrated one has vowed loyalty to the Redeemer even unto death. As such a confession of such a consecration, we commend water baptism to you all as being the Lord's own provision of a pictorial confession for those who have accepted His terms, surrendered their all, and are seeking to walk in newness of life and to attain the eternal glory by and by.

As for the unconsecrated world, it is fitting that they should not be baptized. Baptism was never intended except for the fully consecrated, the sanctified in Christ Jesus. When God's due time shall come the world of mankind will receive the blessings provided for them through the Redeemer's merit, under the gracious arrangement of that Redeemer's heavenly Kingdom, which will be established under the whole heavens for the purpose of uplifting mankind from sin and death whosoever wills

GOD'S PROMISES TO THE CHURCH

Pastor Russell on the Atlantic homeward bound.—" Well as usual, thank God!" was Pastor Russell's greeting by wireless to the millions of readers of his sermons in the secular press. His message for Sunday was from Psa. 43:5, 7: "Why art thou cast down, O my soul, and why art thou disquieted within me? Hope thou in God, for I shall yet praise Him.... All Thy waves and Thy billows are gone over me." We quote as follows:

The Psalmist's knowledge of the sea was probably limited to the vicinity of Jaffa (then Joppa), where tradition says King Solomon once had a little harbor, now filled in and cultivated with orange groves.

King David's knowledge of sea billows was probably confined to the huge waves which sometimes break over the massive stones on the sea front of Jaffa, the result of strong north winds.

Nowhere have I ever seen the majestic power of the sea more strongly contrasted with human weakness than at Jaffa Port. The water is deep and the billows follow one another with seemingly irresistible force.

In the Psalm of which our text is a part, the Prophet likened his trials and difficulties and his own helplessness to those of a swimmer battling with the stormy sea at Jaffa; wave after wave of trouble having rolled over him, yet his faith in God continued. He was suffering for righteousness' sake because of his faithfulness to God. He knew that Divine providence permitted his troubles for some wise purpose. He called upon his soul, yea every power within him, to exercise faith, trust, confidence, and to rejoice in his tribulations, knowing that they were not marks of disfavor, but to the contrary proofs of his loyalty; and that thus God was fitting and preparing him for his future service.

SONGS IN THE NIGHT

“Why art thou cast down, Oh! my soul? Why art thou disquieted within me? Hope thou in God, for I shall yet praise Him” for these very experiences and the helpful blessings which they will bring to me. “The Lord will command His loving kindness in the day times” in the glorious day of Emmanuel, when Satan will be bound, sin will be uprooted and the Sun of Righteousness will beam forth with healing rays of restitution. Acts 3:19-21; Matthew 13:43.

But what about the night time of the present, while Sin and Death still reign, and while Satan is still the Prince of this world? How should David and all whom he typically represented conduct themselves in this present time, while waiting for the glorious day? Should they bemoan their lot and be unhappy and repine? Nay, says the Prophet: “In the night His song shall be with me, and my prayer shall be unto the God of my life.”

Only God's children can rejoice in the trials and difficulties of the night of darkness which covers the earth, and the gross darkness which involves the heathen. Only these can sing with the spirit and with the understanding, because only these may understand clearly respecting the coming glorious, world-wide blessings which God has promised.

The unregenerate, even though good and moral, upright and noble, cannot appreciate the deep things of God. They do indeed find temporary pleasures of various kinds, and even have less tribulation than the Lord pours into the cup of His faithful ones, but after all their pleasures are shallow and fleeting Their chief pleasure is in seeking joy and not in realization.

“THE WORLD KNOWETH US NOT”

The world understands practically nothing about these things this spirit of a new mind or will in accord with righteousness. It understands nothing about the anointing of the Holy Spirit, under the influence of which old things pass away and new hopes and aims and objects in life take their places. But each one who has passed through these experiences understands them; each one begotten again is aware of the change in his mind, his will knows that he has consecrated his life to righteousness and to the Lord's service, and realizes that an anointing has come to him.

According to the Bible none have ordination of God to act as His mouthpieces except they have received this anointing. Such may be known by the fruits of the Spirit, which all the Spirit begotten ones will soon be able to detect, and which will more or less be manifest also to the world, although the world will not know how to make allowances for having the treasure of the new mind in an imperfect human vessel, although the world will not know how to sympathize with the weaknesses of the fallen flesh, and may often be apt to denounce and condemn those who are walking to the best of their ability, not after the flesh, but after the Spirit.

GOD'S ORDINATION VERSUS MAN'S ORDINATION

We fear, however, that if this line were distinctly seen, sharply drawn, many who are now prominent ministers, reverends, doctors of divinity, would be seen to be barred from the Lord's service. Many of them have had ordination from men, but have never had the ordination of God, and hence are unable to see spiritual things themselves and equally incompetent to present such things to others. They have not been anointed or ordained of the Lord to preach.

On the other hand, many of the Lord's people, misled by the human distinction between clergy and laity and the privileges and limitations accorded to these by Christianity, fail to recognize that they are ordained to preach, and that unless they are continually preaching they are failing to accomplish the Divine will failing to fulfill the ordination which was granted them of the Lord when they received the anointing of the Holy Spirit.

This does not mean, however, that all who are anointed of the Holy Spirit are appointed of the Lord to preach in the same manner, for, as the Apostle explains, we have gifts differing one from another, and, as our Lord's parable explains, we have talents differing one from another, and our opportunities in life are among these talents. For instance, some may have the talent for presenting the Divine message of mercy and truth in a private manner, and may be very effective in their ministries, in their service; others may have the talents and opportunities for more public service. The sisters, for instance, are not scripturally authorized to engage in the more public function of preaching, but they, nevertheless, have glorious opportunities in a more private way of showing forth the praises of Him who has called us from darkness into His marvelous light and who has anointed us to preach, to declare, to make known the good tidings.

Well did the Master say that those hungering and thirsting for righteousness should come to Him if they would be filled. This is the class described by the Psalmist. In the context he likens himself to an antelope, famished for water and seeking a spring. He declares, "My soul thirsteth for God, for the living God;" Yet he was misunderstood, his opponents pointed to the waves of trouble which rapidly buried him, and they said, "Where is thy God?" If, as you say, you are His servant, His child, surely He would not permit adversities to cross your way.

But the Psalmist continued to hope; and all true Christians, whom he typically represented, have continued to trust, continued to sing songs of thanksgiving in the night, continued to wait for the morning of the New Dispensation, very early in which will come their own resurrection change. So the Prophet said, "When shall I come and appear before God?" and again, "I shall be satisfied when I awake in Thy likeness."

"YET HE LEARNED OBEDIENCE"

St. David's experiences were not only profitable to himself, but they were typical illustrative of the experiences of Messiah Jesus, the Head, and the Church, His Body. For nearly nineteen centuries the waves of adversity have been overwhelming the Lord's Anointed first the Head, and since, his Members, each in his turn. St. Paul tells us the value of these tribulations. Of our Lord he says "Yet He learned obedience by the things which He suffered;" He humbled Himself unto death, even the death of the cross; wherefore God also hath highly exalted Him" to the heavenly glory and divine nature.

God has made similar promises to the Church: "If we suffer with Him, we shall also reign with Him." If it was necessary that Jesus should suffer before entering into His glory, assuredly it will be necessary for all those who constitute His glorious Bride class to demonstrate their love and loyalty by suffering for righteousness' sake before they can enter into glory with Him before "the marriage of the Lamb."

THE WORLD HAS LESSONS, TOO

Although the present time is the judgment day or trial day for the spirit begotten, the new creation only, nevertheless, the effects of the reign of Sin and Death, and the waves of sorrow and trouble are not confined to the Church. Although God's children receive extra waves of trouble as part of their special training, the world has a heavy load, too. St. Paul speaks of the groaning creation and we can readily understand why the world's fewer waves of trouble are much more troublesome than the many of the Christian. Those Divine providences teach the Christians his songs in the night. When he passes through deep waters the lord is with him. The chastening of his soul brings peace and joy and increasing faith and love.

None of these ameliorating conditions are possible to the world. Our Lord's invitation, "Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest," is open, of course, to all who have the ear of understanding to hear, and to responsive conditions of heart; but the great mass hear not, neither do they understand. Alas! poor world, you should have the sympathy of every Christian and not his imprecations and threats of further and eternal torture in the future. The world is surely losing the great "prize of the high calling" which the Church will obtain. It deserves sympathy in respect to this loss; and as our eyes open to see the true Plan of God, we may give the world the message of God's Word—" Good tiding of great joy, which shall be unto all people." Luke 2:10.

ALL HEART-BREAKING LESSONS

The lessons taught by the present reign of Sin and Death, sorrow and pain, are heart-breaking. God represents many as originally created in His own likeness and of tender sympathy tender-hearted. Sin, depravity, selfishness, have gradually hardened men's hearts, some more and some less. The coming Age of Messiah's Kingdom is declared to be a time for the taking away of the stony hearts from mankind and giving back instead hearts of flesh. Jer. 31:32.

Meantime the trials and difficulties of life are heart breaking to all who are still tender-hearted. The message of the Gospel is for this class, the weary, the hear-broken, the discouraged, those not satisfied with the rewards of sin and selfishness, but hungering and thirsting after righteousness satisfied only with the glorious hopes of the future set forth in God's Word, which they grasp with the arms of faith.

The Lord, through the Prophet, tells us that the Gospel message is to this tender-hearted, broken-hearted class, at the present time; and each, as his own heart is healed with the Divine blessing, becomes the authorized and qualified agent for the seeking out of other hear broken ones and the binding up of their hearts with the promises of God. Thus we read of the Divine commission to Christ, the Head, and the Church, His Body: “The spirit of the Lord God is upon Me, for He hath sent Me to preach the Good Tidings to the meek, and to bind up the broken hearted.” Isa. 61:1.

THE CHURCH’S PRESENT MISSION

Our present mission, then, is not that of heart breaking! The stony-hearted are doing that work continually. Our mission is to lay down life itself in assisting all the broken-hearted to a true knowledge of God and a true appreciation of His Plan for the Church, and His subsequent Plan for the world. We, then, as ambassadors for God, beseech men to be reconciled to God and to come into harmony with him. God event though our words be scattered broadcast and broken-hearted are likely to hear and to respond. The message once confined to the Jews, as God’s “chosen people,” is no longer confined to them. It was to the Jew first, now equally to the Gentiles: “He that hath an ear to hear, let him hear.”

Those who have not the ear cannot hear this message, even though the should thereof has gone out into all the earth, and the words of the message to the ends of the earth. In due time, during Messiah’s Kingdom, all the blind eyes will be unstopped, and the knowledge of God shall be world-wide and ocean-deep. But not yet! So long as Satan rules in this world he will blind the minds of those who believe not, in order to hinder the true light from shining into their souls. God has permitted him success in respect to the world; because the Divine message at the present time is intended only for the special class who hunger and thirst after righteousness. These are called with the message, “gather My saints unto Me, saith the Lord, those who have made a covenant with Me by sacrifice.”

THE CHURCH’S FUTURE MISSION

We have seen that the Church’s present mission is merely to gather from the world the broken-hearted class, which hears and responds to the Divine message. Thus the present work of the Church is merely to complete her own numbers to gather in a sufficient number to complete the elect Church. So the Scriptures declare that in the end of this age shall come the union of the Church with her Lord, by the power of the First Resurrection: “The marriage of the Lamb has come, for His Wife hath made herself ready.” The work of the Church is not only to find a sufficient number of humanity willing and glad to walk in Jesus’ footsteps, but also to instruct these, building them up in the most holy faith and preparing them for the glorious consummation, and for their future work.

The future state of the Church will be devoid of waves of trouble, trials, sorrow and tears. Her triumph will come; she shall enter into the joys of her Lord and hear the Bridegroom’s voice, saying, “Well done, good and faithful!” But the joys of the Lord upon which she will enter will be a career or usefulness for a thousand years. She will be with her Lord, and co-labor with Him in the world's enlightenment, and in their uplifting by restitution to all that was lost in Eden and redeemed Calvary.

Free grace will then be proclaimed. "Whosoever will may come, and take of the Water of Life freely." And everyone drinking may say, "Come," to others. The whole world will be filled with the knowledge of the glory of God, and the whole world may join in acclaiming, "Glory, honor, dominion and might and power be to Him that sitteth upon the Throne, and to the Lamb, forever." The whole world of mankind will be blest with the opportunities of this glorious Epoch, in which all the willing and obedient may attain full perfection and Divine favor, while all who refuse the Divine favor will be totally destroyed in the Second Death. 2 Pet. 2:13

GOD IS OUR PATTERN IN THE GIVING OF GIFTS

Louisville, Kentucky, December 21 1913 Of the two discourses which Pastor Russell gave here today we are reporting the one from the text, "Every good and every perfect gift is from Above, and cometh down from the Father of Lights, in whom is no variableness nor shadow of turning" (Jas. 1:17). He said:

Christmas is a delightful season in many respects. Admitting the claim that it is the date of the Annunciation, and that our Lord's birth was nine months later, in October, it matters not. It is a delightful custom that draws the attention of the whole world to the birth at Bethlehem, and memorializes to men the great Gift of God on our behalf. We rejoice in it, even though the Higher Critics have wrought such destruction of faith in Christendom that to many the day and the events it commemorates have lost their meaning. The custom of giving little tokens of remembrance and esteem is still a blessing in the world. To the extent that we enter into it heartily, we are exercising a godlike quality. God is the great Giver, from whom cometh every good gift and every perfect gift.

SOME OF GOD'S GIFTS

Let us begin with some of the common things that God has given all men richly to enjoy. How delightfully adapted to our needs is the air we breathe! How it carries life and refreshment to our lungs and to every part of our bodies. Think of the great boon of water refreshing, exhilarating, absolutely a necessity to our habits and our life. Take the sunshine and the golden grandeur in which it clothes the earth, and the life and vigor which it imparts not only to our bodies and minds, but to all nature.

Even in the matter of colors God is gracious to us. The predominating colors are well adapted to our sight, and restful to the eye. The variegated colors of flowers brighten the landscape, refreshing and pleasing us. Not only so, but the infinite variety of these flowers in size and shape is wonderful. Even the storm clouds are beautiful. The Creator, who gave us the organs appreciative of shape, beauty and color, provided us also gratification of these senses. Additionally, He gave us the sense of smell, and then provided in all nature wonderful varieties of odors to gratify us. Do not all these gifts come from the Father of Mercies?

Time would fail us to examine these common blessings which God has given all men richly to enjoy not only His consecrated saints, but every creature. We can readily see that a grand provision was made for the race in its original perfection. All these things are blessings to mankind, notwithstanding our fallen condition, notwithstanding our weaknesses of mind and body which hinder us from proper conception, appreciation and use of these. When we remember that the sick lose their appetite and fail in all their powers of appreciation, and when we remember that our entire race is sin-sick, we may well wonder how much more a perfect man might have enjoyed the various blessings which are still precious to us.

RICHLY TO ENJOY

God has given gifts. They are on every hand, and may be richly enjoyed or not richly enjoyed. But as the majority of people swallow their food without richly enjoying its flavor, so the majority receive and use God's favors in a stupid unappreciative manner, and do not richly enjoy indeed are unconscious of the blessings that they have. What is the matter? The reply of the Bible is that they have the wrong spirit. But where did they get the wrong spirit? The Bible answers that sin vitiates every good quality of mind and of body.

The world, through depravity, through losing its relationship with God, has lost the sense of appreciation of many of God's gifts. Mankind have them, and use them, but do not enjoy them. Consequently they are unhappy, unholy, unthankful. Alas, poor world! It is rushing madly hither and thither, seeking pleasure, seeking joy, seeking happiness, but finding discontent, disappointment.

Only one class of people are really able to highly enjoy Heaven's gifts. These have passed through a certain mental experience which is for them transforming all of life's affairs. They have caught a glimpse of the Almighty Father, and have learned that all these gifts and blessings of nature are of His Wisdom and His bestowing. More than this, before their eyes were opened to see deeply and clearly, their hearts were regenerated. They had given their hearts to the Lord, and He had given them new hearts. With these new hearts, new minds, transformed wills, old things have become new. They open their eyes upon the world and the fullness thereof; and recognizing the relationship between these and the Heavenly Father, their hearts are warmed and enlightened. The spirit of love and appreciation is shed abroad.

GOD'S UNSPEAKABLE GIFT

The Apostle exclaimed. "Thanks be unto God, for His unspeakable Gift!" He refers to the Gift of God's dear Son to be man's Redeemer to pay the price, the penalty, of sin the death penalty on our behalf. Ah, yes! that is an unspeakable Gift, far beyond anything that could be asked or imagined. The death sentence passed upon Adam by the Supreme Court of the Universe could not be revoked, and that sentence included all of his posterity; for we were flesh of his flesh, bone of his bone. If an unblemished human life could be substituted for his, the majesty of the Divine Law could stand, and he and all his race might be granted a fresh trial for life everlasting or death everlasting. But no such perfect man was in the world. And had there been such a one, who knows that he would have been willing to sacrifice his life for a race?

The will of the Redeemer was not ignored. He was not sacrificed. On the contrary, the Scriptures make very clear that the Father presented His Plan for the approval of the Son, and attached to the proposition exceeding great and precious promises, and that the Son willingly and joyfully co-operated in the Plan. As we read, "For the joy that was set before Him, He endured the cross, despising the shame, as is (now, and a reward) set down at the right hand of the Throne of God" awaiting the still further glories and honors of His Millennial Kingdom and of eternity.

GIFTS TO THE CHURCH

God's time has not yet come for giving the gifts of the Redeemer's sacrifice to the world. The distribution to the world of mankind of those blessings is held in abeyance, waiting for the glorious Thousand Year Day earth's Jubilee. Meantime God has been preparing for a special class of humanity other gifts, the richness and value of which "eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man."

God has a right to give different gifts to His different creatures. He has given to the angels the gifts, blessings, which cause their everlasting happiness; and now He is selecting from amongst men by various trials, tests, a very special class a saintly class, of all nations and denominations. While He calls all perfect intelligent beings (angelic and human) "sons of God." He purposes that the saintly ones now being selected shall be His sons on a still higher plane, to which Jesus has been exalted as a reward for His obedience—" far above angels, principalities and powers and every name that is named."

To such of these as respond to the drawings and leadings and tests, God is giving special gifts at the present time not earthly gifts, tangible and seen of men, but spiritual gifts new hearts of appreciation, new eyes of understanding, new ears of comprehension, new powers of spiritual enjoyment. To them "old things are passed away, and all things have become new."
—2 Cor. 5:17

THE MOST HELPFUL GIFTS

Give without hoping for gifts in return every gift at this season should be a love token. We value the gift not so much for its monetary worth as because of the love and fellowship of which it is a reminder. It is eminently proper that friends and parents should prepare gifts for others in secret, and keep them until the opportune time for presentation. In all this they are merely copying the Heavenly Father, who is thus preparing for the world the wonderful gifts of the Messianic Kingdom, described as a "feast of fat things for all people."

But there are others gifts which should not be kept back merely for Christmas time. Each one, and especially each Christian, should every day shed forth on life's pathway gifts and blessings that would bring joy, cheer, to many hearts the kindly word, the nod of recognition, especially to one in less favored circumstances, the kindly look, the word or act of sympathy. Oh, how much these gifts mean to the poor world, whom the Apostle Paul describes as the groaning creation! Many of them have little that they know how to enjoy in the present life, and no prospect beyond. How blank such lives! What a godly pleasure comes from casting upon them an occasional ray of sunshine! At times financial help may be appropriate in proportion to our ability. At times counsel and friendship and sympathy would be of more value than money. What we all need is to be more and more filled with the Spirit of our Father in Heaven the Spirit of our Savior the Spirit of love, joy, peace. This Spirit, like radium is continually giving off, yet never lacking in quality. God is the abundant supply. He who thus loves and gives is continually a recipient from God more abundantly; and his treasure-store of joy and pleasure is an ever-increasing one, regardless of what his outward circumstances and conditions may be.

GAVE GIFTS UNTO MEN

Writing to the Ephesians (Eph. 4:8), St. Paul notes gifts specially bestowed upon the Church of the Father, by the Son. He says, "When He (Christ) ascended up on High, He led captivity captive and gave gifts unto men." More literally it reads, "He led forth a multitude of captives, bestowing gifts unto men." The Apostle quotes from the Psalms a poetic description representing Jesus as a great Conqueror who had vanquished the enemy and was returning home with the spoils. The enemy is Sin and Death.

Jesus by His sacrifice gained the victory and the right to control the millions of Adam's race who were in bondage to Sin and Death. He had humbled Himself, had become a man, and given His life a Ransom for all, had been raised from the dead by the power of the Father, and had then ascended a conquering Hero, welcomed by the Father and acclaimed by the angelic hosts.

The multitude of captives in His train have not yet come into sight merely the vanguard, the Church. And the Church will not be fully delivered until all of its members shall have been changed to glory, honor and immortality beyond the veil, as sharers in the First Resurrection. Soon the Heavenly portion of the delivered captives will have followed the Leader into the presence of the Father.

Then for a thousand years the other captives will be following on. As St. Paul declares, it will be "every man in his own order", or company, or regiment. The ranks will ultimately include the entire race of Adam and himself. All those willing to be led forth from captivity will attain again the full liberty of the sons of God, lost through Adam's disobedience, and the right to recovery of the same redeemed for them at Calvary.

But the Apostle mentions the triumphal entry of Jesus into Heaven itself merely as an incidental, prefacing his statement that our Lord immediately began to give gifts to men. The first gifts, bestowed at Pentecost, were to the Church. Indeed, all of Jesus' gifts thus far have been to His followers. The prophecy from which the Apostle quotes takes in the world, however, declaring that the gifts are "for the rebellious also". Psa. 68:18.

JESUS' GIFTS TO THE CHURCH

St. Paul, continuing, tells us the special gifts bestowed by Jesus upon His Church: "And He gave some Apostles, and some prophets, and some evangelists, and some pastors and teachers." Jesus tells us about some false apostles. We can readily suppose that there have crept into the Church also false teachers, false pastors, associating godliness with gain, as the Apostle explains. All the same we are to have in mind that there are true Apostles, prophets, pastors, and teachers appointed by the Redeemer as His special gifts to the Church, as His special representatives in the Church, for their guidance and blessing.

We further read of the object and purpose of these gifts; they were "for the perfecting of the saints, edifying of the Body of Christ; till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect Man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ."

Only in proportion as Apostles, prophets, pastors and teachers fulfill this mission are they really the Lord's gifts to His Church. Consider that these were not appointed for the world, but for the saints and not merely to start them in the way of saintship, but especially to perfect them as saints. And this perfecting of the saints is not merely an instruction of them in knowledge, nor merely the bringing of them to an appreciation of the joys and the peace of the Lord, but a preparation of them for the work of ministry the work of service. All the saints are to be servants, even as the Lord Jesus, the greatest Saint, was Servant of all.

Whoever does not learn to be a servant of God, a servant of righteousness, a servant of the brethren, will not have learned the lessons necessary for a share in the Kingdom. Besides, the Kingdom itself will be a service to mankind for human uplift, and only those who have come to an appreciation of the privileges of service in the present conditions will be granted a share with the Lord in the more glorious service of the future.

The edifying of the Body of Christ, in modern language, means the upbuilding, the strengthening, the development of the Church, which is the Body of Christ. Not merely with sinners and with the heathen, therefore, are the pastors and teachers to be engaged, but chiefly with the Church, edifying it, strengthening it, educating it with the knowledge of God, and building it up in all the fruits and graces of the Spirit. The Apostles, prophets, pastors and teachers who are the Lord's gifts to the Church will be found doing this work, whatever may be said of others.

HOW LONG IT WILL LAST

Their work will not be finished until the Church completed shall have entered into glory. This is the Apostle's statement, "Till we all come in the unity of the faith and of the knowledge of the Son of God unto a perfect Man." The perfect Man signifies the glorious, complete Christ, of which Jesus is the Head and of which every member of the Church is a part. When the entire Body shall have been completed, perfected, developed, the work of this Age will be at an end, the gifts of Christ will have accomplished their work, the Body of Christ in glory will then begin the glad Reign which is to bless the world and shower gifts upon men—" the rebellious also."

THE HARVEST RIPE FOR GARNERING

Brooklyn, N. Y. -The public was not made aware of Pastor Russell's presence in our city. No advertisements were given forth because the Academy of Music was not obtainable, and the Tabernacle would not accommodate the crowds. As it was, however, the Tabernacle was crowded.

The Pastor seemed specially to enjoy the semi-privacy of this meeting with the Tabernacle congregation. As is generally known he is about to start on a tour of the world in company with a Committee of six gentlemen of affairs of which he is the chosen Chairman. The Committee was appointed some months ago by the International Bible Students Association to visit heathen lands, to investigate conditions there and to report to the Association and to the public their findings along the following lines:—

THE COMMITTEE'S INSTRUCTIONS

(1) Are the Foreign Missions being conducted along Christian business lines? (2) To what extent are the methods used successful in reaching the heathen peoples and in bringing them to Christianity. (3) What are the teachings, what the inducements to accept Christianity and how enduring are the results? (4) What is the attitude of Heathendom to the missionaries and toward Christianity and what are the prospects for Foreign Missions becoming self-sustaining? (5) What, if any, changes could be made in teaching or in financial administration to make the foreign missionary work more successful in the future? (6) What hope is there for the conversion of the world in this generation as proposed by the Laymen's Missionary Movement with its thirty-million-dollar endowment? (7) To what extent do the monies donated benefit the heathen and could any improvement along this line be suggested?

The personnel of this Committee is interesting. They are all deeply interested in Christian work, both at home and abroad. They are Christian men of the highest type, and have long been contributors to the spread of the Gospel. They are as follows: Pastor Russell, President; Prof. F. H. Robison, Secretary; Gen. W. P. Hall, U. S. A.; Mr. J. T. D. Pyles, Washington, D. C., Merchant; Mr. E. W. V. Kuehn, Merchant, Toledo, O.; Dr. L. W. Jones, Chicago, Illinois, and Mr. R. B. Maxwell, Merchant, Mansfield, Ohio.

The report of this committee will be awaited with great interest by many.

Pastor Russell will visit classes of Bible Students en route and will address the public next Sunday in Los Angeles, California. Arrangements are perfected whereby we will be in touch with him throughout his journey. His addresses will be reported from Japan, China, Manila, Travancore, Madras, Calcutta, Cairo and Corinth. Discussing his text, "The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved." Jer. 8:20, the Pastor declared that as there was a harvest time, a reaping time, in the end of the Jewish Age, so also there is to be a harvesting in the end of the Gospel Age. The fruitage of this Age will be gathered into the heavenly "garner," by the glorious change of the First Resurrection. The Lord's words were, "The harvest is the end of the Age." By mistranslation His words were rendered, "The harvest is the end of the world," and thus many have been misled into a fear that the second coming of Jesus will mean the end of all things, for all except the saintly few.

Rather we would understand that as the Jewish Age ended with a harvest, and its ripe fruitage was gathered into the "garner," so the garnering of the Church, in the close of this Age, will mean the inauguration of the New Dispensation of Messiah's Kingdom a New Age of blessing to the world in general to all the families of the earth. The glorified Church, in association with her Lord and Redeemer, will reign for a thousand years, as kings and priests unto God and unto Christ, for the world's uplifting out of sin and death conditions.

ONLY THE CHURCH HARVESTED

The Pastor reminded his hearers that he believes the Bible to teach that we are now in the Harvest time of this Age. Consequently none should misunderstand the visit to heathen lands to imply any expectation on his part that the heathen must be converted before this Age will end. That such would be an impossibility is shown by the government statistics to the effect that the numbers of heathen have doubled during the past century.

What he does expect is, that as there are a few of God's "very elect" in all denominations of Christendom, now to be garnered, so also there are a few saintly ones amongst the heathen who have accepted Christ including some of the missionaries. The "harvest" must cover as wide an area as did the sowing of the Gospel seed. To some extent the message of the Kingdom has been preached amongst all nations. The Bible is the special proclamation of Messiah's Kingdom as the hope of the world, and contains the "call" of the Church to joint-heirship with her Lord in that Kingdom, which will bless the world.

The essence of this Kingdom message, however, has been somewhat confused by reason of the many false notions set forth in our numerous false creeds of the past. In his discourses in heathen lands the Pastor intends to lay stress upon the Kingdom feature of the Gospel message. While it will be his privilege to proclaim the Kingdom message, he recognizes that only those who have the “ear to hear” will be able to appreciate and receive it. His message is one of the Bible, to which all Christians may rally if they are rid of denominational ties: “The Church of the First-born, whose names are written in heaven,” and whose Harvest time has come, are the Lord’s, wholly irrespective of the denominations with which they are affiliated.

“HARVEST PAST, SUMMER ENDED”

The text points out a lesson. Not all who have professed to be followers of Christ will be amongst the blessed ones of the “harvest,” who are to be transported by the First Resurrection to glory, honor and immortality as their reward. The words of Jesus here cited in corroboration of this are: “Many shall say unto Me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not taught many, and in Thy name cast out devils, and done many wonderful works?” Many who thus hope will be disappointed will be shut out of the Kingdom class.

Another of the Redeemer’s parables, the Pastor said, pictures the consecrated saints of God in this “harvest” time as “virgins.” But some were wise and some foolish. The masses of mankind, yea, the masses of Christendom, are omitted from this parabolic picture. Only the “virgin” class is dealt with at all, and it is divided into two parts, and only the wise, the faithful, “more than conquerors,” will have the honor of entering into the wedding with the Bridegroom and becoming “the Bride, the Lamb’s Wife.” Then the door will be shut. No more will ever be added to the Bride company the number of the “elect” will have been completed.

The parable shows that, later on, the “foolish virgins” pass through great tribulation and obtain the oil and the light which they should have had before. But it will then be too late to become of the Bride. They will knock, saying, “Lord, Lord, open unto us!” but the Bridegroom will declare, “I do not recognize you,” as members of My Bride. However, the Scriptures show us that these “foolish virgin,” passing through a great time of tribulation, will be called to “the marriage supper of the Lamb” and be present before the great King as the virgins, the Bride’s companions, and subordinate helpers. Psa. 6:13-15.

One lesson, said the Pastor, is that it is not sufficient that we say, Lord, Lord that we publicly proclaim ourselves Christians nor is it sufficient that we be engaged in good works, casting out demons and healing the sick and teaching the people. These things in their way are good, but God has His own test as respects those who shall be accepted as members of “the Bride, the Lamb’s Wife.” Obedience to the Word and Spirit of the Lord, loyalty to the Master and to all His followers, faithfulness to His leadings, through evil report and through good report, will be required.

The greatest work of which any of Christ's followers are capable is the conquering of self the development of the fruits and graces of the Holy Spirit. Our privilege of being co-laborers with the Master in the proclamation of His Message is not granted because He needs us, but because we need the opportunities thus afforded for the development of His character-likeness in our hearts.

“I NEVER KNEW YOU”

Our Lord implies a great number of nominal followers devoid of His Spirit, who in the end of this Age would not be bringing forth the fruitage that He desires, who would not be members of His called and chosen and faithful class, though outwardly, nominally, all of these. He points down to our day, saying, “in that day” in the closing of this Age, in the testing time, in the time when He shall come to make up His jewels and to glorify them as His Bride, His members, His associates in the Kingdom. Many at that time in our day will profess that they know the Lord, that they are prophets or teachers, that they are casting out devils, opposing sin and multitudinous forms of evil, and that they are carrying on mighty works, benevolent institutions, colleges, seminaries, etc., in His name. The Revised Version gives, “by Thy name,” intimating that the name of Christ is used rather as a charm, to conjure by.

But the testing time is near. The Lord will inquire respecting the fruit of these. He will not be deceived; yea. He will expose the bad fruit, that all may see that His judgment is just. It will be manifest that neglect of His Word has led to degeneracy, decay that the suckers of worldly ambition, pride, wealth, show, etc., have been cultivated, notwithstanding all of the trying experiences which might have served to prune these. It will be shown that many of the prophets of Babylon are false prophets, whose teachings have misguided the people and, instead of enlightening, have blinded. It will be manifested that many of them are ravening wolves in sheep's clothing, hungry with ambition for fame and prominence and honor of men, and willing to barter the interests of the “flock” for their personal aggrandizement.

It will be shown that much of this conjuring in the name of Jesus has been merely a cloak, under which, deceiving and being deceived, sectarian fruitage, and not the love, joy, peace and holy Spirit, have been cultivated. “The day will declare it,” will show it, will manifest it. The whole world shall be witness eventually that God's name was dishonored, and His Word misrepresented, because false teachers were looking every one to gain from his own quarter his own denomination. Isa. 61:11.

The Lord never knew the sects He never recognized them, He never authorized them; they are of men, and for men, not of the Lord nor for the Lord's glory. Claiming that all there is of Christianity is due to themselves, they are proud and boastful and realize not that the Lord's true cause would have flourished far better without them, in the simplicity of the early Church one in redemption through the precious blood and in consecration to the Redeemer. The gathering out of the Bride class and the leaving of the remainder will be saying in effect, "I never knew you, never recognized you, never authorized you;" and these unauthorized sects will go down in the great "time of trouble."

We are glad, however, that the thousands and millions who have been deceived by these false systems will have a glorious opportunity during the incoming Age to come to a knowledge of the Truth and a right understanding of the Character of God as revealed in the fulfillment of His gracious plan. Thus many who miss the great "prize" may still have a glorious opportunity for the lesser prize of God in restitution, etc.

"DEPART FROM ME, YE THAT WORK INIQUITY"

We believe that there are active workers in the sectarian system called "Babylon" who will yet be reached by the knowledge of the Truth and delivered. Our Lord intimates this, saying, "Come out of her, My people." Some of His people evidently are in Babylon, and it is our present mission in the name of the Lord to call these out through the presentation of "Present Truth," which will show to all who are truly the Lord's where they stand, and their duty. Others of the active workers in the iniquitous system, which are counterfeits of the true, misrepresenters of God's message and binders and enslavers of the Lord's people, because not a heart loyal to Him, will not come out of Babylon, and therefore will share in the condemnation coming upon her. They will go into the great time of trouble, and for a season at least be cut off from all fellowship with the Lord. These worker of iniquity will have their hands full of the trouble which they have helped to bring upon the world of mankind by their misrepresentations of the Divine character and Plan. It will be a terrible chastisement, and our hope for them is that "when the judgments of the Lord are abroad in the earth, all the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness." Isa. 26:9.

ON THE ROCK OR ON THE SAND

The picture or parable of one house built upon the rock and the other house built upon the sand refers not to the Church and the world, but to two parties in the Church. None are in the parable except "those who hear these sayings of Mine." The world hears not our Lord's message at all. As the Apostle declares, the world is both deaf and blind to spiritual things. Those who hearken to and appreciate the Lord's sayings represent at least a nominal Church, and amongst those of the nominal Church are some who are obedient to the Lord's Word, while others are disobedient. The obedient are built upon the rock, the disobedient upon the sand.

Those who build upon the rock our Lord explains to be such as not only hear His message, but are obedient thereto to the extent of their ability. Let us remember the words to which He refers they are the messages of the Sermon on the Mount, which show the things which are blessed of God in contradistinction to the things which would not have His approval.

Those who hear the Master's words and say, "Yea, Lord," but who do not put His teachings into practice, are not built properly upon the rock of Truth, upon Christ. They are building their hope, their faith, their trust, upon a foundation which will not stand. When the time of trouble comes upon such their hopes will be undermined, their faith will collapse.

We thank God that although many of the nominal professors of Christianity and teachers and philanthropists will not be accepted amongst the elect Bride class, nevertheless they are far too good, too noble to merit eternal torture. Nay, the Lord will not even consign them to the Second Death, to annihilation. Rather He will provide for them, under Messiah's Kingdom, a gracious opportunity of attaining and demonstrating a still higher type of love and loyalty than they have yet experienced or manifested. In proportion as any shall even then faithfully use the great privilege accorded him, his ultimate perfection and salvation will be assured

SUNDAY AND CHRISTMAS "SHADOWS OF BETTER THINGS TO COME"

The Foreign Missions Investigation Committee, as well as other passengers crossing the mid-Pacific, had the novel experience of losing a day from the calendar a Sunday at that. Retiring on Saturday, the 23d, they awakened in the morning of December 25. It was determined, however, that this adjustment of the calendar should work no real loss, but that Sunday and Christmas Day should be observed as one. Pastor Russell was called upon for a sermon in the interest of his immediate hearers and also for his world-wide congregation of millions reached through the public press. Responding, the Pastor said:

“It is a new experience to many of us this losing of a day for the rectification of the calendar. And yet I reflect that, after all, many of us have lost many days each year in a very similar manner. As we journeyed westward we have kept setting our watches back rapidly and thus making our days 25 hours long until now we have reached the reckoning period and must make good all those advanced hours by striking out one whole day. So some of us have lengthened our days into nights and have figuratively burned the candle at both ends, only to find that in the end there must be compensations and that we really have gained nothing over those who have taken life moderately.

Some have done this in the pursuit of pleasure; others in pursuit of wealth; others in pursuit of honor. We admit that extraordinary effort in any of these directions is unwise. Only in two ways could an enforced expenditure of life’s energies be approved as wise and judicious. One of these would be in the service of our God, the other in the service of fellow men, and it is not strange that in Divine providence what might be termed “over-exertion” in these two directions is usually noninjurious and that there are compensations of mental and spiritual rest and refreshment, peace and joy obtainable in no other way, from no other quarter, which the world can neither give nor take away.”

SUNDAY AND CHRISTMAS “SHADOWS OF BETTER THINGS TO COME”

Since we are obliged to lose a Sunday, how fortunate we are in having Christmas Day instead, and thus to combine in our experiences the two days which mean so much to us in a commemorative way and as “shadows of better things to come.” (Heb. 10:1) The birth of Jesus as the Babe of Bethlehem already links this day in our minds with His birth from the dead on the first day of the week. And these two events, inseparable in their importance to the church and the world, combine peculiarly before our minds to-day.

Christmas Day reminds us of the necessity there was for a perfect man to give himself as the ransom price the corresponding price for the first Adam’s transgression before reconciliation with the Father could be possible. Hence, as the Scriptures portray, the great Logos, the “First-born of every creature” (Col. 1:15), humbled Himself, laid aside His glory and dignity as a spirit being and took the lower, the human nature, in order “that He, by the grace of God, should taste death for every man.” (Heb. 2:9.) Begotten of the Holy Spirit at the time of His consecration at baptism, it was necessary that He should be born of the Spirit in the resurrection that He should become “the First-fruits of them that slept,” “the First-born among many brethren,” “the First-born from the dead.” (1 Cor. 15:20; Rom. 8:29; Col. 1:18.)

MEANING OF CHRISTMAS

My text for the occasion is the message of the angels who announced the Savior's birth—"Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." Luke 2:14.

It is essential that the dignity, the glory, the honor of our Omnipotent Creator should be maintained, and it is advantageous to the interests of all His creatures to know of His greatness, to appreciate His glory and to render to Him the homage His glorious character deserves. It may be asked, Why should the angels lay special stress upon Divine glory and honor at such a time? Had there been any reflection against the Divine glory and honor? We answer, Yes. For more than 4,000 years our earth, so large to us, but really so small a portion of the universe, had been a scene of disorder quite out of accord with the remainder of that universe. It had been a blot upon the otherwise wonderful and gracious management of the Great Creator. Elsewhere, God's will was perfectly done. Among men there had been for 40 centuries a reign of sin and death. Satan exercised usurped influence over mankind, preying upon human weakness, ignorance and superstition. As the apostle declares, he had become "the god of this world," "who now worketh in the children of disobedience" (2 Cor. 4:4; Eph. 2:2). In the language of Jesus he was the prince, or ruler, of this world, in that the great mass of mankind, some willingly, more ignorantly, were his servants.

We can only imagine how matters must have appeared to the holy angels, who for long centuries previously had witnessed no disloyalty to God and no unhappiness among His creatures on any plane of being; for them now to see Satan in rebellion and other angels following his course and becoming demons, and to see man, made in God's image, demonized and his heart of tenderness turned to a heart of stone and selfishness, so that "Man's inhumanity to man Makes countless thousands mourn" All this must have been bewildering to the loyal angels, who doubtless wondered whether or not the universe could thus pass from the control of the Almighty Creator. Undoubtedly they were aware of the Divine intimation of a better day, as expressed in the promise that the seed of the woman should ultimately bruise the serpent's head; but, ah, things had gone from bad to worse since that glorious promise was made, and Divine Power seemed less able than ever to grapple with the powers of darkness. How they must have wondered at this!

GOD'S OATH-BOUND PROMISE

Undoubtedly the angels had heard of the Divine promise made to Abraham, and buttressed with the Divine oath, that by these two immutable assurances God's word and His oath the blessings promised might be confidently expected. And that promise was twofold: first, that all the families of the earth should eventually be blessed, and second, that this blessing should come to them through Abraham's posterity or seed. We can well imagine how this joyful news would spread amongst the heavenly hosts: "A better day is coming; the reign of sin and death in the world is to be stopped! The blessing of the Lord is to reach the fallen race and put an end to ignorance, superstition, blindness, sin, dying, crying and pain!" "Ah!" they must have said, "Finally God is about to take action and to demonstrate His great power. We felt sure all along that He possessed this power, and yet it seems strange to us that He did not exercise it sooner."

But these rejoicing angels must have wearied as they perceived the apparent failure of their expectations. After long years of waiting, Ishmael was born, but seemed a very unsuitable heir scarcely a fulfillment of the promise. Long years later came Isaac, whose supernatural birth seemed to point to the fulfillment of the promise. But he accomplished nothing wonderful and died, transmitting the glorious promise and hope to Jacob. More long years passed and Jacob did not fulfill the promise, but left it to his family as a whole a rather unpromising family as respected the blessing of mankind. Then the nation of Israel, so far from blessing other nations, went into bondage to the Egyptians; and all of God's promises seemed to have failed.

Ah! what a testing He gave the loyal angels! How their faith in Wisdom and Power Divine must have been tried! Finally, under Moses, the Divinely appointed leader, the nation of Israel suddenly emerged from slavery and, under Divine favor, reached Mt. Sinai and there entered into Covenant relationship with God, as the seed of Abraham, heirs of the original promise of blessing the world. Now matters began to look toward a fulfillment of the gracious promise that in Abraham and his seed all the families of the earth would be blessed notwithstanding the fact that Abraham was dead.

The trying experiences of the wilderness must have been disappointing not only to the Israelites, but also to the interested angels beyond the veil, who, St. Peter tells us, earnestly desired to look into these things and sought for the fulfillment of the promise. (1 Pet. 1:10-11.) Finally Canaan, the land of promise, was reached, but the progress of Israel toward world domination and blessing was slow. One after another of their enemies brought them under tribute. Then came their prosperity for a time under King David, who set up the throne of the kingdom of the Lord, and then, under King Solomon, the glories of whose kingdom typified that of the coming Messiah, of which they knew nothing. Then came further failures, Babylonian captivities all wasting discouragements.

Meantime the discouraged Israelites found that they themselves were not receiving the blessing that they had hoped for under the Law Covenant everlasting life. The Law had said that whoever would act in harmony with its commands would have life; but they were all dying. The lesson to them was their own weakness, their inability to keep the Law the glorious Law of God, which is the measure of a perfect man's ability—"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, mind, soul and strength, and thy neighbor as thyself." As St. Paul declares, they could keep this Law only with their minds they could will to keep it, but to perform all their good will in this respect was impossible, because of the weakness of their flesh. The more noble and loyal of them, realizing their own weakness, cried out to God for help; while others, pharisaically, boasted of their holiness.

A SAVIOR A GREAT ONE

In the meantime, through the Prophets, God informed Israel that He foreknew their inability to comply with the terms of their Law Covenant; but that He would send them another Mediator, greater than Moses, who would inaugurate for them a still better Covenant, under which their sins and iniquities and weaknesses would be taken away, and their stoniness of heart would gradually give place to tenderness to hearts of flesh. (Jer. 31:31.) The Mediator, Messenger or Servant of that New Covenant which will be the temporary requirement for Israel and for the world, is referred to as "the Messenger of the Covenant, whom ye delight in." (Mal. 3:1.) They called Him Messiah, and kept waiting for Him to appear in glory and in power, to assume the reins of government over their nation to uplift them to power and influence and make them His messengers and servants in conveying His laws and regulations to all the families of the earth, for the uplifting and blessing of all.

A SAVIOR, CHRIST THE LORD

The angels who announced the birth of Jesus well knew His rank and relationship to the Father; that He had left the glory of His heavenly station to become through His mother a member of Adam's race, and that He was, therefore, a suitable one to be the Redeemer or Ransomer of the race. The angels realized that in this Savior lay all the hope of Abraham and his seed and of all the families of the earth. If they had waited long and had been often disappointed they realized that at last they were in the midst of wonderful events. "Unto us a child is born, unto us a Son is given, and the government shall be upon His shoulders." No wonder they sang, "Glory to God in the highest!" To them our Savior's birth must have meant, "Now God's glorious character, in which we have always had faith, is about to be vindicated; and this great event, the birth of Jesus, marks the beginning of the fulfillment of God's gracious promise which He bound with His oath, and which all along, therefore, we knew could not fail nor be set aside." But they sang more—"Peace on earth, good will toward men." They perceived that sin, rebellion and the Divine sentence the curse of death were to be removed in a legal, judicial manner, and that for this purpose the Logos had humbled Himself to human nature.

Their eyes of faith looked down into the future, and though not understanding how it would be accomplished, they had unwavering confidence in God that eventually the "serpent" of sin would be crushed and Adam and his race released from the bondage of sin and death; and they perceived that somehow all this was associated with the birth of the Babe of Bethlehem. We can imagine with what interest they told the "good tidings of great joy for all people" and sang "Glory to God."

GOD MOVES IN A MYSTERIOUS WAY

It must have been a cause of still further bewilderment to the angels when they perceived that Israel rejected Jesus and ultimately crucified Him. Then came His resurrection on the third day; and they beheld Him a Spirit Being of the highest order-Divine nature. What could it mean? They must still wait and watch, listen and note the gradual unfolding of the Divine program. After encouraging and instructing His disciples the Logos ascended up on high and appeared in the presence of God. There He was proclaimed "Lord of All" and given a position of dignity next to the Father at the right hand of the Majesty on high. Gradually the angels came to understand that the Divine Law, which had sentenced man to death, was immutable; and that it was therefore necessary that Jesus should become flesh, not to aid the Jewish nation and become an earthly king, but to redeem Israel and all of Adam's race, and, ascending up on high, thus to be qualified as the great antitypical Priest to make reconciliation for iniquity—"Yea, for the rebellious also." (Psa. 98:18.)

Next it was manifest that although Israel did not receive the blessing sought for, yet the elect, the saintly few who were ready received it and, by the begetting of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost and after, became sons of God and joint heirs with Messiah as members of the spiritual Seed. But there were not enough of these "Israelites indeed" to make up the predestined number, and hence, in harmony with prophecies not previously noted, a drawing and a calling work proceeded among the Gentiles to gather from them a sufficient number to complete the Divine foreordination, as the Bride class Messiah's joint heirs. For more than 18 centuries this work of selecting has proceeded, and throughout this period the holy angels have learned more and more respecting Divine Love, Justice, Wisdom and Power. But God's name has not yet been glorified, and "peace on earth" has not been established. The reign of sin and death still continues.

Now, my dear friends, unless I misunderstand God's Word, we are living at the most wonderful period of earth's history. The elect Bride of Christ, foreordained to share with Him the glory of His Messianic Kingdom, is nearly completed, and in a great time of trouble already near there will be a transferring of the kingdoms of this world to the rule of Messiah. Satan, the Prince of Darkness, will be bound for a thousand years; Christ, the Prince of Light (His Church, His Bride, in association) as the Seed of Abraham, will reign during that thousand years for the blessing of Adam and his race—" all the families of the earth."

ONLY ONE TRUE GOSPEL OF CHRIST

Providence, R. I. -We report one of Pastor Russell's discourses from the text, "I marvel that ye are so soon removed from Him that called you into the Grace of Christ unto another 'gospel,' which is not another; but there be some that trouble you and that would pervert the Gospel of Christ;... let him be accursed." Gal. 1:6-8.

When we remember that there is but the one Lord, one Faith, one Baptism, presented in the Bible we are astounded to find so many faiths, so many "Gospels," presented by so many denominations, all bearing the name of Christ and all bearing marks of some relationship to the Truth to the Divine Revelation.

St. Paul noted the fact that even in his day the brethren in Galatia had "so soon" turned away, in part at least, from the true Message to another, a perversion. No wonder, then, if during fifteen centuries that Gospel was almost buried under human tradition. And need we wonder that we make such slow progress since in getting back to "the faith once delivered to the saints," the Truth that Jesus declared to be the sanctifying power of God working in His people?

It will not do to say that we have many denominations, but only one Gospel. Denominations were not organized for amusement, but because the founders of each believed that they saw a sufficient reason, a sufficient difference of Gospel, to justify them in forming a new sect. We are bound to admire their zeal for the Truth, which led them often through severe persecutions and through martyrdom towards the Light.

All the same each of us owes the duty to himself, to his brethren, and above all, to the Lord, to search carefully for the original Gospel of the Word of God no matter what it may cost him to reject the more or less false Gospels handed down by well-meaning brethren of the past.

THE GALATIANS' NEW GOSPEL

The new Gospel which the Galatians were disposed to accept was one that is very prevalent today, and is as much to be reprehended today as when St. Paul wrote. Their new Gospel consisted of a mixing of the Jewish Law with the Grace of God in Christ, as the Apostle shows. They said, Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, surely; He is the Savior, He is the Redeemer; we must believe on Him, but that is not enough. We must become Jews under their Law arrangement, and between the Law and Christ we will obtain salvation. Many Christians today are making the same mistake of adding something to the Gospel of Christ. They hunger for some command, and desire to be under a Law, as a dog used to wearing a collar and chain feels not himself unless thus restrained.

Such dear Christian people, like the Galatians, do not fully appreciate the Master's statement, "If the Son shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed." Such feel lost without Divine commands Thou shalt, Thou shalt not, etc., and rejoice specially in holy days and Sabbaths, Church going and formal prayers, because they do not understand that God is better pleased to have us sons than to have us slaves. The poet got the thought correctly when he wrote,

*"We can no longer lie
Like slaves beneath the Throne,
Our souls now "Abba, Father," cry,
And He the kindred owns."*

A measure of bondage to forms, ceremonies and commands is probably reasonable to expect in immature Christians, whom St. Paul styles "babes in Christ." (1 Cor. 3:1.) But growth in grace and knowledge must bring such more nearly to the stature of manhood in Christ and to an appreciation of their relationship to God as sons, else they will not make their calling and election sure to the best things that God has provided.

THE SOCIAL-UPLIFT FALSE GOSPEL

From the most prominent pulpits of Christendom the Gospel of Christ respecting the forgiveness of individual sin, the reconciliation of the individual heart, the individual begetting of the Holy Spirit, and the personal walk in newness of life has been discarded. Long ago this Message was considered too personal. Many of the preachers, having had no such experience themselves, properly enough were chary of talking about what they did not understand. But salaries must go on. Sermons, therefore, must be peached, and something must be said. The Social Gospel has been brought forward to fill the gap. The message of the hour, according to this pseudo-Gospel, is not saintliness, not following in the footsteps of Jesus, not Bible study, but athletics, position in society, attention to political duties, attainment of honorable positions in the world, and great names which will make the Church register shine and money withal.

Far be it from me to teach inattention to the duties and responsibilities of life. Nothing in the words of Jesus or the Apostles admonishes or exemplifies carelessness in respect to health, manhood, womanhood, education, good name and a proper provision of the things needful to the present life. The Gospel of Jesus and the Apostles however, tells us most distinctly impresses upon all the followers of Jesus that their consecration as disciples of Jesus means their death to worldly ambitions for wealth, praise of men, political office and the giving of chief concern to the preservation of their earthly lives. It exhorts that these are all to be considered quite secondary to the new ambitions, the new ideals, set before us in the Gospel.

The followers of Jesus are enjoined to do good unto all men as they have opportunity. This would include, ofcourse, everything akin to social uplift. Indeed, we cannot imagine that any one could be a Christian a follower of the Lamb of God without having a deep sympathy with everything appertaining to the welfare of humanity and of social uplift. But the Apostle's expression, "as we have opportunity," is a limitation. The mission of the Christian is not social uplift. That is not the work to which the Lord Jesus and His followers dedicated their lives at least not the kind of social uplift generally understood.

A SOCIAL-UPLIFT THAT WILL SUCCEED

The whole work of God in connection with human Redemption is to be an uplifting work for Adam and his entire race. The uplift which God has planned and which He has revealed in the Bible to be a most thorough one, such as humanity has never conceived. It is to be an uplift mentally, morally, and physically back to the image and likeness of God lost in Eden, redeemed at Calvary. This social uplift of mankind which God is interested in, and of which God is the Center and Fulcrum, is the line in which all the followers of Jesus, rightly instructed, are more interested than any other people in the whole world.

However, the followers of Jesus are soldiers of the cross under His Captaincy, and they are not at liberty to follow theories either of their own or of other men respecting the way in which the great work of uplifting the world is to be accomplished. They are deeply interested in everything which men and women can do for the betterment of humanity in any and every sense of the word. And, as they have opportunity, they are glad to give a word of encouragement and appreciation, or occasionally a helping hand. But theirs is a far more important work. They are co-laborers with God not with men.

God's Plan is first to select the Church, the Body of Christ, to be His joint-heirs in the glorious Messianic Kingdom. Then He will use that Kingdom for the thorough and complete social uplift, which all agree is so necessary. The world sees not the Divine Plan, and even the Message of the Grace of God is foolishness to them; hence also the world may probably think of Jesus and His followers as chimerical. Their theory, God's testimony, is foolishness to the world and those who follow the Divine arrangement, as St. Paul says, are counted fools all the day long because they are spending their lives for the accomplishment of things which the world cannot see, understand, appreciate—"the deep things of God." (1 Cor. 2:10.)

FORMS OF GODLINESS

The Gospel of form and ceremony is not always hypocrisy. If reverential forms and chants and printed prayers always came from the heart and were never merely forms, there would be much in them to approve and enjoy. Still ceremonies are no part of the Gospel of Christ, and to put them instead of it is to make of them false Gospel. Who will say that either Christ or any of the Apostles presented a Gospel of forms and ceremonies?

The human heart is deceitful above all things say the Scriptures. It likes to delve into worldliness and frivolity and sometimes into sin, and then to deceive itself into believing that it is the Elect of God and a special subject of His care and sure of heavenly glory. Many such appear to know nothing whatever respecting the Gospel of Christ. Theirs is a Gospel of good works, donations to hospitals, to social uplift and Church work and forms and ceremonies. They feel a burden roll away when they repeat weekly the phrase, "We have done things which we ought not to have done, and have left undone the things which we ought to have done and there is no health in us. Be merciful to us miserable sinners."

But any suggestion that these are miserable sinners and need to know the way of the Lord more perfectly, and to become justified saints if they would be heirs of God, they would resent. The Gospel of formalism has done great injury to such people, many of whom, rightly informed respecting the Gospel of Christ, might be greatly blessed, sanctified, and made meet for the inheritance of the saints in light.

As an illustration of the religious stupor produced by the Gospel of formalism and ceremony, let me tell you of a gentleman of prominence in London whom I met recently. He said, "I was out to hear you last Sunday. I was one of that audience of thousands, and I want to tell you that you disturbed me greatly. I did not come away from your meeting happy and contented, but the reverse. I was disappointed. Why, the way you presented the matter, showing the terms and conditions of discipleship in the narrow way, and cross-bearing in the footsteps of Jesus, shocked me. I said to myself, Then I am not a Christian at all. I have not even taken the first steps in the Christian way. But when I went home my good mother-in-law said, 'Do not be alarmed at all stick to your own religion. '''

The Gospel of Christ was waking that man up out of his lethargy of formalism. I told him that I sought to do my duty in presenting the Gospel of Christ in no uncertain terms and that if he should profit by my message and become a joint-heir with Jesus in His Messianic Kingdom as a result of being waked up, he would thank me for it to all eternity.

GOSPEL HELL AND PURGATORY

Of all the various things substituted for the Gospel of Christ the most awful perversions are the Gospels of Purgatory and eternal torture. Yet so perverted is the human sensibility to the Truth that if one said he "heard a real Gospel sermon," the majority would understand it to mean that he heard horrible misrepresentations of the Divine character and purpose to the effect that nearly everybody all except the saintly are enroute for torture at the hands of demons and that the saintly few are to get to heaven and to all eternity look over its battlements at their brethren and sisters in torture and to all eternity to hear their wails of distress.

How terrible the perversion which could call such stuff "good tidings of great joy which shall be unto all people!" I am glad that the Bible Students, recently in Convention, repudiated such a Gospel as being the one of the Bible. I was glad that they called upon the ministers everywhere to declare themselves in no uncertain terms, and I was glad to note through the newspapers a very general repudiation of the torture Gospel. Nothing that the heathen have is as bad, and the wonder is that missionaries have made any progress whatever in heathen lands. For the real Gospel, I believe the real heathen are in readiness, hungering the Mohammedans also.

THE GOSPEL OF FAITH-HEALING

Faith-healing is another of the false gospels opposed both to the letter and the spirit of Jesus' teachings. Not a single one of the Lord's disciples was healed miraculously, nor a single Prophet of old. The miracles which Jesus performed were wholly upon outsiders, not His disciples, and were illustrations of how Himself and His Church in Kingdom glory will bless, heal, uplift, and restore all the families of the earth all the willing and obedient. St. Paul blessed napkins and handkerchiefs to be sent to the sick, but never one of these sent to the brethren. When Timothy was sick, St. Paul instead recommended a change of diet.

Many dear Christian people are misled by the spurious statement of Mark 16: "These signs shall follow them that believe," etc. They cling to the passage even after being given abundant proofs that it was added to the Scriptures in the Seventh Century, and that it was omitted properly from the Revised Version. So deeply seated is the love for the Gospel of healing, that this passage is clung to by some even after it is pointed out to them that they would not dare to eat and drink poisonous things as it mentions.

The Gospel of Christ, as applied to this Age, is the very reverse of the gospel of healing. Jesus, who was perfect, laid down his life in doing good for others. His Apostles did the same. Indeed the stipulation of discipleship is, He that loveth his life and seeketh to save it will lose it; he that loseth his life sacrificially for My sake and for the Gospel's shall find it. The Gospel of Christ is the Gospel of self-denial and suffering and patient endurance joy in the Lord and health of spirit, rather than joy and health of the flesh. True, godliness and contentment do often bring to God's people an increase of health through their rest of mind. But this is neither promised to them nor to be prayed for by them. On the contrary, they are to follow the example of the Redeemer in laying down their lives for the brethren.

THE TRUE GOSPEL OF CHRIST

In combating the errors we have incidentally presented the Gospel of Christ. It is a Message that God proposes to bless the world through the Seed of Abraham and that Jesus glorified is that Spiritual Seed. It is a message respecting His Kingdom which shall shortly be inaugurated with power and great glory for the blessing of Adam and all his race with human Restitution, giving to all fullest opportunity of return to the Heavenly Father's love through the merit of the great Sacrifice accomplished at Calvary. It is a Message too, that the Redeemer, before taking the Throne of His glory, in harmony with the Divine Program, is now calling, choosing, and proving a "little flock" of believers justified through faith in His blood.

These are to be made perfect through suffering, through sacrifice, by walking in the Master's footsteps. They have the promise that if they suffer with Him, they shall also reign with Him; if they be dead with Him, they shall also live with Him. Whoever sees, hears, appreciates, this true Gospel of the Grace of God in Christ finds in it the power of God unto salvation. The more fully he receives it the more does he possess the power of the Truth which, if co-operated with will work in him to will and to do the Father's good pleasure and eventually make him an heir of God and a joint heir of Jesus Christ the Lord to the Heavenly Kingdom and eternal life in glory.

THY KINGDOM COME, THY WILL BE DONE

Manilla, Philippine Islands-Many of us have learned highest type of civil administration. I trust that I am not to appreciate a republican form of government as the very one whit behind the most patriotic of you in my appreciation of the great Government of the United States, which many of us believe is the noblest that has yet risen among men. Nevertheless, the Bible teaches that Messiah's reign will be that of a monarchy; not only so, it will be a very exclusive and aristocratic monarchy. Additionally, it will be most autocratic - theocratic; the will of its subjects will not be consulted in the slightest particular.

THE FIFTH UNIVERSAL ENTIRE

At first, in alarm, we are ready to say, would not that be a most dangerous condition of things? Could any royal family, however noble and generous, be intrusted with such autocratic power without fear of its being misused for the enslavement of the rulers? Have we not learned this in the history of the past 6,000 years? Do we not see the necessity for curtailing and controlling the power of Kings and Governors? Are we not more and more brought to realize the necessity that the people shall rule whether in Congress or in Parliament, in Dumas or in Chambers of Deputies?

Yes, Yes, my dear friends, I heartily accede to all this; but when I shall describe to you the nature of the kingdom that is to be established, and its personnel, all your fears will assuredly flee, and you will rejoice exceedingly that the Divine arrangement is what it is in respect to the theocratic kingdom shortly to be established and to take over the government of the world.

Scripturally, it is described as the Fifth Universal Empire of earth. I remind you of the Divinely inspired dream of King Nebuchadnezzar, as interpreted by the Prophet Daniel. It was of an image majestic, grand. The head of the image was Nebuchadnezzar's own kingdom at Babylon, the first to rule over the earth. Next, represented in the breast and arms of silver, came Medo-Persia, the Second Universal Empire of earth, the conqueror of Babylon. Next, represented in the belly and thighs of the image, came Grecia; the Third Universal Empire of earth, which conquered Medo-Persia. Next, represented in the legs of Iron, came Rome, the Fourth Universal Empire, conqueror of Greece. There are to be no more until Messiah's Kingdom; it will be the fifth. Meantime, we have had two attempts at a fifth monarchy, both unsuccessful. One of these attempts was by Napoleon I., the other was that of the Papacy. During this time the present divisions, which resulted from the breaking up of the Roman Empire, are represented by the feet of the image, with their 10 toes.

SMITING THE IMAGE'S FEET

The prophecy declares (Dan. 2:44) that in the days of these Kings, represented by the toes of the Image, the God of heaven will set up a kingdom, which shall subdue all kingdoms, and which shall never be overthrown. It shall "be given to the people, saints; of the Most High God, and they shall take the kingdom and possess it forever, even forever and ever." (Dan. 7:18, 27) In the picture, God's Kingdom is symbolically represented as a great stone, hewn from the mountain without hands--supernaturally. It shall smite the image in its feet, and forthwith "the iron, the brass, the silver and the gold shall become like the chaff of a summer threshing floor, and the wind shall carry it away," but the mountain shall increase until "it shall fill the whole earth."

Thus, in a figure, or symbol, God pictures things now shortly to come to pass. I know not how much to expect from the war between Italy and Turkey, but Rome and Constantinople stand for, represent, the two legs of the image, for be it remembered that each in turn was the Roman Capital and representative of the image. We are certainly justified in watching with considerable interest the present war and what it may be leading to in the way of involving all the 10 kingdoms represented in this prophecy.

But that is not the special point of interest in my subject; rather, I am discussing the character of Messiah's Kingdom, which is to rule the world, overthrow sin and death and uplift humanity from ignorance, superstition, sin weakness and death. The declaration is that Messiah shall reign until He shall have put down all insubordination, and that the last enemy to be destroyed will be death. - 1 Cor. 15:25, 26

This is the Kingdom for which the Master Himself taught His followers to pray. Nothing slight or insignificant will be the outcome of that glorious, Messianic reign of a thousand years. At its very beginning Satan will be bound, with all that this signifies--the repression of evil and darkness. For a thousand years the Sun of Righteousness shall pour forth the light of truth and grace upon our poor, fallen race until the knowledge of God's glory shall fill the whole earth as the waters cover the great deep. (Hab. 2:14) Eventually all willful opponents of that Kingdom will die the second death, from which there will be no redemption, no recovery. But meantime, a the willing and obedient will be rising, not only from the tomb, but also out of all the weaknesses and frailties of the present times, up, up, up to the fullness of perfection of life, although they will not live again in this perfect sense until the thousand years shall be finished. With the close of that reign of righteousness, after it shall have accomplished its work of delivering the groaning creation from the bondage of corruption, sin and death, Messiah will abdicate the throne; as it is written, "He will deliver up the Kingdom to God, even the Father, that He may be all in all." - 1 Cor. 15:24

NO MORE SIGHING, CRYING OR DYING

What a glorious triumph that will be when every creature in heaven and earth and under the earth shall he hear, saying, Praise, glory, honor, dominion and might be unto Him that sitteth upon the Throne, and unto the Lamb, forever. (Rev. 5:13) What a glorious condition will then obtain when there shall be no more crying, no more sighing, no more dying, for all the former things of sin and death shall have passed away! Ah! He that sitteth upon the Throne said, "Behold, I make all things new!" Glad we are that our great Messiah is about to overthrow sin and evil, about to establish righteousness on a permanent and everlasting foundation, which will insure that to all eternity God's will shall be done as perfectly in the earth as it is now done in heaven.

I ask you to consider candidly-you need not reply-is there a kingdom in the world to-day that in your judgement fitly represents a Divine government among men? Is there a perfect government, is there a single spot in all the earth where God's will is done as it is in heaven? You are conversant with history. You know the bloody record which marks its pages. You know that so-called Christian Europe has been drenched with blood more than any other part of the world. You know that the cause of wrong has triumphed as often or oftener than the cause of right. You know that to-day these kingdoms of Europe, styled kingdoms of God, are threatening one another as they have done in the past. You know that great guns, great battleships and monster torpedoes, such as the world has never known before, are being prepared by these various nations for use either aggressively or defensively, against one another, while they all claim to be Christ's kingdoms. Is this logical? Is this rational? Most assuredly not!

We must go to the Bible for true information on this subject. It tells us that these kingdoms are not the kingdoms of God, but "kingdoms of this world." It tells us that Satan is the Prince of this world (John 14:30, Eph. 2:2); that he is "the god of this world," "that now worketh in the hearts of the children of disobedience"-so much more numerous than the children of obedience that he through them holds the world's control. But with equal clearness the Bible declares the Divine power and mastery over Satan and that he and his reign of sin and death are permitted of God for a limited time and for a special purpose. The testimony tells us that when the due time shall come Messiah shall take His great power and reign-then Satan shall be bound and all the forces of sin and darkness be restrained. Then the Sun of Righteousness shall arise with healing in its beams to flood the earth with the light of the knowledge of the glory of God.

THE ELECTION HATH OBTAINED IT

Come with me and take a cursory view of God's great work thus far accomplished. For more than two thousand years God gave no clear intimation of what he intended to do for the fallen race. Ili= He made a statement to Abraham so clear, so explicit, that St. Paid declares it was a statement of the Gospel in advance. God said to Abraham, "I intend to bless the world,' which could only mean, "I intend to relieve them of the curse of death which came upon them through Adam's sin. "God added to Abraham; "This blessing which I will bring to all the families of the earth will come through your posterity'In thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed. "

God's due time for bringing this blessing was still future; the blessing intended could not come until Messiah should come; but meantime God gave to the natural seed of Abraham, through Moses, the Law Covenant, which offered them eternal life and an inheritance in the kingdom if they could keep the Law. Of course, they could not keep the Law because it was the measure of a perfect man's ability, and alas! like the remainder of the world, the Israelites were imperfect-sinners. Nevertheless the offer and their attempt to keep the Law brought them great uplift of heart, so that when Jesus came to them a considerable number were ready to receive Him, did receive Him, and He received them. They became sons of God, through the begetting of the Holy Spirit, at Pentecost and afterward.

These were the spiritual Seed of Abraham, begotten of the Holy Spirit, Jesus Himself being the Head, or First; the others were counted in as members of His Body.

Israel had been hoping for a share in Messiah's kingdom, and St. Paul explains; "Israel hath not obtained that which he seeketh for, but the election hath obtained it, and the rest were blinded." The blinded Israelites are still cast aside, but not forever. The Divine blessing shall come to natural Israel just as soon as spiritual Israel shall be completed. See Rom. 11:25-34

THE KINGDOM SUFFERETH VIOLENCE

What did the election obtain? Of what did the faithful "Israelites indeed" become heirs by accepting Jesus and by the Pentecostal blessing? We answer that they became identified with Messiah's Kingdom and heirs or inheritors of the glorious promise made to Abraham, that in this Kingdom all the families of the earth should be blessed. But now note that there were not a sufficient number of Jews found worthy to complete the Kingdom class. The Kingdom therefore could not be inaugurated then, God had foreseen this, and through the prophet had promised that some would be gathered from the Gentiles to complete this Kingdom class. The entire work of the Gospel Age has been the calling of this "elect" class for the Kingdom. If we have rightly viewed the matter, the foreordained number will soon have been found, the election will be at an end, the accepted will be glorified as the Kingdom, and Messiah's reign of righteousness will begin.

But notice now the course of all belonging to the Kingdom class, throughout this age. They are not reigning with Christ, but suffering with Christ. And Jesus explained this; they are indeed of the royal family, because begotten of the Holy Spirit; they are indeed the Kingdom class, because they are affiliated with the great King; but they have not yet entered into their glory. They will do so only by the power of the first resurrection. Thus it is written, "We must all be changed," because "flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God."

Our Lord himself was the pattern, the forerunner of all these. After His consecration and His begetting of the Holy Spirit. He was tested even unto death, even the death of the cross, before He experienced His glorious resurrection change and ascended up and sat down at the right hand of the Majesty on High. Similarly all of His followers after consecration, must be tested, their loyalty must be proven, before they can share with Him in "His resurrection. "

Partly for the testing of these, their development takes place in a time when Satan is Prince of this world, and when his power is permitted to be exercised against them as it was exercised against their Lord. The message to these is, "The Kingdom suffereth violence and the violent take it by force." As our Lord suffered violence from the Prince of this world, so will His followers for "the disciple is not above His Lord." His promise to His followers is, "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." Rev. 2: 10

So then we perceive that God's Kingdom class, the followers of Jesus, have been suffering violence, just as did their Leader, for righteousness sake. That the persecutors had not known and done their evil work intentionally, St. Peter intimates when he says to the Jews; "I wot that in ignorance ye did it, as did also your rulers, for if they had known they would not have crucified the Prince of Life." Hence, in due time their blindness shall be turned away, and they will look upon Him whom they pierced and mourn (Zech. 12: 10), and God will pour upon them the spirit of prayer and supplication, and forgive them and make the experience profitable to as many as have proved willing.

Meantime, for 18 centuries, the Scriptures declare, "The world knoweth us not even as it knew Him not." God's saintly ones have not been generally the great, the influential, either in church or state, just as Jesus and the Apostles were not in their day. Nevertheless, the Lord knoweth those that are His. Scattered here and there during the past 18 centuries, He has been dealing with them, preparing them, polishing them, fitting them as jewels. And He tells us that at our Lord's second coming, He will make up His jewels they will constitute the Kingdom class; for if we suffer with Him, we shall also reign with Him.

I am sure you will agree with me that those whom the Lord has been so carefully selecting, instructing and polishing in the school of Christ, who have been so effectively polished with the trials and disciplines of evil, will be the very class above all others to whom the glorious dominion of earth may well be intrusted without fear. Only those thoroughly loyal to God and to principles will be in that Kingdom class.

THE WHOLE CREATION GROANETH AND TRAVAILETH IN PAIN TOGETHER UNTIL NOW

Hongkong, China The Foreign Missions Investigation Committee of the International Bible Students' Association spent several days in Hong Kong, Canton and vicinity. For efficiency they divided, some giving more attention to one and the others to another phase of the missionary interest. They seemed well pleased with the treatment accorded them. Pastor Russell's address to the Chinese in their fine City Hall Auditorium was both helpful and encouraging. He declared that he came as a follower of Jesus and a friend to all humanity. He directed special attention to the words of Paul, the great Apostle, applicable to humanity in general and at the present time specially to the Chinese: "The whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now waiting for the manifestation of the sons of God." (Rom. 8:22) China's war experiences in recent years have been severe trials, particularly to a people of their temperament peace-preferring, gentle, courteous to each other and to foreigners.

Pastor Russell feared for their terrible experiences with anarchy; but they will have it merely in advance of other peoples to all of whom it is coming as a result of discontent, inspired by greatly increased knowledge, combined with selfishness. The hope for all is in Messiah's Kingdom, now near at hand. Those who most quickly learn faith in God and justice and mercy toward others will soonest share the coming blessings. Some of us already share those coming blessings by the exercise of faith in the glorious promises of the Bible. The pastor has been told that their courtesy of manner arose, not from love and sympathy, but from law and custom centuries old. He could not judge the heart, but had sincerely wished that some of the favored race of so-called Christendom possessed in a larger degree some of the admirable traits of the Chinese, their respectful demeanor, quiet courtesy, their civility and energy.

It shall not be my mission, he said, to urge you to become identified with any sects or parties of Christendom, nor to recommend to you any of their creeds. Nevertheless, in all of those creeds there is more or less of the most wonderful truth which ever came to the ears of humanity, but, alas! In a darker period it became so mixed with human tradition as to be to-day dishonoring to God, offensive to the intelligence of many, and thus an offense to those who still accept those creeds. I can readily see reasons why you have not been more influenced by Christianity. You felt that you had as good or better than has been offered you. Very properly your heads and hearts refused adherence and worship to One whom you were told had foreordained whatever comes to pass, had foreordained the eternal torment of your ancestors and of all mankind except a mere favored few. It is to your credit that you were not attracted by such a message nor driven by such a fear.

THE GOD OF ALL GRACE

I may never again have the opportunity of addressing you; let me therefore tell you now of another Christianity, of which probably you have never before heard, from the same Bible used by the missionaries here and confessed by us all to be God's message, but at present a very different message, from that which my brethren confess. I call them "brethren" because I assume that they are sincere in their presentations. I once held similar views. I once preached also the damnation and eternal torture of all who do not accept Jesus in the present life and become His footstep followers. I should be sympathetic toward them, and I am. Nevertheless, this must not hinder me from using this opportunity to make known to you the clearer light that now shines upon God's Word.

I find that the darkness of error which beclouded my eyes of understanding came from the creeds, and that the Bible most beautifully and most simply presents a God of all Grace, a Father of Mercies, from whom cometh every good and every perfect gift, and with whom there is no variableness, neither shadow of turning. (Jas. 1:17) I know from my examination of our religious books that the Bible alone presents this God of kindness, compassion and sympathy. All other gods are full of pride, anger, hatred, malice, and all need appeasement to avert their fury.

The God of the Bible, the true God of Christianity, is all-loving, all-kind, ever-merciful and tells us so. It is a great fallacy which declares that He has damned humanity to a hell of torture at the hands of fireproof demons. On the contrary, the Bible declares that the wage or penalty of sin is death and that this is the explanation of the general prevalence of human weakness and frailty, mental, moral and physical death. In our text St. Paul tells us that the whole creation all mankind are groaning and travailing in pain now because of sin and its death penalty. This has been in progress for 6,000 years. It comes not through divine persecution of His creatures, but by natural laws of heredity passing on the weakness, mental, moral and physical, from parent to child, from generation to generation, by a law of nature. God has simply permitted this law to take its course in disobedient man.

DOES GOD PITY US

You may perhaps ask me if the God who is loving, generous and kind does not pity humanity in its present dying condition, even though we have come into this state through the violation of divine law. Could not a God of love do something for our aid?

That, my dear friends, is exactly what I wish to point out. The Bible declares that the divine law broken, its sentence must stand unless in some manner justly satisfied. If a perfect man could be found, willing to sacrifice his life in reparation for Father Adam's disobedience and forfeited life, then God could be just and accept the sacrifice and allow Adam and the remainder of his race to go free from the death sentence. But no such perfect man could be found. There is none righteous; no, not one. All were born in sin; none therefore could give to God a ransom for his brother, as the Scriptures declare. (Psa. 49:7) What then? God figuratively represents His sympathy, saying that He looked down to see our condition and He hearkened to the groans of the prisoners of sin and death. He beheld that there was none that could pity or succor because all were under sentence. "Then His own eye pitied and His own arm brought salvation." How beautiful the picture of divine compassion hearkening to the groaning creation.

THE ARM OF THE LORD REVEALED

The arm of God means, symbolically, Divine power. He revealed this arm in the arrangement which He made for the payment of our death penalty, in the sending of His Son, the Man Christ Jesus, who, "by the grace of God, tasted death for every man." As a perfect man had sinned, God provided a perfect man to be the Redeemer, "that as by man came death by a Man also should come the resurrection of the dead; for us all in Adam die, even so shall all in Christ be made alive, every man in his own order." (1 Cor. 15:22)

Do you now catch a glimpse of the mercy, the compassion, the love of the Christian God to us, who appeals to the heart as being different from any other god of whom you have ever had knowledge! Think of a God, infinite in power, as being careful of His fallen creatures, and providing, even at self-sacrifice, for their recovery!

But you will say, where is the recovery? Are we not still sick, mentally, morally and physically a dying race? What has the death of Jesus accomplished for us? That is a good question. The Answer--to it will bring you much enlightenment respecting God's loving character and glorious plan for humanity. The Bible teaches us that Jesus, who redeemed mankind, is to be made the great King, whose kingdom shall dominate the whole world—"under the whole heavens." (Dan. 7:27) It will not be an earthly kingdom; nor will the King be visible to men, even as God is not visible, because He is a Spirit. The great Messiah will be invisible. He will be invisible because He is a Spirit, "the express image of the Father's person." (Heb. 1:3) The kingdom will be exercised through human agencies and it will increase and spread until all shall know God truly, and until "every knee shall bow and every tongue confess" to Him but all who will reject his grace shall perish totally in the second death.

WAITING FOR THE SONS OF GOD

My text declares that the relief for the groaning creation waits for the manifestation of the sons of God. We have already seen that Jesus, as the pre-eminent Son of God, died for our sins and ascended to the right hand of Divine Majesty, where He is waiting; and meantime the groaning creation must wait also, for the same thing for which He waits for the sons of God. Here is a matter which seems to have been for a time hidden under the rubbish of the Dark Ages the fact that God not only foreordained Jesus, the great Son of God, to be the world's Messiah, to deliver them from sin and death, but He also foreordained the selection of a special class from among mankind, to be the Redeemer's associates and joint heirs in His kingdom of glory, honor and immortality. (Rom. 2:7) It has required the entire period from the time of Jesus' death until now to call, to sanctify, to prepare these subordinate sons of God.

We might have supposed that our great, loving Creator would have called upon certain of the holy angels to be associates with the Redeemer in the glorious work of the Kingdom, the uplift of humanity. But not so; He has sent the invitation to this high, glorious station to our poor, fallen race. Thus, additionally, has the God of Love manifested the exceeding riches of His grace and His loving kindness toward us in Christ Jesus. Eph. 2:7 How wonderfully condescending!

Surely all will admit with me that no god of any people has ever manifested such a love and interest in his creatures as has the God of the Bible the God of Christianity. It is the Love of God which constrains us draws us. And His exceeding great and precious promises work in our hearts, "both to will and to do His good pleasure." And this is the test His wisdom has provided. Although Messiah will use coercion to some extent during His reign of a thousand years, yet the Heavenly Father will not use coercion in respect to any of these sons whom He is now inviting. He seeketh such to worship Him as worship Him in spirit and in truth such as need no coercion--such as delight to know and to do the will of the Father in Heaven such as in these respects are copies of His Son, the Redeemer.

But, although God will not urge, force or compel any to be sons on this high plane of the divine nature, He does, to the contrary, set obstacles in the way and make the way "narrow" in which he invites these to follow their Leader. He does this for the very purpose of hindering any from coming except the high class which He specially desires. His Message is through Jesus, "If any man will be My disciple, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow Me." Again the Apostle expresses the Father's terms, saying, "I beseech you, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies living sacrifices, holy and acceptable to God, your reasonable service." Again says the Master, "Strait is the gate and narrow is the way that leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it."

Surely we cannot say that these stringent restrictions are unreasonable. How could we expect our gracious Creator to want any except the most loyal of heart and most faithful and obedient to be associated with the Lord of Life and Glory in His glorious kingdom work? This is the only calling which God has yet opened to humanity, and not until this elect class shall have been completed will the world's blessing be due to begin. It is my understanding of the Scriptures that the time for making our calling and election sure to this kingdom class is now very short. It therefore behooves all who desire this glorious relationship with Messiah to “give all diligence” and to “run with patience the race set before us” in the Gospel, looking unto Jesus, the Author of our faith, until He become the finisher.

THE NON-ELECT ALSO EXHORTED

The wonderful blessings of our day, which makes it so different from any other epoch in the world’s history have reached even here to China, and we now see what already appear to be the beginnings of wonderful things. Evidently Divine Power within the past century has been lifting the veil, because we are just on the threshold of the new dispensation because the church (the elect sons of God) is about complete because “the manifestation of the sons of God” for the aid of the “groaning creation” is at hand because Messiah’s kingdom glory is about to be ushered in. The blessings of the present are only a foretaste of those glorious blessings for the world of mankind. Oh, what compensations our loving God has provided for all the lessons of sin and sorrow, pain and death! He has promised that the former things shall be removed, nor can the mind comprehend what the glory of the future things will be! So then, to the patient, persevering, civil Chinese my message is an assurance that God’s blessing is nigh at hand. For eighteen centuries He has been pouring out His holy Spirit upon these saintly ones, His servants and handmaidens, for their comfort and joy and preparation for the kingdom glory. The next thing in order is the pouring out of His spirit upon all flesh; that will include your race and all the families of the earth.

I cannot hope that any of you will feel drawn to become footstep followers of the lowly Nazarene, and even if many of you should so desire, we have the assurance of the Scriptures that the entire number will be but a little flock;” but I do set before you the glorious prospects of human Restitution to all that was lost by Adam, to all that was redeemed at Calvary. I admonish you that all development of character you may make at the present time means so much of preparation and advancement for the future, and that all violation of conscience and antagonism to the principles of righteousness will work to your disadvantage in the future.

Therefore, as the Scriptures enjoin, “Seek meekness, seek righteousness; it may be that ye shall be hid in the day of the Lord’s anger.” (Zeph. 2:3) The day of Divine anger and special retribution is in the close of this Age, at the inauguration of the Kingdom.

The whole world of mankind will then be transferred into the hands of Messiah, who will take them just as they are. They will be in various conditions. Some will be more depraved, others less depraved; some will be more seared in their consciences and some less; and these deficiencies of character will depend upon the way in which each one accepted or rejected light and opportunity in the present time.

The selfishness which has marked the world's experiences, particularly within the past half century, is very reprehensible in God's sight, and Christendom, so highly favored of God, is to be held proportionately responsible. Hence the great time of trouble will fall with special severity upon Christendom. When you shall perceive this, rail not again Christianity, but realize that the Scriptures are being fulfilled, and that the dark cloud will be but temporary, and that behind it is hidden the most glorious vista of human blessing possible for the human mind to conceive. Prepare for it and especially seek to know the God of All Grace.

“OF A TRUTH I PERCEIVE THAT GOD IS NO RESPECTOR OF PERSONS”

Singapore, Jan. 28 Pastor Russell's text for today was, "Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons, but in every nation he that feareth Him and worketh righteousness is accepted of Him." Acts 10:34, 35 A report of his address follows:

Never before have I seen so cosmopolitan a city as Singapore. The swarms of Chinese, Malays, Hindoos, Japanese, Siamese, Singhalese, Burmese, Afghans, Madrassi, Tamils and many other nationalities are here interspersed by representatives of practically every nation in the world. Henceforth New York City must in my mind take second place as respects cosmopolitan population. The sight of these commingled peoples, only a few of which know of, worship, or in any wise acknowledge "the Only True God, and Jesus Christ whom He hath sent," stirs my heart, and my head as well. My head inquires respecting God's provision for the three-fourths of humanity who have never heard of Him and the salvation which He has provided in Christ.

We recognize the clear statements of the apostle that "Without faith in is impossible to please God" (Heb. 11:6); and "How shall they believe in Him of whom they have not heard?" (Rom. 10:14) and also the commission: "This Gospel of the Kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness, and then shall the end come". (Matt. 24:14) Properly enough we ask, What kind of an end is coming, and what will it mean to the twelve hundred millions who know not God and to the thousands of millions of their ancestors similarly ignorant of Him?

TRIED AND FOUND WANTING

A considerable class of very good people by their creeds tell us that if God had foreordained the heathen to salvation He would have seen to it that the Gospel would be preached to them; and that their not hearing the Gospel signifies that God “passed them by” as “non-elect;” that the “elect” are to be found only amongst those who have been favored of God and who accept that favor and are “sanctified by the truth” and “made meet for the inheritance of the saints in light.” Col. 1:12.

Another class of people by their creeds, which no longer truly represent them, tell us that they believe as above, only that they add another condition, namely, that “the elect,” in order to be of the “elect,” must be brought to a knowledge of water baptism complete immersion, and must obey this teaching.

Another theory held denies that there is any “election” in respect to the matter, and denies that any particular amount of water is necessary, although it does recommend a little. This theory declares God’s love for the heathen, but says that He made faith in Jesus’ sacrificial death a condition of salvation and that the responsibility for the heathen’s not knowing, and consequently their going to eternal torment, rests with Christians themselves. They say that God did His part in providing the Savior and that the carrying of this knowledge is wholly dependent upon Christians. One would think that with this view few Christians would be able to sleep a single night after once assenting to such a responsibility and realizing how little they have done have been able to do to meet the responsibility.

Some dear people, holding the views mentioned, have started a “Men and Religion Forward Movement.” They propose to use about two million dollars in starting the movement and thereby to collect a fund of thirty million dollars (six million pounds). Dear people! How I love them for their zeal, even though it be as the apostle said—“not according to knowledge.” Rom. 10:2

If they could stand in Singapore’s streets and journey with us a little the eyes of their understanding would be opened. They would begin to figure out that the sum they expect to spend in converting the world is little over half a penny per soul! They must indeed think the heathen cheap when they reflect that the estimates on the work of the Rev. Billy Sunday a year after his meetings show a cost of about six hundred dollars per soul, with doubts entertained respecting the saintship of even these. The United States government statistics show that a century ago the heathens numbered six hundred millions and that today the number is double that, namely, twelve hundred millions.

A BETTER HOPE FOUND

Some, repudiating the creeds of the past as no longer tenable, fault the Bible with being the basis for those creeds and throw it away with the creeds. These are becoming agnostics, higher critics, evolutionists, spiritists, etc. And because of their worldly wisdom and social standing these higher critics are rapidly undermining all faith in the Bible as an inspired message from God to His people. They are adrift, some sailing in one direction and some in another they have lost their chart of the ages and the great compass of Divine truth in the depths of the sea of human wisdom, which, from the Divine standpoint, is declared to be foolishness. Let us not take their course.

Let us, on the contrary, declare that the difficulty with the creeds of the past has been that they divided up the Word of God amongst them, and that each creed has a certain amount of gold as well as a large accumulation of dross. It would be too serious an undertaking for finites to put all the creeds into a crucible and separate the gold from the dross. Let us take the easier, the simpler method, to which all Christian people should be willing to accede, namely: to wholly cast aside our creeds and go back to the Word of God to the Bible to the utterances of Jesus and His apostles and prophets. Thus doing, many will find to their surprise that, while the creeds have gathered precious jewels of truth from the Bible, they have given these false settings by which they misrepresent the truth which they profess to illuminate.

St. Paul's declaration is that the Word of God is sufficient that the man of God may be fully furnished. (2 Tim. 3:17) His further suggestion is that we "rightly divide the Word of Truth" and that "it is able to make us wise unto salvation." Let us follow this course and allow God's Word to be its own interpreter allow one passage to throw light upon another; and let us reject none of the Divine testimony.

THE BLESSING OF THE LORD, IT MAKETH RICH; AND HE ADDETH NO SORROW THEREWITH

Madras, India -- The Foreign Missions Investigation Committee is here. Our finest auditorium, the Victoria Hall, was crowded to hear Pastor Russell. He spoke here twice. We report one of his discourses from the text, "The blessing of the Lord, it maketh rich; and He addeth no sorrow therewith." Prov. 10:22

3H529

The thing which strikes me specially as I visit your great city for the first time is the marked contrast between the palaces of your superior quarter and the hovels of Blacktown the contrast between great riches and great poverty. But think not that I have come into your midst to speak words which would engender strife or even discontent. Rather my message will be one of peace. I bear you the Message of the Kingdom of God's dear Son the kingdom for which we have all so long prayed. "Thy Kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth, as it is done in heaven.

The inequalities, mental and physical, which prevail amongst us as members of a fallen race, produce naturally our inequalities as respects wealth and social conditions; it is well, therefore, that we should not accept the rabid views entertained by many, but we should think soberly, dispassionately. We should not be quick to think of the wealthy as robbers of the poor and injurious to the general welfare, wholly selfish and under Divine reprobation. We should remember that God Himself is very rich. All the gold and silver are His, and the cattle upon a thousand hills, with infinite power, beyond human comprehension.

We should remember that it is written that "Abraham was very rich," and that riches did not interfere with the fact that he "was the friend of God," and that to him God gave that great promise secured by the Divine oath, which is the basis of all hope for the blessing of the world: "In thee and in thy Seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." Other noble characters on the pages of history are noted as having possessed great wealth. Many of us have erred in thinking that the wealthy are to be measured by other standards than are the poor. And could anyone properly urge that if rich and poor be measured by the same moral standards the poor would be found more noble-minded than the rich? We think not.

We should therefore view the matter of poverty and riches philosophically. Both poor and rich should be encouraged to use faithfully the opportunities which they possess and wait patiently for the Lord's time and way for the introduction of the new order of things which He has promised, assured that it is not in our power to either hasten or delay the Divine program.

BIBLE COUNSEL FOR THE RICH

The Apostle says: "Charge those amongst you who are rich that they trust not in uncertain riches." The history of centuries corroborates the Apostle's words. The rich and prominent of one day become the poor and forgotten of another. "Riches take wings" in a manner that poverty rarely imitates.

The talents and opportunities which have brought great wealth to some of our prominent Americans have brought wealth and prosperity in smaller measure to those associated with them in their enterprises. Indeed, in some respects the entire world, and particularly America, owes them a debt of gratitude for their energy and perseverance in the exercise of their talents and opportunities along such broad lines. And if some of these have been negligent of their opportunities for the redistribution of their wealth in the interest of their fellow men, all the more should this throw a halo of honor about the heads of those who have remembered that wealth, like all other great talents, is to be used, not too selfishly, but for the public good.

My mind took the course of reasoning as I looked at the handsome edifice occupied by the Y. M. C. A. of this city, and I was informed that it was the gift of one of our American merchant princes, Mr. John Wanamaker, of New York and Philadelphia. I said to myself, Behold an instance in which riches have been generously expended, even in a far-off land, for the benefit of the masses and with a desire to promote clean and noble manhood along Christian lines.

Another of my countrymen, Mr. Rockefeller, has done much to promote the enlightenment of the world by the introduction of a system into the business of oil refining. The low prices thus obtained have permitted the use of oil in thousands of humble homes, where its price would have been prohibitive without Mr. Rockefeller's business genius for organization. He has thus assisted in lighting India. And even the rewards of his enterprise, represented in enormous wealth, he is daily seeking to turn into useful channels for the blessing of humanity.

Even if we must dispute the wisdom of investing millions in great colleges for the teaching of Higher Criticism and Evolution and thus for the undermining of influence of the Bible and of a living faith therein, we must, nevertheless, compliment the evident good intention and must trust that the Lord will not hold a generous heart responsible for the terrible evils which are sweeping over the world, breeding discontent and anarchy as a result of unwise and improper direction of wealth.

In this connection I must not neglect to mention that generosity and public spirit are not associated merely with Christianity. Even here, on the opposite side of our globe, you have doubtless heard of our great steel manufacturer, who declares that if he has any belief in a religious way he is a Buddhist, and thus much in sympathy with the religion of millions in India. This man of genius, while putting into practice methods of steel manufacture which have greatly reduced the cost thereof, and thus benefited the world, incidentally reaped for himself a huge fortune. Noble spirited, he has publicly announced his intention to use his vast wealth in the public interest, wisely declaring that it is a shame for any man to die very rich while so many fellow creatures are very poor. All over the world Mr. Carnegie's generosity and public spirit are manifested in public libraries which he has freely donated.

It is not for us to discuss the wisdom or unwisdom of Mr. Carnegie's gifts or whether he could have done better; it is for us to congratulate our race upon the generosity of this one of its number and upon his proper appreciation of his relationship to the race as manifested in his desire to give back to the public the rewards of his genius.

No so familiar with the rich of India, I nevertheless counsel them with the Divine Message to “trust not in uncertain riches” to make not these the treasure of their hearts rather to consider them as blessed opportunities for doing good to their fellow men. I counsel them that the riches of Divine favor alone endure for eternity. If they are enterprising and ambitious, let their eyes rest upon the great “prize,” which the Master called, figuratively, “The Pearl of Great Price” a share in the Messianic Kingdom.

BIBLE COUNSEL TO THE POOR

The Gospel of the Kingdom is for rich and poor, male and female, white and colored, on the same terms. God is not a respecter of persons. For a time He was a respecter of nationalities; for a time He confined the offer of joint heirship with Jesus in the Kingdom to those Jews who would hear and respond to the Message. But after gathering out the “Israelites indeed,” after begetting these by the Holy Spirit, the call was made general and has been sent to the four quarters of the earth.

Tradition says that one of the apostles, St. Thomas, brought the Message here to India, and we are pointed to his tomb. No matter whether the tradition be true or false, the facts stand: 1. The Gospel privileges have stood open to India and to every nation for centuries. 2. The Gospel was not sent to convert India nor any nation, but merely to bear witness. That witness has been borne and I am re-echoing it to-day. The Message is for the calling, instruction, sealing of as many as desire to walk in the footsteps of Jesus, and no other. Only those who appreciate this great offer will sacrifice every earthly interest in order to obtain this “Pearl of Great Price.” The masses have no ear to hear God’s Message they have no desire to self-sacrificingly take up their cross and follow the Redeemer.

However, all God’s purposes shall be accomplished; His Word shall not return unto Him void; it shall accomplish that which He pleases. It will find the elect number of saintly characters whom the Father foreordained shall be with the Redeemer and share His glory throughout His Messianic reign.

I have a special word for the encouragement of the poor of India and every land. I wish the poor to realize this truth, namely, that poverty is not unfavorable to their best interests for eternity, but, on the contrary, is assistful. Hence the Scriptures tell us that “not many great, wise, learned or rich” will be heirs of the Kingdom, but “chiefly the poor of this world rich in faith.” (1 Cor. 1:26-28; Jas. 2:5)

It is not that God more highly esteems the poor than the rich, but that they have less to fill and satisfy their hearts now and are, therefore, more hungry and thirsty for the right way of the Lord and more ready to hearken to His voice, which says to both rich and poor, "Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." The rich usually feel less weary and less heavy laden they have more to console them in the things of this present time. The poor, on the contrary, having fewer of the blessings of the present, are hungering and thirsting for some better thing for the future and thus meantime find the Lord and are glad to receive His blessings upon His only terms full consecration of mind and body, time and purse.

GOD'S BLESSING MAKETH RICH

Our text is an epitomized statement of the Gospel of Christ. All God's blessing for our race will come through the seed of Abraham The Christ. The giving of His Son to be man's redeemer and deliverer from sin and death was God's blessing to man making man rich. Messiah, having died for the redemption of the world, is about to bestow upon men the divine blessing promised to Abraham, "In thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed."

That blessing to the non-elect world will be a glorious opportunity for rising up out of sin and death conditions to full human perfection in the image and likeness of God as Adam possessed this before his fall. It will mean the bringing of the earth to the conditions pictured in Eden. The earth, God declares, He formed not in vain, but to be inhabited. At present man is in a condition of enmity and separation from His Creator and his earthly home is disordered. God's footstool, for 6,000 years, has been the scene of a terrible reign of sin and death.

WHY THE DELAY IN THE REMOVAL OF DEATH AND SIN

The only hope is in Messiah's kingdom, which God has promised shall be established for the overthrow of Satan, the abolishing of ignorance and superstition, the enlightenment of mankind and the uplift of all the willing and obedient and for the destruction of the willfully wicked of the second death. But before the kingdom could be established a redemptive work was necessary for the satisfaction of justice on behalf of Adam, the sinner, and his race involved with him. By the grace of God Jesus has appeared and, as a corresponding price, has died, the just for the unjust, that He might bring us back into harmony with God and bring in the glorious and long-promised thousand years of restitution. (Act 3:19-21)

Eighteen centuries ago Jesus accomplished His redemptive work and was rewarded, in His resurrection, with glory, honor and immortality. Ever since then He is at the right hand of Jehovah God, merely awaiting the divinely ordained time when He shall take unto Himself His great power and reign. Of that time we read prophetically, "Ask of Me, and I will give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession." (Psa. 2:8)

But why so long a delay between the time when He appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself and the time when He shall appear in His glory to establish the reign of righteousness and lift up the world of mankind for whom He died? The Bible alone answers this question, and oh, how much we are interested in its answer. It tells us that in this interim between the death of the Savior and the inauguration of His Kingdom a special and great work is to be accomplished according to the Divine arrangement the calling and the choosing of a faithful few from among the redeemed race to constitute a Royal Priesthood, to serve and reign in association with the Savior.

These heirs of God and joint-heirs with Jesus Christ our Lord are variously described in the Scriptures. Under one figure they are spoken of as being members of the Body of which He is the Head. Thus is shown the oneness of Christ and His faithful followers. In another picture Jesus is spoken of as the heavenly Bridegroom, and the Church is described as His espoused. At the second coming of Jesus His espoused virgin Church is to be made alive from the dead and thus to be married to the Bridegroom and become His Bride and joint-heir to the glory, honor and immortality which are His by virtue of the heavenly Father's arrangement and of the Savior's worthiness faithfulness unto death, even the death of the Cross.

HOW RICH WE SHALL BE MADE

Thus seen, God, the Fountain of every good and every perfect gift, proposes, first, to make rich the Church, the Elect of the Gospel Age. Theirs will be heavenly riches, a spirit nature, glory, honor, with our Redeemer—"far above angels, principalities and powers and every name that is named." The blessing of the Lord will make these rich indeed, and after they shall have entered into the riches of this reward, in the First Resurrection, they will be absolutely perfect. God will add no sorrow to that completed blessing. All the imperfections of the present will be past, and we shall be like our Redeemer and share His glory and see Him as He is.

And as for the world, we have already seen that God is waiting to be gracious to all who will accept His favors. He is waiting for the completion of the church of the first born, who constitute "a kind of first fruits unto God of His creatures. (Jas. 1:18) He is waiting for the kingdom class to be fully selected, fully developed, fully shaped and polished in the Redeemer's likeness before bestowing the blessing upon mankind through natural Israel. The blessing of the world will require a thousand years for its outpouring upon every nation, people, kindred and tongue.

"They shall obtain mercy through your mercy." (Rom. 11:31)
The blessing will come to natural Israel, and, gradually, through natural Israel to other nations.

Gradually the blessing of the Lord will be making rich all who will come under the terms of the new covenant and of Messiah's glorious reign. By the close of the thousand years the world will be perfect no more sighing, no more crying and no more dying. The blessing of the Lord will have made us rich, and then what? He will add no sorrow. The lesson of sin and death will have been learned before mankind will thus be enriched by the Savior through restitution processes and uplift from sin and death.

THE DESIRE OF ALL NATIONS

Calcutta -The Foreign Missions Investigation Committee, appointed by the International Bible Students Association, is here. The Committee expedite their work by each giving special attention to a different feature of their investigation. This is their third week in India and they have already traveled nearly two thousand miles. They are keenly interested in the heathen and in the Bible, but they decline to give in advance any hint of what their report will be as respects the missionaries and their work.

Pastor Russell, Chairman of the Committee, preached twice today to large and attentive audiences in our finest Auditorium. One of his addresses, from Jer. 9:23, 24, we report. He said:

Your "City of Palaces" greatly impresses me, as doubtless it does all who visit it. But as I look at its splendor I am reminded of that portion of my text which declares, "Let him that glorieth glory in this, that he understandeth and knoweth Me, that I am the Lord, which exerciseth loving-kindness, judgment and righteousness in the earth." Wherever we go we perceive that man, by virtue of his creation, is a worshiper. The organs of reverence and spirituality, although only partially developed and much shattered by ignorance and superstition, are to be found in every man and their position is the very highest in his organism. My journey to this city has impressed this thought deeply.

I stopped en route to Juggernaut; the very name called up the stories of my childhood which so greatly aroused my sympathies for the poor heathen. Missionary reports told of how in ignorance the natives would throw themselves before the great Car of Juggernaut, feeling it an honor to thus sacrifice their lives to a false god. And now, here I am on the Ganges River, of which in childhood I heard so much that thrilled my heart with sympathy how mothers threw their babes into the Ganges, not because they had no sympathy with their offspring, but because they desired to sacrifice to and propitiate their gods. Now that I am here I do thank God that, although the heathen have not been converted to a true knowledge of the great Jehovah, they have, nevertheless, come under the strong hand of the British government, which, whatever its defects, seeks at least to protect its subjects from the extremes of their own ignorance and superstition.

THE DESIRE OF ALL NATIONS

While it is true that the worst form of government imaginable is preferable to anarchy, and while it is also true that the British Government is amongst the most just in the world, nevertheless, no government that fallen man has ever made or can make can ever satisfy the ideals of the more intelligent. Hence for centuries the heathen world has dreamed of a Golden Age to come and Bible Students have rejoiced in the Divine promise that the Messianic Kingdom will follow our present arrangement and that it will be proved to be “the desire of all nations.”

Oh, since we perceive the ignorance and superstition of heathendom, our hearts cry out for the promised reign of Messiah and the blessing that then will accrue to mankind! The very best that we have yet attained, in the most civilized lands, comes far short of the Divine promise of the conditions to prevail as a result of Messiah’s rule. Then all ignorance, all superstition, all sin, all sorrow, all pain, all death shall be abolished and finally, with the willfully wicked destroyed in the Second Death, the time will have come when God’s will shall be done on earth as fully, as completely, as it is now done in heaven. When “every knee shall bow and every tongue confess” to the glory of God; when “the knowledge of the glory of the Lord shall fill the whole earth as the waters cover the great deep;” when “no man will need say to his neighbor, know thou the Lord, for all shall know Him from the least of them to the greatest of them” it is for that glorious Epoch, my dear hearers, that we should all be hoping, longing, praying, and striving to prepare ourselves.

“NOW WE KNOW IN PART”

Saint Paul wrote, “Now we know in part, but then we shall know even as also we are known.” (1 Cor. 13:12.) Alas! every true Christian must realize how his own knowledge of God and that of his forefathers has so slightly exceeded the knowledge of the heathen and that he found it difficult to “glory” in his understanding of God! Only those who are adherents to the declarations of the Bible that “God is Love,” that His mercy endureth ever, that He is like a pitying father, that He is the God of All Grace, the Father of Mercies, the length, breadth, height and depth of whose loving-kindness we cannot measure only such have the assurances which enable them to offset the horrible theories of our creeds formulated in a darker past which told us more horrible things respecting our God and His treatment of mankind than our poor heathen brethren ever imagined.

THE KEY OF THE DIVINE WORD

But now the better day is dawning! We are seeing the glorious outlines of the Divine character in the Divine Plan as never before! Our hearts first led the way and rebelled against the dictum of our fallacious reasoning. And now, in God's due time, when nature is yielding up her secrets and chemistry is making the world anew, behold, the key to the Divine Word is thrust into our hands, unlocking its mysteries and explaining its parabolic symbols to our astonished faith! But alas! meantime many of the brightest minds of the world have rejected the Bible, many of them even denying the personality of the Creator; and so far have these gone in the substitution of human wisdom for Divine Revelation that it seems impossible for them to return to the paths of faith.

Now, however, is the time for all of those who have a hungering and thirsting after God and His righteousness to begin afresh the study of His Word in the light of the morning of this New Dispensation. Not only is this necessary for our own comfort and establishment, but it is necessary also in the interests of others before whom we stand as bulwarks of the Truth, having on the whole Armor of God, the Helmet of Salvation, the Shield of Faith, the Breastplate of Righteousness, the Sword of the Spirit necessary for self-protection and for the aid of all who "are feeling after God if haply they might find Him." Acts 17:27.

KNOWING OUR GOD

Our Redeemer declared, "This is life eternal, that they might know Thee, the only true and living God, and Jesus Christ, whom Thou hast sent." Evidently the great Teacher had in mind the thought of our text not merely a knowledge about God, but an acquaintanceship with Him, such as can come only through a fellowship of spirit and an understanding of the Divine Program. None, however, are permitted to come to such intimate knowledge except as they shall manifest heart-loyalty. Each step of progress in our loyalty to God brings that attitude of mind which is pleasing to Him and which, when thoroughly demonstrated, will be rewarded with everlasting life. Thus knowledge is intimately bound up with our eternal prospects.

Earth's teeming millions know not God. Even those portions called Christian worship the true God with but slight appreciation of His true character. None of these, therefore, are in the condition to claim everlasting life according to the teaching of the Master. They are the non-elect, in contrast with the faithful few, who are Scripturally styled "God's Elect," "the Very Elect,” and who are urged to make their calling and election sure by persevering loyalty even unto death.

In our blindness of the past, assuming that all the non-elect would be consigned to an eternity of torture, we have published in our missionary reports that ninety thousand every day go down into death, into Christless graves and, by inference, into eternal torture. Alas, how misunderstood and how unintentionally misrepresented has been our gracious Father, the God of All Grace, the Father of Mercies.

Now we read His character in fairer lines as we perceive that the fulfillment of His great and wonderful plan for the salvation of the world is merely beginning that the election of Church to be the Bride of Christ and joint-heir with Him in His glorious Kingdom merely marks the time for the setting up of that Heavenly Kingdom, the rule of which is to bring such blessing and opportunities to mankind the non-elect. Now we perceive that for a thousand years the Elect, on the heavenly plane, invisible to men, “like unto the angels,” will live and reign with Christ (Rev. 20:4) for the blessing of the non-elect for their uplifting from conditions of sin and imperfection back to the glorious heights of the image of God in the flesh, lost by Adam’s disobedience and redeemed by our Savior on Calvary, and to be restored to Adam and all his children found willing to receive it on Divine terms.

In view of these things, how reasonable that we find the Apostles and Prophets exultingly pointing forward to Messiah’s Kingdom as the time when all the families of the earth shall be blessed. How this explains to us the fact that our Redeemer gave so many parables illustrative of His Kingdom describing the class which would constitute the Royal Family and the trials and difficulties of their way while proving themselves worthy to share with our Redeemer in glory; and the conditions in which they would be at His second coming, when the “wise virgins” only would be accepted to the glorious honor of becoming the Bride, the Lamb’s Wife; and how the “pounds” and the “talents” granted us in the present time must be used faithfully if we would hear His words: “Well done, good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things; enter thou into the joys of thy Lord.”

HOW GLORY IN THIS KNOWLEDGE

In the past we have gloried as sects and parties in our various creed-idols of which we are now ashamed. We perceive that creed worship did us almost as much injury as did idol worship to the heathen. Nearly all these creed-idols declared eternal torment for the thousands of millions who had never heard of the Only Name. Indeed, nearly all of them claimed that only a small minority of Christendom would escape eternal torture. Some of these creed-idols declare that so awful a catastrophe as the torture of twenty thousand millions was foreknown of God and predestinated by Him before the creation of Adam. Others claim the contrary, that God had benevolent intentions toward our race at the start, but that His plans miscarried and would produce the same horrible results, either because of Divine unwisdom or because of lack of power. How such presentations distressed every Christian loyal at heart toward His God and sympathetic toward his fellows!

Our colleges and universities and, sad to say, our theological seminaries are busy turning out unbelievers infidels. Nor are these people wicked or immoral in their unbelief; they are as well-meaning as ever, but have lost their way. They reject the Bible because they believe it to be the foundation of the various inconsistencies in their creeds; they are stumbling for lack of knowledge; they cannot believe that man's hereafter is one of centuries of suffering, or of eternal suffering.

Let us now demolish these idols which so long have misrepresented our gracious Creator and blinded us with ignorance and superstition. Let us receive the Scripture teaching only. Let us rejoice in the election of the Church to be the Kingdom class and let us rejoice in the hope of its Kingdom glory for the blessing of the non-elect. Let us rejoice that "the wilderness shall blossom as the rose, and that the solitary place shall be glad" and that "God will make His footstool glorious," during the thousand years of Messiah's Kingdom. So desiring we will come into line with our text: "Let him that glorieth glory in this, that he understandeth and knoweth Me, that I am the Lord, which exerciseth loving-kindness, judgment and righteousness in the earth."

NOW WE SEE OBSCURELY

Saint Paul declares: "Now we see obscurely." Only by faith can we see God's loving-kindness. The reign of sin and death for six thousand years has been but the natural result of the violation of Divine Law which our first parents transgressed. The beginning of God's work for our reclamation from its consequences was in the sending of His Son to be our Redeemer. Since then He has been gathering an elect few to be Messiah's Bride and joint-heir in His Kingdom. Soon very soon, we hope and believe the Church will be completed and the Messianic Kingdom will manifest Divine clemency, mercy, loving-kindness, judgment and righteousness in the earth.

The Bible declares that the penalty for sin is being experienced by humanity at the present time the death penalty and that the redemption price of Christ's death is sufficient for the sins of the whole world. It declares that on account of this redemption, ultimately the resurrection of the dead shall take place—" all that are in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of Man and come forth." It is because of the Divine intention that there shall be a resurrection of the dead that the Bible everywhere, both in the Old and New Testaments, speaks of those who have died, both good and bad, as being "asleep," and the promise is that "They that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake."

Nor will they come forth to similar conditions of sorrow that now surround us all. On the contrary, the First Resurrection is to be composed of the holy, the saintly, and they are to be associated with their Redeemer as his Bride and Consort, to assist in delivering and restoring mankind. Later the imperfect, who have not had their full trial, the great mass of mankind, will be brought forth, that they may learn the ways of righteousness, that they may learn to know God, and Jesus Christ, and in due time be uplifted out of the conditions of sin and death. Then will come the world's opportunity. How joyful is the message, "There shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, nor dying; for the former things have passed away!"

Ah, how different is God's proposition of a general uplift of the worthy and their assistance back to perfection to all that was lost in Adam! How different is this from the "doctrines of demons," which have perplexed us, which have divided the Church of Christ into numberless sects and parties, and which have almost driven us from Christ and the Bible!

Only those can see the grace of God now whose eyes have been enlightened and whose ears have been unstopped. Thank God, however, for the gracious promise that in due time "all the blind eyes shall be opened and all the deaf ears shall be unstopped;" then "the knowledge of the glory of the Lord shall fill the whole earth as the waters cover the great deep." (Isa. 35:5; Hab. 2:14.) Then many will respond to the Divine clemency and become children of God, children of the Messiah, and heirs of everlasting, earthly life and its earthly Paradise, even as the "elect" of this Age, who come to a true knowledge of God, will be heirs of life eternal on the spirit plane, far above angels, principalities and powers and every name that is named, as Messiah's Bride and Joint-heir.

HEIGHTS AND DEPTH DIVINE

Bombay -The Committee of the International Bible Students Association for the investigation of Foreign Missions have spent three weeks in India and traveled over three thousand miles. The seven members divided the work amongst themselves at the various stopping points and will co-labor in the report. We report today's discourse in the Y. M. C. A. Auditorium by Pastor Russell, the Chairman of the Committee, as follows:—

I had a great interest in your land and its people before coming to your shores, but my interest has been greatly increased by what I have witnessed during the past three weeks in India not only in your largest cities, but also in your towns, villages and agricultural districts. As there are no other extremes in the world so great as between the caps of your Himalaya mountains and the wash of your coral strands, 29,000 feet below them, so likewise there can be found no greater contrast socially and financially than between your wealthy princes and your poverty stricken lower castes. Although such contrasts are deplorable we have no remedy to suggest, except the Divine one the establishment of Messiah's Kingdom.

SYMPATHY MISAPPLIED

Meantime, if poverty be favorable to saintship, there should be excellent material in abundance here. Indeed one of the things which has impressed me is the religious sentiment of India. The religious fervor of the thousands who bathe in the Ganges, and the numerous temples and shrines in every city, remind me of Saint Paul's words respecting some of his day: "feeling after God, if haply they might find Him." The two thousand temples and shrines of the one city of Benares speak volumes for the religious sentiment of the people and, although I have remarked of your hundreds of millions of hopelessly poor, I have not overlooked the fact that some of your wealthy have shown that they are not without generous instincts. Many of your merchant princes have evidently given largely to the charitable institutions, notable in Bombay; and I would not overlook the fact that in one of your great cities large animal hospitals have been provided for decrepit chickens, donkeys, horses, etc. However we may consider such sympathy misapplied in view of human need and suffering, we cannot overlook the fact that sympathy is there only waiting for the proper direction which Messiah's Kingdom will shortly give.

In your own grand Bombay I noted with astonishment the Towers of Silence, where the Parsee element of your population gives the flesh of its dead to feed the vultures. Alas! my soul cries out. Is not such heroism worthy of a better cause would not these Parsees make wonderfully faithful Christians, if they but had the blessing of the true Light? How I rejoice in the Divine promise that the true Light of the world shall yet lighten every man that cometh into the world! (John 1:9.) How glad I am that now I see the Divine provision for the hundreds of millions of India and of the whole world to come to a knowledge of the glory of God, under the uplifting of the Kingdom of Messiah!

And how I rejoice to believe it is near, even at the doors just behind a terrible time of trouble and anarchy, which India will not escape!

HEIGHTS AND DEPTHS DIVINE

But I must not dwell too much on the dark side of India's picture; you know it too well already. I will allow the wonderful heights of the Himalayas from your sea shore to draw our attention to the Apostles's words respecting "the heights and depths, the lengths and breadths of the Love of God, which passeth all understanding." That is the text of my parting words to India. In the past our forefathers studied God's word with the light of a tallow candle, or of a pine knot, or of a smoking lamp; now we may search the Scriptures in the clear, steady light of the electric lamp, which brings us almost noon day brightness.

Correspondingly, we find beauties in the Divine Word and Plan which our forefathers of the day of the tallow dip could not discern. Once we believed with our forefathers that God's love was merely for the "elect," saintly few, and that the non-elect, in His displeasure. He had doomed to eternal suffering. Now we see the same blessings as ever for the "elect," but other blessings for the non-elect, the world earthly blessings of restitution to human perfection and to an earthly Eden, world-wide.

Our forefathers saw the height of God's love for the holy angels and its condescension to the saintly of men, but they did not see its depths. They did not see that the Redemption accomplished by Jesus is ultimately to reach down to and embrace the very humblest and most degraded of humankind. How the precious Scriptures which tell of Jesus as the Savior of the world, as well as of the Church, escaped our notice, who can explain? But surely glad are we that now we can see clearly that the Redeemer is a Propitiation for our sins, the Church's sins, and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world.

This fuller appreciation of the lengths and breadths and heights and depths of love Divine is coming to Christian people as a benediction from heaven, just at the time when many are Higher-Critically repudiating the Bible and its God as unworthy of belief. The true view of God's Word we have intimated, namely, that all the families of the earth are to be blessed by Messiah's Kingdom, and that the Church, in process of election for the past eighteen centuries, is to be sharer with her Lord in that Kingdom.

Is it any wonder that this glorious view of our Creator and His plan for human salvation is inspiring sanctifying to the hearts of all who have the hearing ear to receive it! Is it not in full accord with the earliest statement of the Gospel, "Through thy Seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed?" Is it not the claim of the Church and of the Bible that the saintly believers of the Gospel Age constitute the spiritual Seed of Abraham, the Bride of Messiah, "the Body of Christ which is the Church?" And have we not also the assurance, “if ye be Christ’s, then are ye Abraham’s Seed, and heirs according to the promise?” Gal. 3:16, 29.

FROM THE HORRIBLE PIT

Another view of the heights and depths of God’s love is that which recognizes us as a race fallen from human perfection into the mire of sin whose quick-sands are swallowing up mankind at the rate of 90,000 every day. The Divine Program shows two salvations for the groaning creation. The first of these is the most wonderful; it is now in progress, and we urge all who have the hearing ear to lay aside every weight and every besetting sin that they may attain this special salvation offered to the Church. By faith, through the medium of exceeding great and precious promises, God is now lifting the obedient “elect” from the original pit of sin and death, from the mental degradation in which we all were as Adam’s race; and to some extent they are being lifted also physically from this degradation.

The transforming work begins with each believer in Jesus who presents himself a living sacrifice to walk in the Master’s footsteps. Even though these may not generally be of the wealthy and educated and higher social classes, the power of the Holy Spirit operating through the Divine promises gradually beautifies not only the characters but to some extent the features of those who rejoice to take up their cross and follow the Savior.

However uncouth and rude or careless or savage they may have been before, the transforming influence of the Holy Spirit develops in them the fruits of the spirit meekness, gentleness, patience, longsuffering, brotherly-kindness, love; and these things continuing in them and abounding more and more, and attesting their faithfulness unto death, make these neither barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of God and in the character-likeness of Jesus; and hence the Resurrection change will usher them into the everlasting Kingdom of their Savior to be sharers in His glory, honor and immortality far above angels, principalities and powers and every name that is named. Do we not here see wonderful depths from which these are rescued and wonderful heights to which they are yet to be lifted by Divine grace and its arrangements on their behalf! Surely all mankind who see this glorious arrangement of our God can glorify Him on this account.

GOD’S ORIGINAL DESIGN TO BE CARRIED OUT

For the world a somewhat similar and yet very different blessing is outlined in the Divine Plan of the Ages. Our poor race in some quarters of the world, fallen from the image of God almost to the level of the brute, sadly needs the uplifting, restricting, restitutionary influences which Messiah's glorious Kingdom will bring to them. Oh, not so high as the Church, the elect Bride of the Lamb not so high as cherubim or even as angels, but very high, nevertheless back to all that was lost in Eden.

How our hearts glow with gratitude toward God as we perceive that His original design for His human creatures is yet to be carried out to the letter! "His Word that is gone forth out of His mouth shall not return unto Him void, but it shall prosper in the thing whereunto He sent it." (Isa. 55:11.) He said, "Let Us make man in Our image;" and when he was made the Divine judgment expressed was that he was "very good," only "a little lower than the angels." (Heb. 2:7.) Moreover, he was crowned with glory and with honor in a sense that the angels were not crowned, for man was made the king, the ruler, the Divine representative of all the lower creatures of the earth. As we read "Thou didst set him over the works of Thy hands ... all sheep and oxen, yea, and the beast of the field, the fowl of the air and the fish of the sea, and whatsoever passeth through the paths of the seas." Psa. 8:6-8.

This Godlikeness in the flesh and this Divine authority associated with it has been marred and much of it has been lost. The six thousand years of the reign of sin and death have not changed the Divine intention. On the contrary, the human family has been multiplying; it has been given valuable lessons on the exceeding sinfulness of sin; it has learned to know evil first. Next it must be brought to a knowledge of good and to an appreciation of Divine mercy. This will come to mankind during the thousand years of Messiah's reign, in which not only the living will be blessed with knowledge and with recovery from the power of death, but gradually all that have gone down to the tomb shall come forth, that they may be raised up, up, up again to the perfection of life, and fully live again at the end of the thousand years. Rev. 20:5.

IN THE AGES TO COME

Nor will the lengths and the breadths of Divine love toward the elect Church, the Bride of Christ, be fully exhibited to angels and to men, even during the glorious period of Messiah's reign. Saint Paul explicitly declares, "that in the Ages to come He might shew the exceeding riches of His grace in His kindness toward us through Christ Jesus." Is it asked what opportunity there will be for further favors to be bestowed upon the Church at the conclusion of the Millennial reign? We Answer--that as the Scriptures declare that God formed the earth not in vain but made it to be inhabited, and will make it glorious as His footstool in due time, so we may reason with respect to the other planets of our solar system. Gradually through coming Ages Divine power will be exercised in bringing into being millions of intelligent creatures on every planet of our system.

And still more than this, if our astronomical concepts are correct, all the fixed stars are suns, and around each sun are planets. Are there, then, a thousand blazing suns? Yes, more. Are there ten thousand? Yes, more. Are there ten times a ten thousand? Yes, more! Are there ten times a hundred, thousand, a million? Yes, more! Are there ten times ten millions, a hundred millions? Yes and more! And if we allow an average of ten planets to each sun this would make more than a thousand million planets, all made not in vain, but eventually to be inhabited. And astronomers assure us that we have every reason to believe that if we could stand upon the very furthestmost sun of our knowledge we would see as many millions more beyond.

Alas! our poor minds are bewildered with such immensity, with such manifestations of the lengths and breadths of Divine Power and Wisdom, even as we have already been bewildered in our attempt to appreciate the lengths and breadths and heights and depths of Divine Love! Will there not indeed, then, be quite a sufficiency of the Divine Program to be outworked through Christ and the Church to justify the Apostle's statement that in the Ages to come God will manifest the exceeding riches of His grace in His loving kindness toward us in Christ Jesus?

INDIA'S SHARE IN GOD'S GRACE

India's hundreds of millions have not gone to a hell of hopeless despair and endless torture! Thank God, no! They have gone to the same hell to which Jesus went, the same to which the Apostles and Prophets went, the same to which all mankind, both good and bad go the Bible hell, the tomb, the state of death sheol, in the Old Testament Hebrew, and hades, in the New Testament Greek. They are all asleep, unconscious, until the morning of the resurrection. Thus "Abraham slept with his fathers," as did Kings David and Solomon, and all, both good and bad. Thus Jesus' friend, Lazarus, fell asleep and was awakened by the Savior on the fourth day, called forth from the tomb. Thus also Saint Stephen, stoned to death, fell asleep; and Saint Paul speaks of mankind in the tomb as sleeping in Jesus, and of the Church as being asleep in Christ.

3H536

In the glorious morning of the New Dispensation, inaugurated by Messiah's Kingdom, the awakening of mankind will gradually proceed. Our Savior informs us that His Church, the elect Bride, will constitute the First Resurrection, and that subsequently all that sleep in the dust of the earth shall come forth, "every man in his own order," in his own rank. Eventually all shall be brought forth and thus Sheol will be no more, Hades shall be destroyed as the Scriptures say, "Oh, Sheol, I will be thy destruction!" (Hos. 13:14.) Our Lord declares that He has the keys of Hades the rightful authority to open the tomb and ultimately release all the prisoners of sin and death and to grant them restitution privileges under His Messianic Kingdom, which first of all will bind Satan and overthrow his Kingdom of darkness and sin, ignorance and superstition.

As for those who will ultimately reject Divine favor, the message is that they shall die the Second Death. From it there will be no redemption, no resurrection, no recovery. As Saint Peter declares, they shall perish like natural brute beasts.

It is time that we should begin to magnify God's Love, the lengths and breadths and heights and depths of which are beyond all human appreciation. As we do this our hearts are enlarged; our lives are ennobled; the grace of God is shed abroad in our hearts; the light of Divine Truth shines out from our words and conduct more and more. Thus we become copies of God's dear Son, little by little, in the spirit of our minds; and thus we are fitted and prepared for a share with Him in His glorious Kingdom which shall bring in Restitution uplift from sin and death for Adam and his race. Acts 3:19-21

THE RESURRECTION DOCTRINE PECULIAR TO CHRISTIANITY

The London Tabernacle was crowded to hear Pastor Russell's Easter sermon on "The Resurrection Hope the Only One." His text was from 1 Cor. 15:12-18—"How say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead? If Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain and your faith is also vain. Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." He said:

For years God's people have had excellent Bibles, and thus have been blessed far in advance of our brethren who lived during the Dark Ages. But we have read our Bibles too carelessly and often have most of us wondered at the great stress St. Paul laid upon the resurrection. Rarely is the subject preached upon now, and rarely is it ever thought of except as an absurdity. The reason for this is not far to seek. From childhood we have been taught that nobody is dead that in dying everybody, good and bad, becomes more alive than ever before: that this aliveness, to the saintly few, means spiritual powers and an immediate entrance into heaven, death being swallowed up in life. The unsaintly masses also, we are told, have quickened sensibilities after dying they become more alive, more able to appreciate and suffer pain.

Our Catholic neighbors tell us that the majority immediately go to Purgatory, there to be tried by various sufferings and tortures, and later, enter heaven. Our Protestant teachings have been to the effect that the unsaintly masses, unfit for the presence of God and the holy, will be consigned to an eternity of awful torture and made very much more alive to suffering than before. Thus we have been taught to believe that death is a portal or door into an intenser life that nobody is dead. Many of us perplexed ourselves, and were perplexed by others, with questions respecting how there could be a “resurrection of the dead” if nobody is dead. We avoided the question, or gave the answer, “Mystery; go run and play.”

Some, indeed, attempted a patchwork of the matter and told us that those in heaven were happy, but not so happy as though they had bodies and that after thousands of years of craving for a body (which they had used for only a few years) they would get it back again for all eternity. Others said, “No, our bodies have been only a clog and a hindrance, and from the moment of death we will be better off without them; and we do not know why the Bible should teach a resurrection of the dead, to get back bodies that we would be glad to be rid of.” Respecting the wicked, we said that after roasting for centuries without a body, then, to intensify their pain, the body would be resurrected and they would have double suffering. What bosh! what foolishness! Is it any wonder that many of the bright minds of the world learned to doubt everything connected with religion and the Bible? Rather the wonder is that, seeing things so obscurely, we did not all repudiate everything.

NOW WHAT DO WE FIND

With the clearing of the mists of ignorance and superstition, with a better light reflected from one page to another of the Bible, the resurrection subject clarifies and the statements of Jesus and the Apostles and Prophets, which we thought so strange, become luminous and soul-satisfying.

When once we see that “the wages of sin is death” and not eternal torment; and that the Bible hell is the tomb and not a fiery furnace; and that all mankind go to sheol, to hades, just as did our Savior; then we begin to see that what we all need is to be saved from sheol, from hades, as was the Savior. A resurrection-salvation is thus the salvation hope of the Church and of the world.

What a relief this gives us as respects parents, children, neighbors, friends and the heathen, who have died out of Christ, unsaintly! What comfort it brings to know that they are sleeping in the great prison-house of death, unconscious of the lapse of time, waiting for the Redeemer, Who will as King set up His Kingdom in glory, associating His Bride with Himself for the blessing of all the families of the earth. The bringing forth of the prisoners out of the prison-house of death will be to set before them under the glorious provisions of the New Dispensation an opportunity for life everlasting, by obedience to the laws of the Kingdom under the assistance of the Heavenly One the alternative being, not eternal torment but death Second Death.

ALL SOULS GO TO SHEOL

Some one may say, "Pastor Russell, what about the soul? If the body goes to sheol, hades, the tomb, where goes the soul?" I reply that it is the soul that goes to sheol, to hades, the grave, the tomb, the state of death. Although the words sheol and hades are translated grave more times than translated hell, nevertheless they refer, not to the mound of earth, which is in the nature of a monument, but to the secret, hidden condition, preferably styled the tomb, the abyss.

The Prophet David wrote, "Thou wilt not leave my soul in sheol (the tomb, the state of death), nor suffer Thine Only One to see corruption." (Psa. 16:10) St. Peter quoted this on the day of Pentecost and explained that it is a prophecy in respect to Christ Jesus. David's soul was not delivered from sheol, and he did see corruption, and his sepulchre the Apostle could refer to. But he, being a Prophet, spoke those words respecting Jesus; that His soul would not be left in sheol; that His soul would not see corruption. St. Peter says that this prophecy was fulfilled in our Lord in that He was raised from the dead on the third day. He tells us (1 Pet. 3:18) that Jesus was put to death in the flesh, but quickened in spirit a Spirit Being far above angels and principalities and powers and every name that is named. Our common version Bible declares that our Lord's soul was saved from hell hades. (Acts 2:27-31)

David, in the Old Testament, used the word sheol. St. Peter, in the New Testament, used the word hades. There is no dispute amongst scholars as to what is signified. The words sheol and hades are well known to refer, not to a place of suffering or torture or animation of any kind, but to the unconsciousness of the death state. Jesus arose from the dead, from hades, the grave, and not from a place of torment. The so-called Apostles' Creed declares that Jesus descended into hell, but arose from the dead on the third day. All scholars know that nothing in the words sheol and hades has any relationship to fire or pain or suffering or consciousness, and thus this phrase of the Apostles' Creed is universally explained.

As Jesus descended into hades, so do all mankind. As the Father raised Him from the dead on the third day, so it is promised that He will raise us, the Church, from the dead. More than this, the unjust also, those who have not been approved of God, in the present life, shall all be awakened from the sleep of death. They will come to be informed respecting sin, having lived under the reign of Sin and Death. They will come forth that they may learn the ways of righteousness, the reward of which is life everlasting. The glorified Jesus and His glorified Church, the Bride, will be the Royal Priesthood, whose special work for a thousand years will be the uplifting of mankind, not only from the tomb, but also to perfection of life, “every man in his own order” or rank. The uplifting will bless as many as are willing lifting them from the degradation and meanness and imperfection into which all have fallen by one man’s disobedience, under the laws of heredity.

BURST THE BARS OF DEATH

In the poetic language of the hymn, Christ Jesus “burst the bars of death” in His resurrection. It was not possible for Him to be holden of death, writes the Apostle. (Acts 2:24) The Divine verdict went forth that He had been faithful and that to Him should come the reward of life upon the highest plane the divine nature. (Eph. 1:20,21)

Our fancies may legitimately picture that the holy angels marveled at the Redeemer’s experiences from the time that He left the heavenly glory and was made flesh and dwelt amongst us until, by His resurrection change, He returned again from the earthly nature to the heavenly plane, “far above angels.” As they sang at His nativity a rapturous song of glad tidings of great joy to all people, so they were filled with amazement, surely, at how the Father permitted Him to be tempted and tried and poured for Him His cup of suffering, which He drained to the dregs. They marveled when “He died, the Just for the unjust.” They looked and wondered, as hour after hour He remained in the tomb dead. Their loyalty to the Heavenly Father was tested during that period, but was rewarded when they beheld that Divine power raised Him up even to a more excellent glory than that which He had before.

With what alacrity the angels must have acknowledged the risen One, in harmony with the Father’s declaration, “Let all the angels of God worship Him.” “Worthy is the Lamb to receive glory and honor, dominion, might and power.” The point to be specially noticed is the change of nature which our Redeemer experienced in His resurrection. That change did not take place during the three and a half years of His ministry, which ended with His resurrection. When 30 years of age He gave Himself He surrendered His earthly privileges and rights and hopes into the Father’s hands, to be obedient to everything which Divine providence might permit. At that moment His sacrifice of His flesh was accepted. The evidence of its acceptance was the impartation of the Holy Spirit, which as a dove rested upon Him and exercised a quickening and illuminating influence upon His mind, enabling Him to understand more than human things and to perform more than human acts.

It was Jesus, a New Creature, begotten of the Spirit at Jordan, that did the mighty works of the Father. His flesh, His humanity, was gradually laid down sacrificially, in harmony with the Divine providences. He drank “the cup” which the Father poured for Him.

DIVINE POWER “BROUGHT FROM THE DEAD THE GREAT SHEPHERD”

This Easter Sunday celebrates the momentous event of our Lord’s resurrection from the dead. His resurrection is either a truth or a falsehood. In our text St. Paul assures us that if it is untrue, our faith, our hopes, our preaching and teachings are of no avail useless. If the resurrection of the dead is impossible, then the resurrection of Jesus was impossible. If the resurrection of Jesus did not take place, then we have no proof, and no ground for believing, that Divine power could resurrect the Church. If Divine Power “brought again from the dead the great Shepherd of the sheep,” it is Jehovah also who will bring us from the dead by Jesus, in God’s due time.

Let none avoid the question! Let all decide at once! Either we believe in a resurrection from the dead, or we do not believe in it. If the resurrection be a myth then, says the Apostle, all those who fell asleep with faith in Christ are perished they are not in heaven, Purgatory nor eternal torment. If we believe in the resurrection of the dead, both of the just and the unjust, then, logically, we must believe that they are dead, except in the Divine promise, purpose, arrangement. The decision of this resurrection question is a most momentous one, as it affects practically every doctrine of the Christian Church. If we get straight the doctrine of the Ransom effected through the Redeemer, and the doctrine of the Resurrection of the dead, all of our doctrines will fall into line, and all of our absurdities, which have troubled us so long, will fall out of the way, and all of the Scriptures will be found harmonious in teaching Divine Justice, Wisdom, Love and Power.

CHRIST THE FIRST-FRUITS

“But now is Christ risen from the dead and become the first-fruits of them that slept.” (1 Cor. 15:20) Ah, thank God, the Apostle did not mean to insinuate the possibility of our Lord’s not having risen. Merely, he would put the question that we might see how weighty is the subject how much depends on the answer. He exultantly answers, “Christ is risen!” We rejoice in this for several reasons. First, how sad it would be if He who laid aside His glory and was made flesh and tasted death on our behalf should have lost by His loyal endeavor to serve us and to do the Father’s will! How glad we are that He is risen, and that He was not raised again in the flesh, with the loss of His heavenly glory, but raised as the King of all, far above all others, and partaker of the divine nature!

Secondly we are glad on our own account, and on account of all mankind; for if our Lord Jesus had not been raised from the dead it would have proved one of two things either that He had not been faithful up to the Divine standard, and therefore that His life could not be a satisfaction for the human life lost in Adam, or else it would have proved that God, who had promised to raise Him from the dead if He would be obedient unto death, had been unable to do so; and, if unable to raise Him from the dead, we, likewise, would be without hope, even if our sins were cancelled by virtue of His sacrifice.

The Apostle's words give a further suggestion: Our Lord in His resurrection became "the first-fruits of them that slept." This signifies that none was ever raised from the dead before Him. As another Scripture declares, "He was the first that should arise from the dead." There were indeed others awakened from the tomb, by Jesus Himself and also previous to His Advent. But they were merely awakened, not lifted fully up out of death conditions to perfect life. The Redeemer was the first to have such an experience. But the Apostle's words mean more. If Jesus was the first-fruits of them that slept, there must of necessity be after-fruits. And this the Apostle proceeds to prove, declaring that "as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." (1 Cor. 15:22) Glorious resurrection hope! Precious Bible! The one Book alone which teaches a resurrection of the dead, or that the dead are dead.

The Apostle proceeds to tell us that the dead will not be resurrected together at once—"but every man in his own order." (1 Cor. 15:23) The first order or rank will be the Church. Blessed and holy are all they that have part in the First Resurrection;... they shall be priests of God and of Christ and shall reign with Him a thousand years. (Rev. 20:6)

This work of raising the dead will be the work of the entire reign of Messiah, as explained in our context: Christ must reign until He shall have put all enemies under His feet the last enemy will be death. As during the Mediatorial reign mankind shall rise up out of their ignorance, weakness, sin, depravity, they will be coming out of death conditions into life conditions; they will be in process of raising up resurrection.

This does not prove, however, that all of Adam's race will receive the gift of God, eternal life, but it does prove that all will be blessed with the opportunity of attaining that glorious reward. Whoever, after having the release from death put within his grasp, shall decline eternal life on the Divine terms will die again, but not because of Adam's sin it will not be the Adamic death. That Second Death will be complete destruction. Those sinners will die the Second Death without hope of further redemption or resurrection.

DAMAGING REPORT ABOUT MISSIONS

The International Bible Student Association secured the Hippodrome in which to hear the Report of its Committee on Foreign Missions Investigation. The spacious auditorium was crowded. Pro. F. H. Robinson, as Secretary of the Committee, announced that the Report as a whole had been submitted to the Association and was in the printer's hands, to appear in pamphlet form illustrated. It will shortly be procurable at the small price of five cents per copy, postpaid to any address free to the poor. The conclusion of the Report is in the nature of a Summary, which he read. We note some of its more salient points, as follows:—

SUMMARY OF REPORT

Oriental Christians are about as sincere, intelligent and earnest as the average of church attendants in Europe and America —few saintly.

Christianizing endeavors seem pretty generally to have ceased! Present missionary endeavors are a most exclusively along the line of secular education and medical aid.

3H539

There is less need of Academic and Collegiate education, such as the missionaries forward, than for Common Schooling. The general Common School education could best be furnished by the government and along unsectarian lines, after the method followed under the United States' supervision in the Philippine Islands. The tendency of the times in the Orient, as in the Occident, is toward unbelief in any religion.

The Orientals are remarkable tolerant of all religions, and are often perplexed at the Missionary competition, and opposition between Christian denominations. They would accept Christianity if it could demonstrate its superiority.

Oriental are not heathen-savages, but their educated classes include splendid specimens of noble manhood, the moral and intellectual peers of Europeans and Americans. The masses of these people are less vicious, less rude, more kind and considerate than are the masses of Europe and America. Drunkenness and outward immodesty are almost unknown.

Many of the churches are self-sustaining and the Orientals prefer to have them so, as they desire native preachers, and to manage their own affairs.

The very suggestion of the world's conversion is ridiculous to the people of the East including the Missionaries. The interest on $30,000,000, or the principal multiplied a thousand times, would accomplish little except along the lines of secular education nothing as respects the world's conversion. Nothing short of "The Kingdom of God's dear Son" can meet the issue.

Pastor Russell's discourse follows:

PASTOR RUSSELL'S HIPPODROME ADDRESS

"Ask of Me and I will give Thee the heathen for Thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for Thy possession." Psa. 2:8. The prophetic words, addressed by Jehovah to his Son, the Messiah, continually recurred to my mind as I mingled with and observed the peoples of India, China, Japan and the Philippines during our recent World Tour. Then certain questions came before my mind, which with their answers I will place before you.

The first question was, Why do we call these people heathen? They are not barbarous, not savages, not lawless people. Indeed, long centuries ago, when our forefathers were barbarians, these had much of the civilization which they still retain. But, I said, we call them heathen because the Bible refers to them. Let us see how and why the Bible uses this term and what is its significance. In Bible usage the word rendered "heathen" is the same as is sometimes rendered nations and Gentiles. For centuries it applied to all peoples outside the little nation of Israel, because that one nation had entered into Covenant-relationship with God, and had become His people, His dominion.

All the other nations, not thus related to God by Covenant, were styled heathen; all the outside nations were aliens, strangers and foreigners from the Covenants and promises made to Israel. And this same term continued to be applicable after the coming of Jesus. Even though the Gospel favor, which was originally offered to the Jews, was later thrown open to Cornelius and all Gentiles, or heathens, only those who accepted its terms, and came into Covenant-relationship with God through the begetting of the Holy Spirit only these, Israelites indeed, are properly reckoned as members of spiritual Israel, of whom St. Peter tells us, "Ye are a Royal Priesthood, a holy nation, a peculiar people." Consequently all others than Jews and Spiritual Israelites are heathens, whether they live in the Orient or the Occident.

TWO CIVILIZATIONS CONTRASTED

Our second question was, On the whole, to what extent is our Western civilization which is often called Christian civilization, superior to that of the East?

Considerable could be said in favor of each. We who have been accustomed from childhood to Western methods, customs, dress, etc., prefer our own, but the Eastern peoples evidently prefer their own, and are loath to change to ours. They are, however, now passively admitting the superiority of ours in that they are gradually adopting our schooling system, military system, naval system and voting system.

But in our contrasting the two civilizations, are we not apt to forget that the very features of our civilization, which are now being accepted as superior in the East, are comparatively new to ourselves. Where were our public schools and compulsory education a century ago? It is only twenty years ago that Great Britain adopted the present method. Where were our railroads, which they are now adopting? Let us remember that there was not a rail in the world, nor a locomotive, nor a car, a hundred years ago.

The East is rapidly introducing telegraphy, the telephone, the wireless system, the electric railways; but how long have we had these in the West? Less than a century some of them for only ten years. Viewing the matter from this standpoint should help to keep us of the West quite humble when we think of and speak of the awakening in the East in China, Japan, etc.

TO WHAT EXTENT HAS “CIVILIZATION” BLESSED THE WORLD

That Christ's teachings have brought great blessings wherever they have been received is, we hold, beyond dispute. Individuals have been blessed by the precious truth of Christianity rich and poor, of every nation, kindred and tongue. To these the Gospel Message has brought peace with God through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ and the salvation provided through Him. To these the instruction of the Bible and the guidance of the Holy Spirit have brought the fruitage of the Spirit. To these it has brought “the peace of God which passeth all understanding,” ruling in their hearts at all times, and under all conditions whether “in sickness or health, in poverty's vale, or abounding in wealth.”

But our question does not relate to these saintly followers of the teachings of Jesus, who walk in His footsteps. Our question is in respect to the civilization which identifies itself with Christianity, without accepting the terms of discipleship. Has this civilization brought to the masses of Europe and America great blessing, and, if it be extended to the far East, will it prove a blessing to the hundreds of millions there?

If larger houses, better streets and sewers, better water supplies, better clothing, better schools, etc., are bringing to the people of Europe and America more joy, more peace, more happiness, more contentment, more kindness, more usefulness in the present life and more preparation of the life to come, then our Western civilization is a blessing to us, and would doubtless prove a blessing to the far East.

But has it brought these blessings Alas, no! As far as our observations in China and Japan go, we are led to believe that their people are far happier, far more contented, than the people of Europe and America. We are not blaming this upon Christianity, mark you we have not yet said why it is so. We are merely noting facts, which must be manifest to everyone who has seen the two in contact.

A REASON FOR THIS

Our fourth question was. Why is it so? What peculiarities are connected with Christian civilization or the Christian teachings which produce such diverse results bringing one class, the saintly followers of Jesus, into the utmost peace and joy, and bringing others, the masses who are merely nominal Christians, into this most unsatisfactory and unhappy condition of any people in the world, even when they are enjoying greater blessings and luxuries than the majority?

There is but one Answer--to this question: It is because the teachings of Christ carry with them a broadening of mind, and emancipation from superstition, a spirit of liberty. True, there were Dark Ages, during which many so-called Christian superstitions prospered. But such superstitions were not the teachings of Jesus and His Apostles, but the misrepresentations of their teachings. Those superstitions did indeed for a time make the people of Europe drowsy, and it was the custom of such religious teachers to restrain human thought and to fetter and becloud the intellects over which they had influence.

We are not discussing such conditions, but merely the general influence of the teachings of Jesus and the Apostles and the Prophets of old. The discontent which we are noting began to come to Europe at the very time when the Bible was brought out from obscurity. It is the teachings of the Bible that have had the enlightening effect upon all the nations which have been in contact with them. It is the Bible teachings that have brought the special rest to some hearts, and the special discontent to others the masses.

This is the answer. The Bible alone, of all religious books, sets forth prominently the equality of all men before the Almighty God. This thought once grasped breaks all fetters of the mind. But all are not prepared for such liberty some evidently would enjoy great peace and would be more quiet, more reverential and more submissive if they continued bound with a measure of superstition, than if the truth should make them free.

The only persons who can rightly appreciate and properly enjoy full liberty are those who have made a full consecration of themselves to the Lord those who have given over all earthly ambitions and favor to the one great ambition of the Gospel of Christ to become heirs of God and joint-heirs with Jesus Christ their Lord. Those only can be fully entrusted with liberty who have realized the imperfection of all human judgment, and who have accepted instead of their own the Divine will. This is the class of whom St. Paul spoke, saying, "We have the mind of Christ," and this he declares is the only "spirit of a sound mind" in the world at the present time.

Nevertheless, some of the saintly people are disesteemed by many of the worldly-minded who are moving heaven and earth at home and abroad to amass wealth, power and fame for themselves, their families, their friends, their names, none of whom are content, none of whom are satisfied, none of whom are at peace, either with God or with themselves. Who can doubt that the carrying of our western civilization to the people of the east will carry to them similar discontent, unrest, unhappiness, anger, malice, envy, hatred and strife which is peculiar to the Occident? But most likely the effect of the Western civilization of the Chinese will be to wake up her hundreds of millions to discontent and strife, and possibly bring anarchy to her doors sooner than it will come to Europe and America.

"ASK AND I WILL GIVE THE HEATHEN"

But our text declares that if Messiah will ask of the Father, He will be given the heathen for an inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession. Will He ask for them? Why has He not already asked for them, and what would He do with them, and would not His dealing with them have much the same influence that the Gospel Message now produces to make them dissatisfied?

Our Lord intimates most distinctly His reason for not asking for the heathen at the first advent. In His prayer the same night in which He was betrayed to death He said, "I pray not for the world (the heathen), but for those whom thou hast given Me" the household of faith, His footstep followers, "the Church of the First-born, whose names are written in heaven."

The Redeemer knew the Father's will and prayed only in harmony therewith. He knew that the first work of the Divine Plan was to be the calling and testing of an elect "little flock," to be His associates in the Kingdom, His Bride, to share with Him His glory, honor and immortality. He asked not then for the world, knowing that the Father's time had not then come, Hence we read that He ascended up on high and sat down at the right hand of the Divine Majesty, hereforth awaiting for the time when His enemies would be made His footstool, and the Gentiles be given to Him for an inheritance; and He knew that this time would not come until first His Church had been developed.

At and shortly after Pentecost all the faithful of the nation of Israel, Israelites indeed, were begotten of the Holy Spirit that they might become members of spiritual Israel, the Bride class. As there was not a sufficiency of such Jews, the Divine Plan, as previously arranged, proceeded to call and test such of the heathen as were feeling after God and seeking after His righteousness. The entire work has required the intervening time, and now at the close of the six great days of human labor and sweat of face and sorrow and dying, the great seventh thousand-year day is about to be ushered in. It is the period already appointed of the Father of Messiah's reign of righteousness, in which the Bride of Christ will reign with him.

THE END OF THE MATTER

My next question was, What will be the end of this long reign of ignorance, superstition, sin and death?

The Bible's Answer--came quickly to my mind: The Divine promise is that Messiah's Kingdom will be successful, that it will bring in an abundance of peace, that "to Him every knee shall bow and every tongue shall confess." Moreover, we are assured that this will be a bowing of sincere loyalty and obedience, because the context says that it shall be to the glory of God, and no other kind of bowing and confessing would glorify God. Then came the further assurance of the Bible to my mind: St. Peter's declaration, that "Times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord, and He shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you, whom the heavens must retain until the times of restitution of all things which God has spoken by the mouth of all the holy Prophets." Acts 3:19-21.

I also remember the promise that the Redeemer would yet see the fruition of the travail of His soul and be satisfied. I remembered that assurance which He also gave, saying, "Every creature in heaven and in earth and under the earth heard I saying, Praise, glory, honor, dominion and might to Him that sitteth on the Throne, and to the Lamb, forever." I remember also His final testimony, that eventually, There shall be no more sighing, no more crying, no more dying, because all "the former things" of sin and death will have passed away.

CHRIST'S TRIUMPH A GLORIOUS ONE

Boston, Mass. -- Pastor Russell spoke here in Boston Theater. In one of his discourses he spoke from this text: "When He ascended up Oh High, He led a multitude of captives." Eph. 4:8.

This grand expression respecting the glorious outcome of the Savior's work is quoted by the Apostle Paul from the Psalms. (Psa. 68:18.) The figure thus thrust before our mental eyes is that of a great Conqueror whose victory is being heralded. With Romans we know that it was a custom that generals returning from wars were granted what were termed "Triumphs" that is to say triumphal processions, that the people might have tangible evidence of their victories.

Thus, for instance, Titus, returning from the war upon the Jews, in A. D. 70, brought with him certain notable persons, and the Golden Candlestick from the Temple, and these were displayed to the eyes of the people following the conqueror. They were subsequently sculptured on the Arch of Titus, still standing in Rome. And evidently the custom was still older than the days of the Romans, since it was so prophetically set forth by the Prophet David.

Let us permit our mental eye to feast upon the scene presented in our text. Jesus, in fulfillment of the Divine Program, had left the heavenly condition and descended to earth, taking a bondman's form or nature in order "that He, by the grace of God might taste death for every man:" in order that He might rescue Adam and his race from the dying and death condition in which they were under Divine sentence and under the power of Satan.

Therefore the Redeemer counted not His life precious to Him, but freely delivered Himself up for our offences and died, "the Just for the unjust," that He might bring mankind back into harmony with God. His humiliation ended in death, but His triumph began when, as is recorded, God raised Him from the dead by His own power, and set him at the right hand of His own Majesty—"far above angels, principalities and powers and every name that is named."

HE THAT ASCENDED FIRST DESCENDED

The prophecy says nothing about our Lord's descending from the heavenly glory to the earthly nature, but St. Paul supplies this feature saying, "He that ascended, what is but that He first descended, into the lower condition of the earth." Thus the Apostle asserts that He that descended is He that ascended above all heights, that all things may be fulfilled through Him.

An important thought here noted is that our Lord not only left the heavenly glory, but that He returned to a still more excellent glory He did not suffer the disastrous loss of the heavenly nature as a result of His obedience in taking the human nature. As He left the heavenly nature He left the human nature to ascend again to that which He had before, with the additional glory of the divine nature.

LEADING FORTH THE CAPTIVES

With most of the conquerors in olden times the captives were made slaves. Not so, however, will be the result of Jesus' victory. He leads forth to liberty and eternal life those who have been slaves of sin and death. His train of captives is a long one indeed; the procession has already occupied eighteen centuries, and is yet to be the great work of the thousand years of that Messianic reign!

First of all in the procession are the saints—" the Church of the Firstborn, whose names are written in Heaven." In the forefront of them we see the twelve Apostles, St. Paul taking the place of Judas. The Apostles are to be Kings who are to reign with Christ in pre-eminent positions; but following them are some others of the saintly company of Kings in all a "little flock."

Then will come a company, more numerous, but less heroic—" a great multitude," uncrowned, but with "palm branches, " not anti-typical Priests, but anti-typical Levites, associates and servants of the Royal Priesthood, the Bride. Then will follow (Heb. 11:38-40) other faithful ones of the past, the Ancient Worthies. The Prophet speaks also of the "rebellious house." The class previously specified were not rebellious, but gladly and willingly forsook all to do the will of the Father and to attain the liberty of sons of God, as the first-fruits of the triumph of the Lamb.

But during the thousand years of Christ's reign He will lead forth the "rebellious house" the world of mankind not all of them, we may be sure, for some, the Scriptures positively declare, will die the Second Death, because, after realizing their deliverance, they will love sin and will therefore be destroyed as enemies of righteousness. But it is a blessed thought that many of those who are now aliens, strangers and foreigners from God through wicked works are in this condition of opposition, not willingly, not intelligently, but by reason of the ignorance and weaknesses which came to them by heredity, under the reign of sin and death.

It is to be a distinct feature of the great Triumph of Immanuel that every eye shall be opened and every ear unstopped, that "the knowledge of the glory of God shall fill the whole earth," during His glorious reign of righteousness. Are we not distinctly told of the time that will follow, in which all the willing and obedient shall receive the Holy Spirit, which then will be poured out "upon all flesh" even as now, during this Gospel Age, it is poured out upon God's "servants and handmaidens" only?

"Oh, that will be a glorious Triumph for the great Redeemer! In the language of the Bible, "He shall see the fruitage of the travail of His soul, and shall be satisfied." What a glorious fruitage not only His own exaltation not only the exaltation of His faithful Bride class, and the additional exaltations of "the virgins, her companions, which follow her," and the exaltation of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and all the Prophets, but finally the deliverance to human perfection of all the groaning creation willing to accept the same upon the Divine terms of loyalty to God and to the principles of His Government as these shall be made known to them.

“HE GAVE GIFTS UNTO MEN”

It was the custom in olden times that a king coming into authority and power should give gifts according to His wealth. Governors and princes would be needed and he would dispense the honors of these offices to those found faithful in his service, loyal in the defense of His cause. So in this prophetic reference to our Lord’s Ascension it is declared, not only that He would lead forth a multitude of captives, granting them freedom, liberty, blessings, but also that He would confer certain gifts.

We might have spent valuable time guessing the nature of these gifts which the great Redeemer would dispense, but such a waste of time is unnecessary, since the Apostle proceeds to explain the matter and tells us what gifts are meant. He says, “And He gave some Apostles, and some prophets, and some evangelists, and some pastors and teachers.”

There is an astounding thought connected with this statement that the Apostles were not self-appointed and that they had no successors, and the work of evangelizing, or making know the “good tidings,” and the pastoral work amongst believers and the teaching work amongst believers are all under the supervision of the Head of the Church, the great Victor, who redeemed us with His blood, and who proposes, first, to lead forth a Bride class, and subsequently all the willing and obedient.

It behooves us to notice that the Apostle does not intimate that Jesus gave to some Methodism, to others Presbyterianism, and others Roman Catholicism, etc. No, when we held such thoughts it was because of more or less misunderstanding because we failed to see first that there is but the “one Church of the Living God, whose names are written in heaven,” and second, that that one church is not any of the various sects and parties, but includes the saintly in all of these; “the Lord knoweth them that are His.”

NOT GIVEN TO CONVERT THE WORLD

Noting carefully the Apostle’s argument we perceive that the Master did not give these gifts for the conversion of the world. He does specify, however, what they were for, namely, “for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the Body of Christ—” the Church, the Bride class. Is it supposable that the Apostle erred in this statement and that the fact is the reverse that these gifts were provided for the conversion of the world, and that the Apostle thoroughly misunderstood the matter and supposed that they were given for the perfecting of the saints, for the edifying of the Body of Christ? No! We are to be taught by the Apostles and may be sure that there is no mistake, no error in his statement.

Notice the force of the expression, "the perfecting of the saints." It is not sufficient that believers have a little knowledge, a little faith, and a measure of sanctification or devotion to the Lord, for after they have received and attained all of these things they still need the instruction of the Apostles and ministers, pastors and teachers, provided by the great Head of the Church for their perfection. Ah! there is a force and depth of meaning in that word perfecting. We remember that of our Head it is written, "Being made perfect through suffering, He became the Author of eternal salvation to all who obey Him." So His followers are to be made perfect through suffering.

The Master's perfecting, indeed, was a little different from ours, and yet there is a similarity between the two. He was perfect before He humbled Himself, He was still perfect as the Man Christ Jesus, who gave Himself; but as a result of His consecration He received a begetting of the Holy Spirit to the divine nature, and His development as a New Creature required that He faithfully carry out His vow, or covenant of sacrifice, in the doing of the will of the Heavenly Father. By such faithfulness He perfected Himself on the Divine plane that is, He proved Himself worthy according to the covenant—"Worthy is the Lamb that was slain, to receive glory, honor, dominion and power."

Similarly the followers of Jesus are to be sharers with Him in the sufferings of this present time and in the glories which shall follow, for "If we suffer with Him we shall also reign with Him." Although we are imperfect in the flesh, while He was perfect, yet the robe of His righteousness, the merit of His sacrifice, covers all of our blemishes and makes us, as His footstep followers, holy and acceptable before the Father, as joint-sacrificers with Jesus.

The begetting of the Holy Spirit starts us in the life Divine. We are not to be perfected in the flesh, but in the spirit, and our perfection and acceptance with the Father will be demonstrated by our loyalty of heart and the fullness and thoroughness with which we submit our all to the Divine will and seek to glorify God in our bodies and spirits, which are His. Our justification comes to us as a reward of faith, regardless of works, but our glorification will follow only as a reward for faithfulness—"Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life."

THESE GIFTS ARE LASTING

Not merely for a few days or years were these gifts to the Church provided; on the contrary, they were to endure throughout this entire Age, until the Church perfected shall pass beyond the veil and be forever with her Redeemer, to share His glory, honor and immortality. The Lord from time to time has raised up evangelists, pastors and teachers for this glorious service of preparing the “chaste virgin,” the Church, to be the Bride in glory. But the Apostolic office, as represented in the Twelve, specially provided by the Father, has continued and needs no replenishment. We still have their instructions as fully as the early Church, “that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto every good word.”

That the Apostle did not understand the matter to be merely for a day, but throughout this Age, until the completion of the Church, is clearly evidenced by His statement, namely, that all these gifts were for the edification of the Body of Christ and the perfecting of the saints to the last—“until we all come to the unity of the faith and to the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect Man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ.” verse 13.

This is a wonderful statement, however we view it. Shall we say that it applies to each individual member of the Church of Christ, and that each individual must come into that full unity of faith, and that full knowledge of the Son of God, and the perfection of manhood in Christ, and to a developed stature or maturity in Christ? Or shall we understand the meaning to be, until the entire Church of Christ shall have reached a full knowledge and shall, as a whole, have come to the condition of a perfect Man, of which Christ is the Head and we are the members to the full development or stature of the Anointed, the Messiah, Head and member? We believe that the latter is the Apostle’s thought.

Nevertheless, it cannot be disputed that the selection of these members all the way down the Age must have been along the lines here indicated. Individually, one partially developed would not be fitted for the Kingdom. One not in the unity of the faith would not be suitable. One not developed to the proper measure or stature as a Christian would not be suitable. Nothing more plain than that the individual Christian needs a great deal of instruction, edification, building up in the holy faith, testing proving, chiseling, polishing, fitting, preparing before he shall be ready for a place in the glorious Temple of God, the Church in glory.

GOD’S PEOPLE NO LONGER NEED BE MISLED

This thought is confirmed by the succeeding verses, in which the Apostle tells us that by the assistance of these, the Divinely provided gifts, teachers, etc., God’s people need no longer, like children, to be tossed to and fro, and be misled by the sleight of men and cunning craftiness of those who would deceive. On the contrary, being sincere, and speaking the truth in love, they are to grow up into membership in the Anointed One in all things coming fully and completely into fellowship and obedience, under the Head, even Christ Verses 14, 15.

Proceeding, the Apostle tells us that all who are recognized as members of the Body of Christ must be properly joined to the Head by a proper compact, or covenant, intelligently made and fully intended. This union must be compact, and it requires the entire Gospel Age to effect this development and compacting as members, that the whole Body of the Anointed may be one, symmetrical, beautiful, co-operative, making increase in its members and edifying itself in love growing in grace and in knowledge and in character-likeness to the Head of the Church, Jesus. Verse 16.

In conclusion, then, the Captain of our Salvation has gone before, He has accepted us as His joint-heirs, and we are following on, blest by the gifts which He dispensed when He ascended up On High; and we, in turn, will be His gifts to the world of mankind. When as Priests and Kings we shall be associated with our Lord, we shall bless all the families of the earth with a glorious opportunity of knowledge and obedience, that they may, if they will, attain life everlasting, "the gift of God, through Jesus Christ our Lord." Rom. 6:23.

National Labor Tribune -- June 9, 1912

WILL BE SAVED SO AS BY FIRE

Kansas City, Mo. -Pastor Russell spent Sunday in our city and delivered two addresses, which were well attended. One of these, from the text, "Saved so as by fire" (1 Cor. 3:15), we report in part. He said:

Some of my Catholic friends declare that I am more Catholic than Protestant, but I have never acknowledged this. I do say, however, that if compelled to choose between the Protestant thought that all except the elect, saintly few will experience eternal torment, and the Catholic proposition that many besides the saints will be saved, by passing through purgatorial experiences, I would sooner believe the latter. And while I cannot accept the Catholic Purgatory as Biblical, I do find certain threads of Bible truth in the purgatorial theory. I can even fancy how those Bible truths gradually became distorted during the many centuries styled "The Dark Ages."

During that time, not only were the common people illiterate, but printing had not been invented, and Bibles were costly. That was the period during which Councils of Bishops from time to time met and decided for the people what should and what should not be believed. In other words, they formulated the creeds. We do not question the sincerity of those spiritual leaders of the darker days, but we do challenge their conclusions and, comparing them with the Bible now in the hands of the masses, we know, accepting the Bible as true, that we must necessarily condemn many of their conclusions as false, and when we speak of the Bible, we include the Catholic as well as the Protestant translations of it in various languages.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH

Many, both Catholics and Protestants, tell us that we should receive the message of Councils the creeds which they formulated—as of equal inspiration with the Bible because, say they, these Councils were composed of bishops of the Church and, under the law of Apostolic succession, these bishops had equal authority with and Divine inspiration equal to the twelve Apostles. Hence the theory says that if any conflict exists between the Bible and the creeds the latter should have the greater weight in our minds, as being a later production.

From this I dissent, and am glad to note that I am in better accord with the views of the present Pope, Pious X., whose recent proclamation urges upon all Catholics loyalty to the Bible and its study. If all Christians, Catholics as well as Protestants, would accept this suggestion, I believe that the resultant, untrammelled study would soon bring to Christendom in general the one unity and harmony which all desire and are striving for.

Whatever the Pope may have once believed respecting the doctrine of Apostolic succession, and the equal inspiration of the bishops of today with the twelve Apostles appointed by our Lord, he sees that the people have not full confidence that the living bishops are inspired to the degree of infallibility, as were the twelve Apostles. And I would say that to my understanding that is the right thought. The Scriptures everywhere recognize the twelve Apostles of the Lamb no more, no less. They recognize the fall of one of these, and that another took his place St. Paul. But there were to be no more additions.

The choice of Matthias by the Apostles, before they themselves received the Holy Spirit, was invalid and without authority. Jesus, in His last message to the Church, pictured her as a “woman,” having “a crown of twelve stars.” And again He symbolically represents her future glory as the New Jerusalem with but twelve foundation stones, and in those the names of the twelve Apostles of the Lamb no more.

The more thorough this Scriptural fact is discerned the more surely will God’s people turn reverently to the inspired words and interpretations of the Divinely appointed Twelve, respecting whose teachings Jesus said, "Whatsoever ye shall bind on earth (as necessary obligatory) will be the same that are bound in heaven. And whatsoever ye shall loose on earth (as not necessary) shall be the same that are loosed in heaven." No other teachers in the world's history were so thoroughly set apart to be the oracles of God; and their testimony is one harmonious.

NOT PRESENT BUT FUTURE

We remarked a moment ago that there is a thread of truth in the doctrine of purgatory. That thread connects up with our text of today. Indeed, our Catholic friends acknowledge that there is no positive statement in the Bible respecting purgatory; they merely infer it from certain texts, which says, "Saved so as by fire." This is one of their strong texts supporting the theory of purgatory. It certainly does imply that fiery experiences of some kind will come to some of God's people, and that these will be designed to have a purging effect.

Nothing in the text, however, gives a single suggestion to the effect that such purgatorial trials are now in operation. On the contrary, the Apostle points down to the future saying, "The fire of that day shall try every man's work of what sort it is." Those who have built with the wood, hay and stubble, even though upon the good foundation of Christ's redemptive work, will suffer loss. Only those who shall build with the precious Divine promises, the gold, silver and precious stones of the Divine Word, will pass unscathed through the fiery experience of that day.

Nevertheless, says the Apostle, those who will suffer the loss of their entire faith structure of wood, hay and stubble false doctrines and theories of their own and of other men will themselves be saved, because they built upon the Rock Christ Jesus. But, he adds, "They will be saved as by fire" saved through fiery experiences. Search as we will we find no reference to any such sufferings after death and before the resurrection. Thus we see that the Apostle is in full harmony with what the Bible everywhere teaches, that the dead are not consciously alive to experience either joy or suffering between the time of death and the resurrection. But, on the contrary, they all "sleep in the dust" of their souls in the glorious morning of the New Age.

St. Peter's remarks to the faithful in his day have been applicable throughout the Age, and are still applicable to us. He says, "Think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you." (1 Peter 4:12.) Here again he is not speaking of a purgatorial experience after death, but of a purgatorial experience in the present life. God could protect His children from every foe, from every trouble, from every sorrow, from every one of Satan's darts, but instead of doing so He permits these fiery trials to test their faith, their loyalty to Him to the Truth, to the brethren.

PURGATORY IN THE PRESENT LIFE

Did not Jesus thus have purgatorial experiences? not to purge away sin, for He had none being “holy, harmless, undefiled and separate from sinners” but to demonstrate His loyalty to God as the Apostle said, “He was obedient unto death, even the death of the cross.” And did not the Apostles have purgatorial experiences, which were needed, and which we all need? Is it not in respect to these purgatorial experiences that the Apostle urges us to remember that God is faithful and will not suffer us to be tempted, tried, more that we are able to bear, but with every temptation, trial, provides also a way of escape?

He also assures us, “My grace is sufficient for thee, for My strength is made perfect in weakness.” And is not this the very picture the Scriptures give us respecting our present trials, namely, that our Lord sits as a Refiner and Purifier of silver to take from us the dross and to purify us as New Creatures in Christ Jesus, and to make us ready for the Kingdom?

It is in full accord with this that the Apostle declares of the Church that if we judge ourselves judge our own conduct, and properly criticize ourselves for errors we will not need to be judged or chastened with fiery trials by the Lord. But if we neglect to thus judge ourselves, and become careless, the Lord will give us chastenings, fiery trials and stripes purgatorial experiences to the intent that we may not be condemned with the world.

THE WORLD'S CONDEMNATION

In this statement, to the effect that the Church is now chastened that she may not come into judgment with the world, we should understand the word world to mean all outside of the Church both Jews and Gentiles. The Church is composed, not of any sect or party, but of all those who have come into covenant relationship with the Father through faith in the Lord Jesus, and a full consecration of their lives to walk in His steps. The reward of the Church will be joint-heirship with the Savior in His Kingdom, for which we pray, “Thy Kingdom come.”

The Bible teaches us that shortly the Kingdom will be established in the midst of a great “time of trouble,” and that through its blessed reign of righteousness the whole world, of every nation and kindred and people and tongue, will be blessed with light, with knowledge, with opportunity. “The Sun of Righteousness shall arise with healing in His beams,” ushering in for earth the New Day, which all the Prophets of God have for so long foretold the period which St. Peter styles, “Times of Restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all the holy Prophets.” Acts 3:19-21.

Since we have learned that the Bible teaches that God has blessings in store for the world under Messiah’s Kingdom, we are the better prepared to understand how and why the Messianic Kingdom is to usher in the “Times of Restitution” and blessing. And we learn at the same time that God has purposed first of all, to deal with the Church, call, test, prove, discipline them with fiery trials, before He begins His dealings with the world. We perceive that the Church is to be dealt with first because it is the Divine declaration that the Church shall share with Jesus in judging the world in disciplining the world, giving to the world purgatorial experiences, which will be helpful and uplifting.

The Great Time of Trouble, which our Lord declared should be expected at about the time of the completion of the Church, will be a time of special discipline upon the world the beginning of the world’s purgatorial experience. Harken to Jesus’ words, “Watch ye (disciples), therefore, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all those things coming upon the world.” Describing those things our Lord said, “Men’s hearts will be failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming upon the earth, for the powers of the heavens shall be shaken.” Many of us believe that we are in that very time now.

THE CHURCHES HAVE LOST THEIR POWER

Surely men’s hearts are failing them as they look about and see the surgings of socialism and anarchism, and the threatening of these “waves of the sea,” that they will ultimately swallow up the present social order of things. Many of the rich and great are looking to the Church at this, time hoping that as of yore ecclesiasticism will be able to control the masses. But ah, it will be different now; for, as the Master said, “The power of the heavens will be shaken” the ecclesiastical powers will be shaken. From every side the cry goes up that the churches are becoming more and more empty, that collections are falling off and retrenchment must be the order of the day or ruin will result.

St. Peter refers to the coming trouble, under the symbolism of fire, and declares that not only will it consume the “earth,” the social fabric, but the “heavens” also will be on fire and “shall pass away with a great noise” a great commotion. Not the physical earth will burn, but the social earth; not the physical heavens will burn, but the ecclesiastical heavens.

The great and the rich have been so busily engaged in amassing wealth that they have not noticed until recently that the churches of all denominations have lost their power of the masses, and now “their hearts fail them for fear” as they come to perceive the weakness, the nothingness of ecclesiastical power as compared with the strength of socialism and anarchy amongst the masses.

No wonder their hearts fail them for fear. Poor people! How we wish we could make clear to all the glorious prospects which the Bible holds out that out of this the most awful trouble of the world's history, God graciously intends to bring the greatest blessing imaginable, that one for which we have been praying so long.

We are sure that the present Pope, Pius X., who has taken such active measures to repulse the higher critical and evolutionary theories in the Catholic church, would fully agree without sentiment when we say that many of the great and rich of our day have been unwittingly helping forward in the overthrow of religious faith and in the awakening of socialistic infidelity. They have given freely of their millions to the great colleges of the land, which in turn have fostered unbelief in God's Word, and indirectly unbelief in a personal God. Their influence has extended to all the principal pulpits of Protestantism and is rapidly percolating through the various strata of Protestant church membership. Thus the churches and their treasures are being emptied and the number of unbelievers is being augmented daily, hourly.

THE WORLD'S PURGATORY BEGINS

If time permitted we could marshal many texts of Scripture showing that the time of awful trouble now impending is in the nature of a Divine judgment upon the people of our day because we have not more wisely and more generously used the present inventions and blessings that have come to us as foregleams of the Messianic Kingdom because of our selfishness. In this trouble, according to the Bible, there will be a general reckoning and settlement of accounts between Justice and Humanity (aside from the weaknesses and imperfections of heredity,) which will be excusable and forgiven through the merit of the Redeemer's sacrifice.

The settlement of accounts now will leave the slate clear for the New Dispensation. Furthermore, the plowshare of trouble will prepare men's hearts all over the world for the enlightenment and blessings which the glorified Redeemer will shed abroad. Since all human hearts are hard, selfish through the fall, it seems quite necessary that all should be broken, humbled, but the glorified Redeemer both King and Priest of that New Age will then say to the world, as He now says to the Church, "Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." And "whoever will not obey that Prophet, " that Great King of Glory, the antitype of Moses, "shall be destroyed from amongst the people." (Acts 3:23.) Again, Peter declares that all such shall perish like brute beasts. 2 Peter 2:12.

The glorious result of Christ's Reign of righteousness, and the purgatorial experiences which it will administer to those requiring them, will be to help all to rise eventually to perfection, so that every knee will bow and every tongue confess to the glory of God. But the Purgatory of the Bible is so very different from the Purgatory conjured up by good men in the Dark Ages, and pictured by Dante and Dore, that the latter are now seen to be gross travesties on the Divine arrangement, not only misinterpreting the time of the purgatorial experiences, but also their character.

MISCONCEPTIONS OF THE DARK AGES

Philadelphia, Pa. -Pastor Russell delivered two addresses here. In one he chose this text: "There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth when ye shall see Abraham and Isaac and Jacob and all the Prophets in the Kingdom of God, and you yourselves thrust out." (Luke 13:28.) He said:—

Bible students in the past, resting under the terrible fear of an eternity of torture after death, were inclined to twist the statements of Scripture into supports of their misconceptions. We are now breaking loose from some of those horrible nightmares of the Dark Ages, finding that the Bible, rightly interpreted, does not substantiate them. The hobgoblins and demons of torture, cloven hoof, forked tail, malignant glance, pitchforks and tongues of flame came down to us, not from the inspired Word of God, but from the pens of misanthropic poets and the brushes of ambitious painters who reveled in the portrayal of blood-curling scenes and endeavored to make them more awful than the tortures of the Inquisition chambers of their own day.

So far from describing Satan and his demon hosts as torturers of the dead, the Bible tells us plainly that the dead are "asleep" and will know nothing of joy or sorrow until the awakening time in the dawning of the Messianic Kingdom, and that Satan and his demon hosts of fallen angels are not far off stoking fires, but near by us, "powers of the air." It tells us also that these seek to oppose the Divine Program and to ensnare our race by personating the dead, using as their channels deceived spirit mediums as they used witches, wizards and necromancers in the past.

SATANIC INFLUENCE NEAR

St. Peter, so far from believing that Satan is far off stoking fires, described him as a roaring, angry lion, going about amongst men seeking whom he might devour deceive, involve in sin. St. Paul forewarns us that Satan and his agents are crafty and are to be expected to present themselves as angels of light leaders in advanced truth. We are assured that this dreadful, injurious agency has been deceiving the whole world for centuries. The Divine promise is that Messiah's Kingdom shall bind or restrain Satan for a thousand years that he may deceive the people no more until Messiah shall deliver up the Kingdom to the Father.

The Scriptures specially forewarn us of great activity on the part of the evil spirits in the end of this Age, and intimate that they will have much to do with the great Time of world-wide Trouble which will precede the inauguration of Messiah's Kingdom. It is time for us to be on the lookout for those wonderful manifestations of diabolism which for a time will seem to make many of our race madly insane, brutal, inhuman, diabolical. This is the real danger from the demons in the present life, and not in the future.

They will deceive and torture humanity to the limit of their permission, when they will be restrained by the King of Glory and the bright shining of the Sun of Righteousness, which will usher in the New Day of earth's blessing and restitution.

The words "weeping and gnashing of teeth" represent, not new conditions amongst men, but those which may be witnessed every day sorrow, heartache, grievous disappointment; and this is the use of this expression in the Bible. We should dismiss all thought that the experiences mentioned will be after death and the result of tortures inflicted by demons.

JEW'S BITTER DISAPPOINTMENT

In our text the Lord graphically pictures the disappointment of the Jews when they shall find out how great was their mistake in the rejection of Jesus and His Message. They will find that the glorious opportunity offered to them of becoming members in the Bride of Christ was the highest favor that Divine mercy could offer them as the children of Abraham. They will become aware of their loss of the heavenly portion and also of the earthly portion of the Divine promise. They will then come to understand that the promise to Abraham dealt with two seeds, one heavenly, the other earthly, and that the faithful ones of past Ages, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and all the holy Prophets and other faithful ones of their nation, will be rewarded with the highest position of honor in the earthly phase of Messiah's Kingdom, while they, who had the opportunity of entering the still higher, the spiritual phase of that Kingdom, failed because of unreadiness of heart to receive the Redeemer. They will find that some whom they esteemed as publicans and sinners and Gentiles, by accepting Christ and becoming His disciples, became heirs of the highest promise made to Abraham became Abraham's spiritual Seed members of the Messiah, of which Jesus is the Head and the Church His Body.

Alas, poor Jews! Our hearts may well go out to them in sympathy in their chagrin and disappointment when they shall learn the truth on the subject, when they shall learn that they have lost not only the heavenly glory but also the honorable place of being Messiah's earthly representatives. Most assuredly there will be weeping and gnashing of teeth and contrition of heart and penitence, we trust, toward God, which will bring them into the right condition to be amongst the first of humanity to be blessed under the New Order of things. Very soon, we believe, the blindness is to be turned from Israel just as soon as the elect spiritual Seed of Abraham shall be completed, St. Paul tells us. (Romans 11:25-33.)

Then favor will return to the natural seed of Abraham: "They shall obtain mercy through your mercy." Their eyes of understanding will open; mentally "they will look upon Him whom they have pierced." They will mourn for Him, and the Divine promise is that God will then pour upon them the spirit of prayer and supplication.

OTHER SIMILAR TEXTS

All Bible students will recall several other passages of very similar language to that of our text. But when we get the right focus upon them we perceive that they all belong to experiences in the present life, that none of them relate to incidents beyond the tomb. A greater care in the study of the Bible might have protected us from the thought that any of these references apply to the dead, because the Scriptures not only tell that they are sleeping and waiting for the morning, but they also particularly inform us that "the dead know not anything;" "their sons come to honor and they perceive it not of them;" and that "there is neither work nor device, nor knowledge; nor wisdom in the grave (sheol)" whither all go. Eccl. 9:5, 10; Job 14:21.

This expression, "weeping and gnashing of teeth," is found also in the parable of the Wise and Foolish Virgins. The context tells us that this parable applies in the end of this Gospel Age, at about the time for the second coming of Jesus not as a sin-bearing Sacrificer, but as the King of Glory. His consecrated, saintly people are likened unto ten virgins five wise and five foolish.

The parable does not relate to the world at all, but merely to the saints. They are all virgins, all pure, all justified, all sanctified ones. The difference between them is in respect to their wisdom or unwisdom. The difference is that the wise saints of God in the end of this Age, guided by the Divine Word, will walk very circumspectly, very faithfully, searching the Scriptures in respect to all they believe and striving to conform themselves to the Divine will in all that they do and say.

Because of their watchfulness, alertness, devoutness and loyalty they are wise and will be in a special position of advantage and knowledge in respect to the things of the Harvest time of this Age. The Master, the Bridegroom, will lead these; and gradually, one by one, they shall go through the door of death into the marriage, experiencing the glorious change promised, “in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye.” They will complete the Bride Class, to which none can be added, because it is a foreordained and predestinated number. With the end of our Age the door to glory and immortality will close, never to open again, because there is to be but one Bride and her membership is limited by fore-ordination.

THE FOOLISH VIRGINS

The “foolish virgins” will miss their glorious opportunity by reason of unwisdom. They will be so overcharged with the cares of this life and the deceitfulness of riches and the attempt to have the favor of the world as well as the favor of the Lord that it will hinder them from proper Bible study and from faithfulness in walking in the footsteps of Jesus. Because of this they are styled foolish, unworthy of God’s highest favor the divine nature.

The parable shows them as finally, in the very close of the Age, obtaining the light which they should have had sooner had they not been overcharged with earthly cares and ambitions. As soon as they obtain the light they realize the situation and ask for admission as members of the Bride of Christ, to which they were called; but the Answer--is that it is complete, that the Bridegroom can know only one Wife and cannot recognize them thus. Then to them will come weeping and gnashing of teeth, sorrow, disappointment, chagrin, that they have failed to obtain through their own carelessness this highest Prize, to which Divine mercy and love had invited them.

At that time will be great tribulation in the world, such as never was since there was a nation, and these “foolish virgins” will have their portion in it with the hypocrites. The “time of trouble” will be specially upon the hypocritical or “tare” class of Christendom, which has pretended loyalty to God as his Church when in reality their hearts were far from Him. The “foolish virgins” are not hypocrites, but true saints; nevertheless, on account of not living fully up to their privileges, they will fail to gain the Prize and be given a portion in the great trouble time with the hypocrites.

This is the Master’s own description of the matter. A little later on (Rev. 7) He tells us more on the subject, that only Bible students may fully appreciate and understand. He tells us that after the completion of the Church, spiritual Israel, the 144,000, a great multitude will “come up through great tribulation and wash their robes and make them white in the blood of the Lamb.” These will be honored with a place before the Throne, while the “elect,” as the Bride, will be honored with Immanuel in His Throne.

This multitude will be granted palm branches, representing a final victory, but they will never be granted the crowns of victory which will belong only to the elect, “wise virgin” class, the Bride upon the Throne. The Bride Class will be the Temple, composed of living stones; but the Great Company, the “foolish virgin” class, will not be stones of that Temple, but will serve God in the Temple. An honorable place will thus be granted the “foolish virgins,” who finally get the oil and finally cleanse their robes in the time of trouble, but never will they attain the portion of the Bride.

In Psalm 45 we have a description of the Church in glory, the Wise Virgin class. She is pictured as a Bride, all glorious within and clothed in raiment of gold and fine needlework. The Heavenly Bridegroom will present her faultless before His Father, the Great King; and then we read, “The virgins, her companions, shall follow her; they shall be brought into the presence of the King.” How glad we are that in Divine providence their weeping and gnashing of teeth and sorrow and disappointment at losing a place in the Bible Class will eventually work out for them a contrition of heart and a demonstration of loyalty which God can reward with a blessing upon the Heavenly plane!

WAILING IN OUTER DARKNESS

Another text dealing with “wailing and gnashing of teeth” deserves consideration here. It occurs in connection with the parable of the Wedding Garment. That parable pictures the closing time of this Age, when under Divine blessing God’s most saintly people will be given greater light on His Word and be enabled thereby to more fully appreciate the lengths, breadths, heights and depths of His Love and its wonderful providences.

These consecrated ones are represented as being gathered into a great banquet hall, radiantly beautiful. In it they tarry, waiting to be ushered into the banquet proper, in an adjoining apartment. The light of these apartments is in the parable vividly contrasted with the darkness that prevails outside which darkness represents the condition of the world and all of God’s people who have not yet come into the light of “present truth.”

The parable is given specially to show the necessity of the “wedding garment” that none may enter into the marriage feast except he acknowledges and uses the “wedding garment.” On such festival occasions in ancient times it was customary that all guests should be furnished by the host with garments of white which would cover their own garments, and for the time being, as his guests, this placed them all on the same footing, whatever their ordinary station in life. Thus we have pictured the justification which all God's people receive as a gift through the merit of their Redeemer. Being justified by faith the consecrated have not only peace with God, but they have access to this figurative "marriage supper."

The parable is laid in the end of this Age and points out that at this time an inspection of the Church may be expected. "When the king came in he beheld a man who had not on a wedding garment." The implication is that the man had put on the wedding garment, else he could not have gone in at all; and his appearing later on without a "wedding garment" implies that he had rejected the robe provided by his host.

Thus he represented a class of Christians in this our day who, after believing in the merit of Christ's sacrifice, and accepting it as the passport to favors and privileges, ultimately reject it and count it common or unimportant. The parable shows what is to be expected now, namely, that the Great King will command that such as ignore the merit of His sacrifice be cast into outer darkness.

OUTER DARKNESS GENERAL

But let us note carefully that the "outer darkness" is not something beyond death, but that it prevails everywhere, all around us. "Darkness covers the earth and gross darkness the heathen." The only ones who are in the light are the ones whom the Lord has specially received and specially enlightened and specially privileged because they wear the "wedding garment" of Christ's righteousness. The casting out of the one without the "wedding garment" into "outer darkness" therefore would mean merely that such a one, despite his struggles and desire to remain in the light, would by Divine providence be forced into the darkness common to the whole world and lose those special privileges which he had enjoyed as one of the children of the light and heirs of glory.

About the time that the faithful will be ushered into the marriage the great "time of trouble" will break upon the world, and all who are in darkness will have "weeping and gnashing of teeth" as they behold the collapse of those things upon which they have set their hearts and affections the things of the present Order. Thank God, their weeping and gnashing of teeth may ultimately be turned into joy, because there is a silver lining to the dark cloud which is about to envelop the world! It will be the dark hour preceding the dawning of the New Dispensation and the blessing of all the families of the earth by Messiah and His Bride, to a place in which, by the grace of God, dear hearers, let us strive to make our calling and election sure.

National Labor Tribune -- June 30, 1912

THE TRINITY OF THE BIBLE

Syracuse, N. Y. -Pastor Russell addressed two large audiences here, one in the Empire Theater. We report one of his discourses from this text: "To us there is but one God, the Father of whom are all things, and we in Him; and one Lord Jesus, by whom are all things, and we by him. Howbeit there is not in every man that knowledge." 1 Cor. 8:6, 7.

For long centuries God's people have been confessing a Divine trinity, taught by the creeds, which was incomprehensible; and meantime they have been neglecting the trinity taught by the Bible, which is more reasonable. If the trinity of the creeds was questioned, holy hands were lifted in horror, and the questioner was told that the subject was a mystery, which he could not possibly understand, but to doubt it would mean his damnation! Therefore he must profess to believe what he did not understand, and therefore could not believe.

The mysterious proposition was sometimes put in one form and sometimes in another. Some stated it to be 3 x 1 is one. But others stated it different, 1 x 3 is one. No wonder if some of the more intelligent specimens of our race declared themselves incapable of understanding such mathematics, and too honest to confess and profess what they could not believe. Many of these honest souls have been forced by their candor to remain outside the various denominations of Christendom.

Under such pressure it should not surprise us that there has sprung up an equally unscriptural theory, styled Universalism, desiring to worship God, yet too honest and conscientious to make false pretensions of faith. These have been driven to an antagonism of the popular theory of the trinity to the extent of ignoring the Divinity of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the teachings of the Bible to this effect. In a word, the great Adversary, during the Dark Ages, succeeded in swinging the pendulum first to one extreme and then to the opposite extreme, while the very Truth, which the Bible presents, lies midway between them. As Bible students, let us seek to know the mind of the Lord on this subject, as well as on other subjects, assured that the Wisdom which comes from above is alone capable of giving us proper instruction and guidance, and of solving our man-made mysteries.

CONSIDER NOW OUR TEXT

Note the simplicity of the Bible statement our text being an example. Not once from Genesis to Revelation does the word trinity occur. Not once is there any hint of such a trinity as the creeds describe--except in the one text 1 John 5:7--which all scholars, including trinitarians, agree is spurious--not found in Greek manuscripts of an earlier date than the seventh century--evidently "doctored" by some trinitarian Doctor of Divinity to meet his long-felt want. Our Revised English Version omits the interpolated parts of this text--introduced about the seventh century to support the trinitarian theory--although the revisers all profess to be trinitarians. When one's attention is called to this spurious passage, the bungling character of the addition to the Apostle's words is quickly discerned. St. John is thereby made to say that the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit are going about heaven testifying to the angels that Jesus is the Son of God. Even a child's mind can discern the absurdity of this statement, for surely the angels knew that Jesus was the Son of God before He came into the world and during His earthly ministry and since, without any necessity for a testimony to this effect from the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit.

THE TESTIMONY OF THE BIBLE

The Bible sets forth that Jehovah is the Almighty God, and that our Lord Jesus is His Son, His offspring, gloriously exalted to the Father's right hand of power, dominion and glory as His Chief Representative and Agent in all matters. The Father and the Son, although different persons, are one in the sense in which our Lord Jesus stated one in mind, in purpose, in plan, in action, in everything except in person. How clearly the Master stated this to us, and how strangely we overlooked the force of His words when He prayed for the Church that we might all be "one, even as Thou, Father, and I are one!" The oneness of the Church is certainly not a oneness of person, but a oneness of faith, hope, harmony, fellowship, even as is the oneness of the Father and the Son. Read over the Master's words at your convenience at home. They are found in the 17th chapter of St. John's Gospel.

As for the Holy Spirit, the spirit of Truth, the spirit of God, the spirit of Christ, the spirit of holiness, the spirit of a sound mind it is the antithesis, or opposite of a spirit of error, a spirit of vacillation, the spirit of Satan, or opposition to God, a spirit of unrighteousness, or unholiness. These are not different spirit beings, but emanations from spirit beings. As the spirit of Satan is a spirit of evil, or an evil influence, mind or disposition, a power emanating from Satan, so contrariwise, the spirit of God is a spirit of holiness, righteousness, truth, the emanation and display of the Divine will, purpose, energy and power. And this Holy Spirit proceeds from God the Father.

And our Lord Jesus Christ, being in the fullest harmony with the Father, His Spirit is the same spirit of holiness and truth. And all of God's consecrated people, to the extent that they have the mind of Christ, the Spirit of Christ, have the Holy Spirit, and shed forth this holy influence upon all with whom they come in contact.

Thus we see that there is a trinity of the Scriptures very different from the trinity of the creeds a beautiful trinity. Before we proceed to demonstrate the Bible trinity and to give an array of Scripture texts proving it, let us glance backward and note well the conditions and circumstances which gave rise to the erroneous theory of the trinity set forth in our creeds, namely, as stated by some, that there are three Gods in one person God the Father, God the Son, God the Holy Spirit. Or, as stated by some other persons. There is one God in three persons, or a trinity of Gods, with one aim and object.

THE ORIGIN OF THE ERROR

It will not be disputed that for more than four thousand years there was no suggestion of a trinity of Gods, nor of more than one God, amongst the Israelites. The heathen nations recognized gods many polytheism and at least one of these as having a trinity. But God's people were warned against all these, being instructed in these words, "Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God is one Lord Jehovah. Thou shalt have no other gods (mighty ones, rulers) before me." (Deut. 6:4.) It should be noted that our Bible recognizes earthly gods or rulers, but none of these were ever to rank with the great Eternal One, whose Word and authority must stand supreme with those who would be His people. Indeed, the word elohim, as used in the Bible, and translated gods, signifies mere mighty ones.

Jehovah, being the Mightiest One of all, is frequently referred to by this word elohim. And sometimes, by way of showing His pre-eminence over other mighty ones (elohim), He is styled the All-Mighty One. The word elohim is also used in the Bible in respect to angels, because they are mightier than men, especially when they came to men as Divine agents, bearing the Divine message. In one instance the term elohim, or gods, is used in referring to men placed in position of might or authority the seventy elders of Israel. Ex. 21:6; 22:8, 9, 28; Psa. 82:6.

As we shall shortly show, the words of Jesus and the Apostles fully corroborate the teaching of the Old Testament, adding that Jesus is the Son of God, and that the call of this Gospel Age is for the gathering of the Church, to be under and associates sons, “partakers of the divine nature.” 2 Pet. 1:4.

It was after the death of the twelve Apostles that, without Divine authority, the bishops of the church were proclaimed to be the successors of the Apostles, and to possess Apostolic authority, as teachers in the church, and whose words were to be taken as of plenary inspiration. It was these bishops in council who declared the doctrine the 3 x 1 is one that God is one being, of three personalities or manifestations, all three being equal in power and in glory. The question is, Why did they make such a statement? Why should they concoct so unscriptural and so unreasonable a proposition? The Answer--is that it was done to combat certain errors prominent in their day. They flew from one extreme to another.

As soon as Christianity became prominent enough in the world to attract the attention of the Grecian philosophers, they confessed some of its teachings to be grand and noble, but they attacked the thought that Jesus was more than a man and that His death was in any sense of the word necessary as the Atonement price for the sins of the world. In proportion as they endeavored to discredit the Redeemer and to deny His prehuman existence, proportionately did the other party exalt and extol Him, until they claimed for Him that which neither He nor the Apostles ever claimed, namely, that He was the Father as well as the Son that He was not only equal to the Father in power and glory, but was the same in person, etc, etc.

HEARKEN TO THE WORDS OF JESUS

A little Scripture is worth far more than a great deal of reasoning, much more than all the statements in all the creeds, because the Word of God is Truth, and the testimony of our creeds has long ago been proven untrue in many particulars. We will take the words of Jesus first, of whom the Father said, “This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased;” “hear ye Him!” Matt. 3:17; Luke 9:35.

Jesus declared, “My Father is greater than I.” John 14:28.

“My Father is greater than all.” John 10:29.

“Of Mine Own Self I can do nothing.” John 5:30.

“As the Father hath sent Me, so send I you.” John 20:21.

“I came not to do Mine Own will, but the will of Him that sent Me.” John 6:38.

There is a unity here manifested an absolute unity of mind and purpose, because the Redeemer sought not to do His own will, but the Father’s will. Hence they were one, even as we will be one with each other if we as disciples are in harmony with the Father's will and Word, and in harmony with our Redeemer's counsels.

Hear Jesus again: After His death, after His resurrection, when speaking to Mary, He said, "I have not yet ascended to My Father.... I ascend to My Father and to your Father; to My God and to your God." (John 20:17.) "Say ye of Him whom the Father hath sanctified and sent into the world, Thou blasphemest, because I said, I am the Son of God?" John 10:36.

Perhaps the strongest testimony of the Scriptures respecting the exalted position held by the Redeemer is the word of our Lord Jesus Himself, "That all men should honor the Son, even as they honor the Father." (John 5:23.) This is in harmony with the thought of the Father and the Son being of one mind, one will, one purpose; but it distinctly shows that they are separate persons, otherwise we could not reverence the one as we reverence the other.

Our text is to the point. It declares the faith once delivered to the saints, and says nothing about the trinity three Gods in one person. "To us there is one God, the Father," the context shows that the Apostle is contrasting our faith with the faith of others who recognize gods many and lords many. We Christians, says the Apostle, recognize only One Supreme God of all gods—"The God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ," as St. Peter styles Him. 1 Pet. 1:3.

Our text declares that all things are of or proceed from the Father. He is the Source and Fountain, the Father of mercies, "from whom cometh every good and perfect gift." His great Gift to mankind was the Gift of His Son, our Lord Jesus Christ, whom He sent into the world to be man's Redeemer.

Three Gods, equal in power and glory, could not be said to send each other; neither would they pray to each other, as Jesus prayed to the Father—"Who in the days of His flesh, when He had offered up prayers and supplication with strong cryings and tears unto Him (Jehovah) that was able to save Him from death, was heard in that He feared." (Heb. 5:7.) An angel was sent to comfort Him and to assure Him of the Father's love, that the Father had not forsaken Him, that He was well pleasing in His sight, and that He should have a glorious resurrection by the Father's power in due time.

Our text proceeds to acknowledge our Lord Jesus, saying to us, "There is one Lord and Savior Jesus Christ" only one. "The Son of the Highest," our gracious Redeemer, "The chiefest among ten thousand, and the one altogether lovely" He who is to be the Bridegroom, the King of the future; He who is shortly to receive the Church to Himself as a Bride and Joint-heir in His Kingdom; He who, as King of the world and as Lord of the world, will reign for a thousand years, and backed by Divine power, will bring all into subjection to the Divine will.

It is He who will thus deliver up the Kingdom to God, even the Father, that Jehovah may be All and in all, and that the glorified Christ may be at the right hand of the Majesty on high next to the Father and we as His glorified Bride next to Him, at His right hand.

THE LOGOS—" FIRST AND LAST"

The Scriptures very explicitly declare to us that the Heavenly Father is from everlasting to everlasting God. But not so His creatures. From time to time He has exercised His Omnipotent Power and Wisdom in a variety of creations. Necessarily, however, these had a beginning one was first, and the Bible most clearly and repeatedly and distinctly tells us that that first one, "The Beginning of the creation of God," was the Logos.

And the Bible explains that Jehovah's First-Born Son was highly honored, in that the Father used Him as the Channel and Agency through whom all subsequent creations were effected. He it was who was given the honorable commission and privilege of being man's Redeemer, and of thereby proving His loyalty to Jehovah, and of being exalted to the divine nature, "far above angels, principalities and powers." From the very beginning He was above all other creations effected through Him; but by this last exaltation He attained, in His resurrection from the dead, a place far and away above all others next to the Father at God's right hand, where He shall ever remain without a peer.

And, wonderful thought! The Call of this Gospel Age is to become heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Jesus Christ our Redeemer, by a manifestation of His spirit of obedience to the Father, and drinking the cup which the Father hath poured, and thus attesting our loyalty to Jehovah and to His perfect will in all things, even unto death.

"THE LOGOS WAS A GOD"

In the opening of St. John's Gospel we have a record of the greatness of the Logos. And it is much more clear and distinct in the Greek than in our English. The word logos, I remind you, signifies the "word," the "message," and hence is a proper term for special messenger. In olden times kings addressed their people, not directly, but through such a messenger, or logos, who stood before the king, the latter being screened behind a lattice-work. As the logos or messenger received the message from the king, he uttered or proclaimed it to the people; hence he was styled the logos, the Word.

This is one of the grandest titles given to our Redeemer. He was the Father's logos, or Messenger, or Mouthpiece. He was the Channel of the Highest in all His dealings with the angels, and in His creative work; and later He became to men the Voice of Him who speaketh from on high, for God hath spoken to mankind peace, through the blood of the cross of Christ.

Let us read together the inspired record of St. John (1:1-3, 14, 10, 11,) “In the beginning was the Logos was with the God, and the Logos was a god. The same was in the beginning with the God. By Him were all things made that were made, and without Him was not one thing made.... And the Logos was made flesh and dwelt amongst us, and we beheld His glory, as the glory of the Only Begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth.” “He was in the world, and the world was made by Him, and the world knew Him not. He came to His own (people the Jews) and his own received Him not; but to as many as received Him to them gave He liberty (privilege) to become sons of God” (partakers of the divine nature 2 Pet. 1:4), even to those who believe on His Name, who were begotten, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God at Pentecost and subsequently.

How beautiful, simple and straightforward and non-mysterious is the Divine record respecting the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit, and their absolute oneness or harmony! How different from the nonsense which for so long we endeavored to believe, because we thought it supported by the Bible! Good Brother Wesley was one of those honest souls who was seriously troubled on the subject. He remarked that only the one text, 1 John 6:7, could be used as a foundation for this doctrine. He knew not that the difficulty lay in an interpolation an addition to the Apostle’s words. It is only in comparatively recent years that the three original Greek manuscripts have been brought to light, namely, the Sinaitic, Vatican No. 1209 and the Alexandrian...

THE BEGINNING OF GOD’S CREATION

Let us hearken to the Apostle Paul’s statement respecting our dear Redeemer and His glorious station. He uttered not a word favoring the absurd theory that our redeemer was His own Father and His own Son one in person. He declared in harmony with St. John’s statement that our Lord Jesus was “the Beginning of the creation of God.” (Rev. 3:14) St. Paul declared that Jesus was “The First-Born of every creature, that in all things He might have pre-eminence.” (Col. 1:15, 18.) And when in one of his statements he spoke of our Lord Jesus as though He were the Father, the Apostle promptly followed the statement with another, saying, “It is manifest that the Father is excepted (1 Cor. 15:27) in all comparison for, as Jesus declared, the Father is above all.

Our Lord Jesus’ own testimony is that He is the First and the Last, “the Alpha and the Omega, the Beginning and the End” of the Divine creation. In other words, when the Father created the Son He never afterwards directly created any other person or thing. The Logos was the First and the Last, and by Him were all things made that were made.

Let us then honor the Son as the Son and as the glorious Agent and Representative of the Father in all things by whom (through whom) are all things of the Divine Plan; and let us honor also the Father, as “the Father of lights,” and Father of mercies and grace and truth, “of whom are all things.” The testimony of the Bible is beautiful, honoring to the Father, to the Son and to the Spirit of holiness. As the Scriptures declare, “The words of the Lord are pure, making wise the simple” the teachable.

THE DAY OF WEALTH

Reports from more than one hundred cities indicate great public appreciation of “The Photo Drama of Creation.” This noble effort to turn attention back to the word of God is having the desired effect wherever it is exhibited. No one can see it without having his heart irresistibly drawn toward the giver of every good and perfect gift, who so loved the world as to give “His only begotten son, that whosoever believeth in Him might not perish, but have everlasting life.”

Today Pastor Russell preached from the text, “So is he that layeth up treasure for himself and is not rich toward God.” Luke 12:21.

The pastor began his discourse with the declaration that ours is the day of wealth. Nothing to compare with it has ever been known in the world’s history. Not merely have we discovered rich deposits of gold, silver and precious stones; not merely are these being mined in a provident and successful manner, with which nothing in the past could compare; but additionally the world is growing richer in every conceivable way.

This statement was illustrated by reference to the growth of our cities in size and beauty, in sanitary conveniences, in spacious parks, in good, paved streets and boulevards; and to our industries, which are multiplying machinery perfected within the last fifty years and turning our products of convenience and value. These add greatly to the world’s comfort and material wealth, and are not merely perishable articles such as clothing and bric-a-brac, but substantial edifices, etc. Vast libraries, both public and private, are being acquired. Many former luxuries are becoming almost necessities, because of the facility with which they are produced. All these things, and many other, constitute riches, one glance at which would amaze our ancestors.

The speaker then asked a series of questions such as appeal to all thoughtful persons. Are we as a race, he inquired, growing rich toward God? Is not the very reverse true? Are not faith and godliness on the decline? Is it not true that within the last fifty years the love of money, which the apostle declares is “the root of all evil,” has intensified? Is it not true that financial greed has become so strong as to make necessary pure-food laws for the protection of the lives of the people because life and health were in jeopardy?

Attention was then called to the fact that, although we are better housed, better fed and better clothed than were our forefathers, yet there is a general condition of unrest, due to trust in riches. Despite all our modern safeguards of police and detective systems, despite our telegraph, telephone, etc., human lives and property are still in peril because of the hunger for wealth everywhere prevalent.

WHOSE SHALL THESE THINGS BE

The pastor next discussed the parable from which his text is taken. In it our Lord pictures a man whose lines were fallen in pleasant places. The smiling sun and the genial showers prospered his undertakings, and his wealth grew apace. To him came opportunities for helping friends, neighbors and relatives less favored opportunities for turning this material wealth to good account in the cultivation of the generous traits of his nature and thus for developing more and more the divine character; for God scatters His blessings of sunshine and shower upon both the evil and the good.

But instead of growing richer in character through the cultivation of noble qualities, this rich man permitted selfishness to dominate him. He pulled down his barns in order to build greater ones. Instead of dispensing the wealth which divine providence permitted to flow into his lap, he accumulated more. Many, alas! today are following his example. These say to themselves, “I will accumulate wealth, and then will say to my soul, You have plenty; eat, drink and be merry. Think not particularly of your less favored brethren and neighbors, nor of the hopelessly poor; live for yourself.” Thus in the parable the master has drawn a picture of practically every man in the world, some of whom are really doing these things, and others of whom are longing for the opportunity to do so.

HEAR THE LORD’S ESTIMATION

Commenting upon the master’s estimation of the foolish rich man, the pastor asked: If the Lord declared that the rich man of the parable was a fool, what may we suppose is His estimate of the masses of humanity today blessed as men never before were blessed, privileged, and therefore responsible for the use of money? “Alas!” he declared; “we fear that the Lord is not well pleased with the world in its scramble for wealth, witnessed today on every hand. In our text the people of God of today have a reminder that all have the opportunity to cultivate the Christ-like spirit of generosity, helpfulness and brotherly kindness.”

The speaker then demonstrated that the Lord does not address His reproof and admonition to the world, but merely to His church the consecrated few. The world, he declared, is about to learn a great lesson along this very line of selfishness. Having sown to the wind the seed of selfishness, it is about to reap a whirlwind of trouble, the fruitage of selfishness, in which the interests of rich and poor will clash in the conflict between capital and labor, between those who have secured wealth and those who will strive to take the wealth from them—" a time of trouble such as was not since there was a nation." Are any so blinded as not to see the awful growth of anarchy, he asked, which is gradually settling down upon the highest type of civilization to which the world has ever attained? Are there any so blinded as to be unable to perceive that the conflict will be along the lines of selfishness desire to hold on the one part and desire to acquire on the other?

The pastor explained that, according to the Scriptures, God is not now appealing to the world; for well He knows that so intense is the spirit of avarice that such an appeal would be useless. God is therefore permitting the world as a whole to learn its great lesson, that selfishness is an integral part of sin, even as love and benevolence are integral parts of righteousness. There is no doubt, he declared, that by the time the poor world shall have fully learned its lesson of the terrible results of selfishness it will be ready to cry out for divine assistance.

When that time comes the speaker claimed, God's means of assistance will also be ready. The Messianic kingdom will be inaugurated, and a reign of love will be established, which will contrast sharply with present conditions, and which will bring blessed results of peace, love and good will amongst men. Since God is both loving and wise we may reasonable assume, he believes, that there is no better way than this whirlwind of trouble for teaching the world its needed lesson on this subject.

THE LESSON TO THE CHURCH

It was then shown that God's lessons are now for the church--not the church nominal, which is merely a more civilized section of the world, but the church real, the saintly people of God in and out of the various sects and parties, and of every nation, kindred and tongue. Anxious to know and to do the will of God, these receive special instruction such as the world is not prepared to receive. To these saintly footstep followers of Jesus the Lord says: Let not your treasures be of an earthly kind. Rather, go to the opposite extreme, and spend and be spent in the interest of others, in the service of God, in the service of His message of love; and thus, along the lines of the divine promises, seek for a share with the great Redeemer, not only in the sufferings and self-denials of the present life but also in the glory, honor and immortality of the life to come.

In support of his argument, the pastor quoted many familiar passages of Scripture, such as "Therefore take no thought of your life, what ye shall eat; neither for your body, what ye shall put on. The life is more than meat, and the body than raiment." "Your Father knoweth what things ye have need of." Therefore, "Seek first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." "Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom. Sell that ye have, and give alms; provide yourselves bags which wax not old, a treasure in the heavens that faileth not, where no thief approacheth, neither moth corrupteth. For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also."

"CHARGE THEM THAT ARE RICH"

A new light was thrown upon a familiar Scripture commonly applied to the worldly rich, but mistakenly so, if the pastor, who is a most able Bible scholar, is correct in his opinion. He declared that when St. Paul wrote to Timothy, "Charge them that are rich in this world that they be not high-minded, nor trust in uncertain riches, but in the living God who giveth us richly all things to enjoy," the apostle very evidently referred to some of the consecrated people of God who had wealth. This wealth these were to consider merely as a stewardship, not to be disposed of according to their own worldly caprices, and surely not according to the dictum of friends, neighbors and relatives. Whoever has given himself to the Lord must have consecrated all he has; else he is not accepted as Christ's disciple.

The pastor showed that the apostle's charge to the brethren who possessed wealth is stated in the verses following the one under discussion—"that they do good, that they be rich in good works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate; laying up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come, that they may lay hold on eternal life." This he interprets to mean that those possessing wealth should be willing to share with others of the brethren as members of a community, somewhat along the lines of Christian communism. The word foundation, he declared, is here used in the same sense as when we say that a wealthy man gave a foundation of a million dollars for a college. His gift constitutes the basis for the carrying out of the college plans.

Thus, the speaker explained, a Christian who generously uses in the Lord's service his financial stewardship is laying a foundation for spiritual wealth; and the more of time influence and wealth anyone can lay up thus in doing good, in forwarding the interests of the brethren and of the Lord's work, the more is that one piling up treasure in heaven. The advantage of this procedure, he asserted, is that it helps to center the heart's affections on the things above, and to wean them from the things of earth; for where our treasure is, there will our hearts be also. And thus, says the apostle, we shall be able to "lay hold on eternal life," now proffered to us.

At first many are inclined to say, What difference does it make to the Lord what I do with my time, money influence, talents? He is able to supply the needy without in the least impoverishing himself. Why, then, should He desire His children, who are far from rich in the world's estimation, to sacrifice their little all of talent, money, time, influence? And why should He make this a test to determine whether or not they shall attain the kingdom? What is the philosophy of it?

The philosophy was declared to be this: As originally created in the divine likeness man was tender-hearted, sympathetic. But after sin had entered the world and the strife for a living began, selfishness gradually became the predominant influence, producing hard-heartedness carelessness of the interests of others self-love.

"TAKE AWAY THE STONY HEART"

The speaker pointed out that during the thousand years of Messiah's reign Satan will be bound, his allurements ended and the curse lifted. Then this being removed, it will be easier for mankind to learn the lessons of love and brotherly kindness, and to rise out of their present condition of meanness, hard-heartedness and selfishness back to the glorious image of God. All who then refuse to return to harmony with God will be destroyed in the second death, as set forth in Acts 3:19-23.

It was pointed out, however, that while such a restitution under the favorable conditions of the Messianic kingdom is God's provision for the world, He has a different provision for the Church, now being called and proven. By nature their hearts were hard and selfish, and, as the apostle says, they "were children of wrath, even as others." But the fact that God has called these to joint heirship with His Son in the glorious kingdom that is shortly to bless the world does not signify that He will accept them in their natural condition of hard-heartedness and selfishness.

On the contrary, if the church are to be the kings, priests and judges of the world, in association with the Lord and head, the great King, it is readily seen that they must be rid of this condition themselves before they can properly be capable of helping the world up out of its hard-heartedness.

“WE WALK BY FAITH”

Several differences were pointed out between the Lord's dealings with the church at the present time and His dealings with the world by and by. These differences are due to the fact that the church are called to so high an honor; and correspondingly it is appropriate that they should manifest more love and zeal than will be expected of the world.

To illustrate: The church must walk by faith and not by sight; they must voluntarily accept the Lord's providences and voluntarily co-operate with Him in putting away the stony heart, accepting instead the spirit of the Lord--a spirit of love, kindness, gentleness, meekness, patience and long suffering toward all. Moreover, during the thousand years of the world's recovery from sin, selfishness and hard-heartedness, doubtless each individual will have several centuries for his gradual development. But the Father seeks in the church class those who will give such earnestness in copying His character that they will succeed in attaining a heart condition of tenderness, sympathy and love like unto that of the heavenly Father, in the present years of their Christian experience.

The discourse closed with an earnest exhortation that all who are the Lord's gird up the loins of their minds, determining that with His help they will be rich toward God; that each think less and less of earthly riches and more and more prize the kingdom which the Lord has promised to His faithful ones. All who attain this kingdom will be rich toward God in the highest sense. Not only will they be rich in the possession of the highest prize that God has to give His very best but rich in His character-likeness, rich in experience, rich in faith, rich in benevolence, rich in all that is good and great, however poor they may have been in earthly goods at the end of their course.

ONE REDEEMER FOR WORLD'S SIN

Berlin, Germany -Pastor Russell of London and Brooklyn had a splendid hearing here. This is his third visit. He spoke through an interpreter. His text was, "He is the propitiation for our sins (the Church's sins), and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the world." 1 John 2:2.

As the Jews applied all of God's promises to themselves and left none for the Gentiles, until the end of the Jewish Age, so we Christians have been inclined to appropriate to ourselves all of the gracious promises of the Bible, leaving nothing for the Jews and the world in general until now, in the ending time of this Age and the dawning of the Millennium, we are coming to see God's Word in a clearer and more beautiful and harmonious light. Now we see special promises for the Jews in the past, special promises for the Gospel Church, promises for the Jews in the near future, and still other promises and blessings for every creature. And the more the light increases on the pathway the more reasonable the Divine Plan appears to us. Why should God select one nation or people of one religious cult for glory and make preparations from the very beginning of creation for the eternal torture of all others? Surely we have been most inconsistent in our interpretations of the Divine Message, yet just as surely the all-wise One knew of our plight and permitted us to remain in darkness until now; and He is able to overrule our measure of blindness so that it will be of no injury to us.

Perhaps, indeed, the beauty of the Divine Word and Plan is much more perspicuous now because of the darkness in which we all were so recently involved, and perhaps the same principle later on will apply to the whole world. When all shall emerge out of the darkness and ignorance and superstition into the glorious sunlight of Divine truth and grace, undoubtedly the contrast will make the blessings of the future all the more precious, and the more incline every knee to bow.

After Divine favor had first granted opportunity to the Jews to accept the Redeemer, shedding upon them first the special light of the Gospel, then the Message was sent forth without restriction gradually through Asia Minor, into Greece and into Rome, and then favored chiefly the Germanic nations and amongst these I include the British people and the larger proportion of our American population. In these peoples, too, the Reformation Movement found its chief adherents. The Message of Christ has made great in civilization all the nations it has touched, in proportion as they received the Message in simplicity and purity, and in proportion as they have lived out their Christian profession as footstep followers of Jesus.

LESS FAVOR, NOT LESS WORTHY

So far as human judgment can discern, the Divine records show that these favored peoples were not superior to others less favored. The Bible shows us some noble characters amongst the Gentile nations before the Redeemer's day and plainly intimates that God intentionally bestowed His favor upon a stiff-necked race, less tractable than others of that time. We see the same thing in respect to the operation of God's grace during this Gospel Age. Apparently the peoples of India and China were more docile and of much more likely soil for the Gospel Message than the fierce Goths and Huns and Franks to whom the Gospel was more particularly directed. How unlikely it would be that the less-favored nations should have no provision in the Divine Plan!

On the contrary we perceive that a special election, or selection, of a saintly class was made during the Jewish Age Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and all the Prophets and saintly Jews. (Heb. 11:38-40) And since the selection of the saintly Jews the calling of the Bride class, chiefly from the nations of Europe, implies that when this spirit-begotten, Spiritual Israel, spiritual children of Abraham, shall be completed, then all nations will be alike favored in the distribution of the coming blessings declared to be for all other peoples, kindreds and tongues.

NO PREDESTINATION TO MISERY

While speaking last Sunday in the great Victoria Hall of Geneva my mind naturally went back to the days when that great and good man John Calvin cut such a swath in religious sentiment that it still influences about one-half of all Protestants. I saw the monument to Calvin, and I saw the monument unveiled this very year by Calvin's followers to the honor of Servetus, whom Calvin so horribly burned to death at the stake. Indeed, I am sure that the monument, as it declares, was not so much of a tribute to Servetus as a protest against Brother Calvin's atrocity committed in the name of Jesus, the Bible, and the God of Love.

We must give John Calvin credit for emphasizing the doctrine of Election, although we cannot give him credit for making that doctrine, for of course it was a Bible doctrine fifteen centuries before his birth. Had he been contented with emphasizing the election for the Church and had he said, "I know not what will be the fate of the non-elect," he would have deserved to this day our unstinted praise. But Alas! to err is human. Calvin was not content to leave the matter thus. He reasoned out his theory, and, his head being imperfect, his conclusions were defective when he surmised that all of the non-elect, whether infants or gray-headed, were predestinated to eternal torture. This feature, purely Calvinistic, and strictly unscriptural, has been the cause of untellable difficulties in the theology of Christendom from Calvin's day until now.

THE KEY TO THE PROBLEM

The key which solves the problem is so simple that we wonder that we have all so long overlooked it. The key is found in the promise made to Abraham that his Seed was to be the Elect Jesus the Head and the Church His members Jesus the Bridegroom, typified by Isaac, and the Church His Bride, typified by Rebecca, Isaac's wife. And this Seed of Abraham when completed according to Divine promise, is to be the channel for blessing all the families of the earth the living and the dead. The blessing that is to come to all is clearly stipulated by St. Paul, saying,

“God our Savior will have all men to be saved (from the condemnation that came on them through Adam) and to come unto the knowledge of the Truth.” 1 Tim. 2:3-6

The basis of the Apostle’s argument is set forth in Rom. 5:12. He there shows that Adam, and not his race, was put on trial in Eden that Adam and not his race was directly condemned but that Adam’s race were involved through heredity, by inheriting the weakness and dying conditions of their parent. St. Paul then shows forth in the same argument that as condemnation and death thus passed from Adam to all of his race, so Christ Jesus, having become Adam’s Redeemer, Divine mercy through Him extends beyond Adam to all the members of his race who were involved with him in the death sentence by laws of heredity. The argument is plain. To see it is to be convinced, because it is so logical. And it could not be supposable for a moment that God would provide the ransom-price for all mankind and fail to make it operative, because the great mass of mankind went down to death without a knowledge of it many of them during the four thousand years before Christ came into the world to give His life a Ransom.

The explanation is that all went down into the Bible hell down to the tomb, the death state, in harmony with the sentence, “Dying thou shalt die.” Provision is made for the redemption of all from sheol. (Hos. 13:14) Christ died for all and, as a result, there is to be a resurrection of the dead, both the just and the unjust. (Acts 24:16) The just the are justified, and are the comparatively few who have heard of God’s grace and have responded and come into fellowship with the Father and being approved of Him are to have share in the better or First Resurrection. The remainder of the world, equally redeemed with the precious blood from the power of the tomb, are all to come forth unto a resurrection of the dead, “For as all in Adam die, even so all in Christ shall be made alive, each in his own order.” I Cor. 15:22

THE CHURCH’S SIN--THE WORLD’S SIN

How clearly our text defines the fact that the Church is a separate and distinct class from the world a class called out from the world. As Jesus said, “Ye are not of the world, even as I am not of the world,” for “I have chosen you out of the world.” The ordination of the Church is to association with the Redeemer in His great work of witnessing now for the Truth, showing faithfulness even unto death and sacrificing all the earthly interests, to the intent that they with the Redeemer may later on be associated in the work of blessing the world as the anti-typical, the spiritual, Seed of the Abrahamic promise. (Gal. 3:29) All along we read in our Bibles that “Jesus Christ, by the grace of God, tasted death for every man.” (Heb. 2:9) But other texts misunderstood, beclouded our judgment and led us to think that this text meant every man in Christ. We all know that the Bible declares that “God so loved the world that He gave His only-begotten Son, that whoever believeth on Him might not perish but have eternal life.” (John 3:16) We found it difficult to limit this text to the Church when it specifically declares the world. We see now that it applies to the Church first and to the remainder of the world afterward.

Those who in the present life, during this Gospel Age, hear of Christ and have their eyes and understanding open to recognize Him as the Son of God and the Savior of men these shall not perish in the Second Death, but pass immediately by faith to a reckoned everlasting life, which will be completely theirs when they shall have experienced the glorious “change” of the First Resurrection. We are glad now to see that the Divine purpose still holds on with respect to the world that was lost and redeemed. We perceive now that God intends to bring all men to a knowledge of the Truth. More than that, He intends to give the world the assistance of the Royal Priesthood for a thousand years for their edification, instruction and uplifting out of sin, degradation, death, back to full perfection of the image of God in the flesh, freely provided for all who will come unto the Father through the precious arrangements then operative.

The same original sin of Adam was inherited by all of his race and therefore was as much against the class chosen as the Church as against the remainder of the world. This the Apostle declares, saying, “We (the Church) were children of wrath, even as others.” (Eph. 2:3) We have merely been delivered from the curse, the death sentence, in advance of the world as a result of special Divine favor enjoyed by us whether that favor consisted in not being so seriously fallen as some, or whether it consisted in special opportunities for coming into this grace. And if the Church has enjoyed some special favor of God in being constituted the first-fruits of His creatures to be delivered from the power of sin and death, why should we ever have imagined that He had no grace whatever remaining for our less fortunate brethren (the world in general)? And how could we think of ourselves of the Church as the first-fruits and suppose that there would be no after-fruits no general harvest for the world? Jas. 1:18

Our text forcefully calls attention to this double action of divine grace first upon the Church and secondly upon the world and points us to the fact that the salvation of the willing of the Church of this Age, and the salvation of the willing of the world in the next Age two distinct salvations — both proceed or result from the one redemptive sacrifice at Calvary. Notice the statement, “He is the propitiation (satisfaction) for our sins (the Church’s sins), and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world.”

WILL TRUTH INJURE?

Many ministers all over the world, following the suggestions of the I. B. S. A. Convention, have informed their congregations and the world in general through the newspapers that they do not believe in a hell of eternal torture, and that they do not believe that the Bible, rightly interpreted, teaches this. But there are others who, by some influence, tell an opposite course. They denounce the Bible Students, and myself in particular, for telling the people the Truth. These ministers, generally without much influence even in their own congregations, have, I am told, threatened the newspapers all over the world that are publishing my sermons that they will boycott them and influence their congregations.

But the editors are finding out that narrow minded people never have much influence, good or bad. Hence the sermons still appear in nearly fifteen hundred newspapers in the English language and are spreading, I am told, into the German and Swedish. These brethren claim that the world is likely to be injured and to be turned away from God and the Bible by its proper interpretation. We answer, Not so. After the preaching of eternal torment for sixteen centuries the net result is that everybody is losing faith in the Bible, which has been misinterpreted, and many are even losing faith in a personal Creator. Is it not time, even for policy's sake, to discontinue the misrepresentation of God and His character to see if the Truth will not accomplish more than the error has done? And aside from the policy question, if we have been slandering our Creator and misrepresenting the Bible for centuries, is it not all the more incumbent upon us now to set the matter right?

Who will deny the fact that life and property are less secure in so called Christian lands, where the eternal torment has been preached for centuries, than in any other part of the world? We assure the dear brethren who are fearful that we have many evidences to prove the very contrary of their fears to prove that a better knowledge of God and His love, as expressed in the Divine Plan of the Ages, is helping many, not only out of ignorance and darkness, but also out of indifference and wickedness, into fellowship with God. But anyway, how dare we, as Christian ministers, either directly or indirectly, slander the character of our God in a way and to a degree that we would resent if charged against our worst enemy?

We fear that some of these misguided brethren are more solicitous for their own supposed welfare and the supposed interest of their own churches than for the glory of God or the welfare of the people. They are afraid to have the people see the light of Present Truth and gain a clear comprehension of the Bible, possibly because they fear that this would reflect upon them as not having properly instructed the people. They seem to know that if the people will read they will be convinced and if convinced, they will no longer be sectarian, nor pay good money to help to misrepresent God's character and keep the people in ignorance of the true meaning of His Word. This accounts for the wild and fanatical and untruthful misrepresentations of my teachings! They give the people horrible misrepresentations of my teachings to hinder them from coming to a knowledge of the Truth. In three different cities ministers in this enlightened Twentieth century have under one pretext or another collected my books and burned them after the style of the autodafe of centuries ago. In every case, however, good has resulted. Saner or more honest minds have been led to investigate just as when, centuries ago, the Bishop of London bought up and burned publicly the Bibles which Tyndale had translated and published

THE WORLD'S NEED OF A MEDIATOR

Stockholm, Sweden -- Pastor Russell of London Tabernacle arriving from Finland addressed two large Swedish congregations here and left to fill appointments in Copenhagen, Kiel, Brussels and London. We report one of his addresses from I Tim. 2:5, 6: "There is one God, and one Mediator between God and men, the Man Christ Jesus, who gave Himself a Ransom for all, to be testified in due time. " He said:

Many fail to understand why a Savior and a redemptive work are necessary. They ask, Why was it necessary for Jesus to come into the world? How did His death influence God to the forgiveness of human sin? And why was the better sacrifice of Jesus typified by the sacrifice of buns and goats under the Jewish Law Covenant? A right understanding, a correct understanding, of these matters is the very essence of true theology, and most helpful to us all.

The Divine arrangement proposes that everything in accord with God must be absolutely perfect. Both angels and men were created perfect, "in God's image.' And the Divine Law, in the interest of all, cuts from fellowship and blessings all who deliberately go into sin, and fellowship only such as are perfect. Hence the sentence upon Father Adam for his disobedience cut him off from Divine fellowship and favor under the sentence. "Dying, thou shalt die" (Gen. 2:17) -- not, "Going to eternal torment, thou shalt roast."

True, Adam's children were never thus condemned, but, born in sin and "shapen in iniquity" (Psa. 51:5), under the laws of heredity they never were perfect, never were fully in the image of God, never were, therefore, in harmony with God, but always shared Father Adam's alienation and condemnation. They were "children of wrath" (Eph. 2:3)-justly sharing their Father Adam's penalty of death, because imperfect-not worthy of life under the Divine arrangement.

RECONCILIATION A NECESSITY

Whoever sees clearly these facts of Scripture must perceive that humanity would have no hope of everlasting life except through Divine mercy -forgiveness. But some one will say, Why should there be any necessity for the Logos to have heavenly glory and be made flesh and then to die, "the just for the unjust," to make possible our return to Divine favor? Why should not God forgive the sins of Adam and his race even as we are directed to forgive those who trespass against us?

God's attitude towards sin very properly is different. "His work is perfect" (Deut. 32:4) He created Adam in His own image. We sinners are not God's creation direct, but have merely come into existence under laws of heredity. justice is under no obligation to us. All rights and privileges granted to Father Adam were forfeited and have been abrogated. From the Divine standpoint of justice, our race is a dead one. More than this -the great Supreme Ruler and judge of the Universe, having condemned us as unfit for eternal life and fellowship with Himself, could not justly set aside His own decree. God could not, therefore, justly, righteously, change His verdict, for that would imply that our sentence was an unjust one.

The Divine Government refuses to be thus compromised, but instead has provided a salvation for humanity through Jesus' death. The method adopted maintains the dignity of the Divine Law to the full, and at the same time reveals the fact that our Creator is the very embodiment of sympathy and love-qualities of His which never would have been so fully appreciated by either angels or men unless God had permitted human sin, has provided the penalty He did, and then provided the Redemption through the Logos-Jesus.

BETWEEN GOD AND MAN

A mediator is one who stands between two parties who are at variance, for the purpose of bringing about reconciliation. The two parties mentioned in our text are not God and the Church, but God and the world-mankind in general. Man sinned. God justly condemned the sinner. The Mediator's first work in reconciliation must be to offer a substitute to justice for Adam's sin. Our text tells us that the Man Christ Jesus did this very thing-He gave Himself to be a Ransom-price for all mankind. He did this when He reached perfect manhood, at thirty years of age, when He consecrated His life to God-even unto death. He finished this giving of Himself on Calvary when He cried, "It is finished." (John 19:30) The perfect spotless, uncontaminated life of the Man Christ Jesus, thus laid down a voluntary sacrifice, constitutes a Ransom-price for Adam and his race.

The word Ransom in our text has a very strict meaning, namely, a corresponding price. Adam in his perfection was in God's image -"very good. " The Man Jesus, who gave Himself a corresponding price, was in God's image -- "very good." He corresponded exactly to the perfect man Adam, and His sacrifice of Himself in death corresponded exactly to the penalty against Adam, which the entire race has shared. This great transaction, accomplished nearly nineteen centuries ago, is not yet generally proclaimed, but will be testified to all in due time, our text declares. As yet only the few, guided by the Word and enlightened by the Holy Spirit, can appreciate this matter, because its details have not yet been fully worked out.

"When all its mighty work is seen, Praise shall all tongues employ. "

St. Paul declares that the calling and election of the Church to become the Bride of Christ and His joint-heir in His Messianic Kingdom is a "Mystery" appreciated by few. The Mystery is that in the Great Jehovah's Plan this Elect Church, now in process of selection, is to constitute with Jesus her Redeemer the great Mediator who, during the Millenium, will mediate the New Covenant between God and mankind in general. The foundation for all that Mediatorial work-the all essential basis of it-was effected by our Lord Jesus alone when He, as the Man Christ Jesus, gave Himself a Ransom-price for all. But the great work of reconciliation belongs to the future and is to be shared in by the Bride class.

Well did John the Baptist point to Jesus and say, "Behold, the Lamb of God! which taketh away the sin of the world." (John 1: 29, 36) In Jesus resided the Ransom-price, and not in His Church; in Jesus' work, and not in our work; in Jesus' sacrifice, and not in our sacrifice, was the potency for the cleansing away of Adam's sin and the setting aside of his death penalty. Whatever share the Church was granted in the great work of the world's reconciliation was by grace and not by our merit, not by our sacrifice.

MEDIATION NOT YET BEGUN

The redeemer has not yet begun His work of Mediation between God and men. He merely provided the basis of that reconciliation in His death at Calvary. The merit of His sacrifice is in Jehovah's hands, but is not yet appropriated for the sins of the world. The world's sins are not yet forgiven. Hence God still treats the world as sinners, aliens, foreigners, enemies through evil works.

Everything is in readiness for the forgiveness of the sins of the world; but the Redeemer waits until He shall have accomplished another feature of the Divine Program, namely, the selection of the Church to be His Bride; or under another figure, to be members of the Body of Messiah, under Jesus the Head-members of the Body of the Mediator, under the Redeemer's Headship. "For Moses verily said unto the fathers, A Prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you from amongst your brethren like unto me (Moses); Him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever. He shall say unto you, And the person that will not obey that Prophet (that Teacher), shall be destroyed from amongst the people." -- Acts 3:22, 23

This antitypical Moses, Head and members, has been in process of development, or raising up, for now nearly nineteen centuries. God raised up Jesus the very first, and is since raising up us also by Jesus. And through the First Resurrection shortly the entire Body, the Messiah of glory, will be changed, made partakers of the divine nature. Rev. 20:6; 2 Pet. 1:4

The antitypical Moses will inaugurate the New Covenant with Israel and the world, even as the typical Moses inaugurated the old Law Covenant with typical Israel at Mt. Sinai. As the old Covenant had sacrifices of buns and goats and was inaugurated first by a sprinkling of the tables of the Law, representing a satisfaction of Divine justice, and secondly the sprinkling of all the people, representing their reconciliation through the same sacrifice, so the antitypical Moses, the Mediator of the New or antitypical Covenant, must first produce "better sacrifices," the antitypical, and then with the merit of these make satisfaction to Divine justice and reconcile the people—all who are willing of the whole world. When Moses slew the animals whose blood made effective the typical Covenant which he mediated, that sacrificing was merely a preparatory work. The Law Covenant was not mediated in any sense of the word until the animals were all slain and the blood was sprinkled on the tables of the Law.

So in the antitype, Jesus, the Mediator of the New Covenant, must first, after the pattern of Moses, complete all His sacrificing before He begins the work of Mediation. First of all, as we have seen, He offered up Himself without spot unto God, finishing that work at Calvary. Since then He has been accepting and ordering up as a part of His own sacrifice the members of the Church, as they come unto the Father through Him, presenting their bodies to be living sacrifices, holy and acceptable unto God. (Rom. 12: 1) This sacrificing of the flesh of Christ has been in process for nearly nineteen centuries. Not until these "better sacrifices" (Heb. 9:23) shall have been finished will the real work of Mediation and Atonement for the sin of the world take place.

ABLE MINISTERS OF NEW COVENANT

All those who now present their bodies to Jesus, desiring to share with Him in suffering for righteousness in this present time, that they may have a share with Him in His coming glory and Kingdom-all these are in Bible language "able ministers (servants) of the New Covenant." They are serving the New Covenant, although it has not yet been sealed with the precious blood. They are serving in calling those who have an ear to hear, in showing them the privilege of suffering with Christ, that they may also reign with Him. They serve the New Covenant in helping to build one another up in the most holy faith and in assisting one another in the narrow way of faithfulness and self-sacrifice even unto death.

But specially these, each for himself, serves the New Covenant arrangement by fulfilling the terms of his "Covenant of sacrifice." (Psa. 50:5) Jesus was the first Minister, or Servant, of this Covenant. All of His members are associated in this ministry. When the ministry service of sacrifice shall have been completed, the grander ministry of this New Covenant in glory will begin. The Christ, the Messiah, the Mediator in glory as the Antitypical Melchisedek, will combine the office of King with His other Office of Priest, or Instructor and Helper.

The first work will be the application of the blood of Atonement, the Ransom-price for the sins of the whole world. As soon as thus presented on man's behalf, Divine justice will accept it. Forthwith the world will no longer be enemies of God, children of wrath, without God and without hope, but on the contrary, the Ransom-price for their sins having been accepted, the sentence of death against all will be cancelled, and the whole world will be turned over to the control of the Mediator. He having mediated towards God, and having made satisfaction for human sin through the merit of His own sacrifice, will then proceed to reconcile the world.

During the six thousand years of the reign of sin and death the world has become so alienated from God that the majority do not earnestly desire reconciliation. This, however, is because of their weakness and ignorance. For a thousand years the great Mediator will instruct them, giving chastenings where necessary and in proportion to their spirit of willfulness, and thus gradually He will uplift them out of their ignorance, blindness and sin defilement -- of the tomb and out of all the weaknesses of the dying condition-back into the image of God, from which all fell in Father Adam.

The only exception to this rule will be that such as wilfully, intelligently reject the Divine provision for their recovery will be punished with everlasting destruction. They will perish "like brute beasts," as St. Peter declares. (2 Pet. 2:12) The grand finale will be attained when "every creature in heaven and in the earth and under the earth" shall be heard acclaiming praise to Him that sitteth upon the Throne, and unto the Lamb forever. -- Rev. 5:13.

JESUS THE CHURCH'S ADVOCATE

From the foregoing it will be seen that the world's salvation is to be a Restitution to human perfection-an earthly Eden lost through Father Adam's disobedience. It will be noticed also that the Church has no part with the world in that Restitution, nor in that Mediation for a thousand years. The Church will be members of the Mediator who will confer the Restitution blessings and privileges on the non-elect.

But the fact that the Church will not be numbered with mankind in the human Mediation, which will take place during the Millenium, does not mean that the Church now has no sins, nor that those sins do not need to be covered and cancelled. It does mean that the Church is not to get back the human life and earthly rights forfeited by Adam and to be restored under the Mediator's Kingdom. Instead, the Church is promised glory, honor and immortality heavenly nature. As a reward for participation in the sufferings of Christ she shall be made sharer in His eternal glories.

What the Church needs and has is an Advocate with the Father -Jesus Christ the Righteous. Thousands of humanity who are weary and heavy-laden with sin and desirous of reconciliation with God and who hear the Message of this Gospel Age and accept its terms, present their bodies living sacrifices and purpose to be footstep followers of Jesus. But because these are by nature sinners, children of wrath, under Divine sentence, imperfect, their sacrifices could not be accepted of the Father as was that of Jesus; hence they need an advocate.

Jesus has merit in the hands of Justice, the result of His sacrifice, which is being kept to be given by and by to the world of mankind, justifying them to full Restitution. As the Advocate of His footstep followers Jesus imputes a share of the merit of His sacrifice to the Church to make good her imperfections, so that her sacrifice may in God's sight be holy and acceptable.

This imputation of the merit of Jesus' sacrifice was made for all of the Church at once-long ago-when He "ascended up on high, there to appear in the presence of God for us (as our Advocate)." The already consecrated disciples in the upper room received the Pentecostal blessing as the evidence that Jesus as their Advocate had appeared for them, so that their sacrifices were acceptable to the Father. The same principle holds true throughout this Gospel Age for this same class.

ONE SACRIFICE FOR SINS FOREVER

London, England -Pastor Russell's text was "After He had offered one sacrifice for sins forever, He sat down on the right hand of God;... for by one offering He hath perfected forever them that are sanctified." Heb. 10:12-14.

The Bible is most explicit in its declaration that Jesus, as the Antitypical High Priest, offers but one sacrifice of Himself for the sins of the world. In our context St. Paul points to the fact that the typical priests of the Jewish Era repeated their sacrifices yearly, on each succeeding Atonement Day. He notes to us the fact that those were merely typical sacrifices, which could never take away sins; and then he tells us that the one Sacrifice, on the one Atonement Day, by the Antitypical High Priest, is so complete as to leave nothing further to be done. "Christ ... dieth no more; death hath no more dominion over Him;" "This He did once, when He offered up Himself" "without spot unto God." (Rom. 6:9; Heb. 7:27; 9:14.) A matter so well established we should settle in our minds and not allow any theory or supposed necessity to move us therefrom.

However, we behold two great Christian communions holding a different view the High Church of England and the Church of Rome. Both hold the doctrine introduced into the Church about the Fourth Century the doctrine of the Mass. This doctrine holds that the death of Christ cancels original sin for believers and brings them into fellowship with God through faith in the redeeming blood of Christ. But it philosophizes that sins committed after coming into the family of God need cancellation also, and that nothing except the blood of Christ, the death of Christ, can take away sin; and that the merit of His death at Calvary having been used to cancel our past sins, a fresh sacrifice of Christ is necessary for the more recent sins.

SACRIFICE OF THE MASS

Proceeding with the philosophy they ask, How can we get a fresh sacrifice of Christ and apply it and thus be kept cleansed in the sight of God? They Answer--that the bread and the wine of the communion service, after being blessed, are the actual flesh and blood of Jesus, and may be used afresh in sacrifice for sins.

Applying this philosophy these Christian brethren perform a common, or Low Mass for general sins, in a congregational way, and High Mass for special sins. Their Church services accordingly are not so much studies or expositions of the Bible, but more particularly a participation in the cleansing supposed to accrue to all who attend Mass.

Those who fail to attend Mass at least once in a year are supposed to be horribly defiled with the accumulated sins. The congregation assembled, praise and prayer are chanted, and then the officiating priest approaches what they call the altar of sacrifice. On it are the bread and wine, which, being blessed, are instantly turned into the actual flesh and actual blood of Christ. The officiating priests and associates and the congregation are all on their knees to worship the Host to give reverence to the freshly created Christ on the altar. The officiating priest then rises and breaks the bread of flesh. Thus the sacrifice of the Mass for the sins of the people present is accomplished. No wonder the people are anxious to be present, to be cleansed afresh of their sins!

Not only is the sacrifice of the Mass thus made for the living, but Christ is similarly sacrificed for the dead supposed to be suffering in Purgatory.

WHERE LIES THE MISTAKE?

With our convenient Bibles (Catholic and Protestant) we have much advantage over our brethren of the Fourth Century who invented the doctrine of the Mass. We now see that it is unscriptural and that the bishops, once supposed to be successors of the Twelve Apostles, erred in other words, they were not inspired they were not successors of The Twelve. Whatever things these bishops bound on earth were not bound in heaven they made mistakes, as we all have and doubtless just as honestly as we.

Bible students see clearly that the one sacrifice of Christ is sufficient for the sins of the whole world past, present and to come God's provision in Christ for the forgiveness of sins is applicable only to Adam's (or original) sin, and to such weaknesses as have come to his children from that original sin by heredity. God does not propose in any manner to forgive sins willfully committed. They receive stripes or punishments in proportion to their willfulness.

Whatever proportion of sin is directly or indirectly the result of Adam's disobedience and human imperfection is coverable through the merit of the one sacrifice of Christ, which covering is to be obtained by the transgressor's approaching the Throne of the heavenly Grace that he may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need. When we came to God desiring to be accepted as disciples of Jesus and joint-sacrificers in His cross-bearing, self-denial and death to the world, and joint-heirs also with Him in His Heavenly Kingdom, we found Him prepared and willing to be our Advocate with the Father. Through the imputation of the merit of His sacrifice we were healed and accepted of the Father and begotten of the Holy Spirit. Now, as children of God, New Creatures in Christ, we still need our Advocate, because we as New Creatures have not yet received our new bodies and will not receive them until the resurrection; and because our earthly bodies are imperfect through the fall we are liable from time to time to be overtaken in a fault. Our need, then, is not to attend Low Mass, or High Mass, but to go directly to the Lord in the name and merit of our Advocate. Thus the Apostle enjoins us saying, "If any man (in the Church) sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the Righteous." (1 John 2:1.) The thought that sin in every instance requires Atonement is quite Scriptural, and the thought that without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sins is Scriptural. (Heb. 9:22.) But the thought that Christ needs to die more than once is antagonistic to the Scriptures, as we have already seen.

The fact is that good and great people have made serious errors in theology along nearly every line. The errors accumulated for nearly fifteen centuries, and we must not wonder at our slowness in getting fully rid of them. For the past four centuries practically the people of God of all denominations have been coming back to the light of God's Word. Both Catholic and Protestant translations of the Bible are assisting us. We are growing in grace as well as in knowledge. Whatever we shall say of the world, we must believe that God's consecrated people in every denomination are more Christlike, more Godlike, than were their forefathers who, surrounded by the errors of the past, fanatically and devilishly tortured one another in the name of religion in the name of the Bible which they did not understand.

"THE ABOMINATION OF DESOLATION"

Nearly nineteen centuries ago our Redeemer mentioned the Abomination of Desolation spoken of by the Prophet Daniel. The Master declared that when this Abomination should be seen those noting it should understand and flee with haste. For long centuries it was supposed that the Great Teacher referred to events which culminated in A. D. 70, in the destruction of Jerusalem. The Abomination was supposed to refer to the carrying of Roman banners within the holy precincts of the Temple. It did seem strange that so comparatively insignificant a matter should have been mentioned by the Lord through Daniel the Prophet, and should also have been referred to by Jesus Himself.

Of late there is another interpretation. It refers our Lord's prophecy specially to the end of this Age and the great "Time of Trouble" soon to come upon the Church and upon Christendom. In this view the Abomination of Desolation signifies a reprehensible doctrine introduced into the Church, the true spiritual Temple into the "holy place." The doctrine was to be an abomination in the sight of God and would exercise a desolating influence upon everything associated with it. This influence would continue for long centuries before its defiling character would be recognized. Then all so recognizing it would know that the Time of Trouble and the New Dispensation are near, and should make all haste to separate themselves from everything associated with the “Abomination” they should forsake the error and flee to the mountain heights of Truth, as Lot and his family fled from Sodom.

I share with many other Bible Students the view that the Desolating Abomination mentioned by the Prophet Daniel and by Jesus is the doctrine of the Mass. It was introduced about the middle of the Fourth Century. It has had a corrupting influence since. And now that we see it clearly it is the duty and privilege of all of God’s people to get right with God by renouncing that which is so abominable in His sight the setting aside of the one, perpetual sacrifice of Christ, and the substituting in part therefore of the sacrifices of the Mass, performed many times every day throughout the world.

In Daniel’s Prophecy (11:31-38) we recognize a brief synoptical history covering the period from the Fourth Century to the days of Napoleon. The Sanctuary of Truth and Christian strength was polluted. The daily Sacrifice, literally the continual sacrifice, was taken away, and the Abomination of Desolation was introduced the Mass. Then follows a description of the Church nominal, corrupted by flattery and prosperity, and a description of the true saints of God, who, at the same time, were strong and did wonders in support of the Truth. A work of instruction is mentioned, yet the instructors “fell by the sword and by flame and captivity and spoil many days many years yet they were not allowed to fall completely. God helped them ”with a little help” just enough to preserve them from extinction, that He might not be left without witness. This trying and purging continued until “the Time of the End,” which, to our understanding, began in 1799. Since then none have fallen through persecution. Outward persecution has been stopped. God’s people are seeing more and more clearly the true teaching of His Word the “golden vessels” of the House of the Lord are being brought back from Babylon and put to their proper uses in the spiritual Temple.

BETTER SACRIFICES THAN THOSE

But we are reminded that St. Paul himself wrote of “better sacrifices,” in the plural. (Heb. 9:23.) We are asked what these refer to, if not to the sacrifices of the Mass.

We reply that St. Paul made no reference to sacrifices being offered by earthly priests. He referred only to those offered by the Great High Priest Himself. None but the High Priest is competent to offer sacrifices acceptable to God. The sacrifices in the type of Day of Atonement consisted of two the bullock, which was for Aaron and his household (his sons and his tribe of Levi), and the Lord’s goat, which he offered on behalf of all the people of Israel. In the Antitype, “himself and his house,” represents the Body of Christ (the Under-Priesthood, the Royal Priesthood), and the household of faith the antitypical Levites; and all the people of Israel typified all the world of mankind who ultimately will be brought, through the merit of the precious Atonement, into full relationship with God and to everlasting life.

Of these “better sacrifices,” the bullock represented our Lord Jesus, in His own person. The merit of His death is throughout this Age imputed to His true followers the saintly few, the Royal Priesthood, and to the larger number of less zealous followers represented by the tribe of Levi. All of these were covered, reconciled, blessed, directly through the imputation of Christ’s merit, when He appeared in the presence of God for us, after His ascension, Divine acceptance of His merit being manifested by the impartation of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost.

But that was not the completion of Jesus’ sacrifice. In the type the bullock was only one part of the sacrifice. Next followed the Lord’s goat, which represented the class of Christians addressed by St. Paul in his exhortation, “I beseech you, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable to God.” (Rom. 12:1.) During this Gospel Age the followers of Jesus have been privileged to present themselves to Him for sacrifice, but they do not do the sacrificing. He, the spiritual High Priest, has proceeded in His work for more than eighteen centuries, offering up for acceptance by the Father all who have become His true disciples, denying themselves and taking up their cross and following Him faithfully.

All these are represented by the Lord’s goat of the Day of Atonement sacrifice (Lev. 16), and were represented in the Pentecostal blessing. There all of this class were accepted representatively and all of them were devoted to sacrifice, according to the terms Divinely arranged. As soon as the foreordained number constituting the sacrificial Body of Christ shall have been sacrificed, the “better sacrifices” will be complete, and all the members of the Body of the Great High Priest will pass to the Head beyond the veil, into the Most Holy. Then the work of this Gospel Age will be at an end. Then the work of the New Dispensation will begin the blessing of the world. Titus 2:14.

“THIS IS MY BODY”

Lutherans as well as Catholics hold that the Eucharist means more than a memorial of the broken body and shed blood of Christ. Catholics hold that they have authority for considering the bread and wine which have been blessed as the actual flesh and the actual blood of Jesus, because, say they, Jesus so treated the matter in the first Eucharist: “On the same night in which He was betrayed, He took bread and brake it, saying, this is My body, which is broken for you. Likewise He took the cup saying, This is My blood, shed for many for the remission of sins.” Hence they reason that if Jesus recognized the matter thus as His actual body and actual blood, so might all of His followers. No, we answer, most evidently Jesus meant, this bread represents My flesh, and this wine represents My blood.

Our Catholic brethren who hold otherwise evidently forget that at that time Jesus’ flesh was not yet sacrificed and His blood was not yet shed. Therefore the bread and the wine which He handled could not by any possibility have been more than mere representatives because He still had the original. How strange that we should have overlooked this so long!

In harmony with what we have already said respecting the “better sacrifices,” we note that St. Paul explains that the bread and the wine not only represent and symbolize the flesh and the blood of Jesus, but additionally the flesh and blood of all consecrated people who for centuries have been participating with their Redeemer in the sacrifice of earthly things, that they may be joint-heirs with Him in His glorious Kingdom which is to bless and restore the willing and obedient of mankind. St. Paul’s words are, “The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not the communion (common union) of the blood of Christ? The Loaf which we break, is it not the communion (common union) of the Body of Christ? For we, being many, are one Loaf and one Body, for we are all partakers of that one Loaf.” (1 Cor. 10:16, 17.) Well did Jesus say to His disciples that if they would sit with Him in His Throne, they must share with Him His cup of suffering and must be baptized with His baptism into death. Matt. 20:22, 23; Rom. 6:3-5.

DIVINE REWARDS ARE ETERNAL

Columbus, Ohio -Pastor Russell’s text here was, “These shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal.” Matt. 25:46. He said:—

We have been in all sorts of confusion respecting the future, because we have not studied the Bible’s testimony critically. For thirteen centuries the Bible was almost unknown. The bishops of the Church were erroneously supposed to be successors of the Apostles and to speak with the same Divine inspiration and authority. Printing was not yet invented and education was confined to a wealthy few. No wonder the inspired Message was lost in a mass of human tradition, much of which was devilish nonsense. We have been gradually progressing from darkness to light, though fettered by hobgoblin figures and each other's threats and perversions of the Divine Message. It is safe to say that the Bible is being more critically studied today by earnest Christians of all denominations than it ever was before. The result of this study, and the advantages of our time, are manifesting themselves. Divine harmonies are filling heads and hearts once distracted by clashing creeds. Take our...

TEXT AS AN ILLUSTRATION

Once blindly we read this Parable of the Sheep and Goats and applied it to rewards and punishments as a result of things done in the present Age. Now we see that its proper application belongs altogether to the next Age of Messiah's Kingdom. It distinctly states this. It is introduced thus: "When the Son of Man shall come in His glory, and all the holy angels with Him, then shall He sit upon the Throne of His glory; and before Him shall be gathered all nations, and He shall separate them one from another as the shepherd divideth the sheep from the goats."

The Church is not included in this parable at all. It relates, as we see, to the world—"all nations." Other Scriptures show us that when the nations shall thus undergo their trial for life or death everlasting the Church will be glorified. As the Bride of Christ she shall sit with Him in His Throne and be associated in His work of judging the world. Note how clearly St. Paul expresses this, saying, "Know ye not that the saints shall judge the world?" (1 Cor. 6:2.) Thus it is the world's Judgement Day that he elsewhere mentions, saying, "God hath appointed a Day (future a thousand-year Day the Day of Christ), in the which He will judge the world in righteousness by the Man whom He hath ordained." Acts 17:31.

A right understanding of the doctrine of Election helps us gradually to a proper view of the Divine Program. The Church is being selected out of the world according to faithfulness and character-development, in preparation for great service for the non-elect. The Messianic Kingdom with Christ and the Church in control as the Royal Priesthood, is appointed for the very purpose of blessing the non-elect world—"all nations." For a thousand years the work of bringing all to a knowledge of the Truth will progress. To this end Satan will be bound at the very beginning of the thousand years and the light of the knowledge of the glory of God will fill the whole earth as the waters cover the great deep.

With all thus brought to a clear comprehension of righteousness each will be on trial, and will either come into harmony with the Kingdom or remain an alien and lover of sin. All the latter are in the parable classed as goats wayward ones and will thus place themselves at the left hand of the King in His disfavor. On the contrary, all who learn the ways of the Lord and come into accord therewith, are symbolically styled “sheep” in the parable, and by their conduct will gradually take their places at the King’s right hand, or place of favor.

SHEEP—GOATS--FIRE

The Parable shows the conclusion of the world’s Judgment. All will then have taken their places, either as sheep or as goats either in the King’s favor or in His disfavor. The sheep class will then hear His “Well done,” “Come, ye blessed of My Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world” from the time the world was established. Matthew 25:21, 23, 34.

The world was made for mankind. Adam being its representative was the King of earth. He lost his dominion when he lost his relationship to his Creator and lost his right to eternal life by his disobedience. The sheep class will represent all of Adam’s race brought back to perfection by the processes of Restitution during Messiah’s reign. (Acts 3:19-21.) To them will come the dominion which Adam lost and which Jesus redeemed at Calvary and which He will give to the worthy ones at the conclusion of His thousand-year reign. Next, the fate of the goat class is stated not in literal language, but symbolically. Indeed, the Prophet and the Apostles declared of Jesus that “He opened His mouth in parables,” and that “without a parable spake He not unto the people.” In other words, everything that Jesus said to the people in general was figurative, in order that only those of right condition of heart might be able to understand Him.

The message of the great King to the goat class will be, “Depart from Me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire prepared for the Devil and his angels.” (Matt. 25:41.) We might as well insist that the parable applies to literal goats as to claim that this penalty is literal fire. All who have studied the subject will freely admit that fire throughout the Bible is used figuratively to represent destruction. Fire is not used as a symbol for Adamic death, the sentence upon all the race, because God from the beginning purposed the setting aside from that sentence through the redemptive work of Jesus; hence Adamic death is not destruction, but in the Bible is styled, symbolically, “falling asleep,” and resurrection is styled “awakening from sleep.”

But when picturing the Second Death, the Bible uses strong terms, representing destruction in the fullest and most absolute sense. Mark the words used: “Perish,” “Second Death,” “Everlasting Destruction.” We even overlooked the plain explanation which Jesus gave us when He said, “the lake of fire,” which is the Second Death.” (Rev. 20:14.) St. Peter, summing up the fate of the incorrigibly wicked, says that they shall be destroyed like natural brute beasts. (2 Pet. 2:12.) Only a bugaboo of eternal torment, hundreds of years old, could have so alarmed us that we failed to note these matters long ago.

Meanwhile, alas, while many of the learned have abandoned the doctrine of eternal torment, they have practically abandoned everything else in the Bible, because they supposed the Bible to teach this inconsistency. Let us not follow them into “Higher Criticism” infidelity and total rejection of the inspiration of God’s Word, but let us compare Scripture with Scripture and use our God-given reason within the boundaries of God’s Message. So doing we are seeing more and more the glorious perfection of our Father’s character and of His inspired Word.

REASONING BY CONTRAST

Some shallow thinkers have been thrown off the track of religious investigation, reasoning that if there is a heaven, there must of necessity be a hell of torment. But the contrast which the Bible establishes in respect to the sinner and the saint is life and death and not heaven and hell. As a matter of fact the Bible nowhere promises heaven to any except the Church of the First-Born, who are now being called out of the world for association with Messiah in His Kingdom. The world of mankind never lost heaven and is nowhere promised heaven.

Adam’s loss was an earthly Eden, a human perfection. Jesus declares that He “came to seek and to save that which was lost.” The work of His Kingdom for a thousand years will be the bringing of earth to a Paradise condition. And He will restore all the willing and obedient of mankind to all that was lost, bringing them back again to the image and likeness of God in the flesh. Adam possessed these qualities when he was declared by his Creator “very good,” and was given the dominion of earth.

When Adam was placed on trial in Eden he was endowed with perfection of life and organism as a man. God said not one word to him about heaven or hell, but did set before him life and death. If he would be obedient he should be privileged to maintain his life and all his perfections and blessings everlastingly. If he would rebel against his Creator’s laws and be disobedient thereto he should die be cut off from life. He was disobedient, and was expelled from Eden into the accursed, or unfit earth, when he died a slow death, battling with thorns and thistles. This has been the fate of his entire race death mental, moral and physical decay to completion.

“LIFE OR DEATH--BLESSING OR CURSING”

Addressing the people of old through the Prophet God declares, “I have set before you life and death, blessing and cursing choose life that ye may live.” (Deut. 30:19.) The hope before the Israelites was a resurrection a “better resurrection” to the faithful. (Heb. 11:35.) Not a word was said to them in all the four thousand years down to Jesus’ day respecting eternal torment, or any hope of life in any condition except in harmony with God.

When telling the object of Jesus’ coming into the world, and describing man’s redemption from the penalty of death, we read, “God so loved the world that He gave His Only Begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him might not perish, but have everlasting life.” (John 3:16.) What right had we or anybody to twist the word perish, which means destruction, to make it mean everlasting life in torture? Such perversions and wrestings of the Scriptures have brought great discredit upon our God and great confusion into the minds of His people. We should note with emphasis the contrast so forcefully stated in this most precious text—“not perish, but have everlasting life.” Certainly whoever gets the everlasting life will not perish; whoever does not get it will perish. How plain God’s Word!

Notice again the various terms used in respect to the Savior and His work. The word Savior signifies Life-Giver. We would have seen the beauty of this if we had not been befogged as respects the penalty, death. Whoever sees that “the wages of sin is death” must perforce see that the great need of the world is a Life Giver to rescue them from the death penalty by a resurrection. Again, our Lord represents Himself as the Great Physician who is able not only to rescue from the tomb, but to heal all diseases, all the imperfections which come to mankind as incidentals of the death penalty.

Hear again Jesus words, “He that hath the Son hath life; he that hath not the Son shall not see life, but the wrath of God (as expressed in the death penalty) abideth on him” to him it becomes the Second Death. This explains also the meaning of Jesus’ words, “Ye will not come unto Me that ye may have life.” And again, “I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly.” What can be plainer than that “The wages of sin is death but the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord Rom. 6:23.

“INTO EVERLASTING PUNISHMENT”

We are asked, Does not the word everlasting, as applied to the goat class, signify as long a period as the same word applied to the sheep class? We reply, Most assuredly so. The punishment of sin is to be everlasting, and the reward of righteousness is to be everlasting. There is no question on this point. The question is, What is the punishment for sin? The thoughtless at once will say, Fire, torment, smoke, blazes, devils with horns and tails and pitchforks, a la Dante’s Inferno.

But we ask for a Scriptural answer. What does the Bible say is the punishment for sin. Nothing like Dante’s Answer--is to be found in the Bible, however much we might imagine that it was printed in every page and that we have read it scores of times. The Bible is most explicit, it declares, "The wages of sin is death;" "All the wicked will God destroy;" "The soul that sinneth, it shall die;" "punished with everlasting destruction." These abundant and redundant Scriptural testimonies on the subject should settle the matter of future punishment to every reasonable mind especially when there is not a Scripture to the contrary, either in the Old or in the New Testament.

I do indeed remember certain of our Lord's parables which, taken literally, might mean the literal cutting off of a hand or foot, the literal plucking out of the eye, the biting worms possessed of immortality, and literal blazes unquenchable. These we have already discussed and may yet again refer to, but not now. We content ourselves with the generally accepted and reasonable proposition that parables are never to be accepted as teaching doctrines, but at very most as illustrating them.

The Bible contains not a single suggestion of eternal torture as a penalty for sin. It tells of no place beyond the bounds of time and space where Dante's poem will find its fulfillment. It does tell of a God of infinite Justice, Wisdom, Love and Power, whose decree is that eventually all the wicked shall be destroyed; that eventually there will not be one inharmonious note throughout the Universe to mar the glorious harmony and perfection; that every knee shall bow and every tongue confess to the glory of God; that there shall be no more dying, crying, sighing; that God's will shall be done on earth even as it is done in heaven; that eventually, "Every creature in heaven and in earth and under the earth shall be heard saying, "Praise, glory, dominion and might be unto Him that sitteth upon the Throne and unto the Lamb forever."

ANALYZING IT CAREFULLY

Let us look still more deeply into our text: Let us note this word punishment, in the Greek. It is kolasin. Its usage in the Greek classics signifies, to prune, to cut off. A secondary meaning of the word is, to restrain. Death is a most effectual restraint. The punishment which God has provided for sinners is that they shall be cut off from life, cut off from all the blessed privileges which God provided, not for them, not for rebels, but for sons in fellowship with Himself.

The punishment against Father Adam was cutting off from Eden and its blessings, from being the king of earth, from fellowship with His Creator, from being the son of God, from enjoying everlasting life. All this cutting off was included in his death sentence. Jesus came that Adam and his race might not everlastingly perish that they might be rescued from the power of the grave by a resurrection of the dead, that all might thus through Him come to a full opportunity for life everlasting. Nevertheless the Divine Law still stands. The wages of sin is death. Therefore, whoever shall receive the grace of God in vain, whoever shall sin willfully, intentionally, after full enlightenment, shall again be cut off this time to perish, because "Christ dieth no more" no more shall death have dominion over Him. The opportunity which His Kingdom shall grant for every creature, for every member of Adam's race, to return to Divine fellowship and everlasting life, will be so complete as to need no repetition. Those who die the Second Death will be without a remedy, will perish in everlasting destruction

THE NEW DAY ALREADY DAWNING

Pastor Russell arrived, the guest of the State Board. His address at the Fair Grounds Auditorium drew an immense audience. His topic was "Beyond the Grave." We report his evening address from the text, "At the name of Jesus every knee shall bow and every tongue confess to the glory of God." -- Phil. 2:10-11.

The speaker referred to the Six Great Days of a thousand years each, during which the world is experiencing a reign of sin and death, sighing and crying. Physicians, physical and moral, have been unable to effect a cure. God Himself alone is able to roll away the curse which He imposed and to give mankind instead His blessing.

In the past we have been so intent on following our own sectarian schemes and theories that we have neglected the proper study of the Bible. Indeed, not until our day has such a study been possible for the masses. Only now do they have the Word of God in their possession in convenient form in every family, and only now is education so general as to permit all to read, all to study, all to know the good things of the Divine promises.

The creeds of the "Dark Ages" did, indeed, din into our ears the message of the curse. Yes, they distorted it and made it a message of eternal torture, whereas the Scriptures declare that "the wages of sin is death" not eternal torment. In our darkness we mistranslated and misinterpreted God's Word to our own confusion, swallowing also some interpolations without proper scrutiny. No wonder we were nauseated by those creeds! No wonder the intelligent portion of humanity were in danger of all being driven into infidelity away from God and from His Book, which we misunderstood and misinterpreted!

A NEW DAY IS DAWNING

Bible students are arousing from their sleep and finding that they have long suffered from nocturnal hallucinations. The true message of God's Word is spreading, and with it goes increase of faith, together with joy, peace and godliness.

We have all noted the fact that ours is the most wonderful day of earth's history. At this great state fair our eyes open widely as we note the contrast between the blessings which surround us and those enjoyed by our fathers. Although we are viewing here the exhibits of but one state out of many, we are surely all amazed at what we see of progress, invention and labor-saving machinery, of educational arrangements, of improvement in the breeding of cattle, sheep, swine, horses, poultry, etc.

We are equally astonished at the progress made in the culture of fruit and vegetables. We say to ourselves, Surely the fruits and flowers and animal life of paradise could not have very greatly surpassed the prize winners of this exhibition! We cogitate further that with the progress of invention the necessity of arduous labor and sweat of face for the daily bread will soon be at an end and the necessary leisure and conveniences and comforts which will permit every man to be a nobleman will soon be available to all. What do these things mean? Why have they come suddenly upon us in on generation? year and give no indication of slacking, but rather of progressing to still greater wonders! What is the explanation of this?

The Bible alone gives the reply to this query. It explains to us the meaning of the reign of sin and death which we and our forefathers have shared. It tells us that our sorrows, aches and pains, weaknesses mental, moral and physical, are all the results of sin the sin of Father Adam entailed upon us by the laws of heredity for the Six Great Days of a thousand years each, already past.

Then to our astonishment the Bible opens the door of the future and bids us look abroad and see the better day which God promises. It explains that He has been giving us lessons respecting the exceeding sinfulness of sin, but that all the while He has sympathized with and loved His creatures. It tells us that as a beginning of the Divine intention to roll away the curse and to give instead Divine blessings, Jesus came into the world and died for Adam and his race, "the Just for the unjust," to cancel their judicial obligations the death penalty upon them and thus to give them an opportunity in God's due time to return to their former estate, all that Adam lost to the perfection which was his when he was in the image of God, to all that was his in his glorious estate Paradise.

WHEN WILL THE CURSE ROLL AWAY

Chronologically we are already in the Great Seventy Day or Thousand-Year-Sabbath we are already 38 years into the great Seventh Day. This explains the blessings which are ours and which are coming to us increasingly. This progress will continue throughout the great Thousand-Year Sabbath of Messiah's Kingdom. The Bible promises that it shall bring blessings to every creature not only the living, but the dead, "for all that are in their graves must hear the voice of the Son of God and come forth." (John 5:28-29.) All must be given a full opportunity to come into harmony with the Creator and to come to perfection and everlasting life. Only by personal, wilful, intelligent sin can anyone's blessings be turned into the second curse of God, the Second Death, from which there will be no redemption.

Incidentally let us note that the coming of those blessings is, in one sense, premature, in that they have come to us before the establishment of the Messianic Kingdom. Consequently, instead of the world's being happier because of these favors, it is more unhappy, more discontented than ever. Consequently, instead of the world's being happier because of these favors, it is more unhappy, more discontented than ever. The Scriptures show that the discontent will culminate in a short, sharp period of terrible anarchy, from which the world will be rescued by the establishment of Messiah's Kingdom.

The permission of the light and blessings of our day, in advance of Messiah's rule, the Creator intends shall teach humanity a great lesson respecting their own fallen condition and respecting their need of the very help which God is providing in Christ. None shall have the opportunity of erroneously supposing that God's blessings, coming to the unregenerate hearts, will make them thankful and happy. The new heart is necessary to real happiness.

We also incidentally see that if God had sent or permitted the light of our day with its blessings a thousand years sooner, then the discontent of humanity would have culminated in anarchy a thousand years sooner and before the time Divinity arranged for the establishment of Messiah and His Bride, the Church, in heavenly glory for the ruling, blessing and uplifting of humanity.

TRUTH DISCERNED AIDS FAITH

As we gradually come to realize that we are living in the dawning of the time for the long-promised blessing, this Sabbath Day of earth, when the Curse shall roll away, it gives us a fresh interest in all the affairs of the present life, as well as those features of the Divine plan which are yet future. The knowledge makes life worth living. Millions of people live a treadmill existence, unworthy of themselves and joyless, because they have not come into the family of God and not been taught to understand the deep things of His gracious purposes.

The first step is an acknowledgement of the Creator and a consecration of life to Him, and then an application of our hearts to know His will, that we may do it. One day of such living is worth more than a year of the aimless meandering common to the masses. All who have entered into this blessing should rejoice therein. They who have not should seek the Door, Christ, and be glad to walk the narrow way, following his footsteps into grace and peace divine.

STIFF-NECKED AND STIFF-KNEED

We may, indeed, rejoice in the lessening of the sweat of face coming to mankind in the dawning of this New Day. We may, indeed, rejoice in the more comfortable housing, feeding and clothing of our race. We may, indeed, praise the day which is ushering in these blessings and which, through irrigation canals and artesian wells, scientific study and teachers., books and newspapers, is making the wilderness to blossom as the rose and many blades of grass to grow where one alone grew previously, bringing increased fruitfulness. But still much is to be desired much that we cannot accomplish for ourselves. We need an outside influence, and outside power the very one which God's Word declares is about to take control Messiah's Kingdom.

Our blessings thus far are not drawing the masses nearer to God not making them more thankful, more holy, more reverential, more loving. On the contrary, we are becoming more strifeful, more self-willed, than any previous generation less inclined to believe that there is such a Being at all. At the present rate of growth of irreverence it would seem as though the time might soon come when no knee would bow and no tongue confess to God's glory.

"AS I LIVE, SAITH THE LORD"

But here we look to God to see what provision He has made for present conditions. And as we look, our hearts are cheered. We have the Divinely solemn declaration that the full end of the reign of sin and death is to come. And we have outlined in God's Word proofs that we are now living in the time when that new reign of righteousness shall be inaugurated. We have prayed for it with more or less of faith all our lives: "Thy Kingdom Come; Thy will be done on earth, even as it is done in heaven."

Permit not faith to let go her hold; the Word of God cannot fail. As He is bringing to us the temporal blessings promised in His Word and appropriate to this time the New Dispensation let us trust Him for every other feature of His promised blessing. He who has begun the good work is able to complete it. If He has promised, and sworn to this promise, that all the families of the earth shall be blessing in Abraham's seed, surely we may rely upon it. If we see at present only the spiritual seed of Abraham in full harmony with God through Christ, and they not glorifies, let us wait patiently for the Lord, knowing that He will fulfill His promises in due time.

The church, the elect, are indeed the spiritual seed of Abraham. This class, as the bride of Christ, must be completed and must be united to their Redeemer by the first resurrection change before they will be qualified to share with Him the great work of blessing Abraham's natural seed. Gal. 3:29.

The completion and glorification of the church will mark the time for the establishment of the kingdom. Then will begin the pouring out of the Divine blessing and the removal of the curse. Satan will be bound for a thousand years. The knowledge of God will gradually fill the whole earth. The natural seed of Abraham will be the first to receive the restitution blessings to return to the likeness of God in the flesh and to have returned to them Paradise conditions and Divine favor. The ancient saintly ones of the Jewish race, we are assured, shall be made princes in all the earth for the correction of their brethren, natural Israel, and for the instruction and assistance, also, of the people of every nation, kindred and tongue the living and the dead.

PARADISE RESTORED

Rapidly the knowledge of the glory of God will fill the whole earth. Corrections in righteousness will be meted out to all not doing their very best to come into harmony with the Divine law, Blessed rewards of increasing perfection of mind and body will gradually come to the willing and obedient in that day. The willful evildoers shall be cut off in the Second Death. Then as a result, before the thousand years of Messiah's Kingdom shall expire, every knee will bow to the glory of God.

Meantime also the blessings of Paradise will be coming to the earth as a whole. "God will make the place of His feet glorious." (Isa. 9:13; 66:1.) Jesus will see of the travail of His soul and be satisfied. (Isa. 53:10, 11.) All those who have suffered for righteousness' sake during the present time of the reign of sin and death will be more than compensated therefore in the blessings and joys of the New Dispensation. The knowledge of the glory of God shall fill the whole earth. The glorious Divine character will be made manifest, not only to angels, but to men. The infinitude of God's love, justice, wisdom and power may then be seen by all; whereas to-day, under the reign of sin and death, with minds beclouded by the error instilled by the Prince of Darkness, the opposite condition darkness covers the earth and gross darkness the heathen.

What a glorious consummation is before us! What lengths and breadths of human possibility in perfection we see with the eye of faith! Man was made in the image of his Creator, and the earth was provided to be his everlasting home. The curse that has rested upon the earth and its King has brought both to angels and to men valuable lessons, which perhaps could not have been learned under any other process of instruction.

The result will be glorious, as described by the Master Himself. There shall be no more sighing, no more curse there, nor sorrow, nor pain, nor any more dying; for all the things of sin and death will have passed away. He who sits upon the throne “will make all things new” (Rev. 21:4, 5).

The prophet Isaiah declares that Jehovah will do these things, and that every knee shall bow to Him and every tongue confess (Isa. 14:23). St. Paul applies this scripture and declares that it will be fulfilled through Jesus, and incidentally it will be fulfilled by the Church through Jesus. All things are of the Father and by the Son. The thought, then, is that the world in acknowledging Christ and the Church, and bowing to them, will be bowing to Jehovah, for the Logos, Jesus, the Redeemer, forever will be the Representative of the Father and His power; hence, all men should honor the Son even as they honor the Father also not honor Him as the Father, but as the Son, the Father’s direct Representative heir of all things (John 5:23; Heb. 1:2).

THE ELECT CHURCH ALREADY BOWS THE KNEE

The elect Church of the present time already bows to Jesus as the Representative of the Heavenly Father, and already enjoys a great blessing through this special relationship into which she has entered and which is to be completed in her resurrection change. Jesus as the great King of Glory, and His Bride class as the great Queen of Glory will be distinctly separate from the world share of an altogether different salvation. These, begotten of the Holy Spirit, are promised a participation in the Divine nature, which is far above that of angels, the Apostle assures us.

For the same reason that the Heavenly Father is invisible to men Christ and the Church will be invisible, though all-powerful. The blessings of human restitution that they will bring mankind will be conveyed through earthly channels, of whom Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and all the prophets and faithful ones of the past will be the leaders, or Princes, as God has declared (Psa. 14:16)

SOME FOREIGN MISSION FACTS

Ottawa, Ont., Nov. 10 Pastor Russell as usual had large audiences. We report one of his interesting discourses, on the live subject of Foreign Missions, which is stirring Christendom. His text was, "This Gospel of the Kingdom shall be preached in all come." (Matt. 24:14) He said:

A year ago the International Bible Students Association, perplexed by the conflicting reports, resolved to send a Committee of Seven to investigate and give a candid report on missionary prospects in foreign lands especially in South India, where it is making a special effort. I was one of that Committee, which otherwise was composed of four successful business men one doctor, and General Hall of the U. S. A. The Committee performed its duties conscientiously, and made its Report to one of the largest Christian gatherings ever held in New York City in the Hippodrome, March 31st. Its Report, published in pamphlet form, reached a very wide circulation amongst Christian people. I am authorized to offer the remainder free, one copy each, to all interested in Foreign Mission work. A postcard addressed to "I. B. S. A., Brooklyn, N. Y.," requesting a copy of the Missionary Report, will receive prompt attention as long as the supply holds out.

The Committee, in preparing this report felt sure that it would be discouraging to some loyal Christian people; and they therefore laid bare the facts in as kindly and Christian a manner as possible. Every one of them being deeply interested in the heathen, every one of them a sincere Christian, what else could they do?

Now, as the Committee feared, the truthfulness of their Report, which so many Christian people gratefully acknowledge, has identified a few persons. These evidently fear that we have shattered their idol and discredited their fairy tales respecting the immediate conversion of the world by human instrumentality and more millions of money. We sympathize with these enthusiasts, who seem to deceive themselves as well as others and who shut their eyes to facts, while hoping against hope to maintain exploded theories.

One of these, Mr. W. T. Ellis, alias the "Religious Rambler," attacks our report after the style of Don Quixote. Falsely he declares that we journeyed on the same vessel from San Francisco to Shanghai, giving the impression that we had not visited Japan at all. Then he declares that we merely raced through the country, did not visit all the mission stations, nor talk with all the missionaries; and he wants to know how we could know anything on the subject of our Report. Our Report tells the facts. The Committee of Seven scattered, and spent six days in Japan, or a total of 42 days of investigation. Our 23 days spent in India, similarly recorded, would be the equivalent of nearly six months' investigation by one person.

Our I. B. S. A. Committee were not commissioned to investigate missions, nor merely to ask missionaries to corroborate reports promulgated by missionary societies. We visited and interrogated the people, saw their conditions, attended meetings, etc. As for myself, this critic charges in one breath that I did not preach the sermons which appeared in the newspapers of the world; and in the next breath he declares that I spent all my time in preaching and therefore had not time for investigation. A discerning public read between the lines of such criticism what the Bible symbolically describes as "gnashing of teeth."

THE ONLY PRACTICAL METHOD

If millions of money were being spent to give instructions in French, if the teachers gave glowing reports of their success, and if a committee of business men were sent to investigate the success, would they ask the teachers and professors for a confirmation of the reports they had already made, or would they go amongst the pupils, and seek to ascertain to what extent they had a knowledge of French? There can be but one Answer--to this question. The principle applied to Foreign Missions, shows that our Committee took the only proper course for ascertaining the facts. They did obtain them, and I believe that every missionary and every other person who has been in foreign lands, within the last five years, will on reading our Report, concede that it is very truthful, at the same time extremely kindly and sympathetic.

Surely our Committee's method and Report will commend themselves to unprejudiced intelligent minds. Probably Brother Ellis' difficulty is fear that the hollowness of missionary claims is coming to the light.

NOT UNDERSTANDING THE SCRIPTURES

Sympathy for the heathen and doctrinal errors respecting the everlasting future led Christianity astray in its missionary work. In full harmony with other nonsense received from the Dark Ages, we believed God intent upon hurling all the heathen to everlasting torture, unless they should hear about the Savior in the present life and should accept Him and become saints. Frenzied by the misconception of the Divine Character and Plan, godly people hastened to give their lives and their money for the rescue of this heathen from the fate which they erroneously supposed an all-wise, all-just, all-loving and all-powerful God had foreordained for the Non-Elect.

Now our (former) darkness is departing. As we began to see the utter hopelessness of our claim that we could ever convert the world, we also see that we had misunderstood our Heavenly Father's Plan in respect to the heathen. We began to see that only the first part of the Divine Program has yet been put into operation; viz., the gathering of the Elect from all nations, to constitute the Bride of Christ, to be Joint-heir with Him in the Abrahamic promise, "All the families of the earth shall be blessed in they Seed." Now we see that the saintly few from every nation and from every denomination of Christendom will constitute the True Church, the True Bride of Christ, the Queen of Glory, the Seed of Abraham. Gal. 3:29

THIS GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM

Our hallucinations respecting eternal torment, which the Bible, rightly translated and properly understood, does not teach as every scholar in the world will agree has been the foundation of all our errors. Alas, that so many ministers and learned men should have cast away their Bible without ascertaining that it is in direct conflict with all our creeds! Missionary labor has appealed to the most devout of God's people, the most sympathetic. Even though they have misunderstood, we may be sure that God has granted a heart blessing to all lovers and supporters of missions. This is no reason, however, why should continue to be blind to the true situation. We must no longer delude ourselves with the thought that it is possible to convert the people even in our home lands, until God's time, under Messiah's Kingdom; for "Unto Him every knee shall bow." Rom. 14:11; Phil. 2:10

Think not that the Bible has no message for heathen lands! Think not that I am opposed to the heathen or to good works done for them! I am opposed merely to our misrepresentation of God and the Bible amongst the heathen, even as in the past we misrepresented both at home. I am deeply interested in the work which the Bible declares should be done amongst the heathen a work, however, which the missionaries have not been doing. "The Gospel of the Kingdom" was to be preached to all nations before the end of this Age would come, not for their conversion, but for a witness to them for the purpose of gathering out God's Elect to be Messiah's Joint-heirs in His work of universal blessing.

The Gospel of the Kingdom means the good news respecting the Kingdom. The I. B. S. A. has missionary workers in India, China and Japan, informing such of the peoples there as have the intelligence to comprehend the Message. Many of them are rejoicing in the good news that Messiah's Kingdom is about to be established; and that their friends, instead of being in either purgatory or eternal torture, are merely asleep in death, awaiting the blessing which Jesus promised, saying, "All that are in the graves shall hear the voice of the Son of Man and come forth" to a resurrection of judgment, trial, testing, to prove who will accept the gift of eternal life and who will reject it and suffer the penalty Second Death. Rom. 6:23; 2 Thess. 1:9

To a certain extent, wherever the Bible has gone, this Gospel of the Kingdom has gone. If the missionaries had only read the Bible to the people and had not attempted to teach the creeds of the Dark Ages, many more in heathen lands today would know about Messiah's Kingdom and appreciate the import of the prayer, "Thy Kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth, even as it is done in Heaven." But the missionaries apparently for the last few years have been telling those who would hear them at all, very little of anything religious. Their activities are chiefly with the children; and as our Report shows, the children get scarcely any religious information, and many of the denominational schools are being turned into civil or state schools, with the understanding that there shall be no religion taught with the money appropriated by the governments to the teachers for secular instruction.

MISSIONARY EFFORT ONLY PREPARES FOR MESSIAH'S KINGDOM

The admitted failure of missions as respects religion and as shown by the fact that there are twice as many heathen today as there were a century ago means the fall of the Postmillennial theory that the thousand years of Christ's reign will precede His Second Coming; that the Second Coming of Christ cannot take place until after the world has been converted and has had a joyous reign of righteousness for a thousand years. Following this erroneous theory, all effort has been concentrated upon converting the world, and thus bringing in the Millennium.

Our Catholic brethren claim that this thousand-year reign of Christ ended in 1799; that we are now in the "little season" mentioned in Rev. 20:3; and that the success of Protestantism during the last 112 years is the loosing of Satan. This is the explanation given in the footnotes of some editions of the Catholic Bible. It must be discouraging to our Catholic brethren to see how many blessings have come to the world under what they claim is Satan's regime. Surely some of them will contrast this with the superstition, bigotry, and the persecuting spirit which seemed to dominate both Protestants and Catholics during what they claim was the Millennium.

As for Protestants in general, the kindest statement of their position is that they are confused. They do not like to agree with Papacy that the Millennium is past; and yet they agree with Papacy in claiming that the great kingdoms of Europe are parts of Christ's Kingdom, notwithstanding the fact that they are impoverishing themselves to prepare for blowing each other off the face of the earth.

CHRIST'S KINGDOM, OTHERWISE THE MILLENNIUM, NOW DUE

Pre-millennialists hold that Christ's Second Advent precedes the establishment of His Kingdom; and that the Church during the Gospel Age is in preparation for the Kingdom honor, glory and service. Such believers in the teachings of the Bible alone are preaching that the coming of Messiah's Kingdom is the hope of the world, and that the call of the present is for the Elect, to share in the Kingdom. Hark to the Master's words, "Fear not, Little Flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom."

To these it is not astounding that the heathen are not all converted, either at home or abroad; for they realize that God's Word does not so teach. They find the Scriptures to tell that at the Second coming of Christ "the nations will be angry," and God's wrath will come upon them. "There shall be a time of trouble such as there never was since there was a nation." They find that during that time Messiah's Kingdom will be established, and that incidental to its establishment the First Resurrection will take place. They note Jesus' words, "Blessed and holy are all they that have part in the First Resurrection;... they shall be priests unto God and unto Christ and shall reign with Him a thousand years," "upon the earth." Rev. 20:6; 5:10

But Pre-millennialists very generally make two mistakes: (1) They think of His Kingdom as one in which Christ and the saints will hold earthly court. They fail to discern that the resurrection change raises both Christ and the Church fully out of the human nature into the Divine nature; and that God's Kingdom, spiritual and all powerful, will bless mankind through earthly agents already prepared. These will be the saints who died previous to Pentecost, and whose resurrection will be to human perfection to which all the Non-Elect world will be granted opportunity of attaining. (2) Pre-millennialists fail generally to discern that the Bible teaches that blessings will be granted the Non-Elect who have died during the past six thousand years, without having full opportunity of attaining to life everlasting. They have overlooked the Scriptural statement that all the dead of Adam's race sleep until the resurrection; that the Morning of the Great Day of Messiah's Kingdom will be the resurrection morning, not only for the Church, but for the sleeping billions of humanity. Our unscriptural conceptions of the dead, as alive in Paradise or in Purgatory or in a Hell of torture, came originally from the heathen; but we have used our greater enlightenment to intensify the joys of the heathen Paradise, and the sufferings of the heathen in the intermediate state. Hence it is that the most intelligent people in the world, by neglecting God's Message, the Bible, today believe things respecting God and His purposes more monstrous than any of the doctrines of demons which afflict the heathen world and drive them from God in fear.

APPLYING NOW OUR TEXT

We note that the Lord did not say that the Gospel would convert the world, but merely that it would be a witness to them. The word here translated "witness" is in the Greek marturion, from the root martyr. Thus seen, this text agrees with all of the Master's testimonies to His followers that in becoming His disciples they would be sacrificing earthly friendships, honor, etc.; and that they would bring upon themselves sufferings. To be His disciples, therefore, they must be martyrs, witnesses for the Truth and the light, in the midst of darkness, bigotry and superstition. The additional light and Truth which the followers of Jesus would possess and testify to would make of them martyrs; and only such would be accounted worthy to share with Him in the coming Kingdom. "Marvel not... if the world hate you, ye know that it hated Me before it hated you. If ye were of the world, the world would love its own"; but now "ye are not of the world," for "I have chosen you out of the world," "and ordained you." "Whosoever will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with Me in My Throne."

Our text contains the Gospel in a nutshell. It tells of a coming Kingdom. It tells that such a proclamation of that Kingdom during this Age, in advance. It tells of a proclamation of that Kingdom during this Age in advance. It tells that such a proclamation will be marturia a witnessing through suffering. It implies that the sufferings of the witnesses will demonstrate their loyalty to God and their worthiness to be Joint-heirs with Christ in that Kingdom for which they pray, "Thy Kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth, even as it is done in Heaven."

MINISTERIAL ORDINATION AND TITLES

Albany N. Y., Nov. 17 As always, Pastor Russell got the crowds today. We report his discourse on ministerial ordination and titles. Very evidently it was a reply to an attack recently made upon him by a Mr. W. T. Ellis, field editor of "The Continent," and alias the "Religious Rambler." Ellis charged Pastor Russell with being unordained and claimed that his ordination as pastor is fraudulent. The address showed that Pastor Russell fully understands the situation. He fully justified his position before his vast audience and showed up the “rambler” editor in the unenviable light either of being ignorant of the subjects discussed or of attempting to deceive the public. His text was, “Not of men, neither by man, but by Jesus Christ, and God the Father, who raised Him from the dead.” (Gal. 1:1) He said:—

Evidently the time has come for telling the common people what the Bible teaches respecting clergy and laity, titles of ministers, and ordination to teach and preach. We have previously pointed out that the doctrine of Apostolic Succession started in the second century, A. D. The bishops claimed that they had the same authority that Jesus had originally given exclusively to the Twelve Apostles. On the strength of this claim they appointed and ordained the inferior clergy.

This custom still prevails in what are known as Catholic Churches Roman, Anglican and Greek. The principle is wholly wrong, unscriptural. According to the Bible, the Church of Christ is not composed of two parts, clergy and laity. Jesus declared, “One is your Master, Christ; and all ye are brethren.” Therefore, “Call no man [Master or] Father.” St. Paul’s writings clearly show that in the early Church the ministers were the servants of the flock and not of a different, lordly caste. They, were of the people; and when chosen by the ecclesia by the stretching forth of the hand (Greek, cheirotoneo), they were recognized as of Divine appointment to the ministry through the Church.

The customs of centuries were so difficult to throw off that many of the reformers coveted the titles accorded the Catholic clergy. Nor did they care to tell the congregation that its word was supreme in the matter and that its ministers were merely by the grace of God its servants. Others of the reformers, realizing that Jesus and His disciples were not styled Reverend, Doctor, etc., declined to use these titles, preferring to be called pastors. This custom still prevails very generally in Protestant Germany and Scandinavian. My Christian friends and Bible Student associates well know my objection to the title “Reverend,” and hence address me as “Pastor” shepherd. Furthermore, I am the elected pastor of the Brooklyn Tabernacle congregation, and also of the London Tabernacle congregation. I fail to see any ground for criticism of my course in this respect; nor do I make any attack upon Christian brethren who accept other and unscriptural titles.

MUST PASTORS BE ORDAINED

There is no question that ordination is necessary to the proper holding of the office of Pastor. The whole question is: What constitutes an ordination to preach, teach and be a pastor amongst the people of God?

This question has received a wide variety of answers. The Roman, Anglican and Greek Churches, claiming Apostolic Succession, declare that the authorization to preach must come through their apostle-bishops. For this reason Protestant ministers have not been allowed to enter the pulpits of these denominations until the Episcopalians a year ago granted this concession. Their charge has been that Protestant ministers are unordained. Of course, if their proposition be correct, I am just as much unordained as all other Protestant ministers and no more so.

Only since the organization of the Evangelical Alliance (1846) have the different sects of Christendom acknowledged each other and each other's ordinations. Some of them recognize the word ordination in its true light, as meaning simply authorization; and others of less spiritual discernment see merely an outward ceremony. Each denomination does its own ordaining, and makes such ceremonies as it deems proper. If, therefore, the congregation of Christian believers in Brooklyn and the other congregation in London choose to ordain or appoint me their Pastor, it is wholly a matter of their own what ceremonies, if any, shall accompany that ordination or appointment. Who can dispute this? No Protestant denomination, surely; for their own ordinations are on this basis.

NOT OF MEN, NOR BY MAN

The entire subject of ordination of ministers of the Gospel seems to have fallen into confusion during the shufflings of the Dark Ages; and few seem to have gotten fully back to the Bible teachings on this subject as on other subjects. St. Paul is particular in emphasizing the fact that he did not receive his commission as preacher and Apostle of Christ from his brother Apostles. He distinctly declares himself an Apostle by Divine authorization. This is the general Scriptural principle underlying Divine Ordination to the ministry of Christ.

Before we proceed with an exposition of the Bible teaching or Divine Ordination, it will not be improper for us to note the practical operation of the different human organizations of men and by men merely.

Have all bishops of the Catholic Church, the Anglican Church, and the Greek Church been models of propriety, patterns to the flock? Have all given evidence of Divine authorization to teach and to preach the True Gospel? Their staunchest votaries must admit that many of them have been unworthy; and that from these very ones have proceeded doctrines and practices contrary to the Word of God. Of what value, then, are their ordinations by men and women? None whatever! On the contrary, the claim that they were Divinely authorized, and guided and inspired to be teachers of the Church, helped forward the errors which they promulgated. By reason of their claimed authority to teach, the people believed them too implicitly and did not sufficiently criticize their utterances and practices in the light of the Holy Scriptures.

How is it today in the various Protestant denominations of Christendom? Are all those who receive sectarian ordination, of men and by man, benefited thereby? Has such ordination kept them free from weaknesses of the flesh to which others were exposed? Has it not, on the other hand, exposed them to greater temptations, because they were pedestaled by the people and thereby injured with pride, haughtiness, etc.? Has such ordination in any denomination preserved its ministers from doctrinal errors more than the people, who did not have a similar ordination of men and by man?

The Answer--is found in the numbers who have left various denominations and ordinations to go into other denominations and ordinations. It is answered also in the fact that today the great majority of ordained ministers in all denominations entirely repudiate the Bible as a Divine Revelation. Their ordination did not protect them from our modern infidelity, called Higher Criticism. Under its influence they have ceased to be teachers of Bible Christianity, and have become merely essayists, leaders in political and social reform and in humanitarian work. Manifestly their ordination of men and by man did not hold them to the "faith once delivered to the saints." (Jude 3) It did not assist them to appreciate the Bible as being sufficient that the man of God might be thoroughly furnished unto every good word and work.

Let us consider the matter again, from another standpoint. Did any of these human ordinations of men and by man impart the Holy Spirit or give a mental illumination by which any of these humanly ordained ministers were qualified for preaching and teaching the Lord's people? The Answer--is, No! As deep spirituality and as deep insight into the teachings of the Scriptures are to be found outside of the pulpit as inside. The ordination, evidently, brought no enlightenment, no gift of the Holy Spirit the thing above all needed by those who would teach others and expound the Gospel.

HAS SERVED A BAD PURPOSE

The ordination of ministers, of men and by man, has been injurious in that it has perpetuated the misconception that the Church is divided into two-classes clergy and laity. The ordained have been injured by being puffed up to suppose themselves of a higher caste than their brethren. The unordained have been injured in that human ordination has helped to befog their minds in respect to the real ordination. Thus the "Laity" have been hindered from entering upon the very service which God intended should be their chief aim and object. In the early Church, the Elders were considered merely elder brothers of the Church not elders in years necessarily, but advanced ones in spiritual things, able to help the brethren properly to understand the Word of God and to attend to all the duties and privileges inculcated by the Gospel for their preparation for a share in Messiah's Kingdom. The ordination of reverend men to be rulers, and in some cases dictators of a Church, has taken away from the Elders the very services that the Apostle tells them were to be theirs. Instead, it appoints them the empty honor of passing the collection plate and the communion service. St. Paul, in his address to the Elders of the congregation at Ephesus, said, "Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the Flock, over which the Holy Spirit hath made you overseers [Greek, episkopos, literally, bishops], to feed the Church of God." (Acts 20:28) All of those Elders were under-shepherds, pastors, bishops, overseers. All of them had the commission to feed the Flock. All of them had opportunity for teaching, instructing the Church.

DIVINE ORDINATION TO PREACH

All will admit that if preachers are representatives of God, if they speak in His name, they must have some ordination from Him. Whoever has not Divine authority is usurping a holy office and placing himself in antagonism to God. As St. Paul suggests, "No man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron." (Heb. 5:4) The Apostle's argument is that the Aaronic priesthood was typical of the higher Priesthood of Jesus the Melchisedec Priesthood. Aaron and his sons belonged to the tribe specially called to the Divine service; and they were specially called out of that tribe to be the priests. The antitype is Jesus, the High Priest or Head Priest, over the under Priesthood all the true members of the Church of Christ. This St. Peter shows saying, not to the clerics, but to all the Church, "Ye are a Royal Priesthood, a holy nation, a peculiar people, that ye should show forth the praises of Him who hath called you out of darkness into His marvelous light." 1 Pet. 2:9

As Aaron received an anointing, qualifying him for the typical priesthood, so Jesus received an anointing of the Holy Spirit, qualifying Him to be the Head or Chief Priest over all the Church, the under-priesthood. The begetting of the Holy Spirit came upon Jesus at His baptism. That anointing gave Him authority to preach and teach in the Father's name. There His ministry began, as He tells us Himself in His sermon in the Nazareth synagogue, where He read the opening verses of Isa. 61:1, and declared that their fulfillment had been reached in His own person: "The Spirit of the Lord God is upon Me; because the Lord hath anointed Me to preach good tidings unto the meek." Luke 4:17-21

THE CHURCH ANOINTED TO PREACH

While Jesus was with His disciples, He sent them forth to preach in His name, not in the Father's name; for the Father had not yet acknowledged them by giving them the anointing of the Holy Spirit, as we read:—"The Holy Spirit was not yet given; because Jesus was not yet glorified." (John 7:39) But when Jesus having finished His ministry and sacrifice, was leaving His disciples He directed them not to preach, but to tarry at Jerusalem "until ye be endued with power from on High." Luke 24:49

The promised power from on High came at Pentecost. Immediately they began to preach and to teach; for they had received the Divine anointing constituted their ordination, their authority from the Father as members of the Body of Christ, the Royal Priesthood, to be His mouthpieces. This Divine anointing came not merely upon the twelve Apostles; but it has all through this Gospel Age constituted the blessed recognition of the Father and of the Son to all who receive it. In the typical picture Aaron had the holy anointing oil poured upon his head, and it ran down to the skirts of his garment. All the members of his body thus came under the anointing. So Jesus, the Head of the Church, received the anointing at the beginning of His ministry; and from Him at Pentecost by the Divine appointment it has flowed down over all the members of His Church. Every one receiving the anointing of the Holy Spirit is a qualified ambassador of God to speak in His name. As St. Peter says, every such one is a Royal Priest. St. John refers to this same anointing, saying, "Ye have an unction [anointing] from the Holy One, and ye all know it." 1 John 2:20

WHO LACK DIVINE ORDINATION

From what we have said it must be clear that no one is entitled to speak for the Almighty unless he have this Divine Ordination of the Holy Spirit. Human titles and human ordinations are wholly inadequate to make a real preacher and teacher in the Church of Christ. But the Spirit-begotten are fully authorized to use their every opportunity under all circumstances and conditions. There is no division of these spirit-begotten ones along the lines of clergy and laity. God never recognized such distinctions and divisions. His ambassadors bear the marks of indemnification that none others have. They are guided by the Holy Spirit, step by step into the deep things of God.

We submit that if a knowledge of the Truth be an indication of an enlightening influence of the Holy Spirit, then not every preacher in the world gives evidence of a Divine Ordination to teach and to speak as a Divine Ambassador. We must put away the foolishness of the Dark Ages, and the misconception that a few mumbled phrases were ever the Divine method of inducting the Royal Priesthood into their service as ministers of the Truth.

THE GOSPEL TO BE PEACHED

Let us note the Gospel which Jesus was anointed to preach, and which we as His members are anointed to preach—"Fear not! behold we bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be unto all people." "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because He hath anointed me to preach good tidings to the meek."

Poor humanity is already under the Curse; and the Gospel Message is "good tidings," that God has provided a way by which we may as a race come out from under the Curse. The Curse is death; and all of our aches and pains and sorrows and tears are directly or indirectly associated with that Curse. The Message of Jesus is good tidings, comfort to all broken-hearted ones, saying, "God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain" there. Rev. 21:4

December 15, 1912

IN MY FATHER'S HOUSE ARE MANY MANSIONS

Buffalo, N. Y., December 15 One of Pastor Russell's discourses here was from the text: "In My Father's house are many mansions. I go to prepare a place for you. I will come again to receive you to Myself." John 14:2, 3

For more than 4,000 years before the Savior came, no suggestion had been made respecting any home for humanity aside from this earth. The paradise of Eden, lost through disobedience, and God's image in humanity, almost obliterated by sin and death, God promised to restore. The right to life forfeited by Adam for himself and his race, God purposed to restore to all the willing and obedient. But all these blessings were to come through a Redeemer, the Mediator of the New Covenant, the Messiah.

Humanity knew not the possibilities of restitution, but Israel had the fact typified in their jubilee year of restitution, which occurred every 50 years. They also had typical sacrifices of a Passover lamb and Atonement Day offerings, representing some means by which God justly met for them the requirements of His own law. They realized not that this satisfaction of justice would be accomplished by the death of the very Redeemer who subsequently would be the Restorer.

Their minds naturally dwelt especially upon the great fact that Messiah was to be of a Jewish stock; and that Israel was to have the first chance of the choicest blessings in connection with Messiah's kingdom. As they waited for Messiah and His Kingdom they fondly anticipated their own national blessing. Seemingly, they over-looked the fact that the blessing would be an individual one, in harmony with the divine arrangement. They hoped for a resurrection from the dead "at the last day," in the great seventh thousand year day or epoch, and expected it to bring them from the sleep of death back to earthly conditions.

Some of them hoped for a "better resurrection" than the majority, because of their loyalty to God and their willingness to suffer for righteousness; but even these expected to be, not angels, but men. Was not Abraham himself promised that all the land which he could see should, eventually, be his? What could this mean except that he would be resurrected, as an earthly being, to enjoy this promised inheritance? St. Stephen points out that Abraham never received, in fulfillment of God's promise, as much of that land "as to set his foot upon." (Acts 7:5) Undoubtedly, therefore, the entire promise of the land is future. The possession will come to Abraham, and will be given to his seed, his posterity, after him.

HEAVENLY PROMISES – "LIKE UNTO ANGELS"

God's plan was allowed to rest as though forgotten until Jesus began to accomplish another and different work.

He began to call the bride class from amongst mankind--both Jew and Gentiles. Without explaining the full details, He invited all who desired to become associated in

3H572

His kingdom to take up their cross and follow Him. He promised them a joint-heirship with Himself in His kingdom. He told them that those who attain unto that age and the resurrection would neither marry nor be given in marriage—"like unto the angels" sexless. Luke 20:: 35, 36

No wonder the apostles were surprised! No wonder Nicodemus hesitated to indorse something so different from what he had anticipated in the way of blessing; and he came to Jesus by night to inquire further! No wonder the Master's words were perplexing when He said, "Ye must be born again!" No wonder Nicodemus, in perplexity, asked about this spirit birth and found the Answer--perplexing! Jesus did not attempt to give him a full explanation, but merely said that if he had difficulty in understanding earthly things, how could he expect to understand heavenly things.—(John 3:12)

RESTITUTION WAITS, BUT NOT ABANDONED

The whole matter is plain in the light of the New Testament teaching. Before the time for blessing the world, God is selecting therefrom a class to constitute the bride of Christ, the faithful little flock. The church is to be associated with him in blessing the human family with restitution. But the bride class itself is to experience a change of nature from human to spiritual. This was difficult for the Apostles to understand. Their minds would continually revert to an earthly kingdom, but the Master repeatedly drew their attention away from the earthly. He declared, "My Kingdom is not of this age," and told the disciples that He would come again in power and great glory, and all the holy angels with Him; and that He would sit upon the throne of His glory upon which they would sit with Him, if faithful even unto sacrificial death.

THE HEAVENLY MANSIONS

The Lord endeavored to draw the minds of His followers away from the earthly hopes of an earthly kingdom, which they held in common with all Jews. The Disciples knew of various orders of beings on the angelic plane cherubim, seraphim and ordinary angels. Jesus made no suggestion of changing His disciples into any of these angelic orders. Rather, He gave them to understand that they would constitute a new order of creatures. The questions then naturally arose: Is there a possibility of having a still different order of beings on the Heavenly plane? Did not the creation of man a little lower than angels imply a sufficient variety of creations on the angelic plane and higher?

These questions would seem proper enough, and to these our Lord's words make answer: "In My Father's House are many mansions" many apartments, many divisions. Yet all are holy, all are in full accord with Him and with each other. "I go to prepare a place for you." My followers a Heavenly mansion.

St. Peter, discussing the subject, tells us that in God's providence the Church is not only a New Creation, but a creation on a higher plane than any other of God's creation. St. Paul says that our Lord Jesus, having finished the work which the Father gave Him to do, "ascended on High," to the right hand of the Divine Majesty, to the place of chief favor. He declares that this position is "far above angels, principalities and powers and every name that is named." Eph. 1:21

St. John, speaking of the Church, declares that we may not yet fully appreciate what we shall be, but we may "know that, when He shall appear (our Redeemer), we shall be like Him; for we shall see Him as He is." (1 John 3:2) St. Peter, however, tells us the real height to which the Church, the Bride of Christ, is to be exalted. He says, God hath given "unto us exceeding great and precious promises, that by these (working in us His will) we might become partakers of the Divine nature." 2 Peter 1:4.

THE HEAVENLY THREE

Following the testimony of the Word of God, we recognize Jehovah God Himself, from everlasting to everlasting God, the Head, the King, the Father, of whom are all things. Next to the Father we recognize our Heavenly Lord, whose name at first was the Logos, the Word of God, His Messenger, who subsequently was made flesh, dwelt among us and redeemed us; and who, as a reward, has been exalted to the Divine nature and is set at the right hand of Jehovah God, to begin His work of blessing mankind. He waits also until the Church, His Bride, shall have been completed and shall have passed beyond the veil, to be forever with Him on the Divine plane, His Joint-heir.

These are the Heavenly three all of the Divine Nature, far above all other natures, all other planes of existence. Yet always we are to remember that the Head of the Church is Christ, and the Head of Christ is God, as St. Paul declares; for although all of God's blessings are by the Son, yet those blessings are all from the Father. 1 Cor. 8:6

In passing we should note how these Scriptures and all the Scriptures continually show that the Heavenly Father was not His own Son and that the Heavenly Son was not His own Father. In our text the Master declares, "In My Father's House are many mansions," Jesus, the chief Son, has special privileges and special power, and it is by the Father's arrangement that the Bride, the Lamb's Wife, is to be brought into the highest of Heavenly mansions, the Divine nature, to be Joint-heir with her Lord in His Messianic reign and in His everlasting glory thereafter.

I GO TO PREPARE A PLACE

But why did Jesus need to go to prepare a place? His disciples did not wish Him to go and leave them. Whenever he spoke along this line they were grieved and perplexed; and on one occasion St. Peter brought upon himself a special rebuke by saying, "Be it far from Thee Lord; these things shall not happen unto Thee." The disciples were like children. They had absolute confidence that they were to share with Messiah the glories of His Messianic Kingdom. They wondered why Jesus did not stay with them and attend to the establishment of the Kingdom at that time; or if it were necessary to wait for a season, why He might not tarry with them instead of going to the Father, as He had often told them that He would do.

Our Lord did not wish to give them any intimation respecting the length of the gospel age, lest the knowledge should discourage them. Therefore He merely said, "It is expedient for you that I go away"--necessary for you. Unless He should go away, the Holy Spirit would not come upon them. They would not receive that power from on high, of which He had told them, which they saw exemplified in Him, and which they experienced when He put His power upon them and sent them forth as His representatives to work miracles and to proclaim the Gospel of the Kingdom.

After Pentecost, when enlightened by the Holy Spirit, they could understand the necessity for Jesus' leaving and for His receiving the Holy Spirit begetting to the divine nature. They, like all mankind, were children of Adam and therefore inheritors of his death sentence. The Father could not, according to His own just laws, recognize sinners as sons. Before they could receive the divine begetting of the Holy Spirit they must first be justified in the Divine sight.

It was to justify the household of faith that Jesus ascended on high, "there to appear in the presence of God for us." He imputed to us before the Father the merit of His own sacrifice, and proposed to adopt us as His members. Then divine justice accepted the Advocate's proposal, and that meant the acceptance of our proffered sacrifices, as the members of Jesus.

Ten days after our Lord left His Apostles the Pentecostal blessing came upon them. St. Peter explains that it was the Heavenly Father's recognition of His acceptance of the followers of Jesus who were entering the covenant relationship through Him by the covenant of self-sacrifice. The transaction involved all subsequent members of the household of faith to the end of this age. As a result, the Holy Spirit came upon the consecrated. They were to be made children of God; and "if children, then heirs, heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ, our Lord, if so be that we suffer with Him, that we may be also glorified together." Rom. 8:17

GROWTH IN GRACE

Mistakenly, in the past, many of us have supposed justification to be the goal of the Christian merely the forgiveness of sins. Now we see that this was a great mistake. Now we see that justification by faith is only a stepping stone to sanctification the begetting of the Holy Spirit as new creatures in Christ. Moreover, we see that even our sanctification by the begetting of the Holy Spirit as new creatures in Christ. Moreover, we see that even our sanctification by the begetting of the Holy Spirit is not sufficient, nor our goal.

The Spirit-begotten ones must grow in grace, in knowledge, in all the fruits and graces of the Holy Spirit. They must be tested and proved as to their loyalty and faithfulness. Fiery trials testing, tribulations, must be allowed to come against them to prove the depth and sincerity of their love for God. Graciously, their testings are not along the lines of the flesh, which is acknowledged to be imperfect, weak, and which is acceptable as a sacrifice only through the merit of Jesus. Their testings and acceptance are according to their mind, their will, as New Creatures in Christ.

I WILL COME AGAIN

The Master would be absent during the period of the selection of the Bride class in Heaven itself. Yet by His Spirit or Power, the Holy Spirit, which is also the Spirit or Power of the Father. He would have full knowledge of all the affairs of His people and would providentially make “all things work together for good to them that love Him.” Suffer they must; endure trials and testings they must in order to prove their loyalty even unto death; but His grace would be sufficient for them, and His strength would be made perfect in their weaknesses; and He would never leave them, in the sense of abandoning them. So long as they would abide in Him by faith and by loyalty of heart-intention, He would overrule all things for their good. After the selection of the full number of the Bride class, He would come again to receive them unto Himself. He would come relatively in the same sense in which He went away, in the sense in which He has not been present throughout the Age. He would come in the sense in which He has not been present throughout the Age. He would come in the same sense of taking charge of the affairs of the world. He will take to Himself His great Power and begin His reign. His first kingly office will be in respect to His Church. He will call His own servants and reckon with them first. He will reward the faithful by allowing the unfaithful to pass into tribulation with the world.

As Satan has for a long time been “the prince of the power of the air,” “the prince of this world,” so Messiah, after binding Satan for a thousand years, will assume His rightful title as the King of this world, the King of Glory. His Power will also be the “Power of the Air,” or a spirit power; but, unlike that of Satan. It will be a Holy Spirit power. His saints will be called away with Him, to share His Throne and Empire, “the Power of the Air,” His Spiritual Kingdom.

Thus the bride of Christ will be completed, when the foreordained number of the elect shall have been found and proved worthy by trials and testings and shall have gone beyond the veil. Then the glorious kingdom of Messiah will begin its work for mankind, restoring and blessing very much as Israel had understood and as all the holy prophets had explained. Describing the coming blessings, which will begin with natural Israel and extend to all people. St. Peter says: “Times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord; and He shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you: whom the heavens must retain until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began.” Acts 3:19-21

I exhort you, brethren, in the words of the apostle Paul, “Let us fear lest a promise being left us of entering into His rest, any of us should seem to come short.”—(Heb. 4:1) If we have been begotten by the Holy Spirit, let us walk in harmony therewith.

Let us endure faithfully the necessary trials and discipline that we may be perfect and entire, lacking nothing. "For if ye do these things ye shall never fall: for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ." 2 Pet. 1:10-11

PASTOR RUSSELL OF BROOKLYN TABERNACLE ANSWERS CHARGE OF WARRENSBURG MINISTERS

The International Bible Students' Association has been in existence for some thirty years, is chartered in both England and America, and is composed of Bible students all over the world, and whether you stepped into a Bible class in San Francisco, Portland, Brooklyn, New York, Toronto, Canada, Nova Scotia, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, or wherever you find them they would be of one mind and spirit because they are drawing their inspiration from the word of God, yet the Ministerial association of Warrensburg, Mo., charges the International Bible Students' Association with not being an accredited Christian association. Pastor Russell takes up and answers the following objections made by Professor Morehead, and cited by the ministers of Warrensburg, in a lecture before a convention of students in that city recently:

We will now consider these propositions which Mr. Morehead thinks are false doctrines as taught in Millennial Dawn:

First So-called false doctrines of Millennial Dawn.

"Christ before His advent was not divine."

Well, now, let me say first of all that the object of the professor stating this was not to make known such truths because if he wished to make them known he would have said, "Get the books and find out." On the contrary, his object was simply to prejudice the people so they would not get the books. That is an old trick. So the statement is put in such a form as to make it questionable.

WHAT THE SCRIPTURES SAY

But now, what do the Scriptures say? It is not what Professor Morehead says, for we are not ready to take him instead of God, or the Lord Jesus, or the apostles. What say the Scriptures? If I was to take up this one subject alone, of the pre-existence of our Lord Jesus Christ it would take more than an hour. The other questions would be here still unanswered. So I must divide up between these and give a little on each subject, but remember that all of these are treated in the six volumes of Millennial Dawn or studies in the Scriptures, and are so treated that Professor Morehead cannot Answer--them because they are thoroughly scriptural, and he does not want the people to read, because they are scriptural, and they would be converted if they did read.

What does St. Paul say? You know Professor Morehead's theory and the one we had something that we never understood, and something that they never understood the doctrine of the trinity. We had two ways of stating it; one says, it is three Gods in one person, God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost. They must say one person because the Bible says there is one living and true God, therefore they must get the one in somewhere. The others had to make that fit so they turned it over, and the more they think of it that three times one is three they say that does not sound right. Three is one God in three persons. Now tell us what you do mean, and if they are honest they will say we don't know what they mean. I used to be with them and I knew that I did not know, and that they did not know.

Prof. Morehead would not think of discussing the proposition with me, he would have no foundation on which to set up his theory.

NOTHING ABOUT TRINITY

The scriptures say that there is one God (not three Gods); that was the great point God made in telling the Israelites all through the Old Testament, "Hear O Israel, the Lord thy God is one Jehovah" that is the way it reads. Did he say the Lord thy God is three? No. Well, how about the New Testament, does it contradict that? No, indeed. The Apostle Paul says to us (not to trinitarians nor to Brother Morehead but to all Christians who take the Bible,) "To us there is one living and true God, the Father" that is to us. Then what more? "And there is one Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." That is but two. One and one equals two one God the Father, and one Lord Jesus Christ. Then he proceeds to say, "One God, the Father of whom are all things, and one Lord Jesus Christ by whom are all things, and we by Him." That is the Bible. Is there any statement of the trinity in the Bible? Not a word; it does not occur in the Bible from Genesis to Revelation. Not a word about it.

Brother Russell, you must be mistaken we have several trinity churches--you may have one in Warrensburg.

But there is nothing like it in the Bible. Did Jesus say He was His own Father? Did He say He was His own Son? How could He be His own Father and His own Son, both at the same time and in the same person? It is absurd. It is strange that we did not use any of our brain power in the past. We did not study our Bible at all. There was some excuse for some people in the past who had to work fourteen to eighteen hours a day for their bread, but there is no excuse now. In the past they had no Bibles except those written upon parchment which cost a fortune; now you can get a good complete Bible for 23 cents. There was an excuse in the days of Abraham Lincoln, for then a person could not read by Mr. Rockefeller's oil, nor by gas light or electricity, but only by tallow candles and pine knots. There was some excuse then, but none now. So, when we come to see what the Bible says, it tells us not a word about three Gods being one God nor one God being three. It does tell us that there is one God and one Lord Jesus. It also tells us that there is one Holy Spirit, the spirit of the Father and of the Son, and of all who are in harmony with the Lord. It is called by different names: "The Spirit of God," "the Spirit of Christ," "the Spirit of Holiness," "the Spirit of Truth," "the Spirit of Sound Mind," "the Spirit of Liberty," "the Spirit of the Father," "the Holy Spirit of Promise," the Spirit of Meekness," "the Spirit of Understanding," "the Spirit of Wisdom," "the Spirit of Glory," "the Spirit of Counsel," "the Spirit of Faith," "the Spirit of Adoption," "the Spirit of Prophecy."

THE SAME HOLY SPIRIT

These various titles repeated many times and used interchangeably, give us the full proper assurance that they all relate to the same Holy Spirit indeed frequently the word "Holy" is added in, combined, as for instance, "The Holy Spirit of God," "the Holy Spirit of Promise," etc. We must seek an understanding of the subject which will reject none of these appellations, but harmonize them all. It is impossible to harmonize these various statements with the ordinary idea of God; but it is entirely consistent with every one of them to understand these various expressions as descriptive of the spirit, the disposition and power of God, our Father; and also the spirit, disposition and power of our Lord Jesus Christ, because He is at one with the Father; and also to a certain extent it is the spirit or disposition of all who are truly the Lord's angels or men in proportion as they have come into oneness, or harmony with Him. All of these names are proper names, and we are exhorted to be filled with the spirit, not filled with a certain person, which is a mistaken idea.

Now what does the Bible state about our Lord Jesus Christ? What was He before He came into the world? Unless Warrensburg and Pertle Springs are different from the majority of cities in this country and Europe, in all probability at least one-third of the ministers do not believe that Jesus had any pre-existence at all. I said one-third, but I really believe that two-thirds do not believe that Jesus had any pre-existence. They believe that He began when He was born the babe at Bethlehem, and the majority tell us that they believe He was born a sinner the same as others. I do not say that is true here in Warrensburg, but two-thirds of our ministers are higher critics and do not believe in Jesus and do not believe that He ever was divine. Yet, in this day when two-thirds do not believe that Jesus was divine, I am pointed out as a heretic and these two-thirds who do not believe in God's word are the gentlemen of the hour.

Let me quote from the first chapter of John's gospel. I will give the exact translation. It should read this way, "In the beginning was the Logos." Let me explain that this is the picture God gives here through John. In the beginning was the Logos, the name of Jesus before He became flesh. We do not know how far back. He was the beginning of God's creation.

THE BIBLE ON JESUS

Do you mean to say that God created Him? Yes, I am only quoting the Bible. It says He was the beginning of the creation of God, the first-born: He is the Alpha and Omega, the first and last. God made just one being and never made any more, because all subsequent creations were operated through divine power, working through Jesus in his pre-human condition as the Logos. "The Logos was with the God and the Logos was a god." Mark the difference between a god and the God. A god means a mighty one, any person. The God means the mighty one Jehovah. The mighty one would be higher than a mighty one.

All through the Old Testament the meaning of the word Elohim is the "Almighty One." Logos means mighty not almighty. The angels are mighty ones, because they have great power. On one occasion the seventy elders of Moses are spoken of as Elohims mighty ones, to be the special ones in the nation of Israel, but anything these mighty ones could not judge they were to bring to Moses.

Now coming back to John's statement, The Logos was with the God, and the Logos was a god, and the Logos was in the beginning with the God. All things were made by Him and without Him was not anything made that was made."

There you have the story from the Bible standpoint: it tells us that the Lord Jesus did not begin His existence as the babe of Bethlehem, and evidently He knew that all of the world and all things that were made were made by Him, and that He Himself was the beginning of Jehovah's creation, and that Jehovah acted through Him that in all things He might have the pre-eminence over all things in the whole universe. That is the Bible statement, my dear friends. We stand by the Bible and it is right. No other proposition is reasonable.

FATHER AND SON ARE ONE

Ask Jesus whether He was the Father or not: Jesus said, "I and My Father are one."

Brother Russell, I thought you said They were not? No my brother, you and I are one. Read that prayer of our Lord's in the 17th chapter of John: "I pray for these that they may all be one even as you and I are one." We are to be one in the same sense. Are we one in person? No. Neither are the Father and the Son. You see the point, my dear friends it. Is very clear when you take the Bible for it.

Ask Jesus again: "I came not to do my own will, but the will of the Father which sent me." Again: "Of Mine Own-self I can do nothing." There was no disloyalty on the part of Jesus. He never said He was the Father. When He came in His dying hour He cried, "My God, My God, why hast Thou forsaken Me?" Was He telling a falsehood, was he the Father Himself, and merely pretending that He was dying? That is the theory of the trinitarian when it is boiled down that He was the Father, and could not die because the world could not do without a God for three days, therefore when Jesus died on the cross it was merely a pretense He slipped out of the body and said, let the people think I am dying. They say that He could not die, but merely that he let that old body die that is the theory. But what does the Bible say? Does it say that the body was to die for our sins? No the Bible says that his soul was to die, for it is our soul that was to die for sin, and in order to be our Redeemer, His soul must die. So we read: "He poured out His soul. He made His soul an offering for sin." We will see the fruitage of it by and by. But His soul did travail, and it did die. And it was His soul that was raised up from the dead. Mark you what Saint Peter said. Go to the Bible, dear friends, don't go to the creeds. Saint Peter says in the second chapter of Acts, when telling the people about the resurrection of Jesus. "This is that which was spoken of the by Prophet David, saying, thou will not leave my soul in hell—" hades." Saint Peter then went on to say that David was a prophet and that so far as David was concerned his soul did stay there, and his sepulchre is with us until this day, but he being a prophet spoke of Christ's soul that it was not left in hades, that God raised Him from the dead. So you see it was the soul of Jesus that died, and which God raised from the dead. Take the Bible and we will not get mixed up.

NOT DIVINE AT BIRTH

So, then we do agree that Jesus was not divine before He came into the world for if He had been He could not have died because of the peculiar character of the divine nature, which cannot die for it is immortal. If Jesus had been divine He could not have died. Thank God, for He must die for our sins; that was the price.

How was He raised from the dead? The Bible tells us that God raised Him from the dead by His own power but not to be a human being again. He was raised to be a spirit being higher than He was before. God made man a little lower than the angels, which means that angels are higher than men, and if Jesus was raised from the dead a man, He was raised a little lower than the angels, and that would not be a suitable reward. That is what our friends believe, however; that is what our Methodist friends believe, that He has that very body in Heaven. Our Methodist friends have it most particularly stated there; they say, "Christ did surely rise again from the dead, and took again His body, with all things appertaining to the perfections of man's nature, wherewith He ascended into Heaven, and there sitteth until He return to judge all men at the last day." (Article 3 of the Methodist Articles of Religion.) That is very funny; it sounds as though the body was a sort of luggage, or trunk, and that all things appertaining thereto were the straps, etc. I think if our Methodist friends try that over again they can improve on it.

The thought of the Bible is that God allowed His Son to become a man for the very purpose of redeeming man.

HE DWELT AMONG MEN

He did not get into a human body and masquerade around. No, "He who was rich for our sakes became poor." He did not deceive the people by getting into a body. The Bible says; "He was made flesh and dwelt among men."

Now then Jesus the man was there for the very purpose of rescuing the world, and the Bible says: "A body hast thou prepared for me," for the very purpose of suffering death. And when He had died, He had made the use of that body which God intended and had no further use for that human nature, as God had promised that He would highly exalt Him. Would not that be reasonable? Do you suppose if Jesus was higher than the angels in the Heavenly Father's estimation and love, and it pleased the Heavenly Father for Him to leave the heavenly glory on a spiritual plane and become poor in order to carry out the Heavenly Father's will, that the Father would condemn Him to stay in that condition through all eternity? Indeed not. The Bible tells us that nothing of that kind occurred. It tells us that Jesus took the human nature and that when God raised Him from the dead God raised Him a spiritual being. He was put to death in the flesh and quickened or made alive in the spirit.

Second, so-called false doctrine of Millennial Dawn.

"When He was in the world He was not divine."

No, my friends, when in the world He was a human being. The Bible is reasonable whether Brother Morehead is or not.

ATONEMENT IS HUMAN

Third, so-called false doctrine of Millennial Dawn.

"His atonement was exclusively human a mere man's."

Yes, it was, because an angel could not die for a man, nor a bullock be worthy a man, but only for man. No one could be a savior unless he was a man, a perfect man, as we read in 1 Tim. 2:5-6: "There is one mediator between God and man, the man Christ Jesus, who gave Himself a ransom for all." That is the way Saint Paul states it: "The man Christ Jesus." But now when Prof. Morehead puts it "mere man," he is intending to try to cause a misrepresentation. What does it mean to your mind? The thought is, "just like other men." That is not true and if Prof. Morehead reads the books, he knows that it is not true that we claim Jesus was a mere man, imperfect. We show from the Bible, "For such an high priest became us, who is holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners, and made higher than the Heavens." (Heb. 7:26) He was not an imperfect savior but the man anointed of God, the man Christ Jesus, the perfect one.

Fourth, so-called false doctrine of Millennial Dawn.

"Since His Resurrection He is divine only no longer human at all."

Certainly He is divine only. How could He be both human and divine? People write and talk as though they did not have any thinking apparatus at all. He must be either one thing or the other. You cannot be a cat and a dog both. You could not be a river and an ocean at the same time, neither a man and a being of the divine nature at the same time.

BODY NOT RAISED

Fifth, so-called false doctrine of Millennial Dawn.

"His body was not raised from the dead."

No, we answer, there is a great mistake in nearly all of our creeds. You will read in the so-called Apostles' creed, which was not written by the apostle, which all scholars know, but the laity do not. It declares, "I believe in the resurrection of the body." There is nothing about the resurrection of the body in the Bible; it says the body shall return to the dust, as it was, and that God will give it the soul a body, to each kind its own kind of body those in the human family a human body, but those of the church will get a spiritual body; they will have a change of nature, for they must all be begotten of the spirit and will be spirit beings, and have spirit bodies like unto Christ's glorious body. We quote Peter's statement that God raised His soul from sheol, not his body, but raised his soul on a higher plane, on the divine plane, instead of the human plane. The same personality which was the Logos, and became flesh, and was a human soul, is now resurrected and glorified and is a divine soul. The word soul is also used in the Bible in connection with the Heavenly Father.

Sixth, Seventh and eight so-called false doctrine of Millennial Dawn.

“His second advent took place in 1874.”

3H577

“Saints were raised up in 1878.”

“Christ and the saints are now on earth, and have been for thirty-four and thirty-eight years, respectively.”

There are some things of this kind, my dear friends, that would take more time to explain than is at our disposal, and in the time allotted to me. I will not be able to give a satisfactory reply as I would like to give.

TWO STAGES IN COMING

To our understanding, however, the second coming of Christ will have two stages, and in the scriptures these stages are called the “parousia,” and the “epiphania.” Now the difference between these two words is not always apparent in the common English version, because both are rendered by the word “coming,” but all scholars should know that in the Greek there is this distinction between these two words. The word “epiphania” signifies the shining forth, the manifestation, and when it is used it refers to the way Christ shall be manifested at His second advent. “He shall be revealed in flaming fire.” That will be a revealing in flaming fire, not literal, but symbolical, but fire which will manifest His advent in a time of trouble, such a time of trouble as never before. This flaming fire of trouble in the day of the Lord will be the outward sign by which the world will know that Messiah has accepted His throne, that He has taken His power, and that His kingdom is about to be set up, and then, “Justice will be laid to the line, and righteousness to the plummet.” All errors will be swept away and every imperfect thing that can be shaken will be shaken, and only the unshakable things will remain, as Saint Paul says in the 12th chapter of Hebrews.

That epiphania, dear friends, has not yet taken place. But, do we not see the labor trouble, do we not see the army trouble, etc., in Germany, in Great Britain, here and elsewhere? Everything is published abroad and nearly everybody who knows anything about society today knows that the world is sitting close to the crater of a great volcano. We all know it whether we are Methodists, Presbyterians, or nobody.

THE DAY OF WRATH

Now, that time of trouble we believe will be in connection with the epiphania, at the time of the judgment of the world, or nations or systems. There is more or less injustice and iniquity in all our arrangements of society, political, financial, or ecclesiastical, and more or less that is right, and more or less that is wrong. When the time of trouble comes, the people will recognize it, and then the Scriptures say that they will be calling upon the rocks and mountains to fall upon them. That is not the real thought not crush them, as if a mountain fell upon them, they would not know much about it, but the thought is, cover us, protect us, because of this great day of wrath. These rocks of society are the Free Mason rocks, the Odd Fellow rocks, this insurance society and that insurance society, and the people want to get into these rocks to protect them in this time of trouble, and they want to be identified with the strong governments, such as the United States, for they want to be protected. If they go to Europe they want to say that they have their passports from United States or from Great Britain, etc. So they will say, those great mountains will be my protection. That is the way these things are used in the Bible. Here rock represents stone fortress. When the trouble breaks out they will begin to go into these things so that they may be shielded and protected, but the Scriptures say they will not be able, for it will be at a time of trouble that nothing will be able to deliver from.

But now about this word parousia. "It signifies presence" that is not manifest, not seen. Well, will Christ be present in such a manner, unseen and unknown. Yes, my dear brother, the Bible tells as very plainly that He will be present but not visible to anyone, and not exercising any power that the world can see, but he will be present and doing a work in His church, amongst His people.

CHURCH MATTERS NOT

In that sense He has been present for the last thirty-seven years. This statement as to the period of time is correct enough, but it is put in a form calculated to deceive people, because of the bluntness in the way it is stated. Do you remember what Jesus said He would do when He would come again? I will remind you. One of the things is that He will receive us, His faithful people, whether in the Presbyterian church, the Methodist, Episcopal, or Roman Catholic, or outside all of these churches whoever they are He will gather all of the elect, the saints, to Himself.

Then another thing will be that He will take His great power and rule the world with a rod of iron. That will be a His second coming. Before that takes place He does something else. To illustrate this our Lord gave, several parables. In one of these parables, of the wheat and the tares, He taught that He was sowing the good seed, and that later when men the apostles slept Satan came and sowed the seeds of error tares. The result of sowing the tare doctrines was a mixture of children of God and of the devil those who believed in the message of God and were begotten of the Holy Spirit and others who were deceived. He said let both grow together until the end of the world. That word "world" does not mean the earth, but in the Greek it means "age," the end of the age; for this earth is never to pass away. "God formed it not in vain, but He formed it to be inhabited." The whole earth, my dear friends, is eventually to be made like Paradise from pole to pole, from shore to shore, and the whole world will be God's footstool, and, "He will make the place of His feet glorious." He has not done this yet, but Messiah's Kingdom will do it. For a thousand years Christ and His church will reign for the blessing of mankind and the purifying of the earth, until it comes to a Paraisaic condition.

FAR COUNTRY MEANS HEAVEN

Take another parable. He gave this parable because many thought He was about to set up His kingdom. He said, "A certain young nobleman went into a far country to receive a kingdom and return." He here illustrates that while He was to be king of the world, He will not take the kingdom at His first advent, but go into a far country, heaven, there to be invested with authority, and then in due time come again. He said when this young nobleman returns, he will call his servants (not the world), to whom he gave talents, in one parable the pound, and in another parable the talent, saying, trade with these things, and make me as much out of them as you can. At His return He does not deal with the people in general, but calls His own servants, the church, and reckons with them, before He does anything with the world at all. This is done in the harvest time, during the parousia, before the open manifestation of the establishment of His kingdom. This has been going on for thirty-seven years, since 1874.

Ninth, so-called false doctrine of Millennial Dawn.

"The professing Christian church was rejected of God in 1878."

My dear friends, there is a statement in the Scriptures that at a certain time this will be true. Whether true now or not, the time is coming when the voice of the Bridegroom and of the bride shall be heard no more in her, in Babylon. That time will come, whether now or at a future time and we believe that those who are in harmony with God will not be in Babylon any longer. As their eyes open, we believe they will see that they are misrepresenting God while they are there, and if they do realize this they will know that the only terms on which they can remain will be that they should not tell God's word.

Tenth, so-called false doctrine of Millennial Dawn.

"The final consummation and end will take place in 1914."

We are expecting that in October, 1914, that a great change will be due. Now, how quickly will it come? Whether on the stroke of the clock or not we do not know. We believe that it will land upon humanity by that time. Perhaps some of it will come before that, but we believe it will be stayed off until that time. Now, dear friends, what if it does not? We are just as well off as the rest. That is what the Bible states. If it does not state that to you, we have no quarrel. And if it does not come we will not try to bring it about. But on contrary, we will try to practice peace and holiness withal. We are children of peace and peacemakers, not strife breeders. But we believe the Bible teaches October, 1914, as the time. If that is incorrect, for a year or five, or one hundred years, no matter, it is coming some time, whether we have it right or not.

Eleventh, so-called false doctrine of Millennial Dawn."

"Silence as to the person and work of the Holy Spirit."

Not at all; if the brother will read he will find three or four chapters in the Millennial Dawn or Studies in the Scriptures bearing on it.

Twelfth, so-called false doctrine of Millennial Dawn.

"Teaches that Christ did not mean what He said regarding the destiny of the wicked."

This brother says I do not believe and teach what Christ said. What does the Bible say? Well the Bible says, "All the wicked God will destroy." Do I believe it? Yes. Does Brother Morehead believe it? No. He believes that all the wicked will God preserve in fire, with devils having tails, pitchforks, etc. The way the preachers go on to tell about it is laughable. One of them went on to tell about it as though he had been in hell and knew all about it. He went on to say that after a person had been in hell for some time the old skin became asbestofied, so to speak. After a while the skin cracks open, he says, and the flames go right in: it is awful. Well I should think if would be. When asked how any man could stand it centuries after centuries, they say God will inject or infuse life, so that he will keep them alive, so as to perpetrate an awful eternity of horror, and all except the saintly few will be roasted in that way. Think of it. Did we not have our heads pretty well meddled when we preached the same things? I believe God will forgive me for attributing such awful doctrines to Him.

I remind you what the great doctor of theology, Jonathan Edwards, said. In Answer--to a question as to whether we would not feel bad if we got into heaven and knew that our loved ones were in eternal torment, he said: "No, you will look over the battlements of heaven and perhaps see your parents or children writhing in the lake of fire and suffering untold agonies, and then turn around and clap your hands and praise God for His justice."

Poor Jonathan did not have a very good idea of justice. I would not like to have him try a case in court for me. My dear friends, it is ridiculous. What did Jesus say? Jesus said, "He that believeth on the Son hath life, and he that hath not the Son shall not see life." This means that He will not let them have life; they will not suffer in misery. So the Apostle says, This is the promise that He has promised us, that we might have life and this life is in His Son, and when He shall appear we shall appear also with Him in glory, in the first resurrection. But those who will not come into harmony with God shall not have eternal life; and I thank God for the wisdom and justice of His plan.

THOUGHT OF MOREHEAD

I presume Brother Morehead had special thought with respect to the 25th chapter of Matthew, because there we read in the 41st verse, "Depart from me, ye (speaking of the goats) cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels." What is meant by the everlasting fire? This everlasting fire is just as symbolical as the goats. Fire is a symbol of destruction, not preservation. Do you put anything into the fire to preserve it? Why not? Because it would burn up. So this is the picture God gives. "All the wicked will God destroy." In another place fire came down from Heaven and destroyed them all. It did not preserve any of them. So in this chapter Jesus pictured the two classes, and you cannot burn symbolical goats with literal fire. The goats are symbolical and so is the fire. The goats represent a wayward class, and the fire represents their destruction.

Saint Paul said, "They shall be punished with everlasting destruction." Did he say anything about their being punished with fire? No.

Peter said, "They shall perish like the natural brute beast." Do they roast them or torture them? No. Does he state that God will? No all the wicked will God destroy.

But then, there is another answer. The word punishment here used, in the Greek is "Kolasin," and it means pruning or cutting off from life, from the Lord and all hope of life. Before being cut off, however, they will be given every opportunity. That parable does not belong here in this age but this one, and the one about the sheep and the goats both belong to the next age, during the thousand years of Messiah's reign, when the whole world of mankind will be before the great Millennial throne of the great Judgment day, and all the sheep will be at the right hand of favor, and the goats at the left hand of this favor for the thousand years, and at the close the sheep will be received into favor with God, but the goat class will be cut off in the second death. The first death was the penalty for sin. Love sent Christ to redeem the world from the first penalty, but Christ will not die for those who go into the second death, and there will be no hope or redemption for them.

GOD CREATED MAN IN HIS OWN IMAGE

How different the statement respecting man's creation from that describing the creation of plants and the lower animals which the seas and the earth brought forth! Man's creation was premeditated. God designed man to be king over the earth. He was to be his Creator's image, not in physical form, but in moral and intellectual qualities resembling his Creator, a Spirit Being. As we read, "God created man in His own image." Not a word here can be construed as implying the evolution of man from the lower creatures.

A FALL, NOT AN EVOLUTION

So far from teaching Evolution, the Bible teaches the very reverse. St. Paul declares, "By one man's disobedience sin entered into the world, and death as the result of sin. Thus death passed upon all men, because all are sinners." (Rom. 5:12.) The Bible represents man as the masterpiece of mundane creation. God pronounced him "very good." Nor could we esteem it just that any but a perfect being should be placed on trial for life or death everlasting.

NOT TWO CREATION ACCOUNTS

Higher Critics claim that Genesis 2 is another account, written by a different person, giving a different order of creation man created first, then trees, beasts, etc. To us this is foolishness. Moses, having described creation in its logical order, merely particularizes some of his previous statements. He declares (Gen. 2:4) that he has already described the generations or developments of things heavenly and earthly from "the beginning," before there was any plant life. He mentions that at that time there was no rain. He again assures us that man was God's last creation, to be the king of earth; and he proceeds to give an account of man's creation, so different from that of the lower animals and vegetation. Man was not evolved, but God's handiwork. He was not spirit, but flesh, formed of the dust of the ground, with the spirit of life common to all earthly creatures. The Hebrew reads, literally, "In his nostrils the breath of lives" the breath or spirit of life common to all breathing creatures.

MAN ORIGINALLY SEXLESS

The details of human creation imply that Adam lived some time alone and sexless. Some Bible students infer from the chronology that it was two years from Adam's creation until the expulsion from Eden under the death sentence. The cause for the division of Adam into two persons is stated: the earth was to be populated with a race of his species, and amongst all the creatures none was suitable as companion and mother of his offspring. Thus again is shown that Adam was distinctly different from apes and all other creatures under his control. He was in the likeness of his Creator. Other Scriptures show us that it is the Divine purpose that the sex quality in humanity shall be dropped.

The division of Adam into two parts left the headship with the male, but deprived him of some of his sympathetic qualities. His wife had less of the masculine and aggressive traits; but the two were perfectly adapted to each other and fulfilled each other's ideals. The fall from God's favor has affected both sexes, producing extremes of coarseness and effeminacy, and robbing the marriage relationship of its ideal happiness. The Restitution or resurrection to be brought about by Messiah's Kingdom will not mean the restoration of sex perfections, but the gradual perfecting of each individual in the image of God.

BY ONE MAN'S DISOBEDIENCE

Note the consistency of the Bible theory which necessitated the division of one man into male and female. God purposed that the entire race must proceed from the one man. He foresaw sin and provided for man's recovery. If two or more individuals had sinned, it would have required just as many redeemers, according to the Divine Law, "An eye for an eye," a man's life for a man's life. God intended only one glorious Redeemer, therefore the entire race sprang from one man Adam that "as by a man came death, by a man should come the resurrection of the dead." 1 Cor. 15:21.

SECOND ADAM AND SECOND EVE

Adam and Eve in some respects foreshadowed Christ and the Church. Jesus, personally, is the Great Savior, whose death constitutes the Ransom-price for the entire race. During His Millennial Reign He will give back earthly life to Adam and his posterity. But before regenerating the world, God has arranged that first from the wound in Christ's side, figuratively, an Elect Church shall be formed, to be the second Eve, on the spirit plane, as He is the Second Adam. The Church will be the mother of humanity during the Millennium.

AN OLD PROPHECY IS BEING FULFILLED

Washington, D.C., January 12 -- Pastor Russell preached this afternoon at the Temple, corner 13th Street and New York, to a large congregation. He made the rather startling declaration that the Millennium is already here; that chronology proves that we have been living under some of its blessings for the past thirty-eight years; and that our modern conveniences and progress are attributable to the beginning of the rolling away of the curse, and the substitution of the Divine blessing.

The Pastor said that the reign of Messiah for a thousand years not only will bind Satan and hinder his further deception of mankind, but will also bring light, knowledge, illumination, to every corner of the earth. He pointed out the beginning of these blessings as already with us; but they are only the faint dawns of the greater light which will flood the world, when the Sun of Righteousness, Emmanuel's Kingdom, shall be manifested.

The speaker went on to say that immediately before us is a terrific storm which will convulse the present order of things -- social, financial, political and religious. The momentary chaos will yield to the Prince of Peace, who will then take to Himself His great power and reign. He will say to the billowy waves of trouble, "Peace, be still," and there will be a calm, even as was illustrated on the Sea of Galilee.

Pastor Russell showed that the storm of trouble which will precede the establishment of Messiah's Kingdom will be the natural result of the operation of the laws of Justice. This principle always operates along the line of cause and effect. Humanity are not using the wonderful blessings of the present as they should. Selfishness prevails amongst rich and poor. The earth's abundant supply for the needs of all is bringing discontent, because the natural heart is full of selfishness.

God will allow selfishness to lead on to its inevitable result, and thus will demonstrate to mankind the sinfulness of sin, selfishness, meanness and the beauty of holiness, righteousness, harmony with God.

THE DESERT SHALL BLOSSOM

The Pastor then called attention to Isaiah 35, the first verse of which declares, "The desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose." He showed that irrigation is literally fulfilling this prophecy and bringing about marvelous results. Our government is co-operating with our intelligent fellow-citizens to reclaim what was once supposed to be worthless land.

A similar work of reclamation is going on in Arabia. Shortly the land of the "Arabian Nights" will realize in a natural way changes far more wonderful than those of the fairy tales which entranced our childish imaginations. The great Sahara Desert, also, has been examined by engineers, who have ascertained that much of it lies below sea level. At comparatively small cost it can be inundated and brought to a high state of cultivation. The speaker also said that the Scriptures prophesy that the Dead Sea will one day be connected with the ocean.

Pastor Russell then applied Isa. 35:3 to our day, and declared that he is trying to carry out its commands. The Scriptures show that before the world can receive its share of blessings, the Church of Christ must first be gathered and changed to spirit beings by the First Resurrection.

After this has been accomplished, mankind will receive earthly blessings through the Messianic Kingdom. These will surpass anything which humanity has ever dreamed.

Then he showed that Jesus' miracles were merely illustrations of the work of His Second Advent. During the Millennium, our Lord and His Church will remove, not only physical blindness, deafness, lawlessness, etc., but also human weaknesses and frailties resulting from the fall of Adam. What a new aspect earth will present when sin, sickness, sorrow and death will forever have passed away!

A HIGHWAY SHALL BE THERE

The context mentions a Highway of Holiness to be established. This will distinctly differ from the broad road and the narrow way. Everything will be removed that will hinder human progress back to perfection.

The reward at the end of the way will be very different from that given to those who now walk the narrow way of self-sacrifice. Adam was a man, not a heavenly being. God changes not. He made Adam king over earth, with dominion over its creatures. God's purposes are the same today as in the beginning.

Christ died to redeem humanity. In due time, all will awake from the sleep of death to an opportunity to return to perfection as human beings

ADAMS SIN PUNISHED, THE DEATH-CURSE

“Every one that committeth sin is the bondservant of sin.” John 8:34

Adam’s first sin brought the penalty specified in this lesson. The Bible proposition is that God, having made Adam perfect, required perfect obedience as the condition of everlasting life. One act of disobedience broke the covenant between God and Adam. (Hos. 6:7, Margin.) Immediately he dropped from favor, under the sentence, “Dying, thou shalt die.” Nothing that Adam or his children could do subsequently could recover covenant relationship with God. The death penalty was the limit.

3H581

By the law of heredity, Adam transmitted to his race a share of what he possessed, good and bad. As Adam could not erase his penalty, neither can his children. But as Adam could, by obedience to the Divine Law, prolong the process of his dying, so may his children. But the impairment wrought by sin has so progressed that many of Adam’s children die in infancy; and few maintain the struggle for existence for a hundred years.

DEATH THE CURSE NOT TORTURE

Our forefathers during the Dark Ages misunderstood the Heavenly Father’s character and Plan. Misunderstanding the Bible to teach that God arranged for the eternal torture of all except the Church, they sought to copy their misconception of Jehovah by torturing their fellow-creatures. Because God’s people have been gradually getting back to the teaching of His Word, the horrible practises of the past are no longer approved. But many have much yet to learn respecting the true teaching of the Bible.

The curse which God pronounced against our race is not eternal torment at the hands of devils; but as the Apostle says, “The wages of sin is death.” The remedy is a resurrection, secured through the Redeemer’s death at Calvary. “The gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord.” All experience the death penalty. All will have opportunity sometime of regaining everlasting life through Messiah’s redemptive work and His Kingdom.

For a Little Flock, who in this Age have obeyed the Master’s Voice, God has provided glorious things, far superior to anything that Adam lost. To those who walk in Jesus’ footsteps, God promises a share with the Master in His glorious Kingdom.

THE LESSON OF THIS STUDY

If our Christian forefathers could properly have appreciated today's lesson, they would have known what the Bible teaches respecting the "wages of sin," and have seen how seriously public thought had drifted away from the Divine testimony, to "doctrines of demons." How distinctly God forewarned our first parents that eating the forbidden fruit would bring upon them the death penalty! After they had disobeyed, God drove them out of Eden, that the penalty pronounced against them might be accomplished. Had they continued in Eden, eating of its life-sustaining fruits, they would have lived indefinitely.

WHY EVIL WAS PERMITTED

God foreknew the fall of man, before the foundation of the world, and provided the Lamb of God to take away the sin of the world. God had a glorious purpose interwoven with His permission of sin, which the majority but faintly discerned until lately. Jesus intimated that shortly before the establishment of His Kingdom His Church will understand features of the Divine Plan previously kept secret they will have an appreciation of God's purposes, and His reasons for having permitted sin and death for six thousand years.

THE TEMPTATION OF EVE

How Lucifer and the holy angels became disloyal to God we will inquire into later. In this lesson Lucifer, or Satan, is shown as seeking to alienate our first parents from the Creator, that he might enslave them as servants. A spirit being, he would be unseen to Eve. It suited his purposes to possess a serpent, through which to tempt Eve. The serpent doubtless spoke by signs; as we sometimes say, "Actions speak louder than words."

The serpent ate of the forbidden fruit in the sight of the woman and then manifested its wisdom. The woman perceived. She craved knowledge. Could it be that God wished to keep them in ignorance, and for that reason had forbidden their eating of the fruit? Such disloyal thoughts should have been promptly spurned. But the insidious poison worked. She was not deceived as respects the wrongdoing, but regarding the result. Seeing that the serpent was not poisoned by the fruit, she did not realize that the poison to her was that of disobedience bringing the death sentence. Adam's eating of the fruit was with full knowledge of the result. In love with his wife, he ate knowingly, preferring to die with her rather than to live without her.

SLAVES SET FREE RETURN TO BONDS

Washington, D.C., January 19-Pastor Russell preached at Washington Temple today his third sermon on Union Depot texts. Today's text was; "The Truth shall make you free." (John 8:32) He said:

Truth is the great Emancipator. All enslavers oppose the Truth, knowing its power on the minds of their victims. 'Me taskmasters of today would fain hide the truth from wage-slaves, but find it impossible-so great is the power of the press-and there are publishers who have not sold their moral sense for sordid gain. When chattel slavery prevailed, the master found it advantageous to educate his slaves and thus increase their value, but disadvantageous to instruct them along the lines of human rights. The feudatory lords were very willing that the common people consider them demigods, not subject to law as others.

The same principle apparently prompted the emperors to proclaim themselves, "pontifex maximus," and to encourage their people to worship them. The natural selfishness of man ever prompts him to take advantage of others; and ignorance has been the chain which has bound the masses.

The Bible has been the great Emancipator of slavesmental, moral and physical. It is the Torch of Liberty, lighted by Divine Providence. The Bible alone tells us that all humanity are of one blood, creatures of the same God, amenable to Him. While the Bible instructs that Kings and all in authority should be recognized, it also tells that the king is amenable to exactly the same laws as his most menial slave, and that if he violates these laws he is as sure to be punished.

Moreover, the Bible points out that the present is related to the future life as cause to effect. It shows that every act, word and thought bears upon character-development, and prepares us for higher things in the life to come or gives us more difficulty in reaching perfection and everlasting life.

HOPE THOU IN GOD

Looking into the past, we see Israel, sodden with fear of their Egyptian taskmasters, not daring to take steps for liberty. But after the Exodus, after God's Covenant with them at Sinai, they were a changed people. The hopes inspired by the Scriptures preserved them as a nation when contemporaneous civilization perished.

The Jews undoubtedly destroyed their own nationality. The Romans merely performed the funeral rites in destroying Jerusalem, A. D. 70. The Emperor evidently claimed that the Jewish religion must necessarily be at the foundation of their ungovernable character. Their liberty, used contrary to Divine instruction, led to discontent and anarchy.

CHRIST'S FOLLOWERS SET FREE

The Message of Jesus and the Apostles attracted some "Israelites indeed," anxious to serve God. The early Christians courageously suffered persecution and carried the Gospel everywhere. The Roman emperors, Nero and Diocletian, perceived that Christians had a courage which they feared would be infectious, and persecuted them horribly. But the Master had freed them from fear of death.

Then came a long period of darkness, when the Scriptures were forgotten, and only the words of bishops were heard-words misunderstood to be of Divine authority through Apostolic Succession. Next came centuries under control of creeds and church councils. Darkness, ignorance and superstition prevailed, although God had His witnesses throughout that long period.

Finally the Bible again emerged, when printing came into use. God's time had come for the Bible again to be the Torch of Liberty, and independence proportionately came forward. Today Britain, Germany, Scandinavia and America lead the world, because of the light from the Word of God.

DANGER NOW, AS TO THE JEWS

The danger that the Jews encountered in the end of their Age confronts us. Not all receive the Truth in the love of it. Not all, therefore, are sanctified by it. Few have turned to the Lord, to become followers of Jesus. Hence we are on the threshold of a great disintegration. Liberty is about to turn to license-anarchy; our civilization is about to be ruined, as was the Jewish polity, by liberty unrestrained by the Spirit of the Lord.

St. Paul declared that the Gospel had set him free from all other bondages but that he surrendered his liberty to Christ, to do, not his own will, but the will of his Redeemer. Forcefully he states that in so doing he became a bond-slave to Christ.

Blessed is the condition of those who gladly surrender all to become followers of the Lord! Such can rejoice, because they know that all things work together for their good to prepare them for the Heavenly glories.

WILL PUNISHMENT BE EVERLASTING?

Pastor Russell had crowds to hear him here today. He spoke twice. We report his discourse from the text: "These shall go away into everlasting punishment; but the righteous into life eternal." Matt. 25:46

The speaker approached his subject reverently, declaring that all mankind recognize two great facts: (1) that all are sinners, imperfect, willingly or unwillingly; and (2) that all realize the propriety of a just penalty for sins in proportion to their willfulness, knowledge being a prime factor. All this can be admitted by even those who deny that we have in the Bible an inspired message telling us the origin of sin, its penalty and the conditions governing the Divine judgment of sinners.

WHAT THE BIBLE DOES TEACH

The Bible declares that all transgression of the Divine law is sin, and that all sin is punishable with the same penalty death. Thus Adam's disobedience in eating the forbidden fruit brought upon him the sentence of death, which by the laws of heredity he has transmitted to all mankind. All our sin and sickness, sorrow and death, therefore, come as the penalty of Adam's sin. St. Paul specifically says that by one man's disobedience sin entered into the world and death as the result of sin; thus death has passed upon all men, because all are sinners. (Rom. 5:12-19) Although men may multiply the transgressions, they cannot increase the penalty, because the Divine law has only one penalty for sin the death penalty extinction.

But Divine mercy has arranged for man's redemption by providing that Jesus should pay the penalty for Adam's sin. This He did when He offered Himself and died, "the just for the unjust." The life of Jesus, as a corresponding price for the forfeited life of Adam, guaranteed the cancellation of Adam's sin; and this means an opportunity for Adam to return to the Father's house as a son, in due time, under the assistance of Messiah's kingdom. Or, neglecting these privileges when they shall come to him, Adam would be counted as refusing the grace of God and would die the second death, from which there will be no redemption and no resurrection.

But before Adam can refuse God's grace he must be made intelligently aware of it. He could not know of it during the 930 years of his dying under the curse, because it was not yet accomplished. Christ had not yet died. Adam could not be aware of God's grace in Christ since Jesus died, because Adam has been asleep in death, wholly unconscious, waiting for the morning of the new dispensation and the awakening and the knowledge which will reach him then.

What is thus true respecting Adam will be true respecting every member of his posterity. They all lost God's favor and came under the curse of death, by heredity, through Adam, and the redemption of Adam will mean the redemption of all humanity, the payment of the penalty of original sin for every member of Adam's race. The setting up of Messiah's kingdom will not be for the purpose of further punishing them, for under the reign of sin and death they were already under punishment.

Having purchased mankind with His own sacrifice, our Lord will inaugurate the Messianic kingdom for the very purpose of helping mankind up out of sin and degradation, back to the perfect image and likeness to God originally bestowed upon Adam. The Millennial age is spoken of as a thousand year day of judgment, but this does not signify a judgment for Adam's sin. That sentence was pronounced 6,000 years ago.

During Christ's Millennial kingdom mankind will go on trial for judgment to ascertain whether or not, after attaining full knowledge of God, they will avail themselves of Messiah's assistance to come back into harmony with the Creator. The willing and obedient will be perfected again in the flesh and the remainder will be destroyed in the second death as followers of Satan.

The Church will be associated with her Lord in that great work of dealing with the world. In order to prepare her for that great glory and honor, her calling and election must take place in advance of the coming of the King, her Bridegroom. It must take place, therefore, before the end of this Gospel age.

The Scriptures clearly teach that some will during the Messianic reign receive stripes or chastisements for their development in righteousness and that the fullest penalty, second death, will come only to willful evil doers. And here we may note the Divine arrangement in respect to all willful sins of the present life. Each willful sin makes its mark makes the conscience more calloused and the heart the more stony. In this manner evildoers treasure up for themselves wrath against the day of wrath the day of judgment, the day of just retribution.

As the doing of righteousness produces a good character, the doing of unrighteousness willfully produces an evil character, and will necessitate the more stripes, which, if unheeded, will bring upon the evildoer the second death. In this connection we can remember St. Paul's words: "Some men's sins are open beforehand, going before to judgment (the penalty), while others they follow after.” (1 Tim. 5:24) Not merely the Church receives tribulation in the present time, but justice sometimes overtakes evildoers and works a measure of reformation in the present life, leaving proportionately fewer steps to be retracted in the life to come.

GOD’S LAW OF FORGIVENESS

God has made provision for the forgiveness and reconciliation of Adam and all of his children. Some during the Gospel age are privileged to come to God through Jesus as their advocate and by becoming His true disciples to have full forgiveness of sins and full reconciliation to the Father. For the remainder of mankind God’s provision is different. Divine justice will forgive the world en masse at the instance of the great Mediator, and will turn the world over to Him, that He may restore them to perfection and make it possible for them to be received back again into God’s family. Thus we see that God’s forgiveness is directed by principles of justice. But He commands His people that, being imperfect themselves and recipients of His mercy, they shall not attempt to deal with their fellows wholly on the basis of justice, but shall forgive one another, even as God for Christ’s sake has forgiven them. Divine mercy purposes to embrace every member of Adam’s race in the glorious provision through Christ.

Our text is the summing up of the parable of the sheep and the goats. Only Bible students, apparently, have noticed that this parable does not belong to the present age; but is a description of conditions which will prevail during Messiah’s kingdom. This is indicated by the setting. We read: “When the Son of Man shall come in His glory, and all the holy angels with Him, then shall He sit upon the throne of his glory; and before Him shall be gathered all peoples and He shall separate them one from another as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats.” (Matt. 25:31, 32) Another scripture assures us that when the Redeemer shall appear in glory, His Church will appear with Him for the accomplishment of the blessed things foretold respecting that glorious Kingdom and its work of blessing all the families of the earth.

The Lord’s sheep of the Millennial age will be the willing and obedient, who rejoice to be in harmony with God. These will be gathered to the right hand of the King the place of favor. The goats, correspondingly, are placed on the left hand Messiah’s disfavor, because of their persistence in waywardness so well illustrated by the goats wayward disposition.

At the close of that thousand year day of blessed opportunities the whole world of mankind will be found in either one class or the other. Then will come the final settlement. The day of Christ is divinely appointed for the putting down of sin in its every form and the death, destruction of all who love or sympathize with sin Satan and all other wayward ones.

Jesus said to some in His day: “Ye are of your father the devil, for his work ye do.” The goats will be of Satan’s company, because, like him, they choose the way of sin and opposition to God, truth and righteousness. Our text might be more literally rendered: These (Satan and his followers, including the “goats” of the parable) shall go away into everlasting cutting off from life, but the righteous (the “sheep” of the parable) shall be ushered into life everlasting.

The Lord does not say that either Satan or the goats will be sent to everlasting torment, but into everlasting punishment everlasting death a death from which there will be no resurrection. They shall perish like natural brute beasts. 2 Pet. 2:12

The Greek word here rendered punishment is kolasin, which means pruning, as a husbandman prunes the dead wood from his orchard or vineyard. So Satan and all his hosts will be cut off finally from God’s blessings, and be destroyed in the second death. Another use of the word kolasin in classic Greek is to restrain; as, “The charioteers restrain (kolasin) their fiery steeds.” So God, through Christ, declares that the second death shall everlastingly restrain Satan and all who have his goat-like, wayward disposition, after having had full knowledge and opportunity to develop opposite disposition.

In a previous verse the same parable puts the results of the trial of the nations for life or death, during the Messiah’s kingdom, in different language. It declares that the reward to the sheep will be, “Come, ye blessed of My Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world.” This is the Kingdom which was originally given to Adam, but lost through disobedience.

This is the Kingdom which Jesus by obedience to the law had a right to claim for Himself, but which He sacrificed for the benefit of humanity. The Father gave to Him and to the Church, His Bride, a heavenly kingdom, not founded when the earth was founded, but “from before the foundation of the world.” Messiah, during the Millennial age, will prove who of mankind are worthy of everlasting human life at the end of His thousand year reign. The Lord will deliver to God the dominion, or the Kingdom of earth. Mankind will thenceforth be responsible directly to the Heavenly Father, as we read in 1 Cor. 15:24.

MAN'S WONDERFUL ACHIEVEMENTS

Panama-Colon, February 23 Pastor Russell manifested a keen interest in the great Panama Canal work, which is speeding to completion. He took for his text Psa. 8:4, "WHAT IS MAN?" He rehearsed human engineering feats of the past the Tower of Babel; the great city of Babylon; the Great Pyramid of Egypt, full of scientific accuracy and symbols of Heavenly things. Solomon's Temple and Herod's, the Cathedral of St. Peter's at Rome and other great cathedrals, each wonderful in its way, were referred to as examples of man's skill in the past. All, he declared, glorify man's intellectual power, intelligence and acumen, no less than do some of the legal statutes of the past the Mosaic Law, the Laws of Lycurgus, etc. All of these achievements of the past refute the thought that our forefathers were monkeys or only a step or two in advance of that condition.

However, in our day practically within the past half century human intelligence seems to have bounded forward in a most remarkable manner. The telegraph, the telephone, the wireless, steam power, electric power and light have given talents a wider scope than ever before was known, and have forwarded the art of printing, which, in turn, has stimulated the education of the masses. Intelligence has increased demand, utilized inventions, and is making the world fabulously rich. Millions everywhere are on the alert to associate themselves with the new things and with the financial prosperity which they are bringing.

THE CANAL ILLUSTRATES ALL THIS

Our modern cities with their multiplied conveniences, palatial structures and office buildings more than forty stories up into the clouds, are fresh reminders of our text, "What is Man!" Our tunnels, or subways, under cities, and all the conveniences they stand for are well calculated to amaze us. As we look about us and realize that these things have come suddenly within fifty years, we repeat, "What is Man!" How wonderful the intelligence which has been able to grapple with the affairs of nature, its minerals, its laws, etc., and to master them! Is not man a great king in all the earth?

Nowhere is this power of man to deal with earthly conditions more strikingly manifest than here on this Canal Zone. We have here an illustration of mountain-moving faith. Six tons of Trojan powder exploded at one instant, crumbling an entire hill, is certainly a wonderful record. These great steam shovels moving with so great rapidity these enormous masses of loosened earth are marvelous. If only a few years ago some one had told us that a man, by moving a lever, could lift six tons of earth, transport it an eighth of a mile and load it upon cars, all in three minutes or less, we would have thought him insane. Who would have believed a short time ago that an eighty-foot gate weighing six hundred tons would have been practicable or possible!

History tells us that the desirability of this canal was recorded by Galvao in 1550. He had ambition. If he had had our modern appliances and the wealth of our day to back them, no doubt he had the intelligence necessary for the work. But the time was not ripe. Forty years ago our government realized the desirability of this work, but dared not undertake it. Thirty years ago the work was started by a courageous Frenchman, but abandoned because of the tremendous difficulties encountered. Ten years ago the United States government undertook the work, which is now nearing successful completion.

TELLS OF MESSIAH'S DAY

The advance of human intelligence in the power to overcome the obstacles of nature is shown thus. What was impossible in the hands of skillful men thirty years ago is possible at the hands of similar men today, because, in the interim, human intelligence in respect to the use of steam and electricity and the application of mechanical principles, has made rapid progress. This canal, therefore, not only honors Colonel Goethals, whose genius has had so much to do with the wonderful accomplishment, but it honors mankind in general; for here we find at work machinery invented and manufactured in all parts of the world. The Scotch suction dredge and the French ladder dredges co-labor with American machinery in drilling, boring, blasting, digging, accomplishing.

Our first lesson from what we see is that present achievements out-rank those of the past not so much in skill as in opportunity. Ancient masonry, found south of us here, like that in the Great Pyramid of Egypt, tells of a skill with which we cannot yet compete, in that great stones were so truly squared and so accurately laid as to make it difficult to find the crevices between them.

We must credit our great progress to God. His time has come for lifting the veil of ignorance and superstition. He has been gradually favoring the increase of knowledge along every line. We today are merely taking advantage of this more extended knowledge, carried into all the homes and offices by means of steam printing-presses, railroads, steamships, postal service, etc. Instead, therefore, of trying to belittle our ancestors, let us confess that we have drawn and are still drawing from them deep inspiration along various lines the Bible, Shakespeare and other writings.

Let us accredit our progress, not to Evolution, but to the more reasonable proposition that God's time has come to give us the blessings promised in the Scriptures the blessings which are heralding Messiah's Kingdom of "peace on earth, good will toward men." We have waited for it, prayed for it and sung about it for centuries. And now that we are beginning to enjoy its blessings, now that the dawning of the New Day is visible on every hand, let us make no mistake. While learning from each other, let us not forget to be taught of God, reading in the signs of the times the fulfillment of the predictions of forty centuries.

WHAT WILL MAN BECOME

Our text asks, "What is man that Thou are mindful of him?" intimating what we all acknowledge that man is poor, weak, imperfect, fallen, unworthy of his Creator's favor and blessing. He is not deserving of eternal torment, but deserving of the divine sentence, "Dying, thou shalt die," because of degradation through the fall. Yet God is mindful of man.

God has made provision for man's recovery from sin and death. The foundation for the recovery was laid by the Sin-Atonement Sacrifice at Calvary. The blessings of that Atonement have been extended thus far only to a small number. They have been limited to such as would take up their cross and follow in the Savior's footsteps. As the Scriptures declare, these are few, a "little flock" not many great, wise, rich or noble.

But the selection of the Elect to be associates with Messiah in His glorious Kingdom is only the beginning of God's favor toward mankind. The Elect will soon be completed. The saintly followers of Jesus from every nation and denomination will soon become His Bride and Joint-heirs in the Kingdom. Then that Kingdom will be established by Divine Power in authority and dominion, not to crush mankind, but for human uplift out of sin and degradation, ignorance and superstition, back to the full image and likeness of God.

If mankind in the fallen condition, and imbued with sin and selfishness, can be influenced by knowledge and ambition to accomplish the wonders of our day, what will not be possible to the restored man, as gradually he reattains the image and likeness of his Creator! The eyes of our understanding open widely as we consider the great length and breadth of human possibilities, under those favorable conditions which God declares will obtain during the thousand years of Messiah's Kingdom, for which we pray, "Thy Kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth, as it is in Heaven."

LITTLE LOWER THAN THE ANGELS

Our context declares that man was made "a little lower than the angels"; that is to say, man as an earthly, or animal being, is on a lower plane than angels, who are spirit beings. Yet there is one respect in which man is treated from a standpoint superior to that of angels. Of man God said, "In Our likeness let him have dominion over the earth." So man was to have the earth as his little universe. But no dominion, so far as we know, has ever been given to the angels.

Man's ruling power was neutralized by the sentence of death which came upon him. As the dying process continued, man's power to rule his dominion waned. Whereas originally he was able by mere exercise of his mind to control the beasts, he has since been obliged to cope with the beast by brute force and superior cunning. Finally by invention, fire arms, etc., he has gained the mastery in the world by force.

Doubtless the lessons of experience in all these six great Days (six thousand years since the fall) will ultimately inure to man's benefit. His exercise of his ingenuity in battling with thorns, thistles, beasts, etc., has served to quicken, to energize, to give him force of character. But alas! this force of character is not in any way advantageous; for in many respects it is contrary to the highest standards contrary to the image of his Creator.

During the great Day just beginning (the seventh of the great Thousand-Year Days the Sabbath) man will have weighty lessons to learn. The selfish and animal propensities of his nature have become so strong and the higher moral faculties have become so dwarfed that a large proportion of human effort will necessarily be along the lines of self-control and the development of the godlike mind. The advantages of this godlikeness will not only be clearly set before man in the Millennium, but he will be assisted in forming such character, because the laws of Messiah's Kingdom will thoroughly estop sin and every form of selfishness which will attempt to do injury to another.

Every evil purpose will be nipped in the bud. Every evil deed will be promptly punished in its incipency, without being allowed to progress to the injury of others. Soon the great lessons of the glorious rule of Messiah will be recognized and appreciated; and as development will be made in the reattainment of the Divine likeness, all of its beauties will be appreciated and every where seen.

JUDGING QUICK AND DEAD

All those experiences of humanity under Messiah's Kingdom are in Scriptural language declared to be judgments; that is, testings, provings. That great Day of Messiah, a thousand years long, is Scripturally styled the Day of Judgment. The Church will not be on judgment, or trial, then; but the world. The Church, walking by faith, and not by sight, is having her trial now. The faithful of the Church now on trial, if found worthy, will be given the reward of glory, honor, immortality, and will be made the judges of the world. "Know ye not that the saints shall judge the world?"--1 Cor. 6:2.

St. Paul referred to that Thousand Year Day, and described it as the future Day of Judgment, saying, "God hath appointed a Day in which He will judge the world in righteousness by that Man whom He hath ordained." (Act. 17:31) The Christ will have the judgment of the world in His hands. The Christ has Jesus as its Head and the Church as its Body, as St. Paul has declared. Eph. 1:22,23.

The judgment of the world will not be in respect to whether or not they have been sinners; for that God has already determined. As the Scriptures declare, all men are sinners. That coming judgment will not be to see which of these sinners is really worthy of life and which worthy of death; for that also was determined by the Lord long ago, when He passed the sentence of death upon all, without exception. Because all were sinners it was necessary that all should be redeemed in order that they might have that coming judgment. The very object of the redemption was to settle for ever (Heb. 10:12) the death sentence pronounced against Adam and inherited by all of his race.

All were redeemed, and all are to be set free from that Adamic condemnation. The moment they are set free from the condemnation of the past, they will be put on trial, or judgment, for themselves. From that moment their responsibility will begin, the result of which will be either everlasting life or everlasting death Second Death. And the rewards of that trial will be in respect to their course after they are freed from the Adamic sentence. The past will figure only as it has meant opposition to light and knowledge.

HE WHO SINS, SUFFERS

Only the Church at the present time are on judgment, or trial for everlasting life or everlasting death, because only the consecrated are set free by the Redeemer. As it is written, "We were children of wrath even as others." (Eph. 2:3) Nor will the world be on trial, or judgment, for everlasting life until they shall have been brought to a very clear knowledge of God, of His arrangements for them, and of their opportunities.

However, there is another law operating, which affects every member of Adam's race. Whoever sins a little suffers proportionately. Whoever sins much suffers proportionately. But such punishments for sin are not unto eternal death. They are merely transitory and on account of misdeeds, and have no bearing whatever on the original sin unto death and the redemption from it. The man or the woman who transgresses a law of nature suffers. If he transgresses a moral law, he suffers also. He who steals or who murders or slanders another, and seemingly meets with no retribution in the present life, nevertheless does not escape not even if his conscience becomes seared and he can forget his misdeeds.

It is a law of our nature that the very finest of our powers are the most easily injured. Thus he who injures his conscience damages that which is most difficult to repair. Those who have seared their consciences will, during the thousand years, have the most difficulty in regaining the image and likeness of God, without which they can never have everlasting life.

St. Paul, after assuring us that “As all in Adam die, so all in Christ shall be made alive,” adds, “Every man in his own order” or class. (1 Cor. 15:22,23) This suggests that God has the world identified by classes, as well as individually. The Church class will be first the Chief Resurrection. (Rev. 20:6) None will be in it except those accounted worthy to share in the Messianic Throne and Kingdom.

Later on will come the resurrection of the worthy ones of ancient times Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and all the Prophets. Their resurrection will be to human perfection, as examples of what all men can attain, if they will be obedient to Messiah’s righteous requirements.

Then will come the world, “every man in his own order.” All will be awakened. Each will have an opportunity of coming to a knowledge of the Truth. Each will have opportunity, by obedience, to arise out of degradation, thus demonstrating his worthiness or unworthiness to participate in complete Restitution and everlasting life.

Thus each individual of Adam’s race will take his place, either at the right hand of the Majesty of the Kingdom or at the left either at the place of favor or disfavor. He will be thus deciding for himself, according to the Divine standards, whether he will have everlasting life, or the penalty of opposition to God—“everlasting destruction” the Second Death.

THE GRANDEST OF INAUGURATIONS

Washington, D. C., March 9 Pastor Russell arrived here this morning on his return from Panama, Kingston, Havana, Key West, Tampa and Pensacola. His coming was eagerly awaited by the Washington Temple Congregation. He took for his text Jesus’ words, “When the Son of Man shall come in His glory, and all the holy angels with Him, then shall He sit upon the Throne of His glory.” (Matt. 25:31) He said:

When six thousand years ago man transgressed the Divine command and came under the sentence, "Dying, thou shalt die," he was cast out of Eden, that in the unprepared earth he might pay the death penalty, with labor and sweat of face going down to the tomb. Even then, in the declaration that the Seed of the woman would eventually bruise the serpent's head, God implied an ultimate victory for humanity, over Satan and sin and its death penalty.

Later, God's Covenant with Abraham told that the victory would come through his posterity, but still did not explain how. Centuries later, Abraham's favored posterity became the Jewish nation, and came into covenant relationship with God through Moses, the mediator of the Law Covenant. Their hope was that they could so thoroughly keep God's Law as to merit everlasting life; and that learning how to practice this self-control, and gain the victory over sin, they would be competent to teach all nations, and to deliver mankind from sin and death. However, centuries of effort proved that none were able to keep the Divine Law satisfactorily; for all continued to die.

The next Divine lesson was one of faith in God. Israel could not keep the Law Covenant satisfactorily could not, therefore, have everlasting life. Hence they could not teach others to do what they could not do. The lesson of faith was that they should look forward to a coming Messiah "A Prince and a Savior." Through Him all the promises would be fulfilled. For Centuries they waited for Him, and sought to apply Moses' words: "A Prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you from amongst your brethren, like unto me [the antitype of Moses]; Him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever He shall say unto you. And... every soul, which will not hear that Prophet, shall be destroyed from amongst the people." Acts 3:22, 23

Various were the hopes and imaginings respecting Messiah. He was to be the antitype of both David and Solomon, the antitype of Aaron and Melchizedek very great! He was to reign from sea to sea. (Psa. 72:8) Ultimately, so successful would be His reign that the knowledge of the Lord should fill the whole earth, as the waters cover the deep. (Hab. 2:14) Not only Israel would be blessed by Him, but all nations, peoples, kindreds and tongues. Unto Him every knee would bow and every tongue confess to the glory of God. Phil. 2:10, 11

The hearts of Israel looked forward with pride to that day when Messiah would exalt them very highly in the earth and associate them with Himself in the ruling and blessing of all people. Ah! they thought, the inauguration day will come, when as King of kings and Lord of lords Israel's Messiah will wield a scepter which all will recognize and under which all will receive a blessing! These good hopes held together the "chosen people," as no other nation or people have ever been held together. They are waiting still, though disconcerted by the length of time and by the various evidences that others are in some respects more favored than themselves.

MESSIAH AND JUBILEE AT HAND

At last Israel's Star of Hope is rising! At last the prophecies tell that the morning of joy is about to dawn and "the desire of all nations shall come." Not merely Jews are claiming that Messiah's day is nigh, and that the Divine blessing is about to come upon Jerusalem and all the people of God, but Christian Bible students see the same. Mohammedans are claiming the same. Free Masons are claiming the same. All men are in expectation of something wonderful, just at the door.

The blessings multiplied upon us in the inventions of the last half-century all bespeak the New Dispensation, the reign of the King of kings. And if the preparations are on so grand a scale, what will be the grandeur of the inauguration and of the reign itself! Truly the Scriptures say that "eye hath not seen, nor ear heard the things that God hath in reservation for them that love Him." 1 Cor. 2:9

INAUGURATION SCENE OF OUR TEXT

Leading in the grand procession picture is The Son of Man, following whom will be all the holy messengers; but with Him upon His glorious Throne will be His Bride class a saintly few. Thus it is written, "When Christ... shall appear, then shall ye also appear with Him in glory" (Col. 3:4); again, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with Me in My Throne." Rev. 3:21

Through the Prophets of old the picture was given us of the triumphal entrance of Messiah, saying, "Lift up your heads, O ye gates; and be ye lifted up, ye everlasting doors, and the King of glory shall come in... Jehovah of Hosts, He is the King of glory." (Psa. 24:7, 10) It is Jehovah's Kingdom that is to be established when Messiah comes; for Messiah is the godlike One, Jehovah's Representative, who for a thousand years will rule the world for the abolishment of sin and death, and the uplifting of Israel and all the nations.

Messiah is spoken of as the Seed of David, who should inherit his throne. (Luke 1:31-33) He who was according to the flesh David's Son is according to the Spirit David's Lord, and He it is that shall sit upon the Throne. But as the throne upon which David sat was the Throne of Jehovah, so the Throne of Messiah will be Jehovah's Throne also.

*"Oh, that will be a crowning
Such as earth has never known,
When Christ His Kingdom shall receive,
Before the great white Throne!"*

Grand as have been the inaugural services of the past week, they were as nothing in contrast with the glorious crowning Day for which the earth has been waiting 6,000 years. Happy, earnest and hopeful as were the faces that greeted the President, the picture was tame as compared with the light and joy and confidence that will fill the world when mankind come to realize that during the past 6,000 years God has been making preparation for this great Day that is even now dawning.

Then gratitude will go up to the Lord from faithful hearts. Then truly on the grandest possible scale all that trust in Messiah will shout, "Hosanna to the Son of David. Blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord! Hosanna in the highest!" Then Messiah will take His Kingdom as God's Representative, His Holy One to rule the earth, and to dispense the blessings which God promised in the Abrahamic Covenant and reiterated "by the mouth of all His Holy Prophets since the world began." Acts 3:21

WHEREIN DID THE JEWS FAIL

The Jews did not fail. All the promises of God made to them are still theirs. He never offered them spiritual favors. He never suggested that He would take them to Heaven. The strongest promise made, even to Abraham, was that all the land which could be seen would be given to him and to his seed. All the blessings of Israel were to come through Messiah, whose Kingdom is about to be inaugurated.

What God did for the Jews at the First Advent of Jesus was something more than He ever promised to do for them. He foretold through the Prophets that Messiah would suffer; yea, that "as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted up." The Jews merely fulfilled a part of the Divine Program. Had Messiah gone to another nation, doubtless there would have been similar results. No other nation, indeed, was so well prepared as the Jews by Divine instruction through the Law and the Prophets.

What God did for that nation more than He promised to do was that He gave them an opportunity of becoming more than the natural seed of Abraham. He gave them the opportunity of becoming spirit beings members of Spiritual Israel. So many as received Jesus, and became consecrated to be His disciples, were received of the Father, begotten of the Holy Spirit, received into the family of God as Spiritual Israelites, as the Spiritual Seed of Abraham. But these were few.

Then Divine favor turned to the Gentiles, and gave to them a similar opportunity of coming into membership with the Spiritual Seed of Abraham. This work has required nearly nineteen centuries and is now about completed. In other words, we understand that the Messiah class is about complete Jesus the Head, faithful Jews next, the faithful from the Gentiles next.

Jesus the Head long ago entered into His glory. Some of His members have already entered in and soon the last members will pass beyond the veil. Then the preparatory work of making up the Messianic class will be completed.

Immediately on the inauguration of the Messiah, His work of ruling and blessing will begin. At that point, according to the Scriptures, Natural Israel will return to God's favor, and be granted the chief blessing under the new administration. And through the Kingdom of Israel, as the earthly representative of Messiah's invisible, Spiritual Kingdom, the blessing of Jehovah will reach to all the families of the earth. Genesis 12:3; 22:17, 18

WHAT ISRAEL DID NOT SEE

The Jewish people failed to note those portions of prophecy which foretold Messiah's sufferings. As a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so He would neither open His mouth nor use any of His superior powers to hinder the accomplishment of God's will in respect to His death. (Isa. 53:7) The chastisement for human sin was borne by Him, in order that, as man's Redeemer, He might have the right to forgive human sin and to raise mankind out of their degradation and bring them back into harmony with God's Law, fully justified through the blood of the Redeemer. Not only the Jews failed to see the necessity for a dying Savior, but the whole Gentile world may be said to equally fail to grasp the import of Jesus' death.

The death of Jesus was necessary for two reasons: (1) As man's redemption price; (2) As evidencing His own faithfulness to God, His own loyalty even unto death, and consequently His right to the Divine promise of a glorious exaltation, compensating His devotion, His self-sacrifice, and honoring His name above every name making Him partaker of the Divine nature. Without His redemptive work, the penalty of Divine Justice would have rested forever upon the human race, and none could have been resurrected from the dead. The sentence of death upon man would bring him to the same condition of nonentity as the dying of the brute accomplishes in him. But God knew in advance of His own purpose to arrange for mankind the payment of the penalty through His Son, who died, the Just for the unjust, to bring them back into harmony with God.

It is for this reason that none living prior to Jesus were accepted to sonship in God's family, after Father Adam lost that privilege through disobedience. Only after the redemption could the invitation to sonship be extended. Those who accepted needed to wait until Pentecost to receive it. They waited until Jesus, who died for their sins, ascended up on High to make reconciliation on our behalf. Forthwith the Father accepted all who came unto Him through Christ, and the Holy Spirit came upon such, inducting them into the Divine family as sons.

The difference between the Church and the world is that the Church is called out from the world now when everything is unfavorable, while Satan is unbound, while ignorance and superstition hold sway, and while the reign of sin and death is in progress. These circumstances make for the Church a narrow way of self-sacrifice in walking in the footsteps of Jesus. But because of this severer trial of the narrow way, the Church is to have the superior blessing also glory, honor, immortality, Divine nature, the First Resurrection from earthly to Heavenly conditions.

Then will come the general blessing which God has provided, through Messiah's sacrifice, for the world. All sinned in the one man Adam. All have been redeemed by the other Man Christ Jesus. (1 Cor. 15:21) All are to be awakened from the sleep of death. All are to have a full opportunity to come to a knowledge of the Truth. All are to be given everlasting life, who develop the spirit of holiness. Only the incorrigible, those who love iniquity and hate righteousness, will eventually be sentenced to the Second Death, from which there will be no recovery.

NECESSITY FOR CHRIST'S REIGN

More and more we realize that education will not do for the world all that we once hoped. Many of us hoped that the education of the heathen would make saints of them, forgetting that education in the home-land has not made saints very generally. There are good people, moral people, trustworthy people, who are not Christians at all. But they are the exceptions. The majority of people are not sufficiently strong of character to stand thus alone without the help of Christ.

The great mass of mankind seem to need something in the way of chastisement, punishment, to offset the downward tendencies of their own fallen flesh. A few possibly have been restrained by the absurd teaching of eternal torment at the hands of demons, presented for a long time in the name of Christianity. But the majority reason that whoever gets these experiences, they will not. Thus we find that nearly all the murderers imprisoned are such as have known the erroneous teaching of eternal torment, and yet have been unabashed thereby. In other words, they have given an outward assent to the teachings but really never believed it or been influenced by it.

What the world needs is a strong government which will hold in restraint the weaker and baser elements of society and seek to help them up out of their difficulties. But no government yet devised is either strong enough or wise enough to accomplish much along these lines. This is evidenced by the fact that crime increases in proportion with intelligence; so much so that using all of our modern appliances--telephones, telegraphs, dictographs, etc. we are scarcely able to keep even with law-breakers.

All who have anything to do with police affairs shudder at the thought of what might occur should the time ever come when the majority of a city should become stubborn and vicious through lack of work, want of bread, etc. They tell us that such conditions would let loose the tiger of human passions as it has never before been known in the world; for the tiger is now educated, and the masses are on a par with the masters social, financial and political.

What we need is Messiah's Kingdom the very Kingdom described to us in the Word of God. His rule will be that of justice and equity, and will give a fair opportunity to the poor and the needy. (Psa. 72:4) His Kingdom will subdue vice and crush it out, and punish sin, in both rich and poor. His Kingdom will lay righteousness to the line and justice to the plummet, and will sweep away the refuge of lies and subterfuges under which injustice is now so often cloaked. No wonder the Scriptures tell us that Messiah's Kingdom will be "the desire of all people!" Hag. 2:7; Isa. 33:17

JESUS HIMSELF DREW NEAR

"It is Christ that died, yea rather, that was raised from the dead."
Rom. 8:34

Today we study one of Jesus' most striking manifestations to His disciples after His resurrection. Early that morning He had appeared to the women who came to embalm His body. They had communicated the news to St. Peter and St. John, who hastened to the sepulcher, but found it empty. The disciples were perplexed. Although Jesus had told them that He would be crucified and would rise from the dead on the third day, they had not comprehended the teaching.

That afternoon, as two of the company were walking home, discussing their disappointment, Jesus overtook them. They knew Him not, because of His resurrection change. St. Peter tells us that He was "put to death in flesh, but quickened in spirit." This we understand in the light of St. Paul's explanation of the Church's resurrection: "Sown in weakness, raised in power; sown in dishonor, raised in glory; sown an animal body, raised a spirit body." 1 Cor. 15:42-44.

The same thought is impressed again by the Apostle's statement: "We shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye"; for "flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God."

The change which the Church is to experience is the same which Jesus experienced when He was raised from the dead, a life-giving Spirit no longer a Man.

Our Lord's title, "Son of Man," still belongs to Him, as goes the title, "the Logos." When the Logos was made flesh, the identity was preserved; and likewise when Jesus became a spirit being again. Respecting our Lord's human experiences we read: "A body hast Thou prepared Me" for the suffering of death. (Hebrews 10:3-10.) When He had accomplished that purpose, He no longer had need of human nature; but as He had foretold, He ascended to where He was before to the spirit nature and, later on, to Heaven itself.

To assume that Jesus is a fleshly being in Heaven, bearing wounds and scars to all eternity, is to imply that the Father never really exalted Him to the glory which He had before the world was (John 17:5), and is unscriptural. The Scriptures plainly show that the Father highly exalted our Redeemer "far above angels, principalities and powers."

"JESUS SHOWED HIMSELF"

St. Luke declares that Jesus showed Himself alive after His resurrection (Acts 1:3). In every way He manifested the fact that a great change had taken place with Him. He appeared and showed Himself not only in different bodies, unlike each other, but also in different clothing. When He suddenly disappeared, the clothing disappeared also.

The stranger who overtook the two disciples en route to Emmaus inquired, Why so sad? Astonished that He did not know, they explained that the chief priests and rulers had delivered up and crucified Jesus, a prophet mighty before God and the people. Their hope that He was Messiah had been crushed. Then they told the events of that very morning that some women of their company had found His tomb empty and had seen angels, who said that He was alive.

This gave Jesus opportunity to explain quietly that their experiences were part of the Divine Plan; that it was necessary that Messiah should thus suffer, in order to become King of Glory and bless mankind. He pointed out from Scripture what God had foretold respecting Messiah's experiences. He probably showed that when Isaac was offered up by Abraham, he foreshadowed Jesus' death and resurrection; that the smitten rock represented Messiah, who must be smitten in order to give the Water of Life to humanity; that the serpent lifted up in the wilderness typified Messiah's crucifixion; and that the passover lamb typified Jesus, "the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world." No wonder their hearts burned within them!

“THEY KNEW HIM HE VANISHED”

When the travelers arrived in Emmaus, something in their guest's manner of asking the blessing at supper reminded them of Jesus. Their eyes of understanding began to open. Then, having fulfilled the purpose of His Materialization, Jesus vanished clothes and all.

Unable to sleep, the disciples returned to Jerusalem, and there learned that Jesus had manifested Himself to Peter. Then they told their experiences; and faith, hope and joy began to grow in all their hearts.

3H590

During the forty days following our Lord's resurrection, He only twice appeared in a form similar to that which they had seen, bearing the marks of crucifixion. On both occasions He appeared and vanished while the doors were shut

The New York World, May 31, 1914

THE LORD'S ASCENSION

Pastor Russell's famous photo-drama of creation beautifully pictures our Lord's ascension and the subsequent outpouring of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost. The educational value of pictures is well known; and the public are very appreciative of the drama as a means of instruction along biblical lines. Wherever it is presented, large crowds are in daily attendance.

The pastor's text today was: "When He ascended up on high, He led a multitude of captives." Eph. 4:8, margin.

It is appropriate, began the pastor, that on this day, celebrated as the anniversary of Pentecost, we should have well in mind what we celebrate. Ten days ago was the anniversary of our Lord's ascension. In one sense of the word, our Lord Jesus ascended at the time of His resurrection from the dead; for then He left the human nature and the tomb for the divine nature and immortality. He tarried, however, for the space of forty days after His resurrection, that He might establish and instruct His apostles.

During that time He was invisible to them, except when He manifested Himself by appearing miraculously in various forms to convince them that He was no longer dead, and that He was no longer confined to human conditions that His resurrection had made Him a spirit being again, on a higher plane than He was before He took human nature for the suffering of death in order to redeem humanity.

The pastor went on to explain carefully that during the period between His resurrection and His ascension our Lord taught His followers not alone by His words but also by His conduct. They had not yet received the Holy Spirit, the speaker declared, and hence could not understand or appreciate spiritual things. They could therefore receive instruction only along natural lines.

Jesus was raised from the dead a spirit being, far above angels, principalities and powers. Had He gone directly to the Father without manifesting Himself to His disciples, they would not have been able to understand the truth of the matter. Hence their lessons were given them largely in pantomime, corroborated by the Master's words, explaining that it was necessary for Messiah to die in order to redeem the world, and that it was also necessary for Him to rise from the dead and to ascend on high and re-enter the spiritual plane of existence in order that from that higher plane of being He might be the more capable of filling the great office of prophet, priest and king for mankind.

THE PENTECOSTAL BLESSINGS

After forty days during which He was invisibly present with His disciples, except on the few occasions when He manifested Himself for a few moments each, our Lord ascended to heaven. Ten days afterward the Holy Spirit came from the Father upon the waiting household of faith. The outpouring of the spirit evidenced to them that they were justified freely from all things through the merit of the Redeemer's sacrifice, that their consecration to sacrifice themselves had been accepted of the Father, and that thenceforth they might count themselves as joint sacrificers with Christ, members of His body, members of "the church of the first-borns, written in heaven," members of the seed of Abraham, in whom all the families of the earth are to be blessed.

The pastor then demonstrated that only Jews received the pentecostal blessings. Until three and a half years thereafter, in harmony with a divine promise made to the Jews, the gentiles were excluded. Then the time came for the gospel to go to the gentiles. The record informs us the Cornelius was the first gentile to be received into spiritual relationship with God. Until God's due time for "the middle wall of partition" between Jew and gentile to be broken down, he could not receive the spiritual blessings. Even then he was received not because of his works and prayer, but because of faith in the redemptive sacrifice offered upon Calvary.

SEEN BY SAUL OF TARSUS

The apostles were to bear witness to the resurrection of Jesus; but Judas, having lost his place, which was given to St. Paul, it was proper that the latter should also be able to bear witness to Jesus' resurrection. Recounting those who had seen our Lord after His resurrection, St. Paul says, "Last of all He was seen of me also, as of one born before the time." Jesus appeared to St. Paul in the glory of His spirit being, "shining above the brightness of the sun” at noonday. The sight caused injury to Saul’s eyes.

The pastor then pointed out how inappropriate and unsatisfactory such a manifestation would have been if the Redeemer had so appeared to the eleven during the forty days following His resurrection. They could not possibly have identified the glorious personage who shone above the brightness of the noonday sun with the Lord Jesus, their friend, their teacher. But to Saul of Tarsus the revealing in fiery light, above the noonday glare, was very appropriate. It convinced him in a manner that no human appearance could have equaled that Jesus was no longer a man and that He was no impostor. St. Paul’s conversion was instantaneous.

It should not cause us to marvel that Jesus ascended, as He declared, “up to where He was before,” said the pastor. It should not surprise us that the apostle declares that our Lord ascended in dignity and station far above angels, principalities and powers, and above every name that is named. On the contrary, it would be both equitable and Godlike that the great Jehovah should highly honor His faithful Son, the first and last, the beginning and the ending of the creation of God. Could we, he asked, for one moment suppose that our great Creator would permit this faithful Son, or any servant, to lay down life in the divine service and to suffer loss as a consequence of his obedience? Is it not much more rational to believe, as the scriptures declare, that “Him hath God highly exalted”?

EXTREME HUMILIATION AND EXALTATION

Pastor Russell called attention to the apostle’s phraseology in the context that the one who ascended had previously descended, and that the descending and ascending were related as cause and effect. The one who has ascended on high completely fills the highest position in the great divine government of the universe as head of principalities and powers, angels and men next to the great Jehovah. Yet, as the apostle warns us, we must not identify this glorified one with the one who in obedience to the Father’s will came down from heaven and as a man humbled himself unto death, even the ignominious death of the cross. The apostle calls attention to these two extremes of humiliation and exaltation both accomplished in the Son of God, the Logos, the Messiah, the Christ.

The pastor then showed that if some of us at one time had supposed that our Lord Jesus ascended to heaven in a physical condition, as a man, we had entirely misunderstood the scriptures. To suppose that Jesus went to heaven a man, the pastor maintained, is to mistake the significance of His title, the Son of Man, which He preserves as identifying Him with His great redemptive work as one of His many titles. To suppose that Jesus is in heaven a human being, he declared, is to suppose that He is still, as when on earth, “a little lower than the angels,” whereas the scriptures state that He has ascended far higher, so that not only men but also all the angels of God are commanded to worship Him. To suppose Jesus in heaven a human being is to suppose Him out of all harmony with heavenly surroundings and spiritual conditions.

Moreover, the speaker queried, are we not told that the Church of Christ will be changed from the human condition to the spiritual condition in the resurrection, and that this change will make them like their Redeemer, so that they may see Him as He is, not as He was; that they may see Him in glory, honor and immortality exaltation and not as the one who in humiliation was made flesh that He might sacrifice His flesh on behalf of the race of Adam? Answering his own question, he declared that when we so thought we forgot the scriptural assertion that “flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God.” This statement of scripture implies that all who become partakers of the divine nature and share in the heavenly kingdom with their Lord and Redeemer must be made like Him by the power of the first resurrection.

DIFFICULTIES OF UNBELIEVERS

The pastor declared that he had found worldly wise people very skeptical respecting the descent of the Logos, the Son of God, to earthly conditions, but that Christians seem to have more difficulty than does the world to comprehend the ascension of Jesus to the spirit plane and its excellent glory. Both points, however, are important. Whoever is unable to see that the Logos, the glorious Son of the Highest, humbled Himself, divested Himself of the spirit nature and took instead the human nature, cannot see that Jesus was sinless. And those who cannot recognize that He was holy harmless, undefiled and separate from sinners, cannot believe in the sacrifice of Jesus as being a ransom for Adam, to effect his release and that of his posterity from condemnation to death.

Pastor Russell went into considerable detail respecting the method by which the Logos was transferred from heavenly conditions to earthly conditions. He showed that the purity of the Logos, His perfection of organism, His freedom from sin, was preserved, notwithstanding the fact that He was born of an earthly mother who was not free from the blemishes of the Adamic race. The speaker proffered his hearers, free on application, a treatise entitled “The Undefiled One,” which he believes shows scientifically the process used of God by which the Logos was changed from the higher to the human nature, yet preserved immaculate.

A SERIOUS ERROR AMONG CHRISTIANS

The error of supposing that Jesus is still a man was shown to signify the denial of His statement that He would ascend up where He was before, and of St. Paul's teaching that He has been highly exalted to glory and distinction the divine nature, instead of the human nature. This error, the pastor declared, has led to other errors, one of which he cited, namely, that made by many Christian people of expecting the second coming of Jesus in the flesh as a glorious man and not as a glorious spirit, partaker of the divine and altogether disassociated from human nature. Thinking of our Lord at His second advent as a glorified man, they associated Him with a material throne and an earthly court. The unreasonableness of this error leads other Christian people in an opposite direction. Realizing that such an earthly kingdom would be a step backward rather than forward, they deny the second coming of Christ to establish the long promised Messianic kingdom.

The proper thought, the speaker declared, is that Jesus accomplished in the flesh the work which the Father had given Him to do when He sacrificed His earthly life. The Father rewarded Him gloriously by exalting Him to the highest spirit plane. Now our glorified Lord is waiting for the gathering of His elect, His church, His bride. These are to share in His resurrection to the divine nature and to sit with Him in His throne. Then the kingdom of Messiah, so long promised, will begin to bless the world, using as its earthly representatives, visible to men, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and all the ancient worthies mentioned in Hebrews 11.

A MULTITUDE OF CAPTIVES

The pastor then showed that his text figuratively represents the ascension of our Lord from the earthly plane to the heavenly as the triumph of a great conqueror. Sin had gained ascendance over Adam and his race, and had brought them down to the dust, mentally, morally and physically. Moreover, this victory over mankind had been gained in a legal manner through the one man's disobedience. The Logos divested Himself and His glory on the spirit plan, was made flesh, fulfilled the demands of the law, proved Himself competent to pay the sinner's ransom price and "gave Himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time." Having finished His sacrificial work, He was again received to the spirit nature with exceeding glory and to the right hand of God.

Thus, he continued, the great conqueror is seen returning to the heavenly state, acclaimed by the heavenly host, and far down the centuries the prophetic view sees following Him a great procession. First comes the church, the royal priesthood, His brethren, delivered from the power of sin and death through the merit of Jesus' blood. These are only the vanguard of an advancing host; they are "a kind of first fruits to God of His creatures," rescued from sin and death. Later on, for a period of a thousand years beyond the deliverance of the church, the prophetic pen foretells countless hosts of every nation, people, kindred and tongue, to be delivered from the power of sin and death through the merit of Him who died on calvary.

Then will come the glorious consummation, the pastor said. When all who will have refused divine grace shall have been destroyed in the second death, then shall be heard every creature in heaven and on earth saying, "Blessing and honor and glory and power be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb, forever and ever."

THE ACCEPTABLE YEAR OF THE LORD

The pastor then explained that at our Lord's first advent began "the acceptable year of the Lord" the time when God, having accepted the sacrifice of Christ Jesus, became willing to accept the sacrifices of all who desire to become His disciples to take up their cross and follow Him through good report and evil report, even unto death. The entire gospel age, he declared, antitypes Israel's atonement day; and the sacrifices of our Lord and the church are the "better sacrifices," foreshadowed by the bullock and the goat offered typically by the Jews. This antitypical atonement day is "the acceptable year of the Lord," as Jesus pointed out, God's faithful people of this acceptable day are glad to be invited to "present their bodies living sacrifices, holy and acceptable unto God." In the end of this acceptable day will come the end of all opportunity thus to sacrifice the human nature and become joint heirs with Jesus Christ our Lord.

TIMES OF RESTITUTION

After the gospel age has passed away, the pastor declared, there will be a new period introduced styled in the Scriptures "The Times of Restitution." The acceptable day for the sacrifice of the church has lasted for nearly nineteen centuries, he said; and the Scriptures clearly indicate that the times of restitution will last a thousand years. St. Peter tells us just when these times of restitution will begin. They will begin as a result of the second establishment of His kingdom. Then "times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord; and He shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you; whom the heavens must retain until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all His holy prophets since the world began." Acts 3:19-21.

STUDY TO SHOW THYSELF APPROVED UNTO GOD

The Photo-Drama of Creation, which is being exhibited throughout the United States, is awakening new interest in the Bible. Many who have seen the photo-drama have expressed their satisfaction with its beautiful presentation of the prominent features of scripture and with its clear explanation of some points which long have puzzled critical people. Whoever sees it thereby obtains a grasp upon the Bible as a whole. The public are certainly grateful to Pastor Russell, through whose instrumentality this wonderful work of art is being exhibited.

Today the pastor's text was, "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." 2 Tim. 2:15.

We are all sadly aware that not many of the people of God have the full assurance of faith mentioned in the scriptures, the speaker said. Indeed, we must all admit that the great majority are losing, not only their faith, but also the foundation of faith. For years the great colleges of Christendom have been undermining faith by undermining belief in the Bible. While they do not make an attack upon faith itself, while they all admit that faith may have its place as a grand quality of character, and that the scriptures instruct for faith, yet they proceed to do the very same kind of work that Robert Ingersoll and Thomas Paine tried to accomplish to undermine confidence in the Bible as the word of God. That confidence is the very basis of all faith.

After we have lost our confidence, what have we left for a foundation of belief? We have merely what is called higher criticism and evolution; and this means that after a little process of reasoning along these lines many would conclude that the Bible is merely a collection of choice pieces of ancient Jewish literature, written by men who really knew less than we do.

The pastor then demonstrated that those who reject the Bible as the Word of God have no other foundation for whatever faith they may possess than the guess of this or that man, or of themselves. He pointed out the well-known fact that all men are more or less imperfect in judgment; and that if men were to picture God there would be as many different styles of God as there are different persons.

The speaker illustrated his point by calling attention to the numerous creeds formulated during the dark ages and to the different kinds of Gods those different creeds have pictured. The noblest minds of that time were deceived into worshiping the worst kind of images that could be made. He declared that while the heathen nations were making their ugly idols out of wood, stone, clay or metal, the nations of Christendom were printing atrocious descriptions of God the like of which could not be molded out of clay or fashioned out of anything else. He was not finding fault with our forefathers, but with the real instigator or the creedal misrepresentations of the Almighty. As St. Paul declares, "The god of this world hath blinded the minds of them that believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ should shine unto them."

THE CAUSE OF THE FALLING AWAY

Then the pastor showed that the eyes of many Christians are not wide open for the same reason that St. Paul gave the Corinthian church. The god of this world has fastened the bandages so tightly that it is with difficulty that any get the eyes of their understanding open. Again, St. Paul foretells that in the end of this age "many shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of persons." The pastor declared that we have come to the time when many have denied the faith and others are denying it good people, intelligent people, ministers of the gospel in the various pulpits, professors theologians, college presidents confessing that they have lost the basis of their faith.

We are not to suppose for even a moment that these people who are falling away from the faith are wicked. On the contrary, they are well-intentioned many of them fine people. But they have gotten under a delusion. In the light of the New Dispensation the delusions of the past are coming up constantly for criticism. Indeed so great is the conflict between the light of the gospel and the darkness of the creeds that people "see stars," so to speak, and are so astonished that they do not know what to think.

Next the pastor demonstrated that the great difficulty with people who are losing their confidence in the Bible as the word of God is that they are not familiar with its contents. Many are still holding to the scriptures in a blind way, hoping against hope that they may not lose their faith. They are afraid to read and afraid to think, lest they lose the very small amount of faith which they possess. If only such knew it, they never really have had a well-established faith.

FAITH VERSUS CREDULITY

The pastor proceeded to point out the difference between true faith and that which is often misnamed faith, but which in reality is credulity. The faith commanded in the scriptures is that which relates to things which God has promised. Our forefathers, he declared, had too much confidence in men. They swallowed the creeds of the dark ages; and the more absurd the proposition the more faith they thought they had. They should have asked: "Where has God declared such things?" He maintains that we should accept by faith only what the Lord has assured us of in His word.

We have made a great mistake as to what faith really is, he thinks. Faith must have a basis, and that basis must have some intelligent presentation. To believe in the Bible as the word of God merely because our parents did so is not faith at all; heathen peoples do just as well as that they believe as their parents did, without investigation. But to have faith in the Bible we must have proof that it is of God; and to have that evidence we must understand the word.

The pastor holds that most people are so perplexed that they do not know what to believe. And yet, he declared, at this very time when higher criticism is undermining the foundation of all faith, and when many intelligent people are afraid to think along scriptural lines, Bible Students are finding the word of God to be the most wonderful book in all the world. God's plan for human salvation was never so well understood as just now, in the midst of all the turmoil in the denominations, in the great institutions of learning and in the world.

PROOFS THAT THE BIBLE IS INSPIRED

The pastor then discussed some of the so-called findings of higher criticism that Moses did not write the Pentateuch, nor Isaiah the greater part of the prophecy which bears his name, etc. These critics, he declared, are trying to prove something by the outside of the Bible.

Their so-called findings he believes to be a matter of mere guesswork, although, as some of them are very bright men, they put up a strong argument in some things. They will undertake to prove that Jesus was mistaken when He declared that Isaiah the Prophet said thus and so; that St. Paul was also mistaken when he quoted from the Prophet Isaiah and said Thus saith the Prophet; that Daniel did not write the book which bears his name or, if he did, that it was fulfilled before the Christian era, notwithstanding Jesus; assertion to the contrary.

The pastor, like all reasoning Christian people, relies upon the internal evidences of the Bible that it is the word of God. That internal evidence cannot be doubted. The Old Testament prophecies and the teachings of the Lord and the apostles so interlock and depend one upon the other that no human being could possibly have thought out the great plan therein found.

All the way from Genesis to Revelation the parts so co-ordinate and fit together that one great, harmonious plan of the ages is the result.

Another strong proof of the inspiration of the Bible is furnished in present day conditions, which were foretold by the prophets thousands of years ago.

BIBLE NOT MAN-MADE

Then the speaker considered some of the objections to the Bible usually brought forward by infidels. He showed that it is a weak argument indeed which credits priests and knaves with writing the sacred book. If Catholics had made the Bible, they would naturally have put into it many things which are not there; for instance, they would have told about the mass, about purgatory, hell-fire and eternal torment, of which there is nothing said; they would also have intimated that we should use beads and images in worship; they would have had something about the immaculate conception of the Virgin, and about St. Peter's being the first pope, etc.

If, on the other hand, Presbyterians had written the Bible, they would have put in a great deal about hell, about elect and non-elect infants, etc. Methodists would have left out all about election making one's calling and election sure, the very elect, etc. for they do not know what to do with these texts. Our Calvinistic friend would have left out the texts about free grace; for these do not fit with their ideas of election. All these denominations would have inserted something in regard to "the trinity;" for they all hold that this doctrine is the very essence of faith, although it is not mentioned once in the Bible. The pastor's conclusion is that clearly the denominations did not make the Bible.

From its own standpoint, the speaker continued, the Bible is very simple and fully explains itself. He did not wish to be misunderstood as "poking fun" at the denominations; for he realizes that these dear people meant well, and he loves all who love the Lord. But he believes that the whole world is greatly injured by the false conception of God's character handed down from the dark ages, and that many people are going after sin today who would, if they had a right knowledge of God, be following after righteousness. Many men have been led to drinking and all sorts of debauchery and sin merely by reason of not seeing the real God, for if any one see Him, he is sure to love Him. Mankind is so made that worship is natural.

Notwithstanding the 6,000 years of falling, there is in every man's brain, unless he be an idiot, the quality of reverence, which impels him to desire to worship his Creator. But, according to St. Paul's argument in his letter to the Romans, although man was created perfect, there came a time in the history of the fallen race when men were unwilling longer to retain God in their minds; and then the Almighty gave them over to reprobate minds, to do improper things and to sink lower and lower in degradation. Then it was that the “doctrines of demons” were inculcated into the human mind, so as to keep men in ignorance, darkness and superstition. The god of this world blinds the minds of those who believe not blinds them by these various false doctrines which once God’s people believed.

The pastor then gave the two views of the Almighty which once obtained in the thoughts of many Christians. One side of our minds, as it were, pictured God as the great representative of satanic energy, bent upon destroying nearly all the creatures whom He had brought into the world.

The other side, somehow, imagined Him as kind, loving and merciful. But we did not know how to balance these two sides. Fortunately for us, however, we got the devilish side subordinated, and thought of God as loving, and by going to Him daily in prayer we tried to forget the devilish part. The whole world has been more or less in this condition.

But thank God! said the pastor, we are in the time when the path of the just is shining more and more unto the perfect day. That day is now so near that we can almost see its dawn. In a little while the Church of Christ will have been fully gathered out of every people, nation, kindred and tongue, out of all denominations.

FULL ASSURANCE OF FAITH

The pastor then explained how the consecrated people of God may have full assurance of faith. In His word God tells us that by nature we were children of wrath even as other; that Christ tasted death for the whole world and that by and by He will give human life restitution life to all who will receive it; but that meantime the call is for those who will separate themselves from the world and be “a peculiar people, zealous of good works” of everything that is God’s will and ready to lay down their lives in doing that will. Those who know that such is that teaching of scripture have a good basis for faith. Those who have taken the steps of repentance of sin, of trusting in the Redeemer for salvation, of consecrating themselves to God, now have by faith all those graces of character reckoned to them which the world will actually receive during the thousand years of the reign of Christ. To the consecrated the Father has fulfilled His promise by giving them a measure of His holy spirit.

Lest any should misapprehend his meaning, the pastor explained that the Holy Spirit is not now manifested in the same way that it was in the early church. At that time it was manifested in a miraculous way with outward evidences, such as tongues, miracles of healing, etc., attesting that those who received these gifts were acceptable to God as members of His church, and had been begotten of the Holy Spirit. But after the church had been established, there was no further need of such manifestations.

Throughout the remainder of the gospel age the Holy Spirit has manifested itself only by the fruits of righteousness meekness, gentleness, patience, brotherly kindness love.

When the miraculous gifts ceased, these fruits and graces of the Spirit continued.

The pastor concluded with an exhortation that the people of God see to it that they daily grow in grace and in knowledge, becoming more and more like the Lord Jesus in character. Our Lord said that every tree is known by its fruit. Are we bearing good fruit? he asked. Are we having more and more fellowship with God and with our Lord Jesus? Are we getting into deeper and broader sympathy with all of the household of faith? Are we coming more and more into sympathy with the poor world in its fallen condition, and with every good effort to help them up out of such condition? If so, then we have evidence not only that we have believed in the right book and in the true God, but that we are the children of God and heirs joint heirs with Jesus Christ, our Lord.

We shall be tested as to our willingness to suffer with our Lord. This does not mean suffering for wrong-doing; for ST. Peter reminds us that a Christian who suffers as a busybody in other men's affairs is not suffering for Christ's sake. Perhaps one-third of the suffering in the world and in the church results from busy-bodilying. But the people of God are not to suffer as evil-doers, but such suffering is not for evil-doing, even if they be so blamed. But "if any man suffer, let him suffer as a Christian." The speaker reminded his hearers that Jesus himself was accused of being an evil-doer, a blasphemer, an injurious person; and so were the apostles all their persecutions were on that score. But what the Apostle Peter says is that if you suffer let it be for something right that you have done, in harmony with your covenant with God, in harmony with God's word and will. Those who suffer as Christians should rejoice therein; for the Spirit of God and of glory rests on all such, and they may have full assurance of faith.

THE GREAT TEACHER AND HIS SCHOOL

London, June 14 Pastor Russell is here, and in the Princess Theater today presented his famous "Photo-Drama of Creation." It received a royal welcome. This was the opening exhibition of a program on this side of the Atlantic which includes the principal cities of both Great Britain and the continent.

Pastor Russell in his discourse chose that feature of his "Creation Drama" which relates to "The Great Teacher and His School." His text was "Learn of me, for I am meek and lowly of heart." Matt. 11:29.

The pastor began his discourse with the statement that there is only one way by which to get rid of one's sins belief in the Lord Jesus Christ. But mere intellectual belief, he declared, does not accomplish this result. The Bible says that devils believe and tremble. They are not justified by their believing. Neither are we justified by merely believing. We must do something more. The believer who acts on his belief and who shows that he really means what he says will make a full consecration of himself to God. From the standpoint of the scriptures a believer is a disciple, a follower, a pupil.

The pastor went on to demonstrate that the school of Christ is not open to everybody. The whole world of mankind are not in the school of Christ, with some taking more lessons and others fewer. There is one definite way of entering this school and becoming a pupil of the great Master Teacher. Hear the terms in His own words, "If any man will come after Me (become My disciple pupil), let him deny himself, take up his cross and follow Me." Only those who present their bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God through the merit of the Redeemer imputed to them and received by faith, are enrolled in the school of Christ. In other words, only the members of the church which is the body of Christ are in His school, being taught of God through His word.

Addressing the church, St. Paul says: "We are His workmanship." God has been working in the church by His providences and by His word of truth, working in us by our experiences, which He made for us and which He gives us. All these things are designed by the Lord to bless us and to develop us into His own character likeness that, as the Master said, we may be like unto our Father in heaven that we may be holy, even as He is holy that our intentions, our aims and our desires may be exactly like those of God.

THE PRIMARY LESSON

The pastor reminded his audience that when a child enters school for the first time he has merely put himself into the hands of his teacher for instruction. It requires years of patient training and study before he can be said to have an education, and still more instruction before he can become a teacher himself. This, he said, is exactly the picture which God gives us in respect to the church. During this gospel age He has invited the church class to enter the school of Christ and prepare for the great work of human uplift during the incoming age.

The royal priesthood will all be teachers. Under the Jewish arrangement the priests were all teachers, instructors of the people, helping them in every way in respect to morals. The royal priests will also have authority to rule the world for its good. None but those whom God can intrust with this great power will be qualified to use it to uplift the world.

The pastor than explained that those enrolled in the school of Christ are taught a great variety of lessons. The first of these is meekness teachableness. None will be qualified for the great work of the future who has not been thoroughly taught this valuable lesson. He declared that there is probably a greater lack along the line of teachableness than along any other line. Self-conceit and self-will are qualities which prevent their possessors from being teachable meek.

Those who are good pupils in the school of Christ will hear the Master's voice instructing them that of themselves they are nothing and can do nothing; that they need His assistance all along the way; that they need first of all to be taught of God through the great Teacher whom the Father has appointed to give them instruction. Through the prophecies and through His word He teaches all who are in His school. The voice of Jesus comes to all His pupils, speaking to them through the scriptures and the various experiences of life.

Those consecrated children of God who have not learned the lesson of meekness have not learned even the primary lesson. Whoever says, "Lord, I want my own way; this is what I prefer and what I intend to have," is certainly not teachable, and cannot make progress in spiritual things. The Lord will not force such to do His way; during this age He is not seeking those who must be forced to do His will. He will use force on those who need it during the next age.

Throughout the gospel age the call has been for those who declare in their covenant that they desire to do the will of God, and who will sacrifice their lives in order to do that will. After they have made this contract with Him, and He has accepted them and sealed the contract by giving them the earnest of the Holy Spirit, they cannot repudiate their agreement. They must either go on to everlasting life or perish in the second death.

OTHER LESSONS TO BE LEARNED

The pastor dwelt for some time upon the subject of meekness. Some people, he declared, find this a difficult lesson to learn. But things are pretty well balanced. The man who is naturally very meek and teachable usually has disadvantages in other ways. People will impose upon him; for they are apt to impose upon the meek, as we all know. The man with a great deal of self-esteem and only a little meekness will get along better by himself, but will have his difficulty in coming under the hand of the Lord. The speaker reminded his hearers that they cannot alter the shape of their heads. Those who were born with a proud spirit have so much more to battle against. Those who were born with a humble mind will have difficulties along other lines, but will find it easier to learn meekness than will the proud-spirited. But since the Lord puts meekness first, no one will make progress in the school of Christ until he has learned to be meek; for meekness signifies teachableness.

The pastor then went on to the other subjects taught in this unique school. Next in order come humility, gentleness, patience, long-suffering and brotherly kindness. Gentleness is very important. Whoever is rude and boisterous will not be ready to learn, and therefore will not be in a proper condition to be used of the Lord until he has learned brotherly kindness, until he can be kind to all the brethren and love them all. He must be gentle toward all so as not to offend or hurt them or stumble them. Whoever is gentle will always desire to be assistful to the brethren; this is characteristic of the spirit of the Lord. Whoever is devoid of these qualities which go to make up love must acquire them if he would be graduated from the school of Christ.

Then, lest anyone should be discouraged, the pastor explained that the flesh of some who are really overcomers may never become as gentle as that of others who naturally possess this desirable quality, but that they must have this quality in the mind or will; for the Lord will judge them by their desires, their endeavors, their efforts. Whoever will be of the kingdom class must be meek and gentle, no matter what he may be according to the flesh.

HOW LESSONS ARE LEARNED

The pastor illustrated the methods by which the Master teaches His pupils to acquire these essential graces of the Holy Spirit. If a disciple of Jesus does something wrong, the Master expects him to be meek enough to go to the person injured and acknowledge that he is wrong. This discipline will be good for the unruly pupil, and will help him to be more meek the next time he is tempted. If a follower of the Lord has been rude in some respects, he should offer suitable apologies. This will teach him to be more gentle in the future.

So by their difficulties the pupils in the school of Christ learn the required lessons. If they cannot learn in one way, they must try another, for learn they must. Otherwise they will not be fit for the kingdom; for these are qualities of heart and mind which the Lord demands from all who would be acceptable to Him. If the Lord finds that the pupil's mind is meek, humble, gentle, patient, kind and loving, He will make allowance for the faults of the body; and in the resurrection He will give that pupil a body which will carry out the intentions of the mind.

The pastor urged all who know themselves to be disciples of Jesus, pupils in the great Teacher's school to keep their hearts right with God and then to do the very best that they can do. He advised such to see to it that the body gets the proper discipline. The new mind must keep the body under control. If it was rude to somebody, humble it, teach it to be meek by saying "You must go and tell that person that you are sorry for what you have done." Of course, he declared, this will go "against the grain"; but it is better to yield and thus learn the needed lesson than to lose the kingdom. All such self-discipline is part of the process of preparation for the kingdom work.

The standard of character development which the pastor upholds is very high. He declared that whoever would be graduated with honors from the school of Christ must be so meek, so humble, so teachable, so patient, that he will be ready to receive instruction from the Master in whatever way He may see fit to send it whether through trials, difficulties, sickness, etc., or through books, hymns, or in any other way. No matter how it comes, if it brings us "the light of the knowledge of the glory of God," if it scatters our darkness, ignorance, superstition, if it brings us out into His marvelous light, we may be sure that God has done it for us, because we could not have done it for ourselves.

COMMENCEMENT DAY IS COMING

The pastor then showed that ultimately two classes will be graduated from the school of Christ. One class will receive very high honors glory, immortality, joint heirship with our Lord Jesus Christ in His millennial kingdom. The other class will be servants of God and will serve Him by rendering assistance to the kingdom class. Under another figure these classes are designated in Psa. 45, as "the king's daughter" and "the virgins her companions, that follow her."

The speaker next showed why there are to be those two classes and what has made the difference between them. The first class is constituted of those pupils that are so intent upon learning their lessons and of being graduated with honors that they not only study carefully their textbook, the Word of God, but they watch the Lord's eye, as it were, bent upon seeing what is His will concerning them. To these He has given the precious promise, "I will guide thee with Mine eye." Their reply is, "As the eyes of servants look unto the hand of their masters, and as the eyes of a maiden unto the hand of her mistress, so our eyes wait upon the Lord our God, until that He have mercy upon us." Psa. 123:2.

The thought is that this class are all attention to see what they can render to the Lord, watching to see what He wishes them to do. They do not wait until He disciplines them severely. This little flock class will be composed of such as can be guided by the will of the Lord, such as are so anxious to do His will, so alert, so willing, to do anything they can do at any time He may choose, as to be “instant in season, out of season,” to themselves. Those who possess this spirit will be of the first class to be graduated from the school of Christ.

The second class to be graduated will be very large in number, the pastor said. It will consist of those pupils who are rather slow, and who busy themselves with unimportant things. In figurative language, they are inclined to play during study hours and to forget the rules. Yet they are neither bad nor unruly. They are well-intentioned pupils, but somehow they do not properly study their lessons. They are inclined to study a little, then play a little, then study a little more, etc. These pupils require to be “kept in” after school frequently, and occasionally need a little switching. But they finally finish their course and are graduated.

Dropping the figure of the schoolroom the pastor discussed this second class for a time. These, he declared, will not be on the throne, as will the little flock class. Instead of wearing golden crowns, this great company will have palm branches in their hands; instead of receiving the divine nature, they will be of a spirit nature like unto the angels. But their condition will be very blessed, for anything which the Master has to give will be good.

This class, the speaker said, will be composed of very good people, well-meaning people; but they are not up to the standard which the Lord desires for the Kingdom class. Whoever would be of the highest class should see to it that he reaches that standard. Those who will get the first place are those who catch the spirit of the Master and are loyal to Him and His cause, thus proving themselves to be worthy of His love. As He has said, “He that loveth father or mother more than Me is not worthy of Me. And he that taketh not his cross and followeth after Me, is not worthy of Me.”

AFTER COMMENCEMENT--WHAT

The pastor then declared that according to the Scriptures we are on the eve of a great change of dispensation, that the One who redeemed the world is about to take His great power and reign. Those pupils in the school of Christ who are most attentive to the Master’s voice speaking through the Word of God are hearing wonderful things pertaining to God’s plan of salvation. Those who are obedient to what they hear are getting a clearer understanding in proportion to their obedience. Those who are in-attentive and those who refuse to hear will not understand, but will surely suffer in the coming time of trouble—”such as never was since there was a nation“; “no, nor ever shall be,” as Jesus said.

By way of conclusion, the pastor exhorted all consecrated Christians to greater earnestness in striving to make their calling and election sure. He reminded such that they were not called merely to make a consecration, but to enter the school of Christ, to learn of the Master, to be taught by Him, in order to be developed in heart and mind and in every way qualified to be with the Lord and to share with Him in His glory, honor and immortality.

To accomplish this result, they must receive chiseling and polishing blow after blow, experience after experience, trial after trial. To all who are rightly exercised by this discipline the blessed result will be character-likeness to our dear Redeemer, who as a new creature was also “perfected by the things which He suffered.” With all such who are faithful to their Lord the experiences of life will develop meekness, gentleness, patience, long suffering, brotherly kindness and love. And thus, having finished their course in the school of Christ, there shall be ministered unto them an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ.

GOD HATH QUICKENED US TOGETHER WITH CHRIST

On the Atlantic, Homeward Bound, June 21 After successfully launching his famous Creation drama in Princess Theater in London last Sunday the first of a series of exhibitions that will extend throughout the principal cities of the United Kingdom and the continent Pastor Russell is on the Atlantic homeward bound. While abroad the pastor also lectured in many cities and was the principal speaker at a general convention of the International Bible Students' Association held in the British metropolis. Today the pastor's text was, “Even when we were dead in sins, God hath quickened us together with Christ.” Eph. 2:5.

The pastor began with a review of the trial of Adam in Eden. He proved conclusively that our first parents were created perfect, in the image and likeness of their Creator. Adam disobeyed God, and thus brought upon himself and all his posterity the sentence of death, “Dying, thou shalt die.” “So death passed upon all men“; for all men are members of the race of Adam. All are under the curse of death, which came upon the world as the result of sin.

The speaker also showed that we were not condemned personally, for we were not on trial personally. Father Adam alone was on trial, and when he failed he was sentenced to death. God's great Law declares that “all unrighteousness is sin“; that “the wages of sin is death,” and that “the soul that sins shall die.” Adam's children were born in sin born after his fall from perfection. Therefore it naturally follows that they partake of imperfection; and if the perfect man did not keep God's perfect law how could imperfect man keep it?

Having demonstrated that all mankind are under the curse of death by reason of Father Adam's disobedience, the pastor next discussed the proposition which the Bible sets before the race. That proposition is not a question of heaven or hell, but one of life or death eternal. To those who are in harmony with God, who delight to do His will, He is pleased to give life everlasting. But to those who are not in harmony with Him He has decreed to give death eternal, they shall not have any place whatever in all His universe.

For instance, God's provision for the angels was that since they were perfect, they should, if they maintained their perfection, live everlastingly. From God's standpoint, to live everlastingly the only way that He would have His intelligent creatures live at all is to live happily, to enjoy life, to live in pleasure. All the holy angels are happy, perfect and blessed; for they have not transgressed the law of God. So then, the speaker continued, we see why the scriptures teach that mankind are under the sentence of death. In fact, the Bible speaks of all mankind, the world in general, as a dead world not that there are no people who are active, not that all have gone down into the tomb, but that those who have entered the grave have merely preceded the others to the place whither all are going, because of the one sentence upon all.

GOD'S LOVING PURPOSE

The pastor next showed that, according to God's righteous law, mankind are now unfit to live under the perfect conditions which He has prepared. Even with the best of intentions, imperfect beings continually make trouble for themselves and others. In the present imperfect condition of the race, humanity would make trouble wherever they may be. This is contrary to the Divine will; God purposes to have a universe in which everybody shall be happy, everybody good, everybody perfect.

With some the question might arise, "Why did God make us imperfect?" The speaker, after propounding the question, then answered it: The Bible declares that God's work is perfect (Deut. 32:4). Humanity in their present imperfect condition are not God's work. God made Father Adam perfect. After Adam had become a sinner and had brought the curse of death upon himself, he propagated a race by the law of nature. Therefore all of his posterity were born in sin, and for 6,000 years have been falling, sinking lower in degradation. This is the scriptural explanation of human imperfection; this is why the very best of the race cannot do perfectly.

The pastor then declared that God does not expect humanity to do perfectly now, in their present fallen condition. The Creator gave the law to Israel for the very purpose of showing them, and incidentally proving to all men, that “by the deeds of the law no flesh can be justified in His sight.” God has decreed that none but the perfect shall have everlasting life, for none but the perfect can keep His righteous law. He has proved conclusively that no fallen human being can keep that law. Therefore none of us could have everlasting life if God had not done something for us. The story of what our gracious Creator has done is the “old, old story, of Jesus and His love” and the Heavenly Father’s love, also.

In the past we have failed to realize that God is love, even though we read, “God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him might not perish, but have everlasting life.” The proper thought is not that which is frequently given to children and frequently held by older persons that God is angry with us, and that He was about to send the entire race to eternal torment, when Jesus stepped in and saved us from so terrible a fate. This view makes our Heavenly Father appear most unloving and unjust, in that when He knew that we were imperfect and therefore could not do perfectly. He held us accountable for what we could not do. All Bible students are getting rid of this wrong conception of the Almighty Jehovah.

The right thought is that from the very foundation of the world God had a loving purpose in respect to mankind. He knew that the race would sin, but He also knew how in His great wisdom He could overrule the experience of these 6,000 years of sin and death, so that good would ultimately result. If God had not permitted sin, men would not have known how wrong it is and what evil conditions it promotes. Adam probably had no idea what would be the result of his disobedience. He did not know that it would bring sin, sorrow and mental and moral depravity into the world. He could not foresee the insane asylum, the prisons, etc. Not even the angels would have known the effect of sin if God had not permitted it to enter the universe.

PERMITTING SIN--CAUSING SIN

The pastor then showed the wide difference between permitting sin and causing sin. He declared that for God to have caused sin would have been for God to do evil. God does no evil; He tempts no man. He was not responsible for the entrance of sin into the world. God permitted Satan to have his own way and become a rebel against the divine government. He permitted him to pursue his downward course in order to let the angels see the result of sin. Therefore He did not hinder Satan from misrepresenting the divine character.

When Mother Eve came under temptation, God did not interfere. He let her alone. She knew His command; she had her full testing; she ate, and disobeyed. God also permitted Adam to disobey. Thus the reign of sin and death came into the world, with their tremendous influences for evil. Then He also permitted the angels to be tempted to sin in connection with mankind. After the deluge, God started a new order of things and let mankind and angels try again under somewhat different conditions.

Next the pastor declared that this reign of sin and death has illustrated certain principles. It has demonstrated what righteousness is, and has showed the necessity for obedience to God. It has also proved that there can be no happiness aside from perfect harmony with the Creator. Both men and angels have learned that whoever sins will suffer.

ISRAEL'S EXPERIENCE UNDER THE LAW COVENANT

The pastor next traced the history of Israel, and showed the purpose of the covenant made at Sinai, with Moses as mediator. Two thousand years after man's fall God made a covenant with Abraham that some day He would bless the world through Abraham's posterity. Still the angels had room to doubt; for Abraham was old and as yet had no child. Years passed by and finally Isaac was born. Still the world was not blessed. In due time God declared that the blessing would come through Jacob. When he died God indicated that Jacob's posterity would be heirs of the promise. But instead of blessing the world they became a nation of slaves. At length God raised up Moses, who led the nation through the wilderness to Mount Sinai, where they entered into covenant relationship with God. The terms of their covenant were that if they would obey the law they would become great, and all the world would come under their sway.

But it was only a little while before they found that they were sinners, for they could not keep His commandments. Then God arranged for them an annual day of atonement, on which sacrifices were offered to cover their sins for one year. So they tried year by year to live without sin so that they would not die, but be worthy to be the people of God. Yet they died, generation after generation. At last they realized that the fault was with themselves; they had entered into a contract which they could not keep. They had agreed to keep the law of God, and were not able to do so.

That was the very lesson which God declared, and not only Israel, but all humanity. The apostle explains that in dealing with Israel God was dealing typically, so that His people of the gospel age would get the lesson by seeing wherein Israel failed, and by realizing that had we been in their place we would have failed for the same reason.

By and by, through the prophets, God promised to give Israel another covenant, at some future day. This new covenant will be more favorable to them. The difference between the old law covenant and the new law covenant will not be in regard to God's law, for His is perfect. The scriptures declare that the difference will be in regard to the Mediator. Although Moses was faithful in all his house, yet he was a member of the fallen race of Adam, and therefore imperfect. He could not give the people life; for he had no real life rights to give any more than had anyone else. As a typical mediator he offered typical sacrifices, which could not really take away sin. But the mediator of the new covenant will be empowered to lift the curse of death and to restore not only Israel, but all mankind, to the image and likeness of God, from which they fell.

THE PURPOSE OF JESUS' DEATH

The pastor next discussed the work of the gospel age. About 2,000 years after the covenant made with Abraham, the Logos was made flesh, in order to become the seed of Abraham and bless all the families of the earth. Throughout the gospel age a most important work has been carried out. The new law covenant cannot be inaugurated until there is a mediator of that covenant. This mediator, the speaker showed, is to be Christ the Head, and the church His body.

In the typical ceremony, Moses could not institute the law covenant until first he had sacrificed bulls and goats. In the antitype the great antitypical Moses must first offer the "better sacrifices." Jesus first of all sacrificed Himself; now He must sacrifice the church. This work requires all of the gospel age. At Jordan, when He offered Himself in consecration, He killed the antitypical bullock; and later, He was "led like a lamb to the slaughter." At Pentecost our Lord began to deal with the antitypical-goat class the church. When the offering of the members of the church which is Christ's body is ended, then the body of the antitypical Moses will be complete. As St. Peter declares, "For Moses truly said unto the fathers, a prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me; Him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever He shall say unto you."

The time for the new covenant, the pastor believes, is near at hand. When the antitypical Moses brings in this covenant, He will remove the curse of death. According to the scriptures, it will take Him exactly 1,000 years to accomplish this work, to overcome sin, to dissolve the hard hearts of humanity, and to give instead the warm, tender, gentle, sympathetic heart that was lost in Eden 6,000 years ago.

ALIVE IN CHRIST

The church, the pastor declared, were dead in trespasses and sins, like the rest of the world. But God has quickened them made them alive through the imputation of the merit of Christ, in advance of the world. God's purpose in so doing is that He wishes now to select a special class from amongst mankind. But not everybody has been invited to be of this class. Millions in heathen lands have never heard of Jesus Christ; and all over the civilized world, there are people who have heard with their ears, but not with their minds. They do not comprehend that they are sinners, that God has provided a Savior and that He is now inviting some to come into covenant relationship with Himself. Prejudice, superstition, false teaching and false theories prevent many from receiving the truth.

The pastor holds that all of the creeds of Christendom contain false doctrines. The Bible, he maintains, says that the devil put these erroneous doctrines into the creeds. Should anyone ask why it is that the devil could have part in the making of our creeds, the pastor replies that the adversary misled our forefathers through his wiles; for he is deceitful. Whenever they thought to do something very zealously for God; Satan would lead them past the right mark into something very much to God's discredit and to their own deception.

Looking over the pages of history, the speaker can see that the devil has been working hard with all who have ever tried to get out of darkness into light. Therefore it behooves the people of God to watch continually. The only safe course is to try to walk very near to the Lord, in humility of mind, in full confidence in His power, trusting only in His word. If anything seem to lead off into guessing for ourselves, the only thing to do would be to say: "I have the Word of God; I will stand by what is written."

"OUR LIGHT AFFLICTIONS"

In conclusion the pastor reminded his hearers that the Bible urges God's people to walk circumspectly; that is, to look well around. It does not mean to be in abject fear and dread, for to be so would mean lack of faith in God. The people of God are not hoping to come off conquerors and to win the great prize by any strength of power of their own. On the contrary, their confidence is in God. He who has begun a good work in them is well able to finish it. But each one is to walk in fear in the sense of having such respect for God and His promises and such anticipation of the grand outcome that each will be very careful to avoid transgression. If coming days should bring severe trials, then coming days will also bring increased joy; for as the apostle says, "Our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

THE GOSPEL MESSAGE FOR THE MEEK

Asbury Park, N. J. Pastor Russell is here in attendance at a big general convention of International Bible Students' Association, which began its session Friday and will continue twelve days. Three general conventions of this association are now in progress, the other two being at Columbus, Ohio, and Clinton, Iowa. Upwards of 2,000 delegates are in attendance at each convention. Being president of the association, Pastor Russell expects to be present three days at each of the assemblies.

Two sessions are held daily in each of the cities, and the pastor's famous Creation Drama is exhibited each evening. There being four parts to the drama, three full presentations will be given.

Pastor Russell's theme today was one of great interest. The discourse set forth the philosophy of the untold sufferings of Christians throughout this gospel dispensation. Part IV. of the Photo-Drama of Creation, now on exhibition, both at home and abroad, depicts the unwritten history of the church of Christ and enables those who see it to realize to some extent what it has cost true Christians to "follow His steps." The pastor's text was, "Jehovah hath appointed me to preach good tidings to the meek, to bind up the broken-hearted." Isaiah 61:1.

The pastor opened his discourse by drawing attention to the statement that the gospel message is for the meek, the broken-hearted. During the millennial reign of Christ God will take away the stoniness of heart from mankind and will give, instead, hearts of flesh. Under the blessed conditions of the kingdom, hard, selfish hearts will gradually become soft, tender, kind, gentle. But now, in advance of Messiah's kingdom, God is seeking those who are seeking Him. Those who are not especially seeking Him are not likely to find Him.

Preaching the gospel to the meek is the work of this age. This is the only class which God wishes to have now. He is seeking the class that desire to be the bride of Christ, Jesus' joint heirs in the Messianic kingdom. Therefore the message is not such as would suit the hard-hearted. Only the tender-hearted care to know about the love of God, the mercy of God, the forgiveness of sins, the privilege of returning to the Father's house and of having Jesus as their Savior.

The pastor believes that in the past we have had a wrong idea as to whom the gospel message is to go. We went out into the highways and byways to find those who were very wicked blasphemers, etc., thinking that these were etc., thinking that these were the ones with whom we were to deal. The scriptures do not authorize any such idea. A person living in unrepented sin is not in the proper condition to receive God's great plan of the ages, the speaker claimed. God has declared that "none of the wicked shall understand." He does not wish them to do so. The very reverse is true. His purpose is to bind up the broken-hearted.

God's message speaks peace to those who are in trouble and who are looking to Him, seeking the righteousness which He provides. Some apparently have made a great mistake in thinking the gospel is a sledgehammer with which they are to break men's hearts. The speaker does not know of any scriptural commission for any of the people of God to break the hearts of men. On the contrary, he thinks that the devil does most of such work.

THE TWO CONVERSIONS

There are two conversions, declared the pastor. The first is a turning from sin; the second, a turning to God. Those desirous of approaching God are seeking to leave sin. Those who are living in sin wish to be away from God. We cannot go in two directions at once. The course which God would have any pursue is this: When one finds that he is a sinner, he should repent and turn away from sin; then, when he learns that God has made an arrangement by which sinners may be reconciled to Himself, he should ascertain what steps he should take in order to obtain his share in that reconciliation.

While turning from sin may in some respects be called a conversion, yet it is not the principal conversion. Only those who take the step of full consecration to the Lord may receive the Holy Spirit and obtain a clear view of the divine plan. As the apostle says: "The natural man receiveth not the things of the spirit of God; for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned."

Then the pastor explained that those begotten of the Holy Spirit are scripturally called children of God, heirs of God, joint heirs with Jesus Christ. If faithful unto death, they will be glorified in the first resurrection. Meantime they are to grow in grace, knowledge, love and all other fruits and graces of the Spirit grow by their trials, by their obedience, by striving against the world, the flesh and the devil. All this must be done before this class will be ready for their resurrection change. In the present time, however, all who are begotten of the Holy Spirit not only belong to the church in general, with all others of the people of God, this one brotherhood of Christ on the spiritual plane, but they are also reckoned as members of the body of Christ on the fleshly plane the earthly plane.

From this viewpoint, Christ has been suffering in the flesh throughout the gospel age. St. Peter says that the prophets of Israel testified beforehand of the sufferings of the Christ and of the glory to follow; and hence he urges the church to arm themselves with the same mind that Jesus had. St. Paul speaks of filling up that which is behind of the afflictions of the Christ all the members of His body. After these sufferings are filled up, then the glory will follow. The sufferings are not yet complete.

The speaker went on to explain how trials and discipline are means of developing Christian character, preparing the child of God for future service in the kingdom. The privilege of suffering with Christ in the flesh is something to be appreciated. Whoever has trials in the flesh because of Christ, because of being His disciple, has occasion for rejoicing. Such should continue faithful, in order that by and by as a polished jewel he may be ready for a glorious setting in the immortality of the future. An uncut, unpolished jewel is not worth much. Its real worth is brought forth in the cutting. So the Lord gave His jewels the cutting and polishing necessary to enable them to reflect the glorious light of the goodness of God.

Jewels do not all require the same amount of polishing, declared the pastor. A small diamond can be cut and polished more easily than can a large one. Those of the people of God who undergo severe trials and afflictions may hope that they will be accounted large jewels in the hands of the Lord. The larger the diamond, the more work in cutting and polishing.

CONFESSING OR DENYING CHRIST

Then the pastor discussed the terms upon which one may make his calling and election sure to a position in the glorified body of Christ beyond the veil. From the time when one's consecration is accepted by the Father and he is begotten of the Holy Spirit, his name is written in the Lamb's Book of Life as written a member of the body of Christ. To these our Lord declares that if they are faithful He will not blot their names from His book. These are to remain faithful to what they agreed to do to give their little all in sacrifice. On that condition they were accepted and had their names recorded.

But if any such deny Christ, He will deny them. If they continue to confess Him, He will confess them. To confess Christ is to live for Him day by day confessing Him in the way in which one uses time, influence, money, talents; confessing Him in business, in everything that is either said or done. But if any consecrated child of God should deny Christ by seeking to live after the world, by neglecting the covenant of sacrifice, such would thus demonstrate his unworthiness of a place in the bride class the church in glory.

Should anyone ask the pastor why he lays so much stress upon consecration, he would reply that, according to scripture, God is not now dealing with the world in general; that in order to bring our petitions to the throne of heavenly grace we must get into relationship with God; and that there is only one way by which this can be done consecration. To emphasize his point the speaker used the illustration of a wedding in the time of our Lord. On such occasions it was customary for the host to furnish all the guests with a plain white linen garment, which was to be worn over their own garments. Whether the guests wore rich or poor raiment, the wedding garment covered everything, and made them all brethren for the time being; for they were guests of the same host.

Applying his illustration, Pastor Russell explained that all consecrated Christians have accepted God's invitation to the marriage of the Lamb the Son of God. But no matter how well we may arrange our own garments, each must put on the wedding garments, or else remain away from the feast. The moment of consecration is the moment of receiving the robe of Christ's righteousness, and only those who continue to wear that robe will have entrance to the wedding. By nature mankind are sinners. There is only one way to get rid of sins by belief in the Lord Jesus Christ, and full consecration to do the will of God. Whoever really believes that Jesus died for his sins will act upon his belief by presenting his body a living sacrifice.

“GARMENTS UNSPOTTED FROM THE WORLD”

Continuing the figure of the wedding garment, the pastor declared that the robe put on by the Christians who desired to have entrance to the marriage of the lamb was white and clean, representing his full justification at the moment of consecration all blemishes of the flesh being covered with the merit of Christ. The scriptures tell us that those who ultimately enter into the marriage will be those who have kept their garments unspotted from the world. Since all unrighteousness is sin, every sin is a spot upon the robe, whether it be committed willfully or ignorantly. All faithful children of God should use all diligence in keeping their garments free from blemish. This may be done by daily thinking about the robe, and nightly asking the Lord to remove each spot to forgive each failure made that day. The blood of Jesus Christ keeps cleansing all who ask that they be cleansed.

This is the heavenly Father's arrangement for His children. He desires them to walk circumspectly, watching where they tread. Thus they learn every detail in respect to their own imperfections. No one can live for even one day without trespassing upon the perfect law of God; for by nature we are all imperfect. In heart the child of God does not sin; the new creature does not sin. It is merely that the flesh is weak. But we have the comforting assurance of the scripture that “if any man sin we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous.” Our Lord is there to make good with the Father for all the Adamic weaknesses.

The pastor then discussed two kinds of sin, one of which he declared to be forgivable and the other unforgivable. If to any extent the mind consents to the deed, to that extent the sin is willful. Then only that portion which was not willful will be forgiven. Whatever part was not forgivable is punishable. The individual will receive stripes, punishments of one sort or another, proportionate to the degree in which the will consented to the sin.

There is naturally much sympathy between the flesh and the mind that sometimes even the will of the new creature permits the flesh to take it by force, as it were. This should not be; the will is responsible, and because of its carelessness will receive stripes of some kind. But so long as the individual feels sorry as soon as the yielding to temptation has passed, he may know that his will does not love sin. Should his will ever change and prefer sin, he would not be sorry after the sin was committed.

HOW TO BE AN OVERCOMER

It was then shown that every consecrated child of God must be an overcomer in fighting the good fight of faith, and in obedience to God must put down everything that pertains to sin an unrighteousness in himself, and stand for that which is pleasing in the sight of God. This is the test of our loyalty to Him and to principles of His righteous government. Many sins are really weaknesses of the flesh which overcome the will momentarily. Just here the new creature must conquer in the fight. He must get the victory over the flesh. If we sin, if we trespass, we must go to the fountain of grace and be forgiven.

The great difficulty, the pastor declared, seems to be that after we have had some experiences of this kind, we properly enough feel ashamed that we have not done better. This is the time when the Christian is in danger. He is liable to fail to ask forgiveness at the throne of the heavenly grace; for he feels that already he has been forgiven perhaps many times for the same trespass. Therefore he may try to forget the spot, to forget the "robe," almost to forget the Lord. Gradually a veil comes between him and God; the Father is not so near and so dear as once He was. While He is still his Heavenly Father, while still the erring one trusts in Him, nevertheless there is a lack of the fellowship of the Spirit. Earth-born clouds have hidden the Father's face.

This is the experience of hundreds of the people of God; for they cannot be in His presence with spots upon their robes, and they do not resolve that they will not live away from Him. They cannot have fellowship with the Lord while their robes are spotted nor can they have proper Christian life while absent from the Lord. The lesson on this point, the speaker declared, is that we watch and keep humble. To come to the Lord and say, "O Lord, another time I have failed! How ashamed I am!" is to take the right step. Humility is one of the very foundations upon which all other graces must be built. So the Apostle Peter says: "Humble yourselves, therefore, under the mighty hand of God, that He may exalt you in due time."

THE CLEANSING BLOOD OF CHRIST

The number of those without spot or wrinkle or any such thing is very small, said the pastor. Many Christians have not kept their wedding robes with sufficient care, and thus have shown their lack of appreciation of the wedding and of their invitation to attend. If the attention of such be called to the spots they try to put them out of sight, to ignore them, to declare that everybody has spots on his robe. This is an unwise procedure, for the robe is our passport into the kingdom. If the spots are not removed they gradually become more and more a hindrance to those who seek to be accounted worthy of a place in the bride class.

The pastor then reminded his audience that when the Christian first received his robe it was pure white, with a certain design stamped thereon; and that he was expected to embroider it with the character likeness of the Lord. If he has gotten the robe spotted and bedraggled he should go to the Lord in prayer and persist until he has assurance of forgiveness and cleansing. We read, "If we confess our sins He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." It is not merely a matter of love, but of justice, on our part. The Heavenly Father made the arrangement; Jesus has died, paid our penalty and imputed of His own merit sufficient to cleanse all unintentional spots. Forgiveness is to be had for the asking.

REFUSE NOT HIM THAT SPEAKETH FROM HEAVEN

The photo-drama of "Creation" is now being produced daily in more than eighty cities, both here and abroad. From all sides come words of commendation. The Bible is being opened up to popular understanding as never before. Pastor Russell's text today was, "See that ye refuse not Him that speaketh... from Heaven.." Heb. 12:25.

The pastor introduced his discourse with a comment upon the opening verses of the Epistle to the Hebrews. There the apostle is contrasting the message which God sent through the Lord Jesus Christ with those messages sent previously through His servants Moses and the prophets of Israel. The apostle elsewhere tells us that God speaks peace unto us through His Son. This statement suggests that previously there had been war. Away back in the days of Eden, when Father Adam and Mother Eve were on trial, Mother Eve was misled by Satan's suggestion and disobeyed

God's command. Then Father Adam, leaning to his own understanding, sinned willfully, that he might have fellowship with his wife rather than with God. Thus the entire race were brought unto rebellion against the Creator and were condemned to death in Adam.

Then the pastor went on to trace the history of the rebellious race of man. Cut off from fellowship with God, falling deeper and deeper into sin, degradation and death conditions, none were fit to be called children of God. About twenty-five centuries after the fall the Almighty gave the Israelites opportunity to come into harmony with Him. There He spoke to them especially, through Moses and the law covenant, directing that whoever would hear Moses and obey might come closer to their Creator. So we read: "They have Moses and the prophets; let them hear them." God had not spoken to mankind in general; only to the little nation of Israel had He given a message. To them He had not spoken in any other way than through the law and the prophets. The apostle tells us that those who disobeyed Moses' law died without mercy. Moses was God's mouthpiece; and therefore whoever disobeyed him came under the penalty of death.

The apostle's argument, the pastor declared, in this: Now, brethren, review the history of Israel, and see how from time to time they neglected the messages which God sent them at the mouth of angels and of Moses, and note how disasters came on them because of that negligence. If, then, there was such a penalty inflicted for negligence respecting the words of Moses, what should be the result of refusing to hear Him who speaks from heaven itself? If those who rejected Moses' law died without mercy, how much severer punishment should they receive who would count the blood of the covenant wherewith they were sanctified a common thing, and who would do despite to God's spirit of favor? Surely we may expect that there would be nothing further for those who reject God's arrangement for man's salvation!

THREE CLASSES IN THE CHURCH

The pastor next showed the consecrated people of God will finally be found in one of three classes. The little flock, to whom our Lord declared it is the Father's good pleasure to give the kingdom, is a limited number so far as we can judge probably 144,000. Then comes the great company, "whose number no man knows" God not having revealed it a class unworthy of a place in the little flock, but yet loyal in heart to God and the principles of righteousness. Last of all, is the class that go into the second death, the class that do despite to the covenant of grace. Formerly the pastor was inclined to think that this class would be very small, but of late he realizes that according to the experiences of the typical people the number will be much larger than he once had thought; for many Israelites fell in the wilderness on account of having rejected the testimony of the Lord, and their death was typical.

No one is on trial for life, the pastor declared, except those who have gotten free from the sentence of Adamic death. No one has a standing with God except those who have turned from sin and have presented their bodies in full consecration to Him. Those who have taken these steps have been accepted by the Lord Jesus Christ in harmony with the Father's great plan. Immediately after our Lord has accepted them He counts them as His flesh, and then the Father also accepts that flesh, for, as the Scriptures point out, the flesh of Christ has been in offering throughout the gospel age. Jesus first offering His own flesh. When He had finished that work He appeared in the presence of God and made satisfaction for the sins of the church, beginning with the apostles. Then the Father indicated His acceptance of their sacrifices by giving them the holy spirit.

Throughout the gospel age, the pastor continued, all believers have received the holy spirit just as soon as they have been accepted of the Father through the great advocate. All through the age the members of the body of Christ have been coming to Him, and the flesh of the church, the consecrated ones, has been counted as the flesh of Jesus. This flesh has been suffering for nearly 1,900 years Christ suffering in the flesh.

Thus we see fulfillment of the Scripture which declares that the church is filling up that which remains of the afflictions of Christ. "If we suffer with Him we shall also reign with Him." And "the sufferings of the present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed" in the church which is the body of Christ. The prophets of old, says St. Peter, spoke of the sufferings of the Christ and of the glory that shall follow. All who share the sufferings will also share the coming blessings glory, honor and immortality.

THE THREE BODIES OF CHRIST

Then the pastor pointed out that those who are received of the Lord are in spirit all one as new creatures. There is one body of Christ in the flesh of the church. Then there is the other body of Christ, the new creature body, composed of the new natures of all who are begotten of the holy spirit as new creatures, and these new creatures inhabit this flesh of Christ. Here are two bodies of Christ then the body of Christ in the flesh and the body of Christ spiritually, which is dwelling in these earthly tabernacles and seeking to bring them to the sacrificial point day by day in everything. He also showed that the final body of Christ beyond the veil will be composed of the "more than conquerors" only Jesus, the captain, and all who voluntarily lay down their lives in following His example.

Thus there are three bodies of Christ. The final one is taken out of the other two. Those who are left constitute the great company and those who go into second death. But those who constitute these bodies are the only ones with whom God is dealing the only ones whom He has yet received. And even these were not received until they had come to the full point of consecration and were begotten of the Holy Spirit as new creatures. Therefore it is the new creature that is on trial not the flesh. Throughout the entire gospel age only the new creatures in Christ have been on trial for life or death eternal.

WHO MAY REJECT CHRIST

The pastor then explained that no one can reject Christ in the full sense of the word and go into the second death unless he had fully come into Christ and had become His disciple. While many have heard of Christ and have been drawn toward him, yet until they offer themselves to God in consecration and receive the begetting of the Holy Spirit, they do not really hear Him who speaks from heaven. Those who are begotten of the Holy Spirit get a new understanding, a new hearing, new ears as it were, and new eyes. As new creatures they see, hear and understand differently from what they formerly did. As St. Paul says, "The natural man receiveth not the things of the spirit of God; for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned." No one can discern spiritual things until he has been begotten of the Holy Spirit.

But there is such a thing as rejecting Christ after one has heard about Him. One may turn his back upon the world, and turn his face toward God and start in the right direction. Every step of the way he will receive a little blessing. But if, when he has progressed to the place where he sees consecration clearly, he should turn back, it is a question whether his former progress in the right direction has not done him harm.

The pastor illustrated this point by referring to the tabernacle in the wilderness. If one going toward the tabernacle had entered the court, had recognized the sacrifice of atonement upon the brazen altar, had progressed to the laver, representing the purification of the flesh, and then had halted, he could not have seen the beauties of the tabernacle. Even if he had come up to the very door of the tabernacle, if he should then stop all his previous progress would count for nothing.

So, if one should seek to put away the filth of the flesh to live as moral a life as possible, to become cleaner and cleaner in his daily conduct unless he present himself in consecration to God his morality is of no avail in the matter of bringing him into covenant-relationship with God. Only by faith in the blood of Christ can he approach the mercy seat. "There is none other name given under heaven amongst men whereby we must be saved."

Any one who gets a glimpse into the future when the millennial reign of Christ and his church shall have begun and who hears of the goodness of God, but is not melted by his own imperfections and his need of a savior, will, the pastor believes, be much disadvantaged. Whoever hears the voice of God speaking peace through the Lord Jesus Christ should press on to know the Lord. If even a little glimpse of the coming restitution, when the whole earth will become like the Garden of Eden and when all men will have the privilege of coming to perfection, does not appeal to one, that one is not in a very favorable condition of mind. Whoever does not love the God who has made so loving a provision for mankind is not in a favorable condition for further knowledge.

The pastor clearly pointed out that those who have never heard of the goodness of God have very little responsibility in proportion to those who do hear. The heathen millions who have not heard of God could not present their bodies in sacrifice. Our Lord declared that those who knew not would be beaten with few stripes in comparison with those who did know. Whoever therefore has heard, and who knows the will of God and the difference between right and wrong has responsibility, and will receive stripes for disobedience, even if he does not now come into a full test or trial for life eternal.

“THE CUP OF SALVATION”

The proper attitude of heart, the pastor declared, is that of appreciation of God’s mercies. As the Psalmist has said, “What shall I render unto the Lord for all His benefits toward me? I will take the cup of salvation and call upon the name of the Lord.” Whoever hears of God’s loving provision for the salvation of mankind should feel like removing from his heart everything that would hinder the love of God from flowing in freely and bringing forth the fruitage of love, devotion and appreciation. To those who especially love God and desire to know His will He has offered a cup, which represents His providences for that special class. Jesus Himself drank that cup, and set us an example.

The pastor then discussed the subject of consecration, and showed how reasonable it is for one who has come to a knowledge of the goodness of God to offer himself to the Lord. He declared that whoever carefully considered the matter would realize that all one has to offer is far too small. But God says to such, I know that you have practically nothing to give, but you must give all that you have be it much or little. In comparison with what Jesus gave, you have nothing; for what you have is imperfect and sinful, whereas His offering was holy and undefiled. But He will impute His merit to your offering, and thus make it acceptable.

In the typical tabernacle and its sacrifices, the pastor declared, this matter of consecration is represented by the offering of the two goats on the day of atonement. The goat represents the flesh of the one offering himself in consecration. Consecration is the tying of the goat at the door of the antitypical tabernacle. Then the high priest kills the antitypical Lord's goat. Henceforth the new creature, begotten of the Holy Spirit at the moment when the sacrifice was accepted, is represented in the body of the high priest.

Then, as members of the body of the antitypical High priest, the consecrated and spirit-begotten ones are privileged to enter the antitypical tabernacle, the spirit-begotten condition. There they may have fellowship with God as they partake of the antitypical bread of presence, and as they walk by the light of the antitypical golden candlestick, which gives them light respecting the deep things of the word of God. The things in the typical tabernacle were hidden from the sun; they were dark as respects outside light, but they had the interior light. Those in the antitypical tabernacle condition have also blessed association with the incense altar; not that they have anything, perhaps, to do with offering the incense, for that which was offered by the great high priest of their order was sufficient for all the members of his body and makes them acceptable in the most holy.

RESPONSIBILITY TO CHRIST

The pastor then dwelt on the responsibility resting upon all who have offered themselves as living sacrifices and have been accepted and begotten of the Holy Spirit. These have come under the Headship of Christ. His will is to be their will, His Spirit is to be their spirit. When they were baptized into that one Spirit when their spirits, their minds, were immersed into that of our Lord and He accepted them as members of His Body, they recognized themselves as under His Headship. This is what produced the oneness of spirit the sympathetic heart-oneness of all the members of Christ.

As long as the Headship of Christ is recognized, there must of necessity be much harmony among these members. But should any member get out of harmony with the Head, he is proportionately unable to get a blessing himself or to do good to others. The greatest blessing and usefulness comes from co-operation with the Head in whatever work He is doing.

In conclusion the pastor declared that only in proportion as we are in harmony with our Master, the great Head of the Church, can He use us as His members. The voice of the Lord is being heard throughout the earth today. Therefore all who hear it should see to it that they do not refuse the Message of the hour.

To all those who do refuse as most of them are doing and will do the tribulation that will come will be all the more sever—"a Time of Trouble such as never was since there was a nation," "no, nor ever shall be" hereafter.

THE WEDDING FEAST

"O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, which killest the Prophets, and stonest them that are sent unto thee; how often would I have gathered thy children together, as a hen gathereth her brood under her wings, and ye would not!"--Luke 13:34

Here we have another parable of the Kingdom. Today's lesson shows that God's promises and His providences toward Israel under the Law Covenant were designed to prepare that people to be God's holy nation, and especially to provide at the coming of Christ a sufficient number to constitute the elect church, His Bride. The parable shows that only a few were "Israelites indeed" not enough to constitute the Kingdom class; hence the call of this Gospel Age, selecting from the Gentiles a sufficient number of saintly character to be joint-heirs with the Jewish remnant in the Messianic Kingdom.

Jehovah Himself is the King who made a marriage for His Son arranging before the foundation of the world that there should be joint-heirs with Christ in His Kingdom. This marriage, of course, could not take place until the King's Son had, by His obedience unto death, made the way for His followers and for the Kingdom of which He was to be King. At the appropriate time God sent His servants to call them that were bidden to the wedding; but they would not come. John the Baptist and his disciples called to the attention of the Jewish people the fact that the King's Son was in their midst. Prophetically he foretold that the calling of the Bride class had come, although he himself could not be one of it. John 1:26; 3:29.

Then Jesus sent His disciples to the Jews saying, "All things are ready. Come to the marriage." But the people, under the guidance of the Scribes and Pharisees, the theologians of that time, made light of the Message and went their way one to his farm and another to his merchandise. Some did even worse. Not only Jesus was slain by the unbelieving ones invited to the feast, but His disciples were evilly treated and slain.

Then, as seen in another parable, Jehovah, wroth with Israel, sent forth His armies, destroyed those murderers, and burned up their city. The fact that it was the Roman army under Titus which destroyed Jerusalem in A. D. 70 did not make it any less the army of Jehovah; for He is able to use whom He may please as His messengers.

GENTILES CALLED TO THE WEDDING

Meantime God said to His servants, the Apostles, and others through them, the wedding is provide; but the Jewish nation, which was especially invited, has not been found worthy of the honor. "Go ye therefore into the highways and as many as ye shall find, bring to the marriage."

Highways represent public concourses the world over. The Lord's ambassadors were no longer to restrict themselves to Jews, but were to make known everywhere the fact that God is now calling out of the world a little company, lovers of righteousness, eventually to become joint-heirs with the Redeemer in His Kingdom. Be it noted that these ambassadors were not to take all people, but merely to urge upon all whom they met in the highways, the concourse, the great privilege of the open door to the wedding feast.

All attending this wedding must be covered with the merit of Christ's righteousness. The wedding is thus furnished with guests every place filled. Thus and otherwise the Lord indicates that the number of the Elect is a definitely fixed one; and that as soon as the special number has been found, the call will cease.

INSPECTING THE GIANTS

The custom of the Jews, arranged by Divine providence doubtless, was that at every wedding feast each guest was to put on a white wedding garment, covering his own garments. So all who come to God's great feast must come acknowledging that they have an insufficiency of merit to be acceptable to God, and must accept the merit of Christ as making them worthy of the honor to which they aspire.

Each guest entering the house was supplied with the robe, and was expected to put it on immediately. To appear without that garment would be disrespectful to the host. Indeed, for any one to appear at the wedding without the robe would imply that he had taken it off; for none were admitted without it. This is the thought given in the parable.

The man found in the king's presence without a wedding garment we understand to represent a class, and not merely an individual. So we might find just such a class today, professing to be waiting for the marriage of the Lamb, yet telling us that they no longer trust in the merit of Christ's sacrifice. These have rejected Jesus as their Redeemer, the Atoner for their sins. They retain Him merely as their Teacher, and then accept only a part of His teachings. These are manifestly unfit to be members of the Bride of Christ.

The parable shows that all who reject the merit of Christ's sacrifice will be rejected from the kingdom class. They are unable to say how they came in without a wedding garment; for no one ever was admitted into the church, which is the bride, without first having on the wedding garment of Christ's merit, covering his imperfection. Those admitting thus that they have taken off the wedding garment are cast out summarily.

When our minds were filled with hallucinations of the Dark Ages, we assumed that the class represented by the man without the wedding garment would be cast into eternal torment. But now we perceive that as these guests came into the light of the wedding chamber from the darkness of the outside world, so the casting of one of them into the outer darkness would mean merely the taking from him of the knowledge and joys represented by the wedding chamber light.

Our Lord concludes the parable with the statement, "For many are called but few chosen." This does not mean, as we once supposed, that only an elect few will get any favor from God in the future, and that all the remainder of mankind will be eternally tortured. We must read it in harmony with the context. The Jewish nation was invited to the wedding and failed, except the few "Israelites indeed." For eighteen hundred years the message has gone to one nation after another of the Gentiles, until many have heard the call of the gospel age. Yet only a few have accepted and come into the elect condition; and of these there will still be a class which will be rejected.

The faithful Little Flock (Luke 12:32), composed of both Jews and Gentiles, will, later on, with their Lord be the Heavenly Father's agencies for blessing all the non-elect with the glorious opportunities of restitution to all the earthly blessings lost through Adam's disobedience.

THE LOST KEY OF KNOWLEDGE

"Woe unto you, lawyers! for ye have taken away the Key of Knowledge; ye entered not in yourselves, and them that were entering in ye hindered."--Luke 11:52

In the New Testament the word lawyer has a very different meaning from our general usage. It applied to those religious teachers of the Jews who made special professions of sanctity of heart and earnest desire to know God's will, as expressed in the Mosaic Law, and to teach the same to the people. The corresponding class of to-day are designated Doctors of Divinity. Our text, therefore, with this correction reads, "Woe unto you, Doctors of Divinity, for ye have taken away the Key of Knowledge; you entered not in yourselves, and them that were entering ye hindered."

"COMMON PEOPLE HEARD JESUS GLADLY"

It was the custom amongst the Jews that lessons from the Law and the Prophets should be read every day in their synagogues. The people were thus familiar with the letter of the Divine Law and promises. The majority of them, of course, were illiterate, for educational facilities were not what they are now. As a result only a few claimed to have an understanding of the spiritual part of the Law and the Prophets. These were chiefly of the literary and wealthy classes. To these the common people looked for guidance respecting the Divine will and Plan.

As an illustration: When the common people heard Jesus gladly they were unwilling to trust their own judgments, but inquired, "Have any of the Scribes and Pharisees believed on Him?" Have the Doctors of the Law, the Doctors of Divinity, endorsed Him? They have made a study of these things and we would rely more upon their judgment than upon our own. But none of the Scribes and Pharisees endorsed Him, and hence comparatively few of the people believed Him and became His disciples.

The common people were hungry for the Message which Jesus brought. It is recorded that they said of Jesus teachings, "Never man spake like this Man." The nation would have gone over promptly to Jesus had the Scribes and Pharisees, the Doctors of the Law, set the example and given the word. Moreover, the teachings of Jesus harmonized the message of the Law and the Prophets over which the Scribes and the Pharisees and the Sadducees had long wrangled and disputed. Had the Doctors of the Law been as hungry for the Truth as were the people, undoubtedly all of their differences of interpretation of the Old Testament Scriptures would have speedily been solved in the light of the then Present Truth and knowledge of God, which was shining upon the Bible through the Holy Spirit, Jesus and the Apostles being Jehovah's mouthpieces.

THE KEY OF KNOWLEDGE BURIED

In our text Jesus charged the Jewish Doctors of Divinity with the responsibility of having taken away the Key of Knowledge, refusing to use it themselves to enter into the great appreciation of the blessings then due, and hiding it from the common people who trusted them so implicitly. We charge that the same thing is true to-day. Not only were the Jewish people typical of Spiritual Israel, and their Age typical of this Age, and their Harvest typical of the Harvest or closing time of this Age, but additionally, now as then, "God's people perish for lack of knowledge." (Hos. 4:6.) Now, as then, the Doctors of Divinity will not use the Key of Knowledge themselves, to enter heartily into the wonderful privileges and blessings now due, and additionally they have buried the Key of Knowledge, hiding it from the people under a mass of forms and ceremonies.

BUT IS KNOWLEDGE NECESSARY

In our Lord's day the Jewish Doctors of Divinity, or Rabbis, contented themselves with telling the people what they should do and what they should not do, but they did not teach the people they did not help them to any understanding of the deep meaning of the Law and the Prophets. In our text Jesus said to the "D.D.'s." "You bind heavy burdens on the people, grievous to be borne," but you do not attempt to carry those burdens yourselves.

It is so to this day with the Jewish Rabbis, as well as with other Ministers; for instance, a minister stands as a representative and mouthpiece of the church creed, which in round-about terms declares that whoever does not live a saintly life will suffer an eternity of torment. Is not this a grievous burden to put upon any conscientious soul? Has it not caused untellable anguish to many of God's true people? And has it not repulsed and driven many from God and the Bible, thousands of the most intelligent minds in the world?

As the Jewish Doctors of Divinity carried no such burdens, neither do the Doctors of Divinity of Christendom. In private they acknowledge that they carry no such burdens. In public they give the inference that they do not so much by positive terms as by implication, tone and inflection of voice, and by the general fact that they stand for and as representatives of the creeds which so teach. It does not excuse these influential teachers for them to claim that in their official capacity they lose their personal responsibility and shift it upon those who made the creeds and those who adopted them. The people are no longer trusting the creeds. They realize that the creeds contain many inconsistencies, and that greater light is today shining, from the pages of the Bible, than shone in the days when those creeds were formulated.

The common people trust the Bible Jesus, the Apostles and the Prophets. They know that all of the creeds of Christendom claim to be built upon the inspired Record. They understand the Scribes and Pharisees of today, the Doctors of Divinity of Christendom, to give assurances that those creeds properly present the teachings of the Bibles. The credal chains would become ropes of sand if all the prominent Doctors of Divinity of Christendom came forward and publicly renounced them, as they nearly all do in private conversation.

It is this matter of misleading the people, deceiving them, that constituted the basis of Jesus' charge against the Doctors of Divinity of old, and we believe that His judgment is very similar to-day respecting the Doctors of Divinity of Christendom—"Ye have taken away (ye have hidden) the Key of Knowledge. Ye have not entered in yourselves, and them that were entering ye hindered."

Christian people today are so disgusted with the creeds which have separated them and their forefathers into six hundred different denominations that they are ready to discard them all, and come together as one Church of the Living God to study the Bible in its own light.

SYSTEMATIC KEY-HIDING

The Scribes and Pharisees of our day are proving themselves to be the anti-types of those addressed by Jesus in our text, and have a substitute for knowledge. Taking away the Key of Knowledge, they say to the common people. Do not bother your head about doctrines; leave doctrines to the clergy; let the clergy endorse all the creeds, however conflicting they be. We do this in order to lull you to sleep. There is nothing so calculated to disturb the Christian's rest as the discussion of the doctrines of Christ. If there be in any congregation those who cannot feel satisfied without some kind of Bible study, let them have it, but get them rather to discussing the geography of Palestine and the habits and customs of the people, etc., rather than the prophecies of old or the interpretations of them, as given by Jesus and the Apostles. We ministers will keep aloof from such Bible study; we will not let on but that we understand these prophecies thoroughly, but we will keep a watch upon the Bible classes, and interfere only if some brother therein is inclined to delve after the doctrines of Christ and the Apostles.

One minister, voicing this opposition to Bible study, especially along the lines of differences where it would be of special value, said, "The Church is like a great Hospital. Everything like doctrinal discussion must be banished and excluded, just as in a hospital all noise is forbidden, that the patients may sleep, or just as in a nursery noise is excluded that children may sleep."

Alas! it is too true that the nominal Church of Christ is like a Hospital, many of whose patients are blind and deaf and asleep and mentally confused. But the trouble is: These got into this condition because of a lack of healthful exercise; and keeping them quiet will but turn the present hospital into a Cemetery.

What the churches of all the denominations need is the Word of God as presented in the words of Jesus and the Apostles: "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life." The sin-sick and lame, the blind and deaf and mentally perplexed need to hear the voice of Truth—"Wonderful Words of Life" otherwise they will become more sick and will perish as Christians, but to become alive perhaps as “lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God.”

An Episcopal minister in our hearing urged his congregation to simply rest, not to bother themselves about their own future or that of others. The Holy Catholic Church, he said, resembled a ship, in which the members should come as passengers to be carried to the heavenly destination. They need not examine the compass, nor the chart, nor the machinery. All they need is to sit down and enjoy the journey, trusting that their baptism and the Holy Spirit have given them a free ticket to a proper destination.

Why did not Jesus and the Apostles use such an illustration? Because it is not a correct one. Why do the modern Pharisees use such an illustration? It is because they wish to hide from the people the Key of Knowledge, and if possible to hinder them from hunting for it.

Many, alas! are satisfied with such unscriptural presentations and forget the exhortation of Jesus and the Apostles, “Strive to enter in” to the Kingdom. (Luke 13:24.) “So run as to obtain.” (1 Cor. 9:24.) “Fight the good fight.” (1 Tim. 6:12.) “Grow in grace and knowledge.” (2 Pet. 3:18) “Put off all these” works of the flesh and the devil. (Col. 3:8).”Put on” (Col. 3:12), all these fruitages of the Holy Spirit, desiring “the sincere milk of the Word, that ye may grow thereby,” and be not always babes but become strong men and partake of the “strong meat” of the Divine Word. 1 Pet. 2:2; Heb. 5:12-14.

So unsuccessful have the hospital and nursery methods proven that comparatively few nominal church members have their senses exercised enough to inquire of such Doctors of Divinity the logic of their advice. Few think to ask which of the 600 different denominational boats, with the several captains, different compasses, different charts, and different crews, is the proper one to take. Or, if they are all alike, and going to the same port, and equally safe, why the competition between them for passengers? Few ask, When were these various ships built? And therefore few get the Answer--that these theological systems were constructed during the Dark Ages. Few ask, Who gave this authority to the different Captains, seeing that Jesus and the Apostles quote, “One Lord, one Faith, one Baptism, one God and Father of all,” and one “Church of the First-born, whose names are written in heaven? Eph. 4:5,6; Heb. 12:23.

The illustration is not a good one, else doubtless it would have been used in the Bible. If the illustration were used at all in the Scriptures, it could only be applied to the one True Church of Jehovah, the different members of which would not be passengers, but would constitute the crew co-laboring together for the attainment of the desired haven.

NECESSITY FOR KNOWLEDGE

Knowledge of God, the Bible declares, is indispensable for the attainment of the Great Prize of the High Calling. Thus Jesus said, "This is life eternal, that they may know Thee, the Only True God, and Jesus Christ, whom Thou hast sent." (John 17:3.) We are not to understand this to signify that anyone who has merely been made acquainted with the fact that there is one Creator, and that Jesus is His Son, is on account of this knowledge to be granted everlasting life. Some think to be able to make void the various Scriptures which tell us of the necessity of making our "calling and election sure," by so running as to obtain the prize. 1 Cor. 9:24.

Our Lord's words do not refer to a knowledge about God, but to a knowledge of or personal acquaintance with God and His Son. And such an intimate acquaintance is not obtained merely by an introduction, but by companionship; it signifies an intimacy of acquaintanceship, a familiarity. Everything in the Divine Word encourages those who accept the Divine invitation to draw near to God, to come into fellowship with Him.

But this knowledge of God which will bring a saintly few to salvation on the highest plane stands related to God's Word the teachings of the Bible for thus God exalted His Word, by making it the channel for spiritual refreshment and personal acquaintanceship with Himself.

Thus Jesus prayed for us, His followers, "Sanctify them through Thy Truth, Thy Word is Truth." Any who neglect the Divine Word will fail of the sanctifying power and thus fail of the ultimate acquaintanceship with God which alone will guarantee everlasting life. The reason why the Lord has thus arranged the matter and made knowledge of the Scriptures essential, doubtless is that thus His faithful people may be benefited; and they alone receive the instruction which will profit them alone, but would more or less injure others. Thus it is written, "Ye shall know the Truth, and the Truth shall make you free."

To this class our Lord says to-day, as He said to His Jewish followers eighteen centuries ago, "To you it is given to know the Mysteries of the Kingdom of God, but to all outside these things are spoken in parables and dark sayings, that hearing they might not understand and seeing they might not perceive." To the outsiders the Doctors of Divinity is not permitted the Key of Knowledge. "Even so, Father, for so it seemeth good in Thy sight." Matt. 11:25, 26.

WHAT CONSTITUTES THE KEY

The Key of Knowledge consists of the faithful study of God's Word, with an honest purpose to know the things that are freely given unto us of God. This implies a consecration of heart, for none others would really desire that they might do the Divine will. And this implies also a faith in our Lord's promise that He that doeth "the will of My Father shall know of the doctrine." (John 7:17.) It is this consecrated, conscientious Bible study that is lacking to-day that is being discouraged to-day by the great teachers and Doctors of Divinity.

Everything calculated to help Bible study, to get rid of the darkness of the creeds and superstitions of the past, is opposed but not openly. The Doctors of Divinity of our day, like those of Jesus' day, are wise and act as though they do know. But they do not know; they oppose real Bible study not openly, but secretly, "for fear of the people." (Mark 11:32; 12:12.) The great religious leaders of the Jews were marked by our Lord as being less conscientious, less honest, than the masses of the people. Concerning the people we read that "Jesus was moved with compassion when He beheld the multitude, that they were like sheep without a shepherd." Matt. 9:36.

And is it not so to-day also? Are not many of God's people hungering and thirsting for the Truth, and greatly perplexed and discouraged because, going time after time to the religious leaders, they have received instead of bread "a stone," instead of a fish "a serpent" a false doctrine, a devilish misrepresentation of the Almighty's character and Plan in respect to humanity? These devilish doctrines of the Dark Ages St. Paul calls "doctrines of demons," because the demons, the fallen angels, evidently have propagated them. They are to be found amongst all of the heathen, but nowhere in any worse form nor as bad as amongst Christians of all denominations. Is there not therefore a great responsibility resting upon every conscientious minister of the Gospel, that he should step out from amongst the mass of the Doctors of Divinity, who are hiding the Key of Knowledge and misleading the Lord's trusting sheep of nominal Christendom?

"IMPOSSIBLE TO DECEIVE THE VERY ELECT"

As we have already shown, they cannot keep penned, nor keep asleep, nor keep the knowledge from the saintly ones who constitute "the very elect." Our Lord, speaking of this time, said that the deceptions would be such that they would deceive, if possible, "the very elect," but in their case deception will not be possible, for the True Shepherd Himself will help them. But, oh, what weeping of disappointment, and what a chagrin and gnashing of teeth will come shortly to the "false shepherds," to the Key-hiding Doctors of Divinity, when they find that with all their endeavors to bolster up shams and superstitions in which they themselves do not believe, the entire fabric of Churchianity will collapse, as the Scriptures predict!

It is quite unnecessary that we press the lesson of this text; we leave the matter before you. God will urge and press the "Pearl of Great Price" upon no one. It is for sale to those who will give the price all that they have. God has adopted plans and methods which will demonstrate and prove the class worthy of a share in Messiah's Kingdom.

WHEREBY WHEN YE READ— UNDERSTAND

The discourse of Pastor Russell today was unique in every sense of the word. He took for his text St. Paul's words, "Whereby, when ye read, ye may understand my knowledge in the mystery of Christ." Eph. 3:4

The scriptures clearly teach that during this gospel age our God is preparing a great temple class, began the pastor. After this class shall have been glorified the divine power will operate through this temple. God will be in the church the temple and all nations will begin to draw near to their Creator. All classes Jews, gentiles, bond and free will come to the Father through this temple; for the glory of God will be in it.

The priests in this new temple of the future will be Jesus, the great High Priest, and the church, the underpriests. This High Priest will also be king—"a priest upon His throne," after the Order of Melchizedek. The underpriests are still in training for their office. The royal priesthood will consist of those alone who shall be declared worthy to sit with our Lord in His throne. As it is written, "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection; on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years."

The Pastor then discussed the question, How may one become a member of this Order of Melchizedek these Knights Templar on the heavenly plane? The Church of Christ, he declared, is the most wonderful secret order ever known. The mystery of God is not yet finished, the revelator tells us; this mystery which God has kept secret from the foundation of the world will not be finished until the sounding of the seventh trumpet. This mystery, the scriptures teach, is the church. These members of the mystical body of Christ are in the world, but the world knows them not, even as it knew Him not.

THE DEGREES OF THE ORDER

It was then shown that the great condition for membership in this order is the absolute denial of self the giving up to the Lord of all that the candidate possesses, himself included. This condition is the most stringent ever known. The first degree in this order is the recognition of Jesus Christ as our Savior and faith in His redeeming blood. Some merely take this initiatory step, and never go on to perfection. Those in the first degree know practically very little about the order; for, as the apostle declares, “the natural man (the world) receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned.” Since the secrets of this order must be spiritually discerned, whoever would know them must progress beyond the first degree.

The second degree, the pastor explained, is consecration, which is immediately followed by spirit-begetting. Those who have progressed thus far have become new creatures in Christ. To these “old things have passed away and all things have become new.” Thenceforth these should grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ; and as they do so they are privileged to advance to higher degrees. In due time they may become Knights Templar. This degree is very honorable; those who have attained it have become leaders in the Church of Christ, especially functionaries in any matter pertaining to the interests of the temple. These know most about the things of the temple.

As these members of the order progress from one degree to another they learn more and more about the mystery of Christ. Those who have taken many degrees, therefore, know much more than do those who have taken but few degrees. The apostle urges all in the spiritual temple to grow in grace, in knowledge, in character-likeness to our Lord, the Grand Commander of the order, the High Priest of our profession, the One who died for us who not only redeemed us and gave us the opportunity of becoming members of this high fraternity, but who also set us an example how we ought to walk. Those who attain the highest degree shall be His associates and joint heirs in His Messianic kingdom. This highest degree, however, is limited to the number of 144,000 members, the body of Christ.

THE STANDARD OF THE CROSS

The pastor then showed that the members of the Free and Accepted Order of the Lord Jesus Christ’s commandery have for their standard not the cross on the head of the sword but the cross of Christ, with which they must be marked day by day. One of the very highest of this order was St. Paul, who boasted in one of his epistles that he bore in his body the marks of the Lord Jesus. These marks were not such as the world could appreciate, but were marks such as our Savior had, and such as all have who attain the highest degrees bestowed by this order.

The apostle elsewhere explains that as Jesus bore the marks of having been smitten, beaten, condemned and crucified, witnessing to His faithfulness to God and righteousness, so he was himself marked. Every order has its own marks, but only the captain of our salvation knows the marks borne by the soldiers of the cross. Whoever receives these marks in His service will be rewarded abundantly more than he could ask or even think. These light afflictions, which are but for a moment, will work for these faithful soldiers a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory beyond the veil, in the glorious temple now in process of construction.

This temple, the speaker declared, will be the greatest in existence. All other temples, all other societies, are but shadows, pictures, figures. No matter whence a candidate came, no matter who he was before he entered the lodge of our Lord Jesus Christ, after he has joined this order he has a right to the regalia and to all belonging to the order. There is only one way by which any one may become a member. There is also only one way by which one once in may be put out, and that is according to the arrangements made by the Lord; for there is a secret writing even of the names in this order. These names are written in heaven. No human being knows who are the members.

FREE AND ACCEPTED IN CHRIST JESUS

The members of this order, it was shown, are free from the domination of sin, free from the fear of death, free from that condition of alienation from God in which they were by nature, when they were “Children of wrath even as others.” They are not free to commit sin, however; in fact, they have no such inclination. Their very desire to come into relationship with God indicates that they do not love sin. The shackles of sin have fallen from them. “If the Son make you free, than are ye free indeed.”(John 8:36.) Every one thus made free by the Lord Jesus Christ, through the merit of the Redeemer’s sacrifice, and presenting his body a living sacrifice, and being accepted of God, is received into this fraternity, this royal priesthood.

Happy are all such; for the spirit of glory and of God rests upon them. The more attentive each of these is to the rules of the order, the more faithful each one is in laying down his life in the service of the brethren, the more progress will he make and the higher will be his station. He will rise from one degree to another until he shall have attained the highest rank, and shall have favor in the fullest sense with the Grand Master of the order.

In the typical language of the Scriptures the human nature of all new creatures in Christ is pictured in the goat. The Bible tells these new creatures that the “goat” which each one “rides” more or less daily is his own flesh. In the typical day of atonement two goats were brought to the door of the tabernacle and there tied. These goats typified all who offer themselves in consecration to God. After the lots were cast the high priest sacrificed the Lord’s goat, thus typifying God’s acceptance of the class represented.

Thenceforth the goat represented merely the old nature, the flesh; and the new creature was represented in the members of the high priest's body. "Ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God," says the Apostle.

The pastor also showed that God has so arranged that members of His great secret order may tell all they desire about it and the hearers cannot understand, unless they are also of the order. God alone knows who are members of His secret society; for He alone knows whether at heart each is loyal and true. Others may wear the uniform, learn grips and passwords, but the Lord knows those who are His. In other words, there are many who have more or less outward appearance of being Christians, but who are not really such at heart.

Another point discussed was that all who become members of the royal priesthood—"living stones," from the Divine standpoint, to be chiseled and prepared for a place in the royal temple must enter by a narrow, difficult way. This Jesus set forth, saying, "If any man will come after Me (become a living stone in the temple, be a member of this high order), let him deny himself, take up his cross and follow Me."

THE FOUNDER OF THE ORDER

The origin of this order, commonly known as the Church of Christ, was next shown. The great master craftsman, the Lord Jesus Christ, laid the foundation and arranged all pertaining to it. He alone founded this great secret society. Members of the organization may indeed recognize assistants in the work, but there is only the one grand master, who has supervision of the whole. He Himself has said, "One is your Master, even Christ, and all ye are brethren."

The pastor then set forth the facts relative to our Lord's life on earth nearly nineteen hundred years ago. The world did not recognize the Great Master. Jesus alone, the founder of the order which is His church as the secret place for the great temple which God desired to have constructed. When He was crucified more or less of the mystery connected with the temple was lost. The Scriptures also intimate that certain features of that mystery were not to be completed until His return. So the members of this society have been waiting for the return of their Master, who gave His life in connection with the secret of the construction of the temple, the church.

Jesus preached in public, the pastor declared, and while thousands heard Him very few understood. So now, when the members of His church tell the glad tidings of great joy, very few understand; for only those who are called to join this order which Jesus founded have the power to comprehend the hearing ear. To His disciples the Master once said: "Blessed are you eyes, for they see; and your ears, for they hear." Only those who have come into this divine order have this spiritual insight and spiritual guidance; and only these may know the things that are freely given unto the initiated. These things are freely given to one class, but are not intended for anyone else.

The speaker then showed the reason for this discrimination. During this age God is not dealing with the world. After He has built His great temple then he will deal with the world. But mankind will never be priests, members of the temple class. Nevertheless, they will have a great blessing restitution to human perfection, lost in Eden, redeemed on Calvary. He declared that it would never do for the world to know all about the secrets known only to the members of God's great secret order; otherwise mankind would interfere with the plan of God. He illustrated his point by referring to the scriptural statements that if the Jews had understood about Jesus, if they had understood His parables and dark sayings, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory. Then the scriptures would not have been fulfilled; God's plan would not have been carried out.

St. Peter called the attention of the Jews to this fact, saying, "Now, brethren, I wot that through ignorance ye did it, as did also your rulers. But those things which God before had showed by the mouth of His prophets, that Christ should suffer, He hath so fulfilled." St. Paul corroborates this statement, declaring, "None of the princes of this world knew; for if they had known it they would not have crucified the Lord of glory." The pastor praised the wisdom of God which withheld from the world a secret the knowledge of which would have increased their responsibility without benefiting them in the least.

TEMPLES OF THE HOLY SPIRIT

Next were quoted various passages of scripture which show that whoever receives the holy spirit is a temple of the holy spirit. This class is not of the world; for the world by nature knows not God. The world is under condemnation—"children of wrath" according to scripture. God has not yet begun to give humanity the blessing which He purposes to give them. He is now dispensing blessings only to the church, to those who have been initiated into the mysteries of His secret order. These alone have come into the position where He can deal with them.

The pastor explained that the church class have not received the Holy Spirit in full. When the great antitypical temple of God shall have been finished beyond the veil, then the Holy Spirit will be given in full; all these "living stones" which will constitute that temple will be filled with the glory of God. But there is a sense in which each one has received the Holy Spirit who has given up his own will in order to do the will of God; and in that sense the body of each of these has become a temple.

Wherever the Spirit of God Dwells, there is a temple of God.

This discourse was concluded with an earnest exhortation to every one who is conscious of having received the Holy Spirit of God. All such should ever be on guard lest they grieve the Spirit ignore it or live contrary to it. The apostle says, "Grieve not the Holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption." From the very time when one is begotten of the Spirit of God, that individual is marked with the seal of the Holy Spirit. The apostle also says, "We have this treasure in earthen vessels, that the excellency of the power may be of God, and not of us." That is to say, the possession of the Holy Spirit of God constitutes one a temple.

The apostle's thought, the speaker declared, is that all such should regard their bodies very sacredly. Since God has honored them by placing His Holy Spirit within them, they should see to it that this sanctifying power operates throughout their members in their minds, their tongues, their hands and their feet. Whatsoever such shall do or say should all be done to the glory of God.

THAT WHICH HE HATH GIVEN, HE WILL PAY HIM AGAIN

Pastor C. T. Russell, widely known through his "Photo-Drama of Creation," which is being seen by thousands everywhere widely known, also, by his sermons in hundreds of newspapers, by his books and by his weekly Bible studies, preached today from the text: "He that hath pity upon the poor lendeth unto the Lord; and that which he hath given will He pay him again." Prov. 19:17.

The fact that I have been preaching for thirty-eight years and yet have never taken up a collection nor made any appeal for money in connection with my work may have led some to the erroneous conclusion that I am opposed to charities, said the pastor. Nothing could be further from the truth. During those thirty-eight years many thousands of dollars have passed through my hands voluntary gifts from grateful souls for the spread of the good tidings of great joy, which shall yet be unto all people. Moreover, it is my conviction that no one could be an acceptable Christian unless he possessed the spirit of charity, benevolence, unless he really loved to give for good purposes for the glory of God, for the benefit of his fellows:

The pastor declared that from his viewpoint missionary enterprises might properly be considered charities but not so church enterprises. The church, he claimed, is not a missionary society for the world's benefit, but an arrangement for the benefit of the church members. Hence each member of this brotherhood should consider himself in duty bound to co-operate to the extent of his ability in providing the necessary expenses connected with the meeting place light, janitorage, etc. the blessings and comforts of which he enjoys. Yet even in this there should be nothing akin to coercion or demand. If the sum total were found insufficient, more humble quarters at less expense should be engaged as soon as possible.

It is wrong, said the pastor, for a congregation to aspire to a fine, expensive auditorium and general establishment beyond their own means. It is wrong for them to go outside and solicit money from the world, the flesh and the devil, in the name of God! Surely God never authorized such a proceeding; for just as surely as it would be offensive to any right-minded person to have solicitation for money made in his name, so it must be to the Almighty to have begging done in His name without His authority.

The Bible distinctly tells that God is very rich. No rich man would approve of begging done in his name, especially from the poor. And for us to promise God's special blessing and favor in return for filthy lucre is an outrage against divine justice, wisdom, love and power. The Lord's own word is that all the gold and silver are His.

But we are told, if solicitations, collections, pew rents, fairs, festivals, etc., were abandoned, all the churches would be closed, except such as are beneficially endowed. If this were the case, we believe that, nevertheless, the church would gain respect and influence with the world which would more than compensate. If one-half the churches disorganized, the other half, rightly supported in accordance with the divine precepts and the example of Jesus and His apostles, would accomplish more good than would twice the number under present conditions, in which they have considerable of the world's scorn. That scorn directly and indirectly reflects against the divine character and the divine word.

In illustration of this conviction the pastor cited the fact that the divine blessing has been with his work. He admitted that the money passing through his hands is really as nothing compared with the large sum spent annually by the various Christian denominations. He admitted that the International Bible Students Association owns no valuable real estate and cannot boast of large bank accounts. They have followed the plan of using actively and economically in God's service whatever money has voluntarily come to them not seeking to build temples made with hands, but to prepare the living stones for the glorious temple of Christ beyond the veil.

Under this arrangement they never spend more than what is in hand. God has blessed the work, and the unsolicited donations increase year by year. The activities incidental to the use of these funds extend now to all parts of the earth, preaching the message of God's love and helping to open eyes of understanding long blinded by creeds, philosophies, "so-called," and misunderstandings of the word of God.

GENEROSITY IS GODLIKENESS

In declaring generosity to be Godlikeness, the pastor wished his hearers not to misunderstand him to mean that gifts of money could purchase divine favor and relationship. He trusted that His views, following closely the scripture lines on this subject, are widely known; namely, that there is only one way into the Father's favor and into His family the way of renouncement of self and turning to righteousness of acceptance of Christ's redemptive work and of full consecration through Him to do the Father's will, even unto death. Only such spirit-begotten ones are acknowledged in the Bible as children of God. All others are Scripturally described to be "aliens, strangers and foreigners" from God and His promises.

But the speaker wished all to discern that there are noble-minded souls who have not entered this "narrow gate" and who are not, therefore, children of God, but who, nevertheless, by nature possess traits of Godlikeness, notwithstanding their share in the fall. Benevolence, generosity, charity in its true sense, wherever found is a trace of the Godlikeness in which our first parents were created. Noble-minded people of the world in practicing charity are imitating one of the highest qualities of the Divine character, and forthwith they experienced a blessing whenever they exercise their charitable instincts.

As for Christians, we find, as the apostle declares, that they are naturally a varied assortment; for they possess, some more and some less, of the Godlike qualities, and some more and some less of the depraved traits. But following their begetting of the Holy Spirit, these become more and more generous, benevolent, charitable. Under the instruction and discipline of the school of Christ, the spirit of love, the spirit of God, the Holy Spirit is more and more shed abroad in their hearts. For them the great lesson of life is this lesson of love, charity, sympathy for the truth, for one another and for the world.

BLESSED IN THEIR GIVING

God is the great giver of whom the apostle says; "Every good and perfect gift cometh down from the Father of Lights." The Lord Jesus Christ exemplified to mankind God's great love, and showed that He himself possessed the same spirit, the same loving, generous, kind nature so much so that He laid down His life on behalf of our sinner race. It is required of the church that each one shall be imbued with this same loving disposition as their Savior had; for “if any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of His.” That love not only left the heavenly glory and riches on behalf of the sinner, but additionally endured the cross and its shame.

The Apostle John urges all Christ’s followers that, cultivating the Master’s noble, generous, loving spirit, they ought also to lay down their lives for the brethren. They ought also to be ready to count all things but loss and dross, gladly to be renounced in the interest of the Lord’s cause. With every sacrifice, these receive more than compensation of divine favor, besides the Master’s promise of eternal life on the heavenly plane. Mark 10:30

And now let us think of the world especially of those noble, generous souls who, possessing something of the original Godlikeness, take pleasure, not in cheating their fellow men, not in doing everything injurious to the interests of others, but frequently in contributing to the relief of suffering, to the maintenance and education of orphans, the protection and comfort of widows, as well as to hospitals, infirmaries, etc. Is there any provision of blessing for these?

These noble-minded, charitable people are being blessed by their generous course; for there is a law of retribution continually in operation. The principle “It is more blessed to give than to receive” applies to them as well as to the church. As these noble souls daily become more loving, more generous, they are developing characters which in the future will be helpful to them. If they do not come into vital relationship with God through Christ at the present time, if they have not the hearing ear and the responsive heart now, nevertheless the time is coming when they will share in the world’s blessing. It will be a great blessing, even though far inferior to that of the church, as human restitution is inferior to spirit perfection through the first resurrection.

When Messiah’s kingdom shall have been inaugurated and the whole world shall enter upon its trial for life or death everlasting, noble souls that have exercised benevolence, Godlikeness, will be in advance of others who, even with similar noble heritage, have failed to use, exercise, develop this quality of benevolence or charity. In other words, liberal souls not only experience a blessing in the present time but thereby prepare themselves for greater blessings by and by.

WISE AND UNWISE CHARITIES

Since the blessing of charity comes to the individual as a result of the exercise of that quality, it follows that the giver gets a blessing whether the gift is wisely bestowed or not, and whether the receiver is profited or not. Hence, even though we may subsequently know that some of our gifts were unwisely or unworthily bestowed, we need not mourn, but rather realize that according to the divine arrangement we have had a blessing, nevertheless. However, no one will dispute that the spirit of a sound mind should be used in connection with our charities, as well as in all our other affairs.

Very frequently many of the provisions for the poor in our day are no longer rated as private charities but as public, and even sometimes as merely justice. For instance, provisions for the blind, for the infirm, asylums for the mentally weak and hospitals for the sick are now considered to be a duty of the community and are provided for by general taxation. Thus benevolence is asserting itself, and combining and dividing its honors with justice. That which previously would have been left to a few of generous disposition is now provided for by the whole community. Who can question that this is an advanced step; and if so, that all should co-labor along these lines and cease to encourage mendicancy, the solicitation of alms, the appeal to sympathy through the eye?

If our social arrangement has provided for such cases it should be considered a misdemeanor to ignore such provision. If our public charities, hospitals, city homes, etc., be not upon such a scale as to have the approval of generous, reasonable minds, then the entire system calls for reorganization, that it may be made right, proper, suitable for the use of any having need thereof. The community should be ashamed to provide for others what they would not be willing to accept for themselves under the same circumstances. The pastor expressed a hope that these reasonable sentiments might through the public press be brought effectively to the attention of poor boards, charity committees, etc.

GOD LOVES CHEERFUL GIVERS

God's gifts are given cheerfully. The Bible tells us that He appreciates a cheerful giver one who enters into the spirit of his gift, who accompanies the coin with a cheerful word, a kind look, helpful advice, or what not. If these cheerful givers belong to God's family, the Father will love them and manifest His love for them. Their cultivation of His spirit will bring them into closer relation with the Almighty.

How generously shall we give? some may ask. The Answer--is: God has given us our minds, our judgments, wherewith to decide all questions. The need of the needy, the amount of our surplus, the claims of others upon that surplus all these things should properly enough enter into our calculations and help us to decide how much should properly be given to charity?

In order to get a great blessing out of our charities we should give until we feel it. The person who gives one coin out of a thousand which he would never miss is not likely to get therefrom a great blessing. He must continue in the exercise of this Godlike disposition until his gifts shall necessitate his restraining of his own luxuries or perhaps his own comforts. Then he begins to be really charitable and to really appreciate some of the joys which the Lord designs shall be granted to generous souls.

GIVING RELATED TO FORGIVING

Every advance in true charity has a bearing upon the character. Whoever is generous with his fellows will find it more and more easy to be forgiving toward those who do him injury. Charity, love, benevolence, affects the entire being. It tends to make its possessor more kind and gentle in word, action and judgment. It develops his sympathy. All this is a development of Godlikeness. The Apostles point this out in order, associating meekness, gentleness, faithfulness, long-suffering, brotherly kindness, charity all elements of the one great quality of love.

The Father's holy spirit of love is also the spirit of His Son, our Redeemer, and all who will be accepted as members of the bride, the lamb's wife, we are assured must be copies of God's dear Son. They must all have this kind, generous, charitable quality. We are not meaning to say that such a quality would be acceptable to God without Christ, our Redeemer, for the Bible clearly sets forth that no man cometh to the Father but by Him. (John 14:6.) But the Son's method of preparing us for the eternal glory after we have become His disciples is by instructing us along the lines of the development of this divine character likeness. If Christians could realize this more fully how kind and charitable they would be.

The Lord would have His people whole-hearted in their sympathies, broad, deep, generous. To give either money, forgiveness, sympathy or any other good thing grudgingly, half-heartedly, is to spoil the matter. True many of the Lord's people are by nature very narrow, mean, spiteful, contrary to what the Lord would approve. But He is willing to overlook all the natural defects if He sees the right heart condition sees that we are endeavoring to the extent of our ability to overcome our natural weaknesses and to put on Christ.

With us the first lesson is to learn to look into the mirror of the Lord's word and there to note our natural meanness and contrariness to God's character likeness. As we thus behold in God's word the true standard of character contrast with it our own and seek to copy the Lord, we shall, as the apostle declares, be changed from glory to glory. Step by step the transforming work will proceed.

We shall never be able to bring our bodies to that perfection of word, act and look which we desire, for our desires are perfect, copied from the grand example of our heavenly Father and our heavenly Lord, while our bodies are imperfect through the fall. We are encouraged, however, by the scriptural assurance that God will look on the heart and note our efforts to conform to the heavenly pattern. We shall be judged not according to the flesh, but according to the intention. Thus alone can we have the righteousness of the law fulfilled in us while walking not after the flesh, but after the spirit.

The Brooklyn Citizen, 1914

PURPOSE OF CHRIST'S KINGDOM

Sept. 13 Pastor Russell took for his theme today the parable of the sheep and the goats. His text was, "These shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal." (Matt. 25:46.) The Photo-Drama of Creation depicts this subject of the destiny of humanity, and greatly assists the public to understand the Scriptural usage of the words Sheol and Hades, so long misunderstood and misrepresented. The Pastor said:

CLOSING SCENES OF THIS AGE

God has stated times and seasons for every feature of His great Plan for the Salvation of Mankind from sin and death conditions. In the end of each of these seasons there has been a finishing up of its work and a clearing off of the rubbish, preparatory to the beginning of the work of the incoming Age. Thus in the end of the Jewish Age there was a Harvest a separation of the wheat class from the chaff and a complete rejection of the latter class from God's favor. With the few judged worthy in the end of that Age a new arrangement began the Gospel Age and now we find ourselves amidst the closing scenes of this Age the Harvest during which the wheat class and the tare class are being separated. With the wheat class, of which our Lord Jesus Christ is the Head, a new Age, the Millennium, is about to be inaugurated. At the close of the Millennial Age there will be still another Harvest, in which the sheep class will be separated from the goat class, and ushered into the glory of the ages to follow.

In the past many of God's people have read their Bibles very carelessly. Our minds have been sluggish to spiritual things. For instance, the parable of the sheep and the goats was at one time applied to the church. We failed altogether to notice that it does not say even one word respecting the Church, but it applied to the world, the nations, the heathen. For many centuries the Jews had been accustomed to think of themselves as God's nation, God's people; all others they styled heathen, gentiles, the nations, the people; and in the Old Testament prophecies God has treated the subject from that standpoint.

In line with this usage, when Spiritual Israel was received into Divine favor as the Royal Priesthood, the holy nation, the peculiar people, all the remainder of mankind were properly enough to be thought as the nations, the Gentiles. Following this thought, our Lord tells us in the Parable of the Sheep and the Goats what will befall the nations after His Kingdom shall have been set up after the selection of the true Church class to be the Bride, the Lamb's Wife.

THE PARABLE DESCRIPTIVE OF THE NEW AGE

That this parable refers to the work of the incoming age is clearly indicated in the opening verse. There the Master distinctly says, "When the Son of Man shall come in His glory, and all the holy angels with Him, then shall He sit upon the throne of His glory." The scene of this parable evidently is laid after the Time of Trouble, when the nations shall have been subdued, Satan bound, and the authority of Christ's Kingdom established. Before that time shall have come, the overcoming Church will have been seated with her Lord as His Bbide in His Throne. As the Apostle writes, "Know ye not that the saints shall judge the world?" 1 Cor. 6:2.

Then follows a description of the work of the Messianic Age: "Before Him shall be gathered all nations." All the people in the world, except God's holy nation. His peculiar people, the Church of Christ, will be gathered before the great white throne of Divine Justice, Mercy and Love. First will come the living nations; and then in their appointed time the dead of all nations will be called to appear before the Judgment Seat of Christ, there to receive a fair, impartial trial as individuals under the most favorable circumstances, the outcome of which will be a final sentence of worthiness or unworthiness of life everlasting.

Six thousand years ago, in Eden, Adam and his entire race were on trial for life. But Adam failed, and was sentenced to death. His posterity, sinning in him, were sentenced in him; and none of his race are worthy of everlasting life. All are sinners; "there is none righteous, no, not one." But in due time God sent His Son to die for Adam's sin, in order that "as by man came death (of the entire human race), by a man (Jesus) also will come the resurrection of the dead (the entire race of Adam); for as all in Adam die, even so all in Christ shall be made alive"—"every man in his own order." 1 Cor. 15:21, 22.

The first order to be made alive in Christ in the Church, which has been called out of the world, separated, begotten of the Holy Spirit. This class pass their trial, their judgment, for life or death everlasting in the present time. Hence the worthy ones, those whose characters are pleasing and acceptable to God, will be quite ready to be the Bride of the Messiah, joint-heirs with Him in His Kingdom and His associates in His work of judging the world. He has promised that all who are faithful shall sit with Him in His Throne (Rev. 3:21) the very Throne pictured in the parable under consideration the Throne before which all the nations, all people outside of the Church, will be gathered.

GENERAL DESCRIPTION OF THE JUDGMENT DAY

The gathering of the world will be the result of knowledge. The Time of Trouble will lead on to great enlightenment; all the blind eyes will be opened, all the deaf ears unstopped, and the knowledge of the glory of God will fill the whole earth as the waters cover the sea. There will be some, however, who will resist this knowledge and will decline to accept Christ as their Mediator; this class will not enter into this judgment, but after one hundred years of resistance will be destroyed.

Those who constitute the two classes mentioned in the parable, the Pastor declared, are those who have accepted Christ's terms and desire to be on judgment, or trial, for life everlasting. This will include all that are in their graves; they will come forth, not all at once, but gradually. Messiah's Kingdom will exercise its power and disseminate the knowledge of God and of the principles of righteousness, with a view to encouraging, helping and uplifting all the willing and obedient. All such may arise gradually out of sin and death conditions up out of imperfection of mind and body, up out of immoral conduct to the full image of God, as possessed by Father Adam in the beginning.

The entire Millennial age will be required to bring this about. Righteousness will reign then, as Sin reigns now; that is to say, righteousness will be the in ascendancy, in the control. Then who ever sins will suffer promptly. Hence all mankind will avoid sin; and the world in general will be a grand place; "nothing shall hurt or destroy;" "the inhabitant shall not say I am sick;" the curse shall be gradually rolled away, and there shall be no more crying, no more sighing, no more dying; the blessings of God will prevail, bringing perfection. Surely it will be a happy day for Humanity; and all who live throughout the thousand years will receive great blessing.

IMPORTANCE OF RIGHT HEART CONDITION

The Pastor then discussed the subject of punishment for sins committed in this life. He showed that will be equally as just for God to forgive the sins of the world for Christ's sake as it has been just for Him to forgive the sins of the Church for Christ's sake. If the one is just, so will be the other; for God is no respecter of persons, and is equally as willing to forgive the sins of the world as the sins of the Church, when the world repents and turns from sin, accepting Christ as their Redeemer.

This does not mean, however, that justice will be ignored. In the case of the Church, the sins of youth often leave their scar and sting to the end of life; and so we may reasonably assume that certain stripes, or punishments, will be permitted to follow the world in just the same manner. It will be from these weaknesses and frailties that they will be gradually raised up to perfection during the blessed thousand years of Christ's Kingdom, when Satan will be bound and unable to deceive anyone.

Some may reason that if conformity to the Divine Law in an outward way will bring blessings to all, there still may be an inward difference between people, some coming heartily into accord with the Father, and others merely assuming an appearance of harmony because this harmony will be the way to perfection. Undoubtedly this reasoning is correct. It is along this very line that the parable under consideration teaches. Outwardly the sheep class and the goat class will have much the same appearance and demeanor, except to the Judge, the King, who will read the heart and ultimately will manifest to all that there has been a real heart difference between the two classes, all of whom will have been on trial for a thousand years, receiving blessings from the Messiah's Kingdom.

CHARACTER THE BASIS OF JUDGMENT

Meantime each individual on judgment will be making character. This the Great Judge will fully appreciate, and will rate the individual either as a sheep or as a goat. All the sheep class will thus be received at the right hand of the great Jehovah; and all the goat class will be rated as out of favor with Him, even though all the while they will be receiving the blessings of the Millennial Kingdom and outwardly rendering obedience to its laws. Not until the close of the Millennium will the decision of the Judge be manifested. Then both sheep and goats will show great surprise at His decision.

To the sheep class the Judge will say, "Come, ye blessed of My Father (the kind that My Father is pleased to grant everlasting life), inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." When God laid the foundation of the earth and planned for its human habitation, it was His design to give it to you. Now has come the time for you to enter into this kingdom and possess it.

This is not the Messianic Kingdom. On the contrary, it is the kingdom which God gave Adam, but which he lost through disobedience and which Christ redeemed by the sacrifice of Himself. It will be given only to those who will have developed the God-like character those who during the Millennium have become the Lord's sheep.

To the goat class He will say "Depart, ye accursed ones (doomed ones), into everlasting punishment." Granted all the privileges, blessings and experiences of a thousand years of contact with righteousness, truth and the Spirit of God, you indeed render an outward obedience, but at heart you have not come into harmony with God. I cannot present you to the Father as blameless and irreprovable. You must be destroyed in the Second Death—”everlasting destruction.” The penalty upon you is everlasting, because there will be no further provision made for your redemption or your resurrection from this Second Death. You will be as though you had never been. You have failed utterly to appreciate the goodness of God and to copy His character-likeness. Eternal life is for those only who have the Divine likeness and spirit.

Both classes were surprised at what the King, the Judge, declared to be the basis of His judgment. To the sheep He said, “I was hungry, and ye gave Me meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave Me drink; I was a stranger, and ye took Me in; naked, and ye clothed Me; I was sick, and ye visited Me; I was in prison, and ye came unto Me.” The goat class, He declared, had failed to meet these tests. Both sheep and goats claimed to have no knowledge of such experiences. But the Answer--was, inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, or did it not unto them, ye did it, or did it not, unto Me.

THE RESURRECTION OF THE WORLD

Then the Pastor explained who these are respecting whom there will be a test upon the sheep class and the goat class, and how it is that there will be sickness, poverty, hunger and prisons during the Messianic Kingdom. With the establishment of the Kingdom all who come into harmony with it will have the great privilege of doing something to help others. The world is blind and starved now, for want of spiritual food and the anointing eyesalve of Truth. While the Millennial blessings will be showered upon those who accept the Lord’s terms, there will be others who will need assistance. Those who have the Spirit of God, the spirit of love, will be glad to carry the Heavenly Message of reconciliation to all humanity, glad to apply the eyesalve to the blind, glad to unstop the ears of the deaf, glad to help the sin-sick back into harmony with God, glad to help them to cover their nakedness with Christ’s merit.

Those who take pleasure in this work will thereby demonstrate that they have God’s Spirit and are co-laborers with Him. All these will be the sheep. But those who are careless respecting their Vow, and merely enjoy the Millennial blessings themselves, will be of the goat class and will thus mark themselves as goats. Correspondingly they will be out of favor with the King of kings, their Judge.

THE PRISON-HOUSE OF DEATH

The prison referred to in the parable is undoubtedly the great prison-house of death, into which approximately twenty thousand millions already have gone. All these are to come forth, not all at once, but “every man in his own order,” as the Scriptures declare. Only the Church will be in the First Resurrection. During the Millennium the awakening from the sleep of death will, we believe, come about by Divine Power, of course, but in Answer--to prayer.

Each family circle, as it can prepare for another and another member, will be glad to do so, and will make request for his return. Thus the race will come out of the prison-house in reverse order to that in which they entered, and will be acquainted with their friends and relatives, who will have prepared for them and will identify them.

While the blessing of the Lord will provide an abundance for all, nevertheless we may safely assume that the provision will be in the hands of their fellows. It will be the sheep that will be especially interested in those in the great prison-house of death, and who will be praying for them and preparing for them.

By so engaging their time and energy these sheep will be manifesting a purpose, a will, in harmony with that of the Creator. God has willed that all in the graves shall come forth at the command of the Lord Jesus; and those in harmony with God and Christ will be co-laborers with God in accomplishing the work for which Christ died. Whoever is not interested in that work will be lacking in God’s Spirit; and this is exactly what is charged against the goat class.

The King, having redeemed the world of mankind and having provided for the resurrection of all the redeemed, counts them as in a certain sense representing Himself, as He says in the parable. His reproof to the goat class indicates that they were not really interested in the things of God. Their interest was merely a selfish one. They had more or less of the spirit of selfishness, which is the spirit of Satan.

The Lord’s provision, as the Apostle points out, is, “The gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord,” but “the wages of sin is death.” Rom. 6:23.

WHY GOD’S WRATH UPON THE NATIONS

Last evening a splendid congregation listened spellbound to Pastor Russell at the Temple, W. 63rd Street. His address inquired into the reason why in God’s providence the world is being ushered into “a Time of Trouble, such as was not since there was a nation.” What special sins call upon Justice for extraordinary penalty? The Pastor’s text was, “And the nations were angry, and Thy wrath is come.” Rev. 11:18

After some introductory comments upon his text, the speaker read a number of corroborative scriptures Is. 34:1-6; Jer. 25:15, 16, 27-38; Is. 66:15,16; Luke 21:24-26; Rev. 6:9-11; 2 Thess. 1:3-10. Commenting on the scriptures as he went, the Pastor claimed that their united testimony referred to the present time, mistranslated the end of the world; properly interpreted, the end of this Age, lapping upon and inaugurating the New Age—" the world to come."

God's people Israel typified Spiritual Israel. All others were called the nations, the people, the Gentiles, and were outside covenant relationship with God. Many of the Scriptures quoted had a double application: in a smaller sense, to the affairs of Typical Israel; in a large sense their fulfillment belongs to the end of this age. Of Natural Israel it was written, "They are not all Israel who are of Israel"; and similarly we might say today, not all are Christians who profess to be. Jesus emphasized this same thought when he referred to "Israelites indeed," and speaking of His Church, He referred to some as "the very Elect," thus distinguishing them from the numerous mass of Christians who in a formal manner say, "Lord, Lord," and draw nigh with their lips, when their hearts are far from Him.

ONLY JEWS, GENTILES AND SAINTS

Applying the matter now, the Pastor declared that the whole world are Gentiles, except the true followers of Christ, His saints, and the loyal-hearted Jews, who are still God's people under their Law Covenant. In classing the great mass of Jews and of professed Christians as a part of the world the Pastor meant no unkindness; for he declared that there are many noble characters amongst the Gentiles amongst those who are not in covenant relationship with God, who are neither under the Law Covenant nor under the Covenant of Grace. God has an eventual blessing for all who love righteousness and truth under the blessing of Restitution. Acts 3:19-23

However, to understand God's dealing in the present time, nominal Christians, or mere professors, must not be confounded with the "little flock" who have responded to the Gospel Call, "Gather My saints together unto Me, said the Lord; those who have made a covenant with Me by sacrifice" self-sacrifice. (Psa. 50:5; Rom. 12:1) If we shall recognize these saintly Christians of every nation and denomination as being the one true Church, "whose names are written in Heaven," and if we shall recognize all others as Gentiles, we shall be getting the eye of our understanding into true alignment with the mind of God as expressed in the Bible. From this standpoint only can the prophecies of the Bible be understood.

Thus seen, God is not merely calling nations to war, to battle, as nations; but in a more particular sense the call is to all Gentiles, irrespective of national boundaries. And it is worthy of note that throughout the Scriptures, the great masses of India, China, etc., are comparatively ignored. Because they have not come into particular contact with God's Messages they are not so particularly included in the judgments, chastisements, troubles, foretold to be coming upon the earth at the close of this Age. In other words, unintentional ignorance of God is not a crime to be punished, but a defect to be corrected in due time by the blessings of Messiah's Kingdom.

The blow of the Divine rod is therefore to be expected upon the so-called Christian kingdoms upon nominal Christian people. The responsibility of those and their punishments will be in proportion to their knowledge and their failure to live up to the knowledge possessed. Ignorance is not wickedness in God's sight.

WRONG THOUGHTS ABOUT GOD'S WRATH

When thinking of the wrath of God coming upon the world, we are not to think of the Almighty as having exercised great patience for centuries and finally losing His temper and wreaking vengeance upon His creatures. Such a thought might be gathered from some of the expressions of the Scriptures, because of adaptation of language to human comprehension, and because of more or less loss of the true sentiment in translating and through the mental gloss of the translators. In any event, let us remember that this wrath of God and the judgments coming upon the world are wholly different from the legends namely, eternal torture at the hands of demons, taught us by our creeds. Instinctively, a part of the dread we have of death in every form by war, famine and sickness is the fear, that eternal torture nightmare thrust upon us from childhood, inculcated by all the creeds of Christendom, but wholly without Bible foundation when the latter is properly translated and rightly understood.

Furthermore, we should remember that while God has foretold the troubles of the Day of Wrath for centuries and indicates that He will have to do with their precipitation upon the world, nevertheless elsewhere He also shows us that these troubles really come from ourselves that they are the outgrowth of human wrongdoing, and that these dire penalties of sin would have wrecked our social and religious fabric long, long ago had not Divine Providence forefended us holding back the storm of human passion and avarice, and permitting it to come only now, in the end of the Age, at the time when Divine Providence has Messiah's Kingdom in full readiness to take control. Just so soon as the storm of human passion shall have taught humanity its needed lessons, and shall have liquidated the long standing accounts, Messiah's Kingdom, with a clean state, will be inaugurated.

We have reached the end of this world the end of this Age. The long promised Day of blessing and Divine favor is already dawning. God through Jesus' sacrifice has provided for all human sin frailties traceable to original sin. These are all to be forgiven absolutely. Certain willful sins have been more or less punished during the lives of the sinners; and some of these, recorded in human weaknesses, mental, moral and physical, will be gradually gotten rid of during Messiah's Kingdom under the Restitution processes which will then prevail. All will have an opportunity of rising up, up, up to human perfection; and those who have willfully degraded mind and body will have the steeper path to climb and the longer one. Nevertheless, they will be able to come to the fullness of human perfection and everlasting life if they will, under the blessings and with the aid of Messiah's Kingdom.

ACCOUNTS YET TO BE SQUARED

At first this might seem to be a full settlement for all of the world's sins; but not so, according to the Scriptures. In Jesus and in His saintly followers all down through this Gospel Age, the world has had God's cause, the cause of righteousness and truth, more or less clearly manifested. Every persecution against these members of the Body of Christ is a crime against God and against righteousness. Of such sufferings the Apostle says, "If any suffer as a Christian, let him glorify God on this behalf; for the spirit of glory and of God resteth on such." 1 Pet. 4:14,16

As a blessing rested upon all the Lord's faithful people who have suffered unjustly, so correspondingly a Divine curse, or penalty, has rested upon all persecutors of these, their responsibility being gauged by the degree of their knowledge, and their punishment proportionate. On the books of Justice, however, God represents that the lives of all His faithful ones cry out for vengeance; and that while mercy comes to all mankind through the sacrificial death of the Savior, this does not alter the fact that Justice calls for certain punishments for crimes more or less wilful and therefore not included in the Savior's atonement.

Thus it was in the end of the Jewish Age, which may serve us as a pattern or illustration of the ending of this Age. St. Paul, writing of that time, says: "Wrath is come upon this people to the uttermost, that all things written in the Law and the Prophets concerning them should be fulfilled." The great time of trouble with which the Jewish Age ended was a righteous retribution for unsettled claims of Justice. The Just One had been slain, and although the merit of His sacrifice will yet avail for every Jew and for every other member of Adam's race, nevertheless Justice visited a punishment upon the people who said, "His blood be upon us and upon our children." (Matthew 27:25) Notice, however, the vast difference between these Bible judgments and the eternal torment judgments falsely declared by every one of our creeds, which indirectly tell us that every Jew at death goes to eternal torment because he is not a Christian.

But the Scriptures declare that the punishments upon the Jews which culminated in the destruction of Jerusalem in A. D. 70 were, some of them, for sins committed long before. Notice Jesus' words, "The blood of all the Prophets, which was shed from the foundation of the world, shall be required of this generation; from the blood of Abel unto the blood of Zacharias, who perished between the altar and the temple." Luke 11:50,51.

Wherein was the justice in exacting all that of the people living in the close of that age? We reply that those people had far more responsibility than all who preceded them. They had a great Light amongst them, shining from Jesus and the early saints. In their treatment of these light-bearers, crucifying them and variously injuring them, that last generation of the Jewish Age partially exonerated their forefathers, who had done similar things with much less enlightenment, and upon the enlightened ones fell the "wrath."

THE RECOMPENSE OF ZION

The Bible indicates that similar aggregations of punishment are to be expected in the end of this Gospel Age. The great Time of Trouble, or Day of Wrath, is the "recompense of the controversy of Zion" the saints, the true Church. For eighteen hundred years has Jesus prophetically foretold that the Kingdom class would suffer violence; and the violent have usurped the place of the true by force. (Matt. 11:12) All the while, the violent have outwardly been posing as the True Church of Christ, while the saints of God in every epoch and in every century have suffered—

3H618

"as deceivers, and yet true; as poor, yet making many rich; as having nothing yet possessing all things." (2 Cor. 6:8) "Heirs of God and joint-heirs with Christ" (Rom. 8:17), they have been counted "the filth and offscouring of the earth," "of whom the world was not worthy." Their names have been cast out as evil, and as Jesus prophesied it has been true, "They shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for My sake." (Matt. 5:11) These are bid to rejoice and be exceedingly glad, knowing that their reward in Heaven is great.

But the sin of their persecutors must be liquidated, even though the persecutors themselves will all eventually be forgiven. From this viewpoint, the "Time of Trouble such as was not since there was a nation," and which is now beginning and gradually to be consummated, will be the squaring of God's accounts with the world, preparatory to handing the Kingdom over to Messiah, to be blessed by His rule, as it is written, “I will give Thee the heathen (the Gentiles) for Thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for Thy possession.” (Psalm 2:8) First must come the breaking in pieces as a potter’s vessel, and the great lessons which that tribulation will bring, in order that the world may be prepared properly to appreciate and “love righteousness and hate iniquity.”

As illustrative of this principle, note the lesson of Rev. 6:9-11. Following a great persecution, the Lord figuratively represents the martyrs of that period as crying out to Him, even as the blood of Abel is said to have cried out for vengeance. The cry is, “How long, how long, O Lord, holy and true, dost Thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth?” White robes were apportioned to them as indicating that from the Scriptural standpoint they were pure, holy, justified through faith and obedience; and the message for all the martyrs of Jesus was: Wait a little season; the vengeance will come, but not until all of this class shall have experienced their share of “the sufferings of Christ.”

To these martyrs the suffering brought polishings of character, testings of faith, Divine approval and an increasing glory on the spirit plane as members of the Bride of Christ the blessings to be given to them, in the First Resurrection the chief Resurrection, referred to by our Lord in Rev. 20:6. The closing of the Gospel Age will witness the martyrdom of the last members of the Body of Christ. Then the glory of the First Resurrection will signify the establishment of Messiah’s Kingdom, the time for the recompensing of Zion’s wounds in the Great Tribulation. Then will be accomplished the binding of Satan; and then Messiah’s Kingdom, with all its blessed and uplifting influences, will bless the whole world with the long promised “Restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began.” Acts 3:19-23

MODERN PERSECUTIONS DIFFER

We do not say that the persecutions of the last members of the Body of Christ will be literally cutting their tongues out, by literally burning them at the stake, by literally crucifying them or beheading them, as was done with some of the other members of the Body in the past. In our day there is a more refined process often used. Some are gibbeted by the pulpit, some are roasted in the public press, some have their tongues cut in the sense that their words are misrepresented, and that they are denied a hearing. And yet there are things in the Scriptures which seem to imply that there may be a literal assassination and destruction of God’s faithful people in the end of this Age, as well as a figurative one. But the Lord’s grace will be sufficient for them; and the more they shall suffer for His sake, for the Truth’s sake, the greater will be their glory and station in the Kingdom.

Who shall be punished for these crimes against the Saints of God? We answer, Babylon; and Babylon signifies what is today known as “the Christian world” a very anomalous term; for the world has no identification with Christianity nor Christianity with the world. The so-called “Christendom” of our day corresponds exactly to the Jewry of Jesus’ day. Then Scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites, were banded together with the Sadducees and the Herodians, the worldly and infidel politicians. Their object was one, namely, the perpetuation of their own institution, regardless of God’s arrangement. So here, the civilized world, misnaming itself “Christ’s Kingdom,” is intent upon the preservation of the great Babylon which it has constructed, and willing to do anything to avoid the destruction which the Bible declares. But nothing that Babylon can do can avert the overthrow of present institutions and the establishment of the new order of things which God has foreordained for the blessing of the world through Messiah’s Kingdom, for which His saints have long prayed, “Thy Kingdom Come.”

HYPOCRISY THE GREATEST OF ALL SINS

Taking into account the persecutions endured by God’s saints throughout this Gospel Age, there must be a heavy account on the books of Justice to be settled. Sainly Catholics, saintly Presbyterians, saintly Baptists, saintly Methodists, saintly people in and out of all denominations have suffered; and Jesus’ words still stand true namely, that whosoever would give to the least of His followers even a cup of cold water, would not fail of a reward, and that injury to even the least of these would be punished.

Are we asked what are the special sins of our day reprehensible in God’s sight? We reply that here, as in Jesus’ day, hypocrisy is the greatest of all sins. There were thefts, murders, adulteries and injustices of various kinds in Jesus’ day; yet while denouncing all these in spirit, He practically ignored them all in His denunciations of the hypocrisy of the religious rulers of His time. We believe that His judgment of so-called “Christendom” today is of the same order.

There was a time when the world ignorantly thought that the kings of earth were ruling as part of Christ’s Kingdom. There was a time when men really believed that their everlasting destiny was in the hands of the clergy, Protestant and Catholic, and that unless they had the good offices of these in baptism, marriage, funerals, etc., they would be eternally tormented. There was a day when all were so deluded as to believe that the entire human family was going down to eternal torment, except the mere handful, the elect saints. There was a time when such atrocious doctrines were fully believed to be of God; but that day has passed a more enlightened day has come.

Our Bible is better understood: the clergy are no longer deceived. They know that the word Sheol of the Old Testament and the word Hades of the New Testament represent the state or condition of death, into which the whole world goes good or bad. They know that these words could not represent torture or fire in any sense of the word. They perceive that the kingdoms of this world are merely political institutions permitted for a time, in the same sense that God permits famines, pestilences, etc., waiting for the glorious epoch of Messiah's Kingdom to bring in the New Order of things.

But notwithstanding this knowledge, the Divine character is still blasphemed. The kings of the earth, told during the "dark ages" that they were the sword of the Lord and servants of the Church, have not been undeceived. Hence the Czar of Russia, the Head of the Greek Church, believes he is working out a Divine destiny; the British, under King George, are equally convinced that they are working out a great destiny as God's Kingdom. The German Kaiser is similarly deceived into thinking that he is the sword of the Almighty. Mark his latest reported proclamation to his army in Poland, which reads:

"I AM JEHOVAH'S SWORD," SAYS KAISER

"Remember you (my army) are God's elect. God's spirit has descended on me because I am Emperor of Germany. I am Jehovah's sword, His representative, the instrument of the Most High. Woe and death be to those who resist my will! and to all who do not believe my mission and to cowards in my army! The enemies of the German people shall perish. God demands their destruction. He it is who through me commands you to fulfil His will!"

These false doctrines of the "dark ages" are bearing a terrible fruitage in the present war. Similarly the teaching of eternal torment, misrepresenting and blaspheming God's character, are bearing an evil fruitage. Millions of people are being turned away from faith in a God of Love and from faith in the Bible as His Message by the most monstrous blasphemies of the "dark ages." I charge the responsibility of all this against the sects and creeds of Christendom. I charge that the ministers, whose eyes are now open to a saner comprehension, have neglected the Bible, have neglected the people, and, instead of helping them out of the darkness, are now leading them into darkness in an opposite direction into Evolution and Higher Criticism and everything contrary to the Word of God. God is still misrepresented in the world. The creeds of the Dark Ages are still hugged to the bosom in outward pretense, while inwardly they are loathed. A great fraud, a great hypocrisy, you say? I answer, Yes: the most astounding the world has ever known.

Two hundred thousand professed ministers of God and of Christ are standing before the world today telling the legends of the Dark Ages and seeking to hinder the people from coming to a knowledge of the Truth, meanwhile receiving the people's money and reverence. Does not such hypocrisy, such blasphemy against God, such deception of the people, such keeping of them in darkness, deserve a great punishment, and is it not nigh, even at the door?

What shall we do, do you ask? I answer, Be honest! Be true! Come out of Babylon. Stand free from all such slandering of the Almighty God and His gracious provisions. Stand for the Bible, the Truth, the God of Love and Wisdom, Justice and Power. "Come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you." 2 Cor. 6:17 Upon Great Babylon (Gentiles falsely calling themselves "Christendom") is to come a settlement of all the unrequited crimes against God's saints throughout this Age, "a Time of Trouble such as was not since there was a nation." "Reward her even as she rewarded you, and double unto her double, according to her works; in the cup which she hath filled, fill to her double. How much she hath glorified herself and lived luxuriously, so much torment and sorrow give her, Therefore shall her plagues come in one day (speedily), death, and mourning, and famine; and she shall be utterly burned with fire (destruction); for strong is the Lord God who judgeth her." Rev. 18:6-8

DISTRESS OF NATIONS FOLLOWED BY ARMAGEDDON

Montgomery, Alabama, Oct. 15 Pastor Russell who is the head of the International Bible Student's Association, and one of the most noted Bible lecturers and writers in the United States, spoke to a large crowd at the City Auditorium, Tuesday night.

His discourse on the Battle of Armageddon was based upon the words of Jesus respecting the "distress of nations with perplexity." (Luke 21:25, 26) He referred to the literal Megiddo, where many great battles were fought in ancient times and where God gave the Israelites a great triumph.

He pointed out that the Armageddon is used symbolically in the Book of Revelation to refer to the great climax of earth's strife. He declared that it would mean the final overthrow of the powers of sin, for thereafter Messiah's Kingdom will rule the world.

With the great conflict now in progress in Europe as his theme, Pastor Russell declared that the Bible pictures three distinct stages of the trouble with which this Age will end and the New Dispensation inaugurated. The present war, weakening the nations and enlightening the people, marks the First stage through which the world must pass in its approach to the New Dispensation. Second, following the war, a great revolution, without precedence as to violence or scope, symbolically styled in the Bible an earthquake such as never was since men were upon the earth; and the Third and last stage of the present Age will be marked as a period of anarchy, resulting from man's inability to adjust himself to the new conditions.

With "The Battle of Armageddon" as the basis of his remarks he pointed out that this anarchy is in the Bible symbolically styled fire, "the fire of God's anger," which will consume the present heavens and earth not the literal earth, for it "abideth forever" (Eccl. 1:4) not the literal heavens, either. The symbolical heaven is the ecclesiastical systems and the symbolical earth is the social systems of the present. These will succumb to the fire of anarchy, which will destroy all present institutions and eventuate in the world's preparation for Messiah's Kingdom—"A new heaven and a new earth"—"the desire of all nations." Rev. 21:1; Hag. 2:7

As Elijah the Prophet typified the course of the true Church of God and her final taking to heaven, so these great events coming upon the earth were shown to Elijah in advance of his taking away. The winds that rent the rocks represent the present war. The earthquake represented the revolution. The fire represented the anarchy. Then followed the "still, small voice" of God, "speaking peace through Jesus Christ." This is the pure Message, in contrast with a confusion of creeds which have been preached and which have misrepresented the Divine character and plan. The knowledge of the glory of God will then fill the whole earth, until; none shall need to say to his neighbor, "Know thou the Lord; for all will know him..." Jer. 31:34.

The Pastor referred to the fact that all the creeds in Christendom had mistaken this fire to be a literal one, instead of symbolic, forgetting that fire is repeatedly used in the Bible to represent severe trial. "Think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you" the Church. St. Peter's words respecting the fire corresponds to the words of Zephaniah's prophecy. (1 Pet. 4:12; Zeph. 3:8, 9) There, after telling about the fire that would consume the social earth, the Lord declares that then He will turn to the people a pure Message, that they may all call upon His name to serve Him with one consent. Similarly, St. Peter, after telling how the present symbolical heavens ecclesiastical systems and the symbolical; earth the social order will pass away in this fire of anarchy, says that there will be "a new heavens and a new earth" a new ecclesiastical power and a new social order. 2 Pet. 3:13

Pastor Russell declared that this new heaven will be the Church in glory, the true Church of Christ in Millennial glory; and that the new earth will mean society reorganized on its new basis, in harmony with the Golden Rule of Messiah's Kingdom. He further stated that to think of the earth as being burned up at the Second Coming of Christ would mean to forget that St. Peter elsewhere declares (Acts 3:19-21) that at Christ's Second Coming, Times of Restitution and Refreshment would come to the world, and that this blessing had been declared by God through all the Holy Prophets since the world began. (The attention of the audience was remarkable also the fact that men predominated.)

Our Honorable President with praiseworthy intent has requested all Christian people to pray for peace in Europe. I have been asked to sermonize accordingly. However, I cannot concur with our Worthy President in this matter. Much as I appreciate peace and I have all my life labored to be a peacemaker I cannot pray the Almighty to change His plans to conform to those of our Honored President.

For twenty-five hundred years God, through the Bible Prophets, has been telling His people about this great war and concerning the more terrible Armageddon which will follow it; and can we expect Him to reverse the program at our behest? Rev. 16:13, 14, 16

The prayers of these millions praying for the prosperity of the Germans and the extermination of the Allies, and the prayers of other millions for the success of the Allies and the annihilation of the Germans, and the prayers of the Pope and of our President and other good people that this awful war shall promptly cease, will all go unanswered, if I read my Bible aright. The war will proceed, and will eventuate in no glorious victory for any nation, but in the horrible mutilation and impoverishment of all. Next will follow the Armageddon of Anarchy.

After that, peace, lasting peace, may be hoped for, because God has declared it. It will be brought in by Messiah's Kingdom, for which so long we have prayed—"Thy Kingdom come!"

For forty years I have been proclaiming this very war and its glorious outcome, by sermons, oral and printed, and in my books on Bible study in twenty languages. Now, when the very year has come and the prophecy is being fulfilled, could I consistently ask the Almighty to change His program? Nay!

Doubtless many will be shocked with my declaration that this war and the resulting greater calamity are of Divine permission and arrangement, clearly prophesied in Scripture. The gathering of the nations to the present struggle is referred to in the prophecy of Joel, where the weak nations are called upon to assert their strength and where all of them are commanded to go down to the Valley of Jehoshaphat the Valley of Graves the cemetery outside of the city of Jerusalem being used by the Prophet in illustration of the terrible slaughter now going on. Joel 3:9-16

Surely this war has brought more to the grave than has any previous war; and it is only beginning. For years the nations, in harmony with Joel's prophecy, have been "beating their plowshares into swords and their pruning hooks into spears," in the sense that they have been spending for Military purposes money which should properly have been spent in agricultural implements and developments.

Apparently all the nations will yet be involved. Happy will it be if our own land shall escape! Our President and our Secretary of State are men of peace, and will surely do all in their power to avoid complications and war itself. Nevertheless, the great nations of Europe, realizing how much they will be weakened by this war, will do all in their power to ensnare these United States, lest at the conclusion of the war we should tower above the others financially and otherwise.

THE REGENERATION OF CHURCH AND WORLD

Pastor Russell, speaking last evening at New York City Temple, took for his subject. "The Regeneration of the Church and of the World. What are They? Why Different?" His text was "Marvel not that I said in part: unto thee, Ye must be born again. (John 3:7) He said in part:

In the past many of us have studied the Bible in a very careless manner, neglecting to give its inspired words the consideration and respect they deserve. In many cases the original thought has been utterly lost because of some fanciful interpretation. Consequently very few Christians have any concrete idea of the meaning of Bible statements respecting the future regeneration of the world.

Regeneration, or a second birth, is absolutely necessary if we would attain everlasting life. The fault is not that our Creator made us incomplete; for, as the Bible declares, "All His work is perfect." The fault is chargeable to sin. "By one man's disobedience sin entered into the world, and death as a result of sin; so death passed upon all men, because all are sinners."

This sentence of death upon Father Adam hindered him from giving to his children the perfection of life in which he was created. His entire race has been born into the world for six thousand years under a death sentence, or curse. The forfeited life cannot be prolonged; the sentence of death cannot be set aside; the Supreme Judge of the Universe cannot for any reason set aside His own decision. But God could provide for the regenerating of Adam and his race.

To generate, as all know, signifies to bring into life. Adam failed to generate a race to life, he merely generated a great race of thousands of millions possessed of only a spark of life a dying race.

The Divine provision is that our Lord Jesus left the glory of the Heavenly condition and became a man for the purpose of ransoming, or redeeming. Adam and his race, which shared his condemnation. The record is that this sacrificed life laid down by Jesus is sufficient as a cancellation of all Adamic sin. On the basis of that sacrifice, and in the carrying out of the Heavenly Father's Program, our Lord was raised from the dead "a quickening Spirit," a life-giving spirit Personage, with a glory far higher than that which He had when He came into the world. "Him hath God highly exalted, and given Him a name which is above every name." Phil. 2:9

The glorified Jesus is Scripturally termed the Second Adam, the Life-Giver or Regenerator, and the Everlasting Father the Father who gives everlasting life. Throughout the thousand years of His Messianic Reign, it will be the work of Christ Jesus, as the glorified Second Adam, to regenerate Adam and all his race. The regenerating influences will begin with their awakening from the death sleep, in harmony with the Master's declaration, "The hour is coming in which all that are in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of God and shall come forth." John 5:28, 29

THE REGENERATION OF THE WORLD

The coming forth from the tomb will be only the beginning of the regenerative work. The awakened sleepers will be in the same condition of mind that they were in when they fell asleep in a very similar condition to those who will be living on the earth at the time. Before they can be regenerated, they must be brought to a knowledge of the Truth. Their eyes and ears of understanding must be opened. The Scriptures assure us that this will be accomplished. (Isa. 35:5) "The knowledge of the glory of the Lord shall fill the whole earth." Isa. 11:9

The news of God's Love and of the possibilities of return to His favor through the atoning work of Jesus being clearly demonstrated to all, each will have the opportunity of deciding for himself whether or not he desires to return to human perfection and the blessed possibilities of everlasting life. To do so he must be begotten again by the Life-Giver; and the Life-Giver will beget again only those who desire the new life. Willful rejectors of the privilege, we are assured, will die the Second Death; while those accepting the Savior's proposal will come under helpful and disciplinary experiences which will gradually lift them up mentally, morally and physically to perfection to all that was lost for them in Father Adam's disobedience and its penalty, and all that was regained for them by the obedience of our Lord Jesus and the Divine arrangement of His Messianic Kingdom for the regeneration of the world.

The words, beget, born and regenerated or born again associate themselves in our minds with our natural birth; but we are not to expect, as Nicodemus queried, that any would again be born as an infant from a mother. The begetting to a new birth will be in the mind a covenant relationship with the Life-Giver.

Nevertheless, there is a beautiful analogy; for while Adam was designed to be the life-giver, father, generator, of the race, Mother Eve was designed to be its nourisher, caretaker and instructor to bring the race up to complete development. So while Jesus is the Life-Giver in the sense that He gave His own life as a Ransom-price for Adam, it is also a part of the Divine Program that there should be both a Second Adam and a Second Eve.

The world will need not only the start of the new life during the Millennium; but also the care and nourishment necessary for their development and uplift for restitution to perfection. God's provision is that the Church, especially called and qualified for that purpose during the Gospel Age, shall be the Antitypical Eve the Mother of the world caretakers, nourishers, supervisors in respect to all regenerated or re-begotten by the life-giver Jesus. What a beautiful prospect of collaboration with the Savior in His great work of rescuing Adam and his race from the effects of Adamic sin and the death sentence!

THE CHURCH'S REGENERATION DIFFERENT

It was not Jehovah's program for His Son that He should change to human nature permanently. On the contrary, we are distinctly told that the Logos took the form of a servant only for the suffering of death. This purpose having been accomplished, the Father raised him up by His own Power to spirit nature and glory—"where He was before," but to a still higher station on the spirit plane—"far above angels, principalities and powers, and every name that is named." This meant a regeneration or second birth, for the Lord Jesus for "flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God." 1 Cor. 15:50

Our Savior exchanged His spirit nature for the human, but He could not exchange the human for the spiritual else there would have been no object served in His humiliation. His human life was to be given up sacrificially as the Redemption-price for Adam's life and therefore as the Redemption-price of the whole world, since all lost life through Adam's disobedience. The application of the Master's sacrificed life would have left Him without life-rights as a man, but God provided for His regeneration His re-birth.

The sacrifice of Himself as a human being was made when Jesus was thirty years of age and was symbolized by His immersion. Immediately the Father begat Him again, not to be a human being but a spirit being. He was begotten of the Holy Spirit, which descended upon Him in a form like a dove. For three and a half years Jesus, as a New Creature, spirit-begotten, used His fleshly body, consecrated to death, having no other. In it “He was tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin,” and after He had demonstrated His loyalty to God, even unto death at Calvary, the Father raised Him from the dead on the third day not a man, but a New Creature.

After His resurrection our Lord Jesus illustrated the lesson given to Nicodemus, of which our text is a part, He came and went like the wind. Some seven times during the forty days He appeared for brief intervals for the instruction of His disciples, just as angels have done. Later He ascended on High, “Now the Lord is that Spirit”—“the Second Adam.” 2 Cor. 3:17; 1 Cor. 15:45, 47

The Bible tells us that from the very beginning God had foreknown that our Lord Jesus would accomplish this work and become the Father of Adam and his race by regeneration; and the Apostle Paul assures that God foreknew also the Church as the Bride of Christ, His joint-heir in His Kingdom. To some of the earliest members of the Church class our Lord said, “In the regeneration (in the Millennium) ye shall sit upon thrones.” (Matt. 19:28) Elsewhere He declared, “To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with Me in My Throne.” Rev. 3:21

The Father purposed that the Bride class should be selected from amongst the members of the fallen race and should be prepared for their work of future glory before the regeneration of the world would commence. He purposed also that this Bride class should have a change of nature similar to that which our Lord Jesus experienced that it would begin with them as with Him at the time of consecration and spirit-begetting and would culminate with them as with Him, in the resurrection change.

Thus the Church has the promise that she shall be like her Lord, shall see Him as He is and share His glory. (1 John 3:2; Rom. 8:17) St. Peter speaking of the call of the Church, declared that God gave unto this class “exceeding great and precious promises” that by these promises working in their consecrated hearts to will and to do God’s good pleasure the class might become “partakers of the Divine Nature” 2 Pet. 1:4

LIFE AND IMMORTALITY BROUGHT TO LIGHT

It is manifest that this begetting of the Church to a change of nature is very different from the begetting provided for the world a regeneration or re-begetting to the human nature which Adam lost but which Christ redeemed for the world. So also we have noted that the Church has a different Father. Jesus is not the Father or Life-Giver of this Divine life. He did not redeem it or secure it for anybody. He redeemed human nature and secured the right to regenerate the world to human nature. The Church's begetting or regeneration is by the Heavenly Father Himself; as the Scriptures distinctly say, "The God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ hath begotten us." (1 Pet. 1:3) He alone can give this Divine Nature. This does not signify that the Church is not indebted to her Redeemer; for the Scriptures distinctly state that without Him we could do nothing: that "by His stripes we are healed," that before the Heavenly Father would deal with us at all before He would accept our consecration, or sacrifice it was necessary that our Lord Jesus should appear on our behalf as our Advocate and surety. Thus, as St. Paul declares, "Christ hath brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel" life everlasting to the world and immortality or the Divine Nature for the Church. Prior to our Lord's First Advent the way of life was not manifested; no provision had been made for it except in the Divine Promise. God had promised His friend Abraham that somehow, sometime, all the world would be blessed. This meant that all the world would be released from the curse of death and would experience the Divine blessing, which signifies life everlasting not that the world will be given this blessing unconditionally, but that the opportunity for it will be extended to every member of Adam's race and to himself for acceptance or rejection. The second part of this Promise to Abraham, that this blessing should come through his posterity, implied that some special members of Adam's race would bless the remainder of the world, their brethren. The Seed through whom this blessing will come, St. Paul most positively declares, will be The Christ Jesus the Head and the Church His Body.--Gal. 3:16, 29

EVERYBODY'S BIBLE QUESTION BOX

Q.--Will the wicked be as correspondingly unhappy in Gehenna as the saints are happy in Heaven?

Answer--We understand that the word Gehenna, translated in our common version by the word hell, has reference to the final punishment of the willfully wicked. The Scriptures clearly state that all the wicked will God destroy. We should be inclined to think the word destroy would not in any sense mean preserve. We know from the Word that the wages of sin is death, and to the general understanding death means the opposite to life. We are not, of course, forgetting that some theologians read the word death to mean a state of conscious existence in some form or other, but we think it would be well if we view the matter from an untrammelled standpoint. The Scriptures put it thus: "The dead know not anything," and in the day they die, that very day "their thoughts perish." We understand that the gift of eternal life is only for those who love God; consequently as the wicked do not love Him, it follows that they cannot have this gift of eternal life. The proposition is, therefore, one of life or death, not conditions of life in both cases; so the saints will live eternally, while the dead will be dead eternally. If the wicked cease to exist how can they experience either happiness or misery? The Scriptures say: "There the wicked cease from troubling." If they were allowed to remain there would be no end to their troubling. God will finally exterminate sin, and with the sin all those who love it to the extent of becoming willfully wicked.

Q.--Are there any traces of the "Flood" to be seen at the present day?

Answer--Geologists tell us that there are distinct traces of great forces of Nature in the form of rushing water, glaciers, or huge icebergs having cut deep ravines in mountains and hills of America and N. W. Europe. Huge boulders, too, are found perched in isolated positions, far from their parent rocks. The plains of S. E. Europe and West Asia are, on the other hand, covered with heavy deposits of alluvial soil. In Lake Baikal and the Caspian, both inland waters, are seals of the same species as found in the Arctic. In Siberia bodies of animals mammoth, elephant, deer have been found embedded in ice, with undigested vegetable food in their stomachs. This proves (1) that at one time the climate was temperate, if not even tropical; (2) that a sudden deluge of water overtook these animals; (3) that this was accompanied with a sudden fall in temperature. This was the flood. The temperature of the water vapor previously surrounding the earth gradually fell till it reached the condensation point. Then, as students of physics know, the canopy would suddenly fall as a mighty deluge. This canopy now being removed, the earth was more exposed to the absolute cold of space, the result being that ice fields were suddenly formed around the poles. These are being gradually dissipated through radio-activity and internal heat of earth. The deep deposits of black earth, under which stone implements have been found, show that in the vicinity where the Ark rested, the waters rushing mainly from the poles, lost their velocity and came to rest.

Q.--How shall we know the true followers of Jesus, of whom it is written, "The Lord knoweth them that are His?" In what are they peculiar and different from the general masses? By what name are they to be known? Are they a coterie of the rich or of the learned, or of the great?

Answer--To this latter question the Scriptures answer, no! and assure us that among them will be found not many great, not many wise, not many learned, but chiefly they will be of the poor of this world, rich in faith, heirs of the Kingdom. We must look then for some other sign, some other characteristics by which we may know these. Our Redeemer gives the key, suggesting the characteristics for which we should seek. He says, "By this shall all men know that ye are My disciples, if ye have love one for the other" (John 13:35). He emphasizes this, saying, "A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another as I have loved you" (John 13:34). Here we get the thought that the Church is a blessed brotherhood of all those who not only love God supremely so that they delight to do His will even at the cost of self-interest, but who also love one another as Christ loved them, which signifies to the extent of willingness to lay down their lives for one another. The Apostle Peter points out that the Lord's followers should "Love as brethren, be pitiful, be courteous; not rendering evil for evil, or railing for railing; but contrariwise blessing, knowing that ye are thereunto called, that ye should inherit a blessing" (1 Pet. 3:8, 9). The proper brotherly love would not only submit to injustice without retaliation, but would return blessing. How few of us have ever realized the standard of brotherly love the standard that the Lord demanded of us when He taught us to pray: "Forgive us our transgressions as we forgive those who trespass against us." When all shall have reached that standard, the race will be in the "image and likeness of God."

Q.--Do those in the justified condition receive the grace of God?

Answer--The grace or favor of God is manifested in different ways. The most elementary knowledge of the Divine provision for human blessing is an evidence of having received that much grace or favor, and surely each justified one received much grace in the fact that they know of the "grace of God in Christ." But no doubt there are some to whom this most blessed knowledge concerning God's justifying grace has come, who nevertheless fail to see the import of such provision, and consequently fail to make the full and proper use of it. Such are said to receive the "grace (favor) of God in vain." Had such known the full value of justification they would have at once made it the means of whole-hearted consecration, and thus made vital that which otherwise would have been merely tentative. The Apostle beseeches believers to present their bodies a living sacrifice, and thus avoid the receiving of God's favor in vain.

3H624

Q.--Has God in his wisdom provided any confirmation in the world that the Bible is true?

Answer--There are proofs all around us that the Bible is true. The prophecies of the Old Testament are being fulfilled before our eyes. The Bible teaches the fall, condemnation, redemption, and restoration of man. We have not far to look to see the result of the fall. The whole creation is groaning and travailing in pain together until now, waiting for the “golden age of prophecy.” That a man called Jesus of Nazareth lived about the time indicated by the writers of the Bible is a fact of history outside the Bible, and also that he was crucified we know that he died to redeem man at his first Advent. He comes again to take possession of the purchased inheritance at his second Advent. We can now see that the time is near when “the desire of all nations” shall come, but we also see this will come through a time of trouble (see Daniel 12). Men “running to and fro” in motor cars, express trains, ocean-greyhounds, etc., and knowledge increased on all subjects, are convincing evidences that we are living in “the time of the end.” The fact that the prophecies have been opening up and are being fulfilled as they become due is surely confirmation that the Bible is true.

Q.--We read in Eccl. 1:4 “The earth abideth forever.” How can we reconcile this with 2 Pet. 3:10; Mic. 1:4; Isa. 11:6; Heb. 1:10, 11 and Rev. 20:11, 21:1?

Answer--In Eccl. 1:4 the reference is to the literal earth. In confirmation that the earth remaineth forever, see also Psa. 119:89-90; Psa. 115:16; Psa. 104:5. That 2 Pet. 3:10 refers to the symbolic earth is proved by the fact that it declares “the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat.” Now, if we understand the earth in this verse to be the literal earth, to be consistent we must also take the heavens in the same verse to be literal heavens where God is. But surely no one thinks that, else heaven would be no safer than earth, nor as safe, for the heavens are to pass away before the earth. The explanation of these references is that the “heavens” represent ecclesiastical powers, and the “earth” organized society, both of which are to be destroyed in the Day of the Lord now upon us. Zeph. 3:8 states the nature of that fire, “the fire of God’s jealousy.” That it is not literal but symbolical fire is proved in the verse following, which tells of the people turning to and serving the Lord with one consent, which, of course, could not be the case if they were burnt up.

Q.--Matt. 2:14 says that Mary, Joseph and the infant Jesus fled to Egypt because of the persecution of Herod. Luke 2:21-23 tells us that after forty days of purification specified in the Jewish Law (Lev. 12:2-4) Jesus was publicly presented at the Temple at Jerusalem. Can you harmonize these two statements?

Answer--There should be no difficulty in reconciling these two statements when we consider attentively the sacred narrative. In Matthew’s account it is stated that Herod, when he discovered that the “wise men” had left the country without informing him of the time and place of the Savior’s birth, was exceedingly angry. He sent and slew all the children that were in Bethlehem, and in all the coasts thereof, from two years old and under, according to the time which he had diligently inquired of the “wise men.” Evidently, then, it was some time after the Lord’s birth, perhaps a year or more, before Herod resorted to the extreme measure of slaying all the children from two years old and under. Herod knew the time, approximately, of the Savior’s birth (verse 7) and therefore would have no reasonable cause for slaying the children up to the age of two years, unless nearly that time had elapsed from the appearance of the Star of Bethlehem announcing the advent of our Lord. It may have been several months after Jesus’ public presentation in the Temple before Joseph and Mary journeyed down into Egypt.

EVERYBODY’S BIBLE QUESTION BOX

Q.--What did our Lord mean when He said: “I and my Father are one” (John 10:30)?

Answer--Oneness in mind and purpose is meant and not oneness in person, power or equality. The Lord said that His Father who gave the sheep to Him was greater than all, and that no one could pluck them out of His hand (power), or out of His Father’s hand (verses 28, 29). The Jews falsely accused Jesus of making Himself God, and of being equal with God, because He said that God (Jehovah) was His Father. Jesus denied this accusation (John 10:33-36; John 5:18, 19). The Scriptures show clearly that Jesus and His Father were two separate and distinct persons, and that the Father was greater than Jesus (John 14:28). Jesus prays to His Father that the believers of this age may be one as He and His Father are one (John 17:11, 21) surely not unity of person but of purpose.

Q.--Can you explain the cryptic remark in Luke 17:37: “Wheresoever the body is, there will the eagles be gathered together?”

Answer--Our Lord was asked when the kingdom of God would come (verse 20); and His Answer--was that it would be with His Second Advent, which should be so unobserved by the world that they would be going about their every-day affairs, even as it was in the days of Noah, and in the days of Lot, when the people were unaware of what was occurring until they were overtaken by the trouble. This, therefore, has special reference to the Harvest in the end of the Age the separating time. Our Lord explains that from all conditions of life one will be taken, another left. The disciples ask: “Where, Lord!” And this was His reply: “Wheresoever the body is there will the eagles be gathered together.” The explanation is that “in that day,” when the Lord is gathering His "elect" from the four winds of heaven from every quarter of the earth he will attract them as eagles are attracted, by food, for which they have a keenness of vision and appetite. To the faithful watching ones in due time the Lord would provide the proper food, meat in due season, and His true people would recognize it and be gathered to it the ready and worthy ones attracted and the others left. See Luke 12:37.

Q.--Would you kindly explain John 20:17?—" Jesus said unto her, Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father; but go to my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and your God." Where could Jesus have been, if not with the Father?

Answer--We take your question to be, "Where could Jesus have been between his death and resurrection, if not with the Father?" Jesus had been with the Father in his pre-human state (John 17:5). He came down from heaven (John 6:51), became a human being (John 1:14) so that He might be a Ransom (a corresponding price) for Adam and all in him (1 Tim. 2:5-6), He died and remained in death for three days, and it was after His awakening that John 20:17 applied, when Jesus declared to Mary that He had not yet ascended to His Father. This would prove that Jesus was not in heaven while He was dead. Some have imagined that the soul or spirit of Jesus at death continued to live on, but there is no Scripture to support this view. On the contrary, the Bible shows that the soul dies, therefore it was necessary (if Jesus should accomplish the deliverance for man) that his soul should be made a sin-offering. "He poured out his soul unto death" (Isa. 53:10-12), and remained in this condition until his resurrection therefrom three days afterwards (Acts 2:31-32).

Q.--Would the Editor of the Bible Question Box give us his thought on Election and Free Grace, as there seems something wrong with the Calvinistic view of the former?

Answer--It is impossible to reconcile the doctrines of election and free grace unless by "rightly dividing the Word of truth" (2 Tim. 2:15). We must study to apply the various Scriptures to the ages and dispensations to which they properly belong. Election, which prevails during the Gospel Age, is not an arbitrary choosing by God of a few individuals for salvation and consigning the remainder of mankind to doom. It is the selection of a special class from among men to reign with Christ as His bride in the next, the Kingdom Age, to then bless the great non-elect class all the families of the earth. God has predetermined the conditions on which anyone may be accepted as a member of this elect class, and each must make his calling and election sure (2 Peter 1:10) by obedience and sacrifice (Rom. 8:17; 2 Tim.

2:11, 12). In this age, only those drawn by the Father, by learning of Him, can come to Christ (John 10:44, 45). The meek shall He teach His way (Psa. 25:9). After this elect class is complete, then free grace will be offered to the mass of the world. The Lamb's wife will have made herself ready. The Bride will say, "Come whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely." For then will the Son of Man be lifted up (exalted) and will draw all men unto Himself to receive the restitution blessings which He died to win for all the sons of Adam (John 12:32; 1 Cor. 15:21, 22).

Q.--Do you think there will be some who have consecrated during this Age, but remain in the justified condition, and will come up on the human plane in the resurrection?

Answer--We cannot realize that any who have consecrated themselves to God and His service, and whose offering of themselves has been accepted by the Heavenly Father can possibly be resurrected on the human plane in the coming Age, because they relinquished all right to human life in their consecration. Each consecrated and accepted one, as a result, becomes a prospective member of a new creation, i. e., such an one is begotten of the Holy Spirit, and experiences the start of a new life on the spirit plane—(the human having been sacrificed forever) which will culminate, if faithful, in the Divine nature. No gift that we can offer can possibly balance the great gift of God in Christ Jesus to us, so that if we offer ourselves entirely to God's service after knowing the greatness of His love for us, then the Apostle says it is only our "reasonable service" so to do.

Q.--Will you please explain what is the night and day the Apostle Paul is speaking of in Rom. 13:12:"The night is far spent, the day is at hand."

Answer--The night to which the Apostle refers is that dark period which, more than 4000 years previously, had settled down upon humanity after the Divine sentence had been pronounced, "Dying thou shalt die." Sin, sorrow, sickness, and death have fastened upon our race, and even now their chains are not removed; but when Jesus brought to light "life and immortality through the gospel" the "night" was far spent, the "day" was at hand. Our Lord was the "light of the world," and left His followers the legacy and privilege of keeping the light burning during the past 1,800 years. Thus the "day" which was at hand in the Apostle's time has been gradually dawning, and now at the very threshold of the Millennial Age of blessing we are prepared to see the "Sun of righteousness arise with healing in His beams," and so usher in the full daylight and dispel the darkness.

*Lift up your heads, desponding pilgrims;
Give to the winds your needless fears;
He who hath died on Calvary's mountain,
Soon is to reign a thousand years.*

*A thousand years, earth's coming glory!
'Tis the glad day so long foretold.
'Tis the bright morn of Zion's glory,
Prophets foresaw in times of old.*

*Tell the whole world these blessed tidings;
Speak of the time of rest that nears;
Tell the oppressed of every nation,
Jubilee lasts a thousand years.*

Q.--What is meant by Justification, and the purpose of it in this Gospel Age? Also explain the meaning of Sanctification and its object.

Answer—(1) Justification is bringing into accord with justice that which has fallen from the state of perfection. Adam was created righteous and able to keep God's perfect law, but he sinned, was condemned by God, and all his posterity have been "born in sin and shapen in iniquity." "There is none righteous, no, not one." Justification is the restoration of man to perfection, making him acceptable in God's sight. Man never could do this for himself. Therefore it is "God that justifies." The purpose of God during this Gospel Age is to call "many sons to glory," who shall become "joint-heirs with Jesus Christ." "Being justified freely by His grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus" (Rom. 3:24), the chosen ones must appreciate their privilege and follow in His steps, making a full and willing surrender of all their earthly hopes and prospects. These never reach actual perfection in this life, but are regarded as just, legally righteous, because of the righteousness of Christ imputed to them by faith. The gathering of this company of joint-heirs being the purpose for which justification by faith has been offered, it follows that those who fail to make the necessary consecration unto death have "received the grace of God in vain." Theirs is a dead faith, not being accompanied by the appropriate works. "Faith without works is dead," therefore such cannot claim the offered justification. (2) Sanctification is setting apart to holy services. The original word is the same as for "holiness." To sanctify is to make holy. While in due time all will become holy and set apart to the service of God, His object in this age is to prepare for himself a peculiar saintly class for the blessing of all others. Sanctification has two parts: (1) "Sanctify yourselves  be ye holy;" (2) "I am the Lord which doth sanctify you" (Lev. 21:7, 8). The believer must first set himself apart in full consecration to God. God signifies His acceptance by imparting the Holy Spirit. Whoever has thus surrendered his heart to the Lord, and has received the evidence of acceptance, has become a holy one a saint. The Bible also speaks of those who are being sanctified. Sanctification is therefore a process. As knowledge and experience increase, the character is developed, the heart is enlarged, and the saint is fitted and prepared for the service which God has for him. This is accomplished through the Scriptures and the discipline to which all the children of God must be subjected. (See John 17:17 and Heb. 12:6-10.)

Q.--Do the Scriptures show that Satan will always exercise his wicked power, or will he eventually be overcome? Will the loosing spoken of in Rev. 20:3 be for the testing of restored mankind, and will this take place before or after the Son is subject to the Father?

Answer--In 1 Cor. 15 the Apostle's argument relative to the reign of our Lord Jesus and the object to be accomplished by that reign is so clear and convincing that there is but one Answer--to the question, "Will Satan eventually be overcome?" and that in the affirmative. It is apparent to all thinking people that Christ's reign has not yet begun, for the Scriptures declare that during that reign the great adversary of the race, Satan, will be bound. A single glance over the conditions existing in the world will serve to convince anyone that he is still a very active personality. However, conditions in the next age, the period of Christ's reign, will be radically changed as, gradually, the evil, selfish elements are eliminated. "He must reign until He hath put all enemies under His feet." Then mankind will be in the condition experienced by Adam before his fall, with the exception that they will have a knowledge of the consequences of sin which he lacked; and then mankind will be tested as Adam was, by the adversary who will be loosed for a season. But Satan's time will be short, for not only death but he "that hath the power of death" is to be destroyed. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death (1 Cor. 15:26).

Q.--A friend has asked me to look up all the Scriptures on "immortality" but I have no books to help me. Can you tell me where to find the texts?

Answer--There are five texts in which the words "immortal" and "immortality" will be found. We quote them. "To them who by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory and honor and immortality, eternal life" (Rom. 2:7). "For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, "Death is swallowed up in victory" (1 Cor. 15:53,54). "Now unto the King eternal, immortal, invisible, the only wise God, be honor and glory for ever and ever" (1 Tim. 1:17). "That thou keep this commandment without spot, unrebukable, until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ: which in his times he shall shew, who is the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords, who only hath immortality" (1 Tim. 6:15, 16). "Jesus Christ brought life and immortality to light through the gospel" (2 Tim. 1:9, 10). You will note from the reading of these texts that immortality was originally the possession of Jehovah only. It was later bestowed upon Jesus (John 5:27) and will be, eventually, the portion of all who finally attain the Divine nature (2 Pet. 1:4). No one will ever have immortality except he seek for it, and not even all those who seek for it will attain it. "Strive to enter in at the strait gate: for many, I say unto you, will seek to enter in, and shall not be able" (Luke 13:24).

Q.--I have read the Bible and it seems that the Bible contradicts itself, and many people say the same thing. Please give me some instruction about this matter.

Answer--It is surely quite apparent to all that if the Bible does contradict itself it is not the Word of God, for God cannot lie. We are aware that many people suppose that they find contradictions in the Bible, but on investigating any of these claims we invariably find that they fail to "rightly divide the Word of truth" (2 Tim. 2:15). Evidently this is because they have not given sufficient systematic study to the Word. A reading of the Bible will not suffice. It is the greatest of books and must be given proportionately careful study. We could not hope to assist you much in the small space at our disposal here and cannot render you other assistance, as you have failed to give your address. In the study of your Bible bear in mind that its history and prophecies together cover several dispensations. To the time of the flood the world was under the angels' control. From then until the giving of the Law, God dealt with favored individuals such as Noah and Abraham. Following the Law dispensation, in which only the Jews were dealt with, we have the spiritual dispensation in which the spiritual promises have all been given. The kingdom of God is to follow this. If you will determine the dispensation to which each passage belongs, you will find the Bible harmonious. A few mistranslations must be taken into account, however. It should be quite apparent that the Scriptures which apply to the time of the Flood would not be applicable in the present time, and that the texts which refer to the "present evil world" are not at all proper to the time of Christ's reign when Satan will be bound "that he may deceive the Nations no more.” The promises that are made to the Church should not be applied to this world, nor should the Church take to themselves the promises made regarding world restoration.

Q.--Was not Jesus Christ merely a great teacher like Plato and other philosophers; and his life just a noble example and nothing more?

Answer--Christ’s own claims respecting His being and mission were so exalted and absolute that either these were true or He was the greatest impostor that ever lived. If true, then He was the Son of God and not Jehovah God Himself who was made flesh that He might not only reveal by precept and example the Truth, but additionally enable man by faith, to attain that standard, by giving His life a ransom for all. The doctrine of a vicarious Atonement may not be popular in some quarters, but it is the only one that meets the facts. Others have made similar claims, but the verdict of history, based on their life and teaching, has been that they were false claims. Plato himself declared the necessity of a Divine revelation of the Absolute Truth, and certainly all impartial students admit that the standard set forth in Christ’s teaching is the highest yet given, and for an impostor to have formulated such precepts is preposterous. “Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?”

Q.--Did Christ die for every man, or only for the Church? If we say he died for the world, does that mean every individual member of the race?

Answer--There is no doubt that Jesus did “taste death for every man” (Heb. 2:9), and that “God is the Savior of all men, specially of those that believe” (1 Tim. 4:9). “He is the propitiation for our sins, and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world” (1 John 2:2). The secret is that God will deal with the world “in due time” (1 Tim. 2:6), and that the due time is indicated by many different Scriptures to be during the Messianic reign of Christ, when all who are in their tombs will be raised “to their former estate” (Ezek. 16:55) for that purpose. It would have been impossible for Jesus to have thus “tasted death for every man” had it not been that God made His wonderful plan by which all Adam’s children were included in his sin. “As in Adam all die even so in Christ shall all be made alive” because the race was in Adam when he sinned and therefore partakers of his penalty, and likewise shares in the ransom work of Jesus. Death is the wage of sin. Jesus purchased Adam and his family by taking the sinner’s place.

Q.--Does the Bible teach apostolic succession? and where in the Bible can we find the names of twenty or more whom the Lord recognizes as apostles? I know it speaks of the twelve apostles of the Lamb; but I am told that there were more than twenty apostles, and it is claimed their names are in the Bible; how is it?

Answer--There have never at any time been more than twelve apostles. Our Lord selected twelve and we have their names given us in Matt. 10:2-4. The Apostle Paul was selected as one of the apostles (Rom. 1:1; 1 Tim. 2:7) but this did not increase the number to thirteen, for he was selected to take the place of the traitor Judas. The disciples felt the responsibility of selecting one to take the place of Judas, but their selection of Matthias, as recorded in the first chapter of Acts, was set aside by Jehovah. He was never recognized by Jehovah. When our Lord gave His revelation to the Apostle John on the Isle of Patmos, about sixty years later, instead of there being fourteen apostles the number is given as twelve (Rev. 21:14). However, at that early date in the history of the Church it was found that there were those which said they were apostles and were not (Rev. 2:2).

Q What is the real meaning of Psa. 9:17:“The wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God?”

Answer--The ninth Psalm is a song of praise because God has entered into judgment with the nations. That is most clearly seen when we read the Revised Version. The Psalm therefore applies to the future when the judgments of God are in the earth, and when the inhabitants of the earth will learn righteousness (Isa. 24:9). We read : “The wicked shall return to sheol, even all the nations that forget God.” It is now hardly necessary to repeat that “sheol” is not a place of torment. It describes the condition of all the dead good and bad alike. “They know not anything” (Eccl. 9:5), being totally unconscious. When the judgment takes place, there is to be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and the unjust. All the dead will stand before God, and all will know the Lord from the least to the greatest. This verse therefore gives us the thought that even then some will continue to be wicked, and as a consequence will “return” into sheol, or state of death. They will go into death the second time, being punished with everlasting destruction, graphically described in the Book of Revelation as the “lake of fire.” But it is manifest that before they can “return” into sheol they must have been raised out of sheol; and before they can forget God, they must know God. The great mass of earth’s population has gone into death, into sheol, with no knowledge of God whatever.

GIVING THANKS FOR WAR OR FOR PEACE

Philadelphia, Pa., November 22, Pastor Russell used for his text today the words, "In everything give thanks." 1 Thess. 5:18

Reviewing briefly the condition of the world, the speaker declared that it must be a difficult matter for the majority of people to determine correctly the nature of the thanks they would offer to God. The hundred and fifty million of humanity, our blood relatives, are at war, seeking to destroy each other. Ninety million Americans, deeply interested in them, are invited by our Honorable President and the Governors of our several States to render thanks to the Almighty. Truly, we have many causes for thanksgiving to our Creator! life itself is a blessing, a boon, our nation in many respects is the most favored on the face of the earth, enriched by God's bounty above all others, not the least of our blessings being our civil and religious liberties.

Surely no one of even average heart and head has cause for other than great thankfulness to our Creator. "Our lines have fallen to us in pleasant places." Those who feel no gratitude are surely soured by discontent, the fruitage of ignorance, selfishness and sin. How appropriate then, that each and all bow heart and head before the Giver of every good and perfect gift! To whatever extent this course be followed heartily, without hypocrisy, undoubtedly a blessing will result, individually and nationally. The custom is a beautiful one.

There is a difference between thanksgiving and prayer. None have the right or the privilege of approaching the Throne of Grace in prayer except those who have come into covenant relationship with God. The Jews came into their Law Covenant by Divine arrangement through Moses. The followers of Jesus, who accept the Divine arrangement of the Gospel Age, are privileged thus to come into relationship with the Creator through Him. He is our Advocate who has opened up for us a new and living way, through the sacrifice of His flesh. All whom the Father has accepted through Him all whom the Father has begotten by His Holy Spirit are Scripturally termed sons of God, children of God, heirs of God, joint-heirs with Jesus Christ their Lord. 1 John 3:1; Rom. 8:17

These are invited to come to their Father and to address Him thus "Our Father who art in Heaven," and to ask for the blessings which God has provided for His children, according to His Divine purposes and arrangements. But none others are permitted to come to this Throne of Grace, because not in covenant relationship with the Savior, because in God's arrangement "There is none other name given under Heaven or amongst men, whereby we may be saved," from our sins, brought into relationship with our Father.

Thus we see that only a limited number may enjoy the privileges of prayer or expect answers to their prayers. But, thank God, others may worship and bow down! "Come, let us worship and bow down; let us kneel before the Lord our Maker." Many have this privilege and the exercise of it is sure to bring a blessing. Whoever has a thankful heart, which likes delight in offering worship to the Giver of every good gift, will surely receive a reflex blessing. His love of righteousness and truth, holiness and goodness, mercy and justice, will thereby be strengthened; and so also will be the probability of his some day reaching the point where he will see the wisdom and the desirability of giving his heart his little all to the Lord in consecration to be a faithful footstep follower of the Redeemer a son of God.

GIVING THANKS FOR WAR

Very evidently the majority of mankind have an insufficiency of knowledge of God, of the Bible, and of the Divine Plan therein set forth, to thank God for the present state of war. But to the Church, whose eyes of understanding have been opened to see the length and breadths, the heights and the depths, of God's love in the Message of the Bible, St. Paul writes; "In everything give thanks."

Ripe Christians have learned to give thanks to God for the adversities of life in their own experiences convinced that under God's supervision the direst of calamities may be overruled for good to His people and for glory to His name. But only the advanced, the developed Christian is able to give thanks under circumstances of sever trials and testings. Only those who have great faith built upon clear knowledge of the Divine promises, can realize thoroughly that all things are working together for their good.

Similarly in respect to the great European war now in progress, its casualties, desolations and wounds, only the well-instructed of God's people may understand the Divine plans and arrangements so thoroughly as to be able to give thanks in respect to the war, and able to exercise confident faith that the outcome of it will mean blessings of instruction and preparation for future blessings.

If the Scriptures did not foretell this time of world-wide "distress of nations," we might not know that God had foreseen it and had made provision for its results before permitting it. But the same Bible that foretells about the war tells of the results, saying, "When the judgements of the Lord are abroad in the earth, the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness." (Isa. 26:9) If, then, the war is teaching the world lessons along the lines of righteousness and justice, it will be doing permanent good. Moreover, the same Bible tells that the war is surely the outgrowth of human selfishness, ignorance, superstition and false doctrine, and assures us that although it will lead on to revolution, anarchy and the utter wreck of the present order of things the present civilization nevertheless, God is prepared for the emergency "Man's extremity will be God's opportunity."

THE SOLUTION OF OUR PERPLEXITIES

The hour having come for Messiah to take the reins of government, He will stand forth in Power and Majesty at the proper moment, and exclaim to the raging elements of the restless human sea. "Peace! Be still!" And there will be a great calm. The lesson learned in the trouble will be a lasting one; and the blessed opportunities of Messiah's Kingdom, which will be built upon the ashes of present institutions will bring everlasting life and joy to all the willing and obedient.

Those who see the war from this viewpoint may indeed in everything give thanks, rejoicing that the reign of Sin and Death will soon be ended! rejoicing that Satan will soon be bound for a thousand years! rejoicing that God's Kingdom will soon come, and His will be done on earth, even as in Heaven! rejoicing that soon the knowledge of the true character of God will be universal! rejoicing that then, in the light of that knowledge, "every knee shall bow and every tongue confess, to the glory of God"! rejoicing still further, that any who under all those favorable conditions will refuse to make a full surrender to the Lord, will be mercifully cut off from life in the Second Death!

During Messiah's Reign of Righteousness, all nations will be instructed enlightened, blessed. Christ's merit will then be applied on behalf of the billions who have gone down into the prison-house of death Sheol, Hades, the grave. The Church will constitute the First Resurrection. All sharing in it will attain life on the spirit plane. Later, during the Millennium, the world will return from the tomb, "every man in his own order." The resurrection processes will continue with them, in order that the willing and obedient may rise gradually toward perfection and finally attain it. Meantime the earth will be rejuvenated and become the promised Paradise restored.

GIVE THANKS FOR HE IS GOOD

Looking down into the future, the Palmist exclaims, "O give thanks unto the Lord; for He is good! for His mercy endureth forever!" It is God's mercy toward us that constitutes the ground for thanksgiving. It is true that praise must come from thankful hearts; and that to be properly thankful one must see more than is now visible to those who have not the eye of faith and the Divine revelation of things to come. But these very opportunities the Lord's consecrated ones possess. As it is written, "Blessed are your eyes, for they see, and your ears, for they hear." But to the extent that any see and hear of the grace of God he has responsibility. To possess the knowledge of God and to disdain it is to receive the grace of God in vain.

God's people not only give thanks for future blessings received now by faith, but additionally they appreciate blessings granted them in the present life and give thanks for these. The first of these is the knowledge of God's goodness in releasing us by faith from sin and its penalty, so that without waiting for actualities we can now rejoice in the mercy which has justified us through the blood of Christ. All other blessings rest upon this one and all thanksgiving should properly include thanks for our justification by faith.

After our justification we were inducted into a still further grace of privilege that of becoming members of the Body of Christ. Through acceptance of this privilege we gain the opportunity of a change of nature from human to Divine. (2 Pet. 1:4) Our human nature justified, cleansed, made acceptable to God as a sacrifice through the merit of Christ, will be replaced by a spirit nature and glory, honor and immortality, joint-heirship with our Lord and Head, if we faithfully make our sacrifice. (Rom. 12:1) What shall we render unto the Lord for all His benefits toward us?

The heart that has come into faith-union and communion with the Lord leans something more every day respecting the Heavenly Father's loving care for His children, and each fresh item of knowledge is a new well-spring of pleasure. " "He satisfieth the longing soul" "Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled." These are the experiences of those ripe Christian called upon by the Apostle to thank God for everything and to know that this is the will of God in respect to all who are members of the Body of Christ.

THANKS THROUGH TEARS

Let us not overlook the fact that our text indicates that we are to give thanks for our sorrows, our trials, our disappointments, as well as for our joys and our pleasures; for the word everything includes all things. Nor is this the only Scripture to this effect. The Apostle elsewhere urges the members of Christ to rejoice in tribulation, because tribulation works out additional patience, and patience brings additional experience, which in turn brings larger hope until we are not ashamed of our tribulations, because thereby the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts. Rom. 5:3; 8:35

The basis of all rejoicing as respects both the future and the present is faith in the fact that there is a God; that He has a noble character; that His Wisdom, Justice, Love and Power are perfect and are thoroughly co-ordinated; that these attributes are all enlisted in the salvation of the world; that this salvation began to be worked out by our Lord at His First Advent; that it is still working out in the selection of His Church; and that shortly it will begin to take practical shape in the establishment of Christ's Millennial Kingdom; through which a blessing will extend to every creature of our race.

Then let every man to the extent of his enlightenment appreciate and confess the Almighty God and give thanks to His name; for He is good, and His mercy endureth forever. Let those who have tasted of His grace continue to grow in grace, knowledge, faith and character-likeness to our God. Let His saints, who are addressed in our text, more and more appreciate their wonderful privileges, their high calling of God in Christ Jesus to be heirs of God and joint-heirs with our Lord.

EVERYBODY'S BIBLE QUESTION BOX

Q.--If the world is to be converted before the second coming of Christ, as some people believe, what is meant by Luke 18:8: "Nevertheless, when the Son of Man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?"

Answer--Those who believe that the world is to be converted before our Lord's return are looking for something which, according to the Scriptures, would be impossible, for to the careful Bible student it is quite clear that the Lord's return is for the very purpose of enlightenment and knowledge and conversion of the world. The obvious Answer--to Luke 18:8 is that the faith will be small in the earth at our Lord's second coming almost an unappreciable quantity; but insincerity, infidelity, distrust, violence, etc., will be rampant perilous times the Apostle calls them. But "when the judgments of the Lord are in the earth, the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness." So speaks the prophet Isaiah. In fact, Acts 3:19-21 expressly says that all the prophets spoke of the "times of restitution," and those "times" will follow the coming of our Lord. Our prayer is, "Even so, come quickly, Lord Jesus."

Q.--Would you kindly explain Matt. 23:15: "Ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte, and when he is made, ye make him twofold more the child of hell than yourselves."

Answer--Jesus acknowledged the Pharisees as those who sat in Moses' seat (verse 2) God's representatives and the teachers of the people. Instead of exhibiting a becoming humility these men loved the chief seats, and to be called "Rabbi," etc. Jesus called them blind guides, whited sepulchres, hypocrites, who made void God's Word by their traditions. He suggests that they would go to any length in order to make converts to the Jewish faith (a work not commanded by the Lord). Making proselytes meant bringing Gentiles under the Jewish Law Covenant, which was intended to be a schoolmaster to bring Israel to Christ and the Kingdom of Heaven. Their pride and false teaching led the Pharisees to prompt their disciples to crucify Jesus. If such conduct had been willfully opposed to clear light it would involve their destruction (Heb. 10:27) the "second death" from which there would be no resurrection, and which was therefore symbolized by the Greek word Gehenna (mistranslated "hell" in this text), the Hebrew form of which is "Valley of Hinnom" the name of the valley in which Jerusalem's refuse was destroyed by fire.

Q.--Would you kindly explain Heb. 9:27? "And as it is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment." Are we to understand that ALL must die, or can it be proved from the Scripture that many may not die?

Answer--This passage does not refer to men in the ordinary meaning of the word, but has reference to those who in the Mosaic dispensation acted as priests to Israel. It was appointed that they should typically die as represented in the slaying of the animal, when they laid their hands on its head. The whole connection of this passage goes to prove this, for Paul is contrasting the two priesthoods, the typical and antitypical. God speaks of those things that are not as though they were; and from his standpoint the race is already dead. For example, the Lord said, "Let the dead bury their dead." We are all born in a dying condition with the inherited disease of death in each one of us. We read, however, that our Lord has now the keys of death (the present dying condition in which we all find ourselves) and of hell (hades), the actual death condition. We understand that because of his death he now has the power to stop the dying process in the race and gradually raise it back again to perfection. This he will do during his second advent and Kingdom reign.

Q.--We read in Col. 1:16 that Christ created "principalities and powers"; in Tit. 3:1, "Let them be subject to principalities and powers," and in Eph. 6:12, "We wrestle against principalities and powers." If Christ created them, why are we to wrestle against them?

Answer--Christ created all things perfect originally angels in Heaven, man on earth, each placed in position of power, one invisible to human eyes, and the other visible. Some of the angels fell from their perfection, and man also, consequently the earthly and some of the heavenly principalities and powers existing at the present time are imperfect, yet they are ordained or permitted by God, and therefore we should submit to them even if we suffer under their abuse of power, as Jesus did (John 19:11). We should obey laws, and respect those in authority because of their position even if personally they are unworthy of esteem, and only offer resistance where they conflict with God's Law (Acts 4:19; 5:29). We should wrestle against principalities and powers in the sense that we must resist any evil or pernicious principle which endeavors to keep the world in darkness as to God's plan. The devil and his agents are very busy along this line, and our only safety lies in putting on the whole armor of God so that we may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil (Eph. 6:11).

Q.--It has been my understanding that Zech. 14:7 refers to the evening of Christ's thousand year Kingdom. But now I am in perplexity as to how that verse can refer to the close of the Kingdom day when verse 18, coming later in the chapter, seems to refer to the beginning. Can you help me?

Answer--It would be a mistake to suppose that every chapter of the Bible is arranged in chronological order. We do not find it so. The 7th verse gives a broad statement regarding the work accomplished by Christ's Kingdom, indicating that as the thousand year day progresses it will get brighter and brighter under the illumination of the teaching which will be given the world of mankind by Christ and his Church, until, at the very close of that thousand year day, there shall be none in darkness. At its beginning "darkness shall cover the earth and gross darkness the people" (Isa. 60:2) but the "Son of righteousness shall arise with healing in his beams" (Mal. 4:2). The mists of superstition and fear which now hide Jehovah from the eyes of men will soon be scattered by the rays of the Sun of Righteousness and then "all shall know him from the least to the greatest" (Heb. 8:11). Some, however, of the families of the earth will refuse to give him allegiance and from these God's favor will be withdrawn. This seems to be the teaching of the 18th verse, for Egypt is a Scriptural representation of the whole earth.

Q.--Kindly give me an explanation of Isa. 26:19, "Thy dead shall live, my dead bodies shall arise." I have used Mr. Leiser's translation.

Answer--The italicized words in the King James version were supplied by the translators with the intention of giving what they thought was the true meaning of each passage. In the vast majority of cases they seem to have supplied words very much in harmony with the general teaching of the Scriptures. It is but natural to suppose, however, that there would be times in which their addition of words would give a different thought instead of merely elucidating the text, as was their claimed intention. Leiser has supplied no words in this case and the translation is much preferable. We have learned that the Church is, according to the Scriptures, the body of Christ. Jesus is the head of this great body in the sense that it is his will that is done by the members, it is he that plans and directs. The Apostle Paul and all of those who died during the centuries past have slept in death waiting for the awakening which would take place in the morning of Christ's Kingdom. They are here referred to as the body. The first work of Christ's dominion is the awakening of the sleeping members of his body. From that time on any faithful ones of the Church who die need not wait in sleep but are instantly changed. "We shall not all sleep but we shall all be changed" (1 Cor. 15:51, 52). The resurrected Church is to have as part of her work the raising of the rest of mankind and that task shall be persisted in until "all that are in their graves shall come forth." All of the dead will then be Christ's for the promise has been made to him, "Ask of me and I will give thee the heathen for thine inheritance" (Psa. 2:8); "Like sheep they are laid in the grave and the upright shall have dominion over them in the morning" (Psa. 49:14).

Q.--In Rom. 8:15 Paul declares of some that have received the spirit of adoption, and in the 23rd verse he speaks of waiting for the adoption. Please harmonize.

Answer--The same Apostle informs us that, "by nature we are all children of wrath" (Eph. 2:1-3). As was the Psalmist so are all of us "born in sin and shapen in iniquity" (Psa. 51:5). Life, as originally given to our race, came from Jehovah and was perfect. None of us can now be said to have life from him in the sense that we receive it through Father Adam. That life was lost when the death sentence passed upon him. Only those who have "escaped the condemnation that is on the world" can be said to have life, and they are merely "begotten to the hope of life" (1 Pet. 1:3). Jesus told of some of his day that their father was the Devil (John 8:44). If they would come to him to receive release from this bondage it would not be to come into another bondage of fear but to receive a hope of life, a hope or spirit of adoption. None can receive life until he has proven himself worthy of it. The actual adoption is therefore to come when this period of groaning and suffering is ended and our worthiness of continued and increased favor has been fully demonstrated. We note that this is the Apostle's argument in the succeeding verses. "We are saved by hope." To receive the fullness of that hope would be to receive this salvation, to be actually released from the limitations of the flesh and its infirmities, to be delivered from the unsatisfactory conditions of the present and to be ushered into the desirable spiritual realms. The terms on which we may become actual children of God, and therefore his heirs, and joint heirs with Jesus Christ, are that we shall suffer with Jesus. The suffering covers the time of our earthly pilgrimage. The glory will follow (Rom. 8:17).

“YE MEN OF GALILEE, WHY STAND YE GAZING INTO THE HEAVENS?”

Our Lord's Ascension Into The Heavens Had Been Spectacular, But His Second Coming Will Be Quiet and None Know Except His Faithful.

PEOPLE WILL BE LIVING AS USUAL--RUSSELL.

The forty days which followed our Lord's resurrection were sufficient for the Divine purpose. The disciples had lost their first bewilderment created by the crucifixion of the One whom they had supposed was about to take the Throne to rule Israel and the world. We can see the wisdom of the Divine method of communicating the facts to the disciples. They were not alarmed, as they would have been if Jesus had appeared to them in a light above the brightness of the sun, as He afterward appeared to Saul of Tarsus. Gradually they learned that their Lord was no longer dead, but alive, and that He was no longer a human being, but now a spirit being, and, like the angels, could go and come as the wing, appearing and disappearing at pleasure.

It was a slow lesson. After the three appearances of the first day, they looked for Him each day until the following Sabbath, when the fourth appearance, or manifestation, was made. This delay only whetted their appetite, their craving for knowledge respecting Him. Meantime they could, and did, think over all the things which Jesus had said to them during His earthly ministry. They perceived wherein they had mistaken a Heavenly Kingdom for an earthly one or at least mistook the time of the establishment of Messiah's Kingdom.

Our lesson today relates especially to the ascension of Jesus. This took place near Jerusalem at Bethany. Apparently He met with His followers in the Holy City. He led them out to Bethany, explaining the things that would be to their advantage to know the things they would need to be thoroughly convinced of before His departure, and before they would have sufficient faith to be prepared for the blessings He had yet to send.

3H632

St. Luke, who also wrote the Book of Acts, tells us that the essence of Jesus' teaching during the forty days related to the Kingdom of God. still they understood not; it was not possible for them to fully understand until they would receive the begetting of the Holy Spirit. It was toward that point, therefore, that Jesus directed their attention, saying that they should not depart from Jerusalem nor engage in any work of preaching, but wait for the promise of the Father, of which He had told them.

He explained that John the Baptist had indeed used water baptism, but that all His followers should receive a superior baptism and qualification the baptism of the Holy Spirit, at Pentecost.

The disciples considered Jesus to be the Messiah, and thought the Father's time had come for giving Him the Kingdom. But they had been witnesses that the Kingdom of Heaven had suffered violence at the hands of the rulers, that the rightful Heir to the Throne had been slain. But He had risen from the dead, and they now inquired whether it would be at this time that the Master's Kingdom would be established. The Answer--was significant: "It is not for you to know the times and seasons which the Father hath kept in His own power."

The Master had already intimated that at the appointed time His disciples would know the times and seasons, but it was not due for them to understand those things then. They must wait. The development of patience would do them good, strengthening their faith and their character.

Our Lord's ascension was spectacular to His Church. Of the world He had said, "Yet a little while, and the world seeth Me no more." They did not see Him during the forty days. He showed Himself to none except His faithful, consecrated ones. The ocular demonstrations so helpful to them culminated with a visible ascension of the Lord into the air in the body in which He had just been with them. Because they were not yet spirit-begotten, they doubtless needed just such a manifestation to help their faith, to lead them to understand that they would see the Master no more until He would come with power and great glory to assemble all His saints to Himself and to bless the world.

Our Golden Text reminds us that Jesus spoke of His ascension beforehand. The ascending up where He was before should not, however, be understood merely to signify a return to a previous place, but rather to a previous condition a spirit condition, which the Master had left to be made flesh, that He might ransom the world.

As Jesus disappeared from His disciples in the clouds, we assume that the body in which He had just appeared was dissolved, or dematerialized. The use of it was merely to help establish the faith of the disciples and as a means of instruction. After Jesus disappeared, angels materialized and addressed them, saying, "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye here gazing up into the heavens? This same Jesus which is taken up from you into Heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen Him go into Heaven." This statement has led some to believe that at His Second Advent Jesus will appear in the flesh; but to our understanding they labor under a grave misapprehension. The world is to see Jesus no more, and the Church will see Him only with the eye of faith, until they experience their “change” in the end of this Age.

The angels laid stress upon the manner of the going, which agrees with what the Bible tells us respecting our Lord’s Second Coming. He went quietly, secretly, unknown to the world. He is to return as a thief in the night. None will know of His return except those whose eyes are opened to see the signs of the presence of the Son of Man. These will be His loyal, saintly few. So Jesus explained, that at His Second Coming it would be for a time as it was in the days of Noah mankind would be eating drinking, planting, marrying, and know not of His presence.

EVERYBODY’S BIBLE QUESTION BOX

Q.--Please give us an explanation of Christ’s instruction to the rich young ruler to go and sell all that he had (Matt. 19:16-22), and of the occasion of Christ’s paying tribute money (Matt. 26:24-27)

Answer--With the truly consecrated the sense of ownership must give place to that of stewardship. To enforce this truth Jesus applied a crucial test to sell all! This was certainly a special case, but the attitude of all who would attain the Kingdom, and who have riches of any kind money, time, mental or physical talents must be that of stewards. “All for Jesus.” “What hast thou that thou didst not receive?”

The tribute money was the Temple tax (about thirty-five cents), which every male Israelite was expected to pay annually. The priestly class were exempted. So, too, in Gentile nations the Royal families were free from taxation. Jesus, therefore, as the Son of God Peter has just confessed him as such—(16:16) should be free from this tax for the Temple his Father’s House. But a refusal might have the appearance of evil, of a lack of zeal for God, and so cause the people to stumble. So, as the Temple was not yet cast off and forsaken by God, and no principle of righteousness was violated, Jesus paid the tribute, but at the same time, to prove to his disciples that it was as a concession and not a debt, he obtained the coin in an authoritative way a way which may contain a hint of the restoration to mankind in the next age (when the obedient will be perfect children of God) of that dominion, lost by Adam, over the animals.

Q.--In what sense could the Gospel be preached to Abraham?
Gal. 3:8

Answer--By the gospel we understand "good tidings" the message the angels afterward gave to the shepherds. "Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be unto all people, for unto you is born this day  a Savior which is Christ the Lord" (Luke 2:10,11). That from which all people need saving is sin and its penalty death, and so surely as God will have all to be saved from this and to come to a knowledge of the truth (1 Tim. 2:4), our Lord is the one who will accomplish the great work. "Thou shalt call his name Jesus, for he shall save his people from their sins" (Matt. 1:21). The Lord said, "The Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which was lost" (Luke 19:10). That which was lost is life: life in the perfection that Adam enjoyed, and this the Lord, the Ransom for all, died to obtain for all (John 3:16). "The wage of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." Our Lord was the seed of Abraham which was to bless all nations (Gal. 3:16), and the glad tidings were preached to Abraham when God made the promise to him. As Jesus said, "Abraham rejoiced to see my day" the day for which the Church still prays and the groaning creation waits, when he shall call all that are in their graves to come forth, to share in the blessings of his glorious reign. For he must reign until he hath put all enemies under his feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death (1 Cor. 15:25-26. See Rev. 21:3-4).

Q.--Will you kindly explain Luke 20:33, "Therefore in the resurrection whose wife of them is she? for seven had her to wife." I understand that those who come up in the first resurrection will be one great spiritual family, but in the restitution whose wife will she be when restored, having had seven husbands in this life?

Answer--You are correct in your understanding that there is to be a spiritual and an earthly resurrection. It is probably because of a mistranslation in the 39th verse that you have gotten the impression that Jesus is referring to the spiritual resurrection. The word "world" is better translated age. Following this age the Messianic Kingdom will be established in which all the faithful and obedient will be rewarded with absolute cleansing from sin and as a result will be forever beyond the reach of death, although still human. Then marriage will have ceased as an institution, because the commission given to Adam and Eve will have been complied with their seed will have multiplied until it fills the earth as God originally intended when he made the earth for man's habitation (Gen. 1:28). Those who receive this raising up to perfection of life will die no more because just as worthy of life as the angels themselves. The instructions of the Church during the one thousand year reign will have eradicated all sin and made them worthy of life. Thus will be fulfilled the Apostle Paul's prediction that the world in general will escape the corruption that is upon them through the depravity of their flesh, and will also become sons of God (Rom. 8:19-21). They will be sons on the human plane whereas the Church will be sons on the Divine plane, both classes receiving their life through the resurrection provided in the merit of Jesus. If it is God's purpose that the institution of marriage shall continue in the next age among those who have not yet attained to its blessings, we have faith that his wisdom can adjust all the family relations.

Q.--Some of my friends who are Bible Students say that we are living in the "Harvest" of this age, and that there is a double work going on. If so, what is it?

Answer--Undoubtedly we are living in the harvest of this Gospel Age when the word of the Lord has gone forth: "Gather ye together first the tares into bundles to burn them; but gather the wheat into my barn" (Matt. 13:30, 39-42). Not only is there a reaping work now going on, when "the children of the kingdom" are being gathered into the "barn," but there is also a ploughing work in process, which is overturning all the old creeds and dogmas, and preparing the people for the blessed Gospel of the new Age, "the times of restitution of all things" (Acts 3:19-21). The Prophet, in describing the present time, says the ploughman will overtake the reaper (Amos 9:13). From the foregoing we would understand the double work to be reaping and ploughing reaping the seeds of truth that have been planted in the past, and ploughing men's hearts with the ploughshare of trouble in preparation for the sowing of the next Age.

Q.--Please explain Luke 9:27. "But I tell you of a truth, there be some standing here, which shall not taste of death, till they see the kingdom of God."

Answer--This text, with its parallel in Matt. 16:28, is often misunderstood to imply that some of the disciples whom our Lord addressed would live until the establishment of the Kingdom of God at the second advent. In both instances the explanation is to be found in the verses which immediately follow, viz., in the account of the Transfiguration on the Mount. Here the Son of Man appeared in his future Kingdom glory. "His face shone as the sun, and his raiment became white as the light" (Diaglott) (conf. Acts 22:6; 26:13; Rev. 1:16). Two men appeared in the vision conversing with the Lord, and the disciples were made to understand that they represented Moses and Elijah. The "vision," then, was a sort of living picture of God's Kingdom. The brilliant transfiguration represented the Resurrection glory of our Lord; Elijah representing those who shall be translated from the earth, the saints forming the heavenly phase of the Kingdom, and Moses the earthly phase.

Q.--What is life?

Answer--This is still one of the greatest problems, but to live is to possess sentient being; to be capable of consciousness, joy, or sorrow, pleasure or pain. Life, in its highest degree, is known as immortality. Immortality signifies inherent life, a life not sustained by outside supplies, conditions, or influences, but life possessed in one's self. Life in this sense belonged originally to God alone; but it has been given by the Father to the Lord Jesus Christ; and he promises this life to his faithful church, his Bride, his companions in Kingdom glory. However, life in an inferior degree is the possession of the angels through the grace of the Creator who is pleased that they shall enjoy it everlastingly in harmony with his will. Eternal life is proffered to mankind in general; it will be granted to so many of Adam's race as shall ultimately, under the blessings of the Messianic Kingdom, be recovered completely from the imperfections of sin and death, and who shall maintain that perfection by continued obedience to the Divine requirements. All who sin willfully, after receiving full light, shall not live.

Q.--Do you think the sentence of death passed upon Adam for one mere act of disobedience is a just one?

Answer--The sentence, at first sight, seems a heavy one for what might be considered a slight offence, but when we consider the question from an unbiased standpoint we see that the sentence, though severe, was on the lines of strict justice. In thinking of this matter we are apt to suppose Adam a fallen man like ourselves and incapable of living righteously; but we must remember that he came from the hands of the Creator perfect, and that nothing exceptional was asked of him. In our case, the matter is very different. We are born in sin, and, consequently, unable to perform perfectly the Divine will, even if we are desirous of so doing. God had a right to exact from our first parents perfect obedience, and in return he promised them that they should live. If they did not do his will, he then as their Creator had a right to take away his favor of life from them, especially since they had been informed that this favor was conditional upon their obedience. Evidently we gave looked upon this sentence as an injustice not because of the nature of the sentence but because we have supposed that the curse of death was merely preliminary to an eternity of torture. That would indeed be cruelly unjust. The necessary severity of the sentence which God did pronounce against the sinner enables us to realize how immeasurable is the love of God in planning a way of escape from the penalty a resurrection from the grave through the ransom sacrifice of the Lord Jesus. "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life" (Rom. 6:28). Note John 3:16.

CLERGY ORDINATION PROVED FRAUDULENT

New York City, Dec. 6 Pastor Russell, speaking today at New York City Temple, West Sixty-third Street and Broadway, took for his text, “.Cry aloud, spare not; show My people their transgression.” (Isaiah 58:1) He prefaced his address with some remarks respecting the unpleasant duty implied in his text, declaring that he would far rather speak only smooth, pleasant things to everybody and concerning everybody. The Pastor certainly has the happy faculty of stating pungent truths in sympathetic language well supported by kindly tones. He speaks from the heart and carries conviction as respects his sincerity. He said in part:

Every unbiased student of the Bible surely will agree that our Redeemer and His disciples manifested great humility, in contrast with the clergy of our day and of centuries past. None of our Lord’s disciples were Reverends, Right Reverends, Most Reverends none of them were clergymen. They knew nothing whatever about the distinction between clergy and laity which subsequently developed. Jesus indeed did receive the title of the Lord, or Master, Teacher; but with great humility He pointed out that His teaching was not His own, that He spoke the Message of the Father. Similarly the Apostles glorified God, and declared themselves “men of like passions with ourselves.” Jesus taught His disciples that they should not be self-seeking, that they should not seek the honor which cometh from men, but only that which cometh down from Above. “One is your Master, even Christ; and all ye are brethren,” was His way of forewarning us against the error which afterward divided the Lord’s people into clergy and laity.

SHACKLES OF IGNORANCE AND SUPERSTITION
